Government.—The government of Afghánistán is, since 1922, a constitutional monarchy with Legislative and State Assemblies, and a cabinet presided over by the King himself. The title of King instead of Amir was adopted in 1926. The country is divided into five major provinces of Kábul, Afghan Turkistan, Kandahár, Herat, and Kataghan-Badakhshán; and four minor provinces: Simat-i-Mashriqi (i.e. Eastern Province), Simat-i-Janubi (Southern Province), Farah, and Maimena. Each province is under a governor (called in major provinces Naib-ul-Hukumeh and in minor provinces Hakim-i-'Aala).

There are separate departments of War, Foreign Affairs, Internal Affairs, Education, Commerce, Justice, and Revenue, each in charge of a Minister.

Amanullah Khán, who had been King of Afghánistán since February 19, 1919, abdicated on January 14, 1929, in favour of his elder brother, the Sirdar Inayatullah Khán (born October 4, 1895). The abdication was due to a rebel rising of tribesmen who would not tolerate the social and religious reforms, largely on the European model, introduced by King Amanullah; they were not appeased by the abdication and would not recognize the new King, who escaped to Peshawar, and thence to Kandahár. The rebel leader, Bacha-i-Sagao, assumed power in Kábul under the title of Habibullah Ghazi.

Meanwhile, King Amanullah at Kandahár, rescinded his abdication (January 21). The position, as at February 1929, was that there were three claimants to the throne and the country in a state of upheaval.

Area and Population.—The extreme breadth of Afghánistán from north-east to south-west is about 700 miles; its length from the Herát frontier to the Kháibar Pass, about 600 miles; the area is given variously as about 245,000 or 270,000 square miles. Population, according to the latest estimate, about eight millions. The languages spoken are Persian and Pushtoo, and Turkish in Turkistan and parts of Badakhshán. The predominant religion is Islam.

The largest towns are Kábul, the capital (population about 100,000), Kandahár (population with suburbs 80,000), Herát (population 121,000), and Mazar-i-Sharif (46,200).

Education.—Elementary and secondary schools exist throughout the country. Elementary education is free and compulsory, and higher education is also free. Besides the two principal colleges in Kábul—the Harbia or Military College, and the Habibia or Arts College—there are a number of others for civil servants, fine arts, etc.

Justice.—The law is based on the Shara' or Islamic law. Lower Courts (Mahakima-i-Ibtidaia) are established in each seat of government, and Higher Courts (Mahakima-i-Murafiaah) may have appeals from the former brought before them. A High Court in Kábul is the supreme judicial authority. In many instances efforts are made by litigants to compose their differences by the aid of unofficial juries in each locality.

Finance.—The revenue of Afghánistán is subject to considerable fluctuations. The Government share of the produce recoverable is said to from vary one-third to one-tenth, according to the advantages of irrigation.

The total revenue is estimated at about fifty million rupees, a considerable portion of which is found from Customs.

Defence.—In addition to a standing army numbering about 25,000 all arms, the King can count on the support of large numbers of well-armed tribesmen, who rally to his standard in time of war. The regular army is recruited on the Hasht Nafari system, by which one in every eight of the able-bodied population is conscripted for service. The army generally is trained and organised more on the lines of a gendarmerie than of a modern army. Officers graduate at a military college, but recently large batches of cadets have been sent to foreign capitals to undergo training, particularly to Turkey, and Turkish influence may be said to predominate in the army. A small air force is maintained under Russian influence, the personnel being obtained from Moscow under contract; but a considerable number of Afghan students are undergoing aeronautical training in Italy and Paris. The real military strength of Afghanistan lies in the rugged and inhospitable nature of the country.

Production and Industry.—Although the greater part of Afghanistan is more or less mountainous, and a good deal of the country is too dry and rocky for successful cultivation, yet there are many fertile plains and valleys, which, with the assistance of irrigation from small rivers or wells, yield very satisfactory crops of fruit, vegetables, and cereals. There are two harvests in the year in most parts of Afghanistan. One of these is sown in the end of autumn and reaped in summer, and consists of wheat and barley, with some peas and beans. The other harvest is sown in the end of spring and reaped in autumn. It consists of rice, millet, Indian corn, &c. The castor-oil plant, madder, and the asafoetida plant abound. Fruit, viz. the apple, pear, almond, peach, quince, apricot, plum, cherry, pomegranate, grape, fig, mulberry, is produced in profuse abundance. They form a staple food of a large class of the people throughout the year, both in the fresh and preserved state, and in the latter condition are exported in great quantities. The fat-tailed sheep is native to Afghanistan. It is characterised by the immense weight and size of its tail, caused by development of masses of fat, forming stores of nourishment which are drawn upon during the winter months, when fodder is scarce. These sheep furnish the principal meat diet of the inhabitants, and the grease of the tail is a substitute for butter. The wool and skins not only provide material for warm apparel, but also furnish the country's main article of export.

Northern Afghanistan is reputed to be tolerably rich in copper, and lead and iron are found in many parts. Coal is found in the Ghorband Valley and near the Khurd Kabul Pass. Gold in small quantities is also brought from the Laghman Hills and Kunar. Badakhshan is said to be the only country in the world to produce first-quality lapis lazuli. This is smuggled in considerable quantities to China and Bokhara.

Silks, felts, carpets, articles from camels' and goats' hair, are some of the principal industries. At Kabul, soap, cloth, boots, and some other articles are manufactured for local consumption, but chiefly for the army. The sheepskin coat, or postin, manufacture is one of the important industries. The Government factories and workshops at Kabul have as their partial object public education in mechanical methods and appliances, and as a feature of such work classes are organised in different industries.

Commerce.—No accurate registration of the trade of Afghanistan has yet been obtained. The trans-frontier trade between India and Afghanistan (according to Indian statistics) was as follows in five years ending March 31:

	1920-21	1921-22	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into India	1,543,200	809,500	1,606,160	943,350	203,100
Exports into Afghanistan	1,328,500	1,358,700	1,375,240	1,725,850	122,600

Of the exports from India to Afghanistan the chief items are cotton goods, indigo and other dyeing materials, sugar, hardware, leather and silver treasure. The imports into India include timber, fruits and vegetables, grain and pulse, ghi and other provisions, asafoetida and other drugs, spices, wool, silk, cattle, hides, and tobacco.

Communications.—Afghanistan joined the Postal Union in 1928.

The trade routes of Afghanistan are as follows:—From Persia by Meshed to Herat; from Bokhara by Merv to Herat; from Bokhara by Karshi, Balkh, and Khulm to Kabul; from East Turkistan by Badakhshan and Nuristan (formerly Kafiristan) to Kabul; from India by the Khairbar road to Kabul; from India by the Gomal Pass to Ghazni and Kelat-i-Ghilzai; from Chaman, the terminus of the North-Western Railway beyond Quetta, to Kandahar and thence to Kabul or Herat; from Parachinar (Kurram) via Peiwar and Shutar Gardan Passes to Logar and Kabul.

There are no railways in the country. The following roads are fit for motor traffic, except after snow or heavy rain, but are badly constructed and mostly unmetalled: Khairbar-Kabul, Kabul-Kandahar, Kabul-Gardez, Kandahar-Chaman, and Kabul-Bamian. In addition there are some 200 miles of minor roads fit for motor traffic, mostly in the vicinity of Kabul. Merchandise, however, is still transported chiefly on camel or pony back. There are practically no navigable rivers in Afghanistan, and timber is the only article of commerce conveyed by water, floated down stream in rafts. Telephones are installed in a few of the larger towns. There is telegraphic communication between Peshawar-Kabul, Kabul-Kandahar, Kandahar-Chaman, and under construction between Termez-Kabul, and Kandahar-Herat. A wireless installation connects Kabul with Eastern Europe and India.

Money and Currency.—The following new coinage was introduced in March 1926: Gold coins: the amani, equivalent to Rs. 20 Afghani, and the half-amani; silver coins: the Afghani rupee, equivalent to 100 poos, the half-Afghani, and the 20-pooli; copper coins: the 10-pooli, the 5-pooli and the 2-pooli. The old coinage has not yet been withdrawn. Relative values fixed by the Afghan Government are as follows: 11 Kabuli rupees equal 10 Afghani rupees; 1 Kabuli rupee equals 91 poos.

Weights and Measures.—The metric units have now officially replaced the old Afghani units—the Gaz-i-shah (the Persian Zar), the linear standard equal to 40.95 inches; the Gaz-i-zarib, the square standard equal to 1,000 to 1,066 Gaz-i-shah or 1,294 to 1,379 square yards, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  acre; and the Gaz-i-nix memar, the cubic standard equal to one cubic Gaz-i-shah or 1,625 cubic feet. All avoirdupois weights, formerly current hitherto under the name nakhud (3 grains), are now in terms of the gramme.

ALBANIA.

(SHQIPRIA.)

The territory known as Albania was made up of the old Turkish Provinces of Soutari and of Yanina, and of the parts of the Ottoman vilayets of Kossovo and Monastir, which bordered upon those Provinces. The Albanians from the point of view of their language are divided into two principal groups—the Ghegs, who live in the north, and the Tosks, who live in the south, and the former are further divided into Clans.

Little is known of their early history. From 1431, when the Turks captured Yanina and Scutari, the Albanians remained under Turkish rule, except for two brief periods of independence, first between 1443 and 1468, under Prince George Castriot II, surnamed Scanderbeg, and again in the eighteenth century, under the Tosk, Ali Tepelen of Yanina, in the south, and the Bushati Dynasty of Scutari, in the north, both of whom reigned as suzerains of the Ottoman Empire. In 1880 the short-lived Albanian League was founded, and ruled Albania for two years, making an unsuccessful effort to obtain independence.

The independence of Albania was proclaimed at Valona on November 28, 1912, and on December 17, 1912, the London Conference of Ambassadors agreed to the principle of Albanian independence. Subsequently that Conference approximately decided the frontiers of the new country, and agreed that a European Prince be nominated to rule it. Prince William of Wied, having accepted the crown of the new country from an Albanian deputation, which offered it to him at Neuwied, on February 21, 1914, arrived at Durazzo on March 7, 1914. The Government of the country was vested in the hands of the Prince, supported and advised by a financial International Commission of Control, the creation of which was agreed to by the Ambassadorial Conference on July 29, 1913.

After the outbreak of the European War in 1914, the Prince and nearly all the members of the International Commission on September 8 left Albania, which fell into a state of anarchy. It was not until June 3, 1917, in Argyro-castro, that General Ferrero, then in charge of the Italian forces, proclaimed Albania an independent country, and a provisional Government was set up at Durazzo. A Republic was subsequently proclaimed with a constitution, under which there is a Parliament of 57 members elected every 4 years and a Senate of 18 members, 12 elected for 6 years and 6 nominated. The Republic continued until 1928. A Constituent Assembly for the purpose of changing the Albanian Republic into a Monarchy was opened on August 25, 1928, and on September 1, the necessary amendments to the Constitution were voted and Ahmed Beg Zogu, president of the Republic since January 31, 1925, was proclaimed king. The new régime has been generally recognised by the European Powers.

Reigning King.—Zogu I., born 1894, a Moslem by religion and hereditary chieftain of the Mali Clan, proclaimed king September 1, 1928. The king is assisted in the administration by a council of ministers appointed by him (January 16, 1929), headed by Prime Minister and Minister of the Interior, Kostaq Kotta.

On November 27, 1926, a treaty of friendship and arbitration was signed at Tirana between Albania and Italy, and on November 22, 1927, a defensive alliance was signed between the two countries.

Area and Population.—The estimated probable area of the country is about 17,874 square miles, while the population in 1927 was estimated at 833,618, and divided as follows:—

	North Albania	Central Albania	South Albania	Total	Per cent.
Moslems . . . .	149,798	159,412	254,519	563,729	68
Roman Catholic . .	84,995	3,740	4	88,739	11
National Albanian Orthodox Church . .	3,346	12,402	165,303	181,051	21
Total . . . .	238,139	175,554	419,826	833,519	100

The country is divided into 10 prefectures, named after the principal towns, which with estimated population in 1927 are as follows:—

Prefectures	Population in 1927		Prefectures	Population in 1927
	Prefecture	Town		Prefecture	Town
Berat . .	116,670	3,500	Korytza . .	131,570	25,600
Dibra . .	38,714	—	Kosova . .	40,117	—
Durazzo . .	58,375	5,100	Scutari . .	114,308	23,800
Elbasan . .	82,402	10,400	Valona . .	43,784	6,300
Ginokastres .	127,894	9,600	Tirana (Capital)	36,783	16,600

Religion and Educa o .—There is no State religion. About two-thirds of the Albanians are Moslems. Of the remaining one-third the Gheg Christians in the north are for the most part Roman Catholics under two Archbishops, three Bishops, one Mitred Abbot and an Apostolic Delegate, and the Tosk Christians in the south are members of the Greek-Orthodox Albanian Church, which is under the rule of the Archbishop of Tirana and four bishops. A concordat between the Vatican and Albania is being concluded.

There were in 1923, 536 primary schools in the country, of which 420 had three classes, while 166 had five classes. There are 1,051 teachers and 32,530 pupils, in addition to about 300 students studying outside Albania. There are, besides, 12 continuation schools, 4 secondary schools, 2 French lycées, and a teachers' training college at Elbasan, opened in 1921. There are also 2 American training schools for boys and 2 colleges for girls in Tirana and Kavaia.

Justice.—There is in every province a tribunal of first instance with three judges, and a court of cassation, composed of six judges, at Tirana. On January 1, 1923, the new Albanian Penal Code, which is based on that of Italy, and the new Civil Code, based on that of Switzerland, came into force, to take the place of the Ottoman laws previously imposed. According to the new Code polygamy is abolished, although Islam is the dominant religion in Albania.

Finance.—The estimated revenue and expenditure for five years ending March 31 is as follows (in gold francs):—

	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs
Expenditure .	17,374,500	15,781,150	28,150,557	30,888,189	26,984,422
Revenue . .	24,109,257	23,233,142	23,375,454	30,979,800	28,645,000

In May 1925 Albania obtained a foreign loan for the nominal amount of 50,000,000 gold francs in Italian lire, and by the rise in value of the lire the Government made a profit of 20,000,000 gold francs. Thus the sum to be expended is 70,000,000 gold francs. The loan, taken up by the Company for the Economic Development of Albania, and guaranteed by the yield of all the Albanian Customs. Is also guaranteed by the Italian Treasury, and is to be used exclusively in carrying out public works.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory and begins at the age of 19. Liability to service continues to the age of 50. Service in the active army is for 18 months. The peace strength of the army in 1927 was 7,540. The gendarmerie numbers 3,116. There are 2 torpedo boats and 6 gun boats bought by the Albanian Government to guard the coast line.

Production and Industry.—The Albanian economic system is very primitive; each family provides for its own needs. Great tracts of the country remain uncultivated, and the areas at present under cultivation are dealt with in a primitive way. The State owns some 125,000 acres of the best land in the plain between the rivers Shkumbi and Vijossa. The country for the greater part is rugged, wild, and mountainous, the exceptions being along the Adriatic littoral and the Korytza Basin, which are fertile. Tobacco, timber, wool, hides, furs, cheese and dairy products, fish, olive oil, corn, cattle and bitumen are the principal products of the country. Cattle-breeding receives special attention. The wool is made up into coarse and heavy native cloth and exported. There are vast tracts of forest land composed of oak, walnut and chestnut trees, as well as beeches, pines and firs. The mineral wealth of Albania is considerable but undeveloped. The only industries in the country are those connected with agriculture, such as flour-milling, olive-pressing and cheese-making.

Commerce.—Imports and exports for 5 years are shown as follows (in gold francs):—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports	23,418,065	20,480,588	21,799,411	24,864,731	24,681,688
Exports	8,137,917	12,879,410	17,122,761	11,963,982	11,106,902

The distribution of trade in 1927 was as follows (in gold francs):—Imports from Italy, 15,441,539 (61.42 per cent.); United Kingdom, 1,769,921; Czechoslovakia, 1,393,259; Yugoslavia, 1,261,877; Greece, 1,204,685; United States, 1,004,596; France, 633,813. Exports to Italy, 6,293,804 (56.95 per cent.); Greece, 2,516,977; United States, 1,798,690; Yugoslavia, 253,834; United Kingdom, 37,842.

The principal imports in 1927 were: cotton and cotton textile, 6,011,483 gold francs; metals, 1,822,553 gold francs; the principal exports: animal foods and fish, 3,999,766 gold francs; cereals, 1,123,121 gold francs, and hides and skins, 1,889,547 gold francs.

Communications.—Central Albania has no roads, but in the South the Italian administration has constructed military roads extending South via Tepeleni and Argyrocastro, and North and East via Liascoviki and Erzek to Korytza. Northern Albania has one road, connecting Durazzo and Tirana with Alessio and Scutari. Total length of roads, including motor roads, 1,038 miles. A railway to join Durazzo with Tirana, 22 miles in length, is under construction. The ports are five in number, viz. San Giovanni di Medua, Durazzo, Valona, Porto Palermo, and Santi Quaranta; but all the ports need to be improved. Two Italian shipping lines, one Yugoslav, one Greek and one Albanian, maintain communications with the rest of Europe.

Banking and Currency.—On September 2, 1925, the National Bank of Albania was established in Rome, with branches in Tirana, Durazzo, Koriza, Valona and Scutari. It has a capital of 12,500,000 gold francs, of which 51 per cent. was subscribed in Albania, and 49 per cent. by an international financial group headed by the Credito Italiano. The Bank has the exclusive right of issuing paper money and metal coinage. A new currency based on notes freely convertible into gold coin, gold exchange, or foreign bank notes convertible into gold has been established. The monetary unit chosen is the gold franc (5 Lek) (.3225806 gr. 900 fine), with a parity of 25·225 to the £.

The Bank has already issued Bank notes of 100, 20, 5 gold francs and 5 Lek (1 gold franc); and metallic currency as follows:—gold, 100 and 20 franc pieces; silver, 5, 2 and 1 franc pieces; nickel, 1,  $\frac{1}{2}$  and  $\frac{1}{4}$  Lek; and bronze, 0·10 and 0·05 Lek. On May 31, 1928, there were in circulation notes amounting to 7,411,000 francs and coin to the value of 1,077,000 francs, of which 691,000 francs were gold. The cover for the note circulation on that date consisted of 13,675,434 francs, of which 1,343,000 francs were in gold, 7,845,280 francs in dollars and 4,487,154 francs in other currencies.

ARABIA.

ARABIA is essentially a desert country comprising an area of roughly 1,000,000 square miles and inhabited for the most part by nomadic Bedouin tribes eking out a precarious pastoral existence by the breeding of camels, sheep and goats. Bounded on the north by Iraq, Syria and Transjordan (Palestine), it is enclosed on the other three sides by the sea—the Red Sea on the west, the Indian Ocean on the south and the Persian Gulf on the east. The land-surface of the peninsula enclosed within these limits slopes down steadily from the elevated mountain barrier, which runs down the whole length of its western side parallel with the Red Sea, to sea-level on the Persian Gulf, and the uniformity of this slope is only interrupted in the extreme south-eastern corner of the peninsula, where the mountains of the Oman district rear their crests to an elevation of 10,000 feet above sea-level. With the exception of this mountainous district and the similar district of the Yemen, Arabia is a barren country consisting of vast tracts of steppe-desert, sand-waste and mountainous wilderness. It is a country of insignificant rainfall (the Yemen and Oman excepted); here and there, scattered oases, or oasis-groups, are formed. The Taif district, for instance, in the Hejaz mountains above Mecca, the Qasim and Jebel Shammar provinces in Central Arabia and the Hasa province near the Persian Gulf are among the best examples of such districts, while El Medina, Taima, Riyadh, Jauf and Wadi Dawasir are but a few among the many large oases which occur frequently throughout the country.

The population of Arabia cannot be estimated with any certainty, but would seem to be about 7 millions.

The inhabitants of Arabia are at present found in every degree of transition from the purely nomadic life of the Bedouin to the highly developed though simple civic life of the greater towns such as El Medina, Anaiza, or Buraida. This development has been accompanied by corresponding political changes and the patriarchal, tribal organisation of the Bedouin has weakened steadily before a natural tendency to communal organisation into States and principalities imposed on the people by the development of civic life. The introduction of modern fire-arms and the growth of an Arab nationalist spirit (directed against Turkish domination) in the borderlands of Syria and Iraq tended to encourage this process during the first decade of the present century, and the rise to power of Abdul Aziz ibn Saud, the present Wahhabi King, gave it a further impetus. Ibn Saud set to work to organise the unsettled Bedouin into civic communities under cover of a great Wahhabi revival, and in the spring of 1914 struck the first blow for the Arabs against the Turks by capturing the Hasa province from the latter. The Great War completed and stereotyped the process of political organisation in Arabia, and the ejection of the Turks from the Hejaz, Asir and the Yemen left the Arabs to work out their own salvation unchecked by foreign control. Internecine warfare not unnaturally followed, and the result of a six years' struggle was that a single power (the Ibn Saud dynasty of Nejd) achieved a paramount position throughout the peninsula beyond the southern coastal fringe, where the States of Sana' and Oman are the most important of those which maintain an independent existence together with the lesser principalities of Kuwait and Bahrain, the trucial chiefs of the Oman coast, the Hadramaut and the Aden hinterland, all of which enjoy in a greater or less degree the protection of Great Britain. The principality of Asir, reduced in extent to a mere strip of the coast between Hali Point and Jizan, maintained a precarious independence between Ibn Saud and the Imam of Sana' until in October, 1926, it was placed under the protectorate of the former; while the Hejaz was annexed at the end of 1925 by Ibn Saud, who is now King of Hejaz. The northern province of Aqaba-Maan was annexed by the British Government to the Palestine mandated area in July 1925.

The Kingdom of Hejaz and Nejd.—At the end of the nineteenth century the Wahhabi State of Nejd formed a part of the dominions of the Emirate of Jebel Shammar, which, in the reign of Muhammad ibn Rashid, had by crushing the rival dynasty of Ibn Saud established itself as the dominant power in Central Arabia. The surviving representatives of the Wahhabi dynasty of Ibn Saud were in exile at Kuwait. In 1901, however, Abdul Aziz III ibn Saud, G.C.I.E., then a youth of 20 and the representative of a cadet branch of the dynasty, recovered the Wahhabi capital of Riyadh from the Rashidi forces by a bold stroke, and by 1908, when Abdul Aziz ibn Rashid, the successor of Muhammad ibn Rashid, was killed in battle, had largely re-established the position of his dynasty throughout the territory ruled by his grandfather, Faisal ibn Saud, i.e. from the Qasim province in the north to Wadi Dawasir in the south, and from the confines of the Hejaz on the west to the confines of the Hasa province (held by the Turks) on the east. In 1912 he initiated at Artawiya the Wahhabi revival, which has since produced such far-reaching results, and in the spring of 1914 he wrested the Hasa province from the Turks, thus extending his territories on the east to the Persian Gulf. During the war he, like the Grand Sherif of Mecca, allied himself with Great Britain, but, after a failure against Ibn Rashid, who was in alliance with the Turks, in January 1915, at the battle of Jarrab, he played no active part in the war till 1918, when a renewal of his activities against Ibn Rashid met with no substantial success. At this period his territories were exactly as they were at the outbreak of the Great War, while the oasis of Khurma, on his western frontier, was claimed by Husein as belonging to the Hejaz. This claim on the part of the Hejaz was destined to precipitate a conflict of far-reaching consequences between the two States, and Husein enjoyed the advantage of alliance with Ibn Rashid, the Amir of Jabal Shammar, who, apart from the traditional enmity of the Rashid and Saud dynasties, had every reason to desire to avenge himself on Ibn Saud for the latter's activities against him during the Great War. Ibn Saud with characteristic vigour did not allow himself to rest content with mere defence. In 1919 the Arabian war may be deemed to have started in earnest. In May of that year Husein sent his troops to occupy Khurma, the disputed oasis, but Ibn Saud's Wahhabis met and annihilated them at Turaba, which was duly annexed to Nejd. In 1920 Ibn Saud captured and annexed Abha and other parts of upland Asir, the Idrisi being in league with Husein. Meantime he had kept up steady pressure against Jebal Shammar, and in August, 1921, he captured Hail, the capital; the surviving remnants of the Rashid dynasty were led into captivity to Riyadh and the Emirate of Jebal Shammar was annexed to his dominions. In July 1922 he captured the Jauf district from the Shalan dynasty and extended his influence up Wadi Sirhan (January 1923). Meanwhile Wahhabi forces occupied Taima and Khaibar on the confines of the Hejaz, and Ibn Saud's dominions seemed to have reached their natural limit, embracing as they did the whole area of Desert Arabia. An attempt made under British auspices at the beginning of 1924 to compose the differences between Ibn Saud and the Sherifian rulers of the Hejaz, Transjordan and Iraq broke down at the conference of Kuwait. In September 1924, accordingly, a Wahhabi force appeared before Taif, the summer capital of the Hejaz, whose garrison fled, leaving the town an easy prey to the invaders. Shortly afterwards the Hashimite troops were attacked, and defeated at Hadda. King Husein having abdicated, his successor Ali moved the seat of government to Jeddah, and on October 13, 1924, the Wahhabis entered Mecca without opposition for the second time in their history. Ibn Saud himself arrived at the city on December 5, and for the first time in his life performed the customary rites in the Great Mosque. King Ali remained behind the walls of Jeddah till December 19, 1925, when El Medina having fallen, he was compelled to abdicate and leave Hejaz. Ibn Saud entered Jeddah, and on January 8, 1926, he was proclaimed king in Mecca under the style King of the Hejaz and Sultan of Nejd and its dependencies. On May 20, 1927, a treaty was signed at Jeddah between Great Britain and Ibn Saud, by which the former recognized the complete independence of the dominions of the latter.

Ibn Saud has placed his State in a dominant position among the States of Arabia. His capital is at Riyadh, whence he exercises effective control over the whole peninsula except the areas already mentioned. His administration (as set forth in a 'constitution' issued on August 31, 1926), is simple and of a patriarchal character, without ministers of State or other imitations of Western governments. The law of the land is the Sharia administered by Kadis in the various districts under the control of chief Shaiks at Riyadh and Mecca. A special administration exists in the Hasa province for the collection of Customs duty, one of the chief sources of State revenue, while land revenue, which takes the form of a tithe on date and corn cultivation, is collected by revenue officials working under the orders of the various district governors, who likewise make the necessary arrangements for the collection of camel and sheep tax from the Bedouin. The total population is estimated at about 3,000,000. Towns with a population exceeding 10,000 inhabitants are: (1) Hufuf; (2) Mubarraz; (3) Riyadh; (4) Shaqra; (5) Anaiza; (6) Buraida; (7) Hail; (8) Jauf; (9) Sakaka; and (10) Hauta. Of these Hufuf has a population of about 30,000, but none of the others exceed 20,000. The products of Nejd are dates, wheat, barley, fruit of various kinds, hides, wool, clarified butter (saman or ghi) and abas (Arab cloaks), besides camels, horses, donkeys and sheep. The export trade is still insignificant, though capable of considerable development, especially as regards dates, hides and clarified butter. The export of Arab horses to Bombay is not as active as it was in the past, but the annual export of camels to Syria and Egypt is a steady source of income to the Bedouin. The chief imports of Nejd are piece-goods, tea, coffee, sugar and rice.

Ibn Saud has thirteen surviving sons, of whom the four eldest are Saud, aged 24, Faisal, Viceroy of Mecca, aged 22, Muhammad and Khalid, and numerous daughters. The surviving members of the Ibn Rashid dynasty in captivity at Riyadh are Abdullah ibn Mitab, who became Amir of Hail on the assassination of his cousin, Saud ibn Rashid, in May 1920, and Muhammad ibn Talal, who succeeded Abdullah for a brief reign before the fall of Hail in the summer of 1921.

The former Hashimite dynasty of the Hejaz, which has held the Emirate of Mecca for many centuries, acquired the Royal title during the Great War; it ceased to rule in the Hejaz on December 19, 1925. At an early stage of the hostilities between the Allies and Turkey, the Grand Sherif Husein ibn Ali, then Emir of Mecca, received from Great Britain a guarantee of the autonomy and independence of the Arab countries in the event of a successful rebellion against the Turks, and on June 5, 1916, he raised the standard of revolt and proclaimed his independence. In November of the same year, having by then captured Jeddah, Mecca and Taif, he assumed the title of King, while the subsequent Treaty of Peace with Turkey recognised the Hejaz as a free and independent State. While, however, he was only recognised as King of the Hejaz by the British Government, Husein aspired to a greater position, and commonly assumed in his correspondence the title of King of the Arabs. The early months of 1924 witnessed the assumption by King Husein of the Caliphate, rendered vacant by the deposition of the Caliph Abdul Mejid by the Turks, and this act, together with the breakdown of a conference held at Kuwait under the auspices of the British Government for a settlement of outstanding differences between the Wahhabi King on the one hand and the various Hashimite rulers on the other, precipitated the renewal of hostilities with the result indicated above.

The frontiers of the Hejaz are not sufficiently definite to allow of anything like an accurate estimate of its area, which probably does not exceed 150,000 square miles. The population is probably between 800,000 and 900,000, of whom Mecca, the capital, accounts for some 70,000, Madina for 20,000 and Jeddah for 30,000, while the great majority of the rest are Bedouin. The chief port is Jeddah, the seaport of Mecca; Yanbu, next in importance, occupies a similar position in relation to Madina; while ports of less importance are Aqaba (now annexed to Palestine), Muwaila, Wajh, Rabigh, Lith and Qunfuda. Madina produces excellent dates in abundance; Taif and other oases in the mountains and valleys produce honey and a large variety of fruit; while Bedouin products are hides, wool and clarified butter. But the exports of the Hejaz are insignificant, and the country depends for existence almost entirely on the annual pilgrimage which used to attract an average of 100,000 pilgrims from abroad each year.

The Hejaz Railway from Amman to Madina was administered from April 1924 to July 1925 by the Hejaz Government, the Amir (afterwards King) Ali having taken a prominent part in restoring through-traffic to Madina. In July 1925 the Palestine Railway administration took over the section from Amman to Maan, while the southern section was put out of commission by the Wahhabi siege of Madina.

On January 22, 1928, a new silver currency of Riyals was introduced in place of the Turkish Mejidie currency. Ten Riyals = £1. The Riyal is subdivided into 11 Qarsh (piastres) Miri, and each Q.M. contains 2 Qarsh Darij. The Q.D.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  and  $\frac{1}{4}$  Q.D. are nickel coins.

Yemen.—The Yemen, which geographically comprises the Province of Asir, and its capital Abha, may be divided as follows: Aden; the Aden Protectorate; the domains of Imam Yahya b. Muhammad b. Hamid ed Din, and finally, those of the Idrisi Seyyid Ali b. Muhammad, whose headquarters are in Sabia (Lat. 17° 11' N., Long. 42° 37' E.) and Abu Arish to its S.S.E. He also holds the ports from Hall Point (Lat. 18° 37' N., Long. 41° 24' E.) to Al Hahl (Lat. 16° 10' N., Long. 42° 42' E.); and after the exit of the Turks after the armistice of 1918, his influence extended still further and he retained Luhaiya, and possessed himself of Hodeida, the chief port and the 'key to San'a.' The Idrisi family hark back to one Seyyid Ahmed, whose 'Way' is akin to that of the Senussis of Africa, and also to that of the late Mad Mullah of Somaliland.

The Zaidi Imam Yahya, whose capital is Sana' (Lat. 15° 20' N., Long. 44° 12' E.), has a domain of some 75,000 square miles with a population of two to three millions. His territories include the area recently abandoned by the Turks, and so march with the Anglo-Turkish boundary drawn in 1902-4. In a northerly direction his influence extends to Nejran (Lat. 17° 30' N., Long. 44° 15' E.) of the Yam, whose tenets are those of the sect of Ismailiya or Fatimiya, and their chief is the Da'i Ali Mohsin Al Shibami, of the house of the Makarima, whose descent is from Ismail b. Jafar Alsadiq, the offspring of Al Husein, the second son of the fourth Caliph Ali. The same tenets are professed by the inhabitants of Haraz near Menakha. To the north of San'a are the Imamie large towns of Amran, Tawila, Al Khamr, Al Suda, Sada (Lat. 16° 47' N., Long. 43° 48' E.), Quflat Al Udhr, and also the region of Al Jauf, Upper, Middle and Lower, with their capitals respectively at Al Matamma, Al Hazm, and Al Ghail, where live the 'Shawaf,' clansmen of the influential Bakil tribe, all of which tracts, watered by the River Kharid, own the Imam's suzerainty. To south of Al Jauf, and to east by north of Sana' at a distance of six days' journey, lies the district of Marib, or Saba, whose ruler pays homage to Imam Yahya. Other large towns in the Yemen are Taizz (alt. 4600 ft.), Ibb (6275 ft.), Yerin (8600 ft.), Dhamar (7650 ft.). The altitude of Sana' is 7260 ft. The highest mountain is Nabi Shuaib (11,000 ft.). Sumara, Kinan, Takar and many others are all over 9000 feet altitude.

The population of Sana', a walled city with eight gates, is between 20,000 and 25,000. The old-time granaries of the Upper Yemen still exist, and lie chiefly between the towns of Ibb and Al Jubla, and in the Wadi Sahul below Ibb and to its north, though indeed the agricultural products are widely distributed throughout the country and comprise barley, wheat, and millet, together with coffee—the finest berries coming from Menakha. Hides also are largely exported.

The Zaidi Imams are descended from Zaid, a Huseini, the second son of Ali Zain al Abidin, the son of Al Husein, the second son of the fourth Caliph Ali. Imam Yahya Hamid ed Din, who succeeded his father Muhammad in 1904 and took the name of Al Mutawakkil as Commander of the Faithful, traces his own descent from Al Hasan and his descendant Imam Al Hadi ila'l Haqq Yahya, who died in A.H. 298 (A.D. 910). Thus the present Imam is of Hasani stock, as are the Sherifs (Ashraf) of Mecca, and the Idrisi Seyyids of Sabia in the Asir Province. The early line of Imams began their rule in the town of Sada' (above mentioned).

The Imam has twelve sons, the eldest of whom is the Emir el Hadi Mohamed Seif al Islam, who commands in the country to the north of Sana'.

No mention is made of the uplands of Asir, for the control there is uncertain. Abha, the capital, is in Wahhabi hands.

The Hadramaut is a considerable tract of fertile valleys lying to the East of the Aden Protectorate. The greater part of it owes allegiance to the Qa'aiti dynasty, whose representative is the present Sultan of Makalla. A rival dynasty, the Kathiri, rules a number of towns and villages inland. The whole area is loosely under British protection and control.

Oman.—An independent State, in South-eastern Arabia, extending along the southern shore of the gulf of that name from the entrance into the Persian Gulf to the extreme eastern point of Arabia, and thence S.W. as far as Ras Sajir, lat. 16° 8' N. The coast line is nearly 1,000 miles long. Inland Oman is bounded on the S.W. by the great desert. Area, 82,000 square miles; population, estimated at 500,000, chiefly Arabs, but there is a strong infusion of negro blood, especially along the coast. The towns of Muscat and Matrah hardly contain an Arab, being inhabited almost entirely by Baluchis and Negroes. The capital, Muscat, and the adjacent town of Matrah have together about 20,000 inhabitants.

Muscat was occupied by the Portuguese from 1508 to the middle of the seventeenth century. After various vicissitudes it was recovered in the eighteenth century by Ahmed bin Sa'id, of Yemeni origin, who was elected Imam in 1741, and whose family has since ruled, though under the title of Sultans for the last three generations.

The present Sultan is H.H. Seyyid Sir Taimur bin Feisal, K.C.I.E., C.S.I. (b. 1886), who succeeded his father, the late Sultan Seyyid Feisal bin Turki, October 5, 1913, as the 13th of his dynasty to be Imam or Sultan of Oman. The Sultan's sister was consort to the late Seyyid Ali II, 9th Sultan of Zanzibar (1902-11), of the other branch of the dynasty which has been reigning there since the separation of the crowns on the death of the Seyyid Said ibn Sultan, Imam of Oman and 1st Sultan of Zanzibar, October 19, 1856.

In the beginning of last century the power of the Imam of Oman extended over a large area of Arabia, the islands in the Persian Gulf, a strip of the Persian coast, and a long strip of the African coast south of Cape Guardafui, including Socotra and Zanzibar. But now the sole remaining possession of the Sultan on the Persian coast is the town of Gwadar, which is of considerable importance, as through it passes a fair amount of the trade of Mekran. The closest relations have for years existed between the Government of India and Oman; a British Consul and Political Agent resides at Muscat.

The revenue of the Sultan from all sources varies between ten and eleven lakhs of rupees yearly. The population is poor. In the valleys of the interior, date cultivation has reached a high level, and there are possibilities of agricultural development where the water supply more certain. Inland camels are bred in large numbers by the tribes, and these are said to be the best breed in Arabia, but in size and strength they are inferior to those of north-western India.

Trade is mainly in the hands of British Indians, and imports and exports are mainly from and to India. Rice (160,622 $\frac{1}{2}$ ), coffee (36,079 $\frac{1}{2}$ ) and cotton piece goods (51,465 $\frac{1}{2}$ ) were the chief imports in 1927-28. Dates are the principal export (92,529 $\frac{1}{2}$  in 1927-28). Pomegranates, dried limes and dried fish are the only other export of any note. There are no industries of any importance. Total imports for 1927-28 amounted to 370,659 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and total exports to 148,285 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Import duty is at present 5 per cent. ad valorem. There is no export duty, and imports for re-export by the importer within six months are not subject to any duty.

The only port of call for steamers is Muscat where, in 1927-28, 126 steamships of 406,093 tons and 107 sailing vessels of 11,808 tons entered and cleared. It is one of the ports on the subsidiary mail route between Bombay and Basra. The mail service is a weekly one in both directions. The Indian Government maintains a post office and a telegraph office at Muscat.

The common medium of exchange is the Maria Theresa dollar. On the coast, but not in the interior, the rupee circulates. There is one Omani copper coin, which fluctuates in value. The muhammadi of 20 gaf (1 dollar = 11 $\frac{1}{2}$  muhammadi) is only money of account. The weights in use are 1 Kiyas = the weight of 6 dollars or 5.9375 oz.; 24 Kiyas = 1 Maskat Maund; 10 Maunds = 1 Farásala; 200 Maunds = 2 Bahár. Rice is sold by the bag; other cereals by the following measures:—40 Palls = 1 Farrah; 20 Farrahs = 1 Khandi.

Political Agent and H.B.M.'s Consul.—Major G. P. Murphy, I.A.

The State of Kuwait is situated on the north-western coast of the Persian Gulf. The reigning dynasty was founded by Subah abu Abdullah, who ruled from 1756 to 1782. The Sheikh is subsidised by the British Government, which maintains a Political Agent at his Court. The present Sheikh, Ahmed ibn Jabir al Subah (b. 1885), succeeded his uncle, the 9th Sheikh Salim ibn Mubarak, on February 23, 1921. Although His Highness has two sons by his first marriage—Abdullah (b. 1905) and Mohamed (b. 1909)—and one by his present consort, the daughter of the late Sheikh Salim ibn Mubarak Jabir (b. June 29, 1926)—the Heir Presumptive according to the Koweiti rule of succession is the Sheikh's uncle, Hamad ibn Mubarak (b. 1894), who has a son Mubarak.

Estimated population, 50,000, to which an indeterminate number of Bedouins must be added.

Indian rupees and annas are legal tender in Kuwait town, and the post office, which is administered by the Iraqi postal department, issues Indian stamps overprinted 'Kuwait.' Maria Theresa dollars are still used in the interior.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA ARGENTINA.)

Constitution and Government.

ARGENTINA was discovered in 1516 by Juan Diaz de Solis and Vicente Yáñez Pinzón. In 1535 Don Pedro de Mendoza was sent out by the King of Spain, and in that same year founded the town of Buenos Aires. On May 25, 1810, the population rose against the Spanish rule, and on July 9, 1816, Argentine independence was proclaimed. Between 1816 and 1852 was a period of anarchy, and in 1853 stable government was once more established.

The Constitution of the Argentine Republic bears date May 15, 1853, with modifications in 1860, 1866 and 1893. The executive power is left to a President, elected for six years by electors appointed by the fourteen provinces and the capital, equal to double the number of senators and deputies combined; while the legislative authority is vested in a National Congress, consisting of a Senate and a House of Deputies, the former numbering 30, two from the capital and from each province, elected for nine years by a special body of electors in the capital, and by the legislatures in the provinces; and the latter, 158 members elected by the people. By the Constitution there should be one deputy for every 33,000 inhabitants. According to the census of 1914 the rate is one deputy for every 49,000 inhabitants. A deputy must be 25 years of age, and have been a citizen for four years. The deputies are elected for four years, but one-half of the House must retire every two years. Senators must be 30 years of age, have been citizens for six years. One-third of the Senate is renewed every three years. The two chambers meet annually from May 1 to September 30. The members of both the Senate and the House of Deputies each receive 18,000 paper pesos per annum. A Vice-President, elected in the same manner and at the same time as the President, fills the office of Chairman of the Senate, but has otherwise no political power. The President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and appoints to all civil, military, naval, and judicial offices, and has the right of presentation to bishoprics; he is responsible with the Ministry for the acts of the executive; both President and Vice-President must be Roman Catholics, Argentine by birth, and cannot be re-elected, unless a period of six years intervenes.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Hipólito Yrigoyen. Assumed office, October, 1928. Term expires 1934.

The Ministry, appointed by and acting under the orders of the President, consists of eight Secretaries of State—namely, of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Justice and Public Instruction, Agriculture, Marine, and Public Works.

The President has a salary of 96,000 paper pesos (£8,800), and 28,800 paper pesos for official expenses; the Vice-President, 36,000 paper pesos as his salary, and 24,000 for official expenses, and each of the eight ministers 39,600 paper pesos per annum.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Constitution, with certain small exceptions, is identical with that of the United States. Such matters as affect the Republic as a whole are under the Central Government. The governors of the various provinces are invested with very extensive powers, and in their constitutional functions are independent of the central executive. They are elected by the people of each province for a term varying between three and four years. The provinces elect their own legislatures, and have complete control over their own affairs. The territories are under the supervision of governors appointed by the President. In Buenos Aires municipal government is exercised by a Mayor appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. He is assisted by a deliberative council of 80 elected by the male inhabitants over 18 years including foreigners who comply with certain conditions. Voting is compulsory under penalty of a fine. The deliberative council votes on measures relating to city finance, works, and general administration, and its decisions are carried out by the Mayor. Other municipalities have constitutions of a similar character.

Area and Population.

The Argentine Republic consists of fourteen provinces, ten territories and one federal district, containing the land area and population shown below:—

Population of the capital, Buenos Aires, on December 31, 1927, was 2,080,765; Rosario (Santa Fé), June, 1922, 265,000; Córdoba, April 30, 1928, 221,200; La Plata, May, 1928, 165,813; Avellaneda (1914), 46,277; Tucumán, 91,216; Bahía Blanca, 44,143; Santa Fé, 59,574; Mendoza, 58,790; Paraná, 36,089; Salta, 28,436; Lomas de Zamora, 22,231; Río Cuarto, 18,421; Corrientes, 28,681; Quilmes, 19,311; Concordia, 20,107; Mar del Plata, 27,611; Santiago del Estero, 23,479; Chivilcoy, 23,241; Resistencia, 21,322; Mercedes (San Luis), 18,256; Tandil, 15,734; Junín, 21,172; Bell-ville, 8,732; Gualeguaychú, 17,880; Pergamino, 20,549; San Juan, 16,631; Catamarca, 13,262; Posadas, 15,734; La Rioja, 12,536; Jujuy, 7,956.

The Federal Government in 1927 established 29 towns and 12 colonies on 1,373,320 acres of public lands.

Religion and Education.

There is no State religion, though the Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State; all other creeds are tolerated and freedom of conscience prevails. There are 1 archbishop (Buenos Aires) and 10 suffragan bishops. For the clergy there are 8 seminaries. In 1888 civil marriage was established in the Republic.

Primary education is free (subsidised by the General and Provincial Governments), secular and compulsory for children from 6 to 14 years of age. In 1927 the primary schools numbered 10,608 with 45,271 teachers and an average daily attendance of 1,302,534. During 1925 there were in the country 207 secondary, normal and special schools under the Ministry of Public Instruction, including 44 national secondary schools with 13,437 pupils and 84 normal schools with 12,650 students. There were also 107 private schools with 4,655 pupils. There was also 1 national normal school for teachers in secondary schools with (1924) 76 teachers and 775 students. There are national universities at Córdoba (founded 1613), with 2,551 students in 1925; Buenos Aires (founded 1821), with 7,395 students (1928); La Plata (founded 1897), with 3,126 students (1926); the university of Tucumán (founded in 1912), with 682 students in 1925; and the National University of the Littoral, in Rosario (founded in 1920) with 3,954 students (1925); and provincial universities at Santa Fé and the university of Cuyo (founded in 1921) for the provinces of Mendoza, San Juan and San Luis. There is a well-equipped national observatory at Córdoba, and another at La Plata, museums at Buenos Aires and La Plata, and a national meteorological bureau at Buenos Aires. In 1926, 19,272,232 paper pesos were spent on university education, and a total of 188,362,187 paper pesos on all forms of educational activity. For university and school buildings and equipment 64,854,985 pesos was spent in 1926.

In Argentina there are 520 newspapers published, 493 in Spanish, 4 in Italian, 5 in German, 5 in English, and others in Scandinavian, French, Basque, Russian.

Justice.

Justice is administered by Federal and by Provincial Courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The Federal Courts are the Supreme Courts, with 5 judges at Buenos Aires; 5 Appeal Courts, one with 5 judges at Buenos Aires, and with 3 each at La Plata, Paraná, Córdoba, and Rosario (Santa Fé), and courts of first instance in each of the provinces and territories. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so-called) and several minor courts. Trial by jury is established by the Constitution for criminal cases, but never practised.

About 76 per cent. of the revenue is obtained from import duties and 10 per cent. from direct taxation. There is no income tax.

On December 31, 1927, the national consolidated debt was as follows: external debt, 1,103,820,137 paper pesos, internal debt, 1,051,697,961 paper pesos, making a total of 2,155,518,098 paper pesos. The floating debt on December 31, 1927, was 448,440,376 paper pesos, a reduction of 421,363,874 from the highest recorded total, that of 869,804,250 paper pesos reached on December 31, 1922.

Defence.

ARMY.

The army of the Argentine Republic is a National Militia, service in which is compulsory for all citizens from their 20th to their 45th year. Naturalised citizens are exempt for a period of 10 years. For the first 10 years the men belong to the 'active' army, or first line (Permanent Forces). After completing 10 years in the first line, the men pass to the National Guard and serve in it for another 10 years, finishing their service with 5 years in the Territorial Guard; the latter is only mobilised in case of war. The period of continuous service, or training in the ranks with the Permanent Forces, is for 1 year. The reservists can be called out for training periodically.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military districts for administrative purposes. According to the Army Regulations which came into force in January, 1916, the establishment of officers for 1927 was 1,497, and of other ranks 3,162 N.C.O.'s, 2,787 volunteers, and 21,000 conscripts called up. The army is organised in 5 divisions, 3 cavalry brigades and 2 mountain detachments.

There is a trained reserve numbering 300,000 men, of whom 150,000 men are of the first line, and 150,000 of the special reserve. The territorial reserve numbers 100,000 men.

The weapon of the Argentine infantry is at present the Mauser magazine rifle. The cavalry have a carbine of the same pattern. The artillery are armed with a Krupp 7·5 cm. Q.F. gun.

The estimated military budget for the year 1929 was 5,902,863£.

There is a Military Aviation Training School at El Palomar. In December, 1928, the air force was organised in two aviation groups, comprising 1 bombing flight, 1 fighting flight, and one observation flight; each group has a photographic and a training centre.

There are also 7 destroyers and some training and miscellaneous craft.

During 1924, the battleships Moreno and Rivadavia and 4 destroyers were refitted at a cost of 9,500,000 gold pesos, the boilers of all six vessels being adapted to burn oil. The coast defence ironclads Independencia and Libertad and the 4 cruisers of the Garibaldi type are also being converted to oil burning. A new naval programme, to involve the expenditure of 75,000,000 gold pesos, spread over a period of ten years, was approved in 1926. It provides for extension of the present dockyard accommodation in the River Plate and at Puerto Belgrano, and the construction of a new yard at Mardel Plata. New construction covered by this legislation includes the 6,800 ton cruisers Almirante Brown and 25 de Mayo, and 3 submarines, building in Italy; 2 flotilla leaders, purchased from Spain, and 3 flotilla leaders, building in England. Two British-built surveying vessels were delivered in 1928. Further orders are to be placed later.

The active personnel of the navy comprises 337 officers, 130 engineers, 27 electrical engineers, and about 9,100 men (including about 5,000 conscripts), who have to serve two years. There is a corps of coast artillery of 450 men, a naval school, a school of mechanics, a school for artillery, and a school for torpedo practice. The training of officers and men has recently been placed on a much higher scientific level.

Production and Industry.

Argentina has an area of about 699,278,300 acres, of which about 250,000,000 acres may be used for agriculture, 250,000,000 acres for cattle raising, 96,250,000 acres are woodland, and the remainder, 103,028,300 acres, are mountain, lake, river, or arid regions. Of the cultivable portion, about 10,000,000 acres require irrigation. In the territories the Federal Government has wide tracts of land amounting to 237,768,000 acres suitable in general for pastoral colonisation, and these lands are conditionally offered free, or for sale or on lease.

The area and produce of principal crops are shown as follows for three years:—

	Acreage			Produce (Metric Tons)

The total grain exported for three years, in metric tons, is shown as follows:—

Year	Wheat	Maize	Linseed	Oats
1926	2,034,773	4,984,150	1,671,488	510,866
1927	4,225,404	8,348,597	1,894,565	604,828
1928	5,373,942	6,455,552	2,033,032	814,563

Cotton, sugar, vine, tobacco, and yerba maté (Paraguayan tea) are also cultivated. The area under sugar is about 237,500 acres, chiefly in Tucumán, Jujuy, and Salta; production of sugar in 1927, 474,256 tons; in 1928, 414,527 tons. The total vine area is about 280,000 acres, chiefly in Mendoza and San Juan; production of wine in 1927, 89,976,470 gallons. The area under tobacco averages 22,000 acres; output, 7,700 metric tons; Yerba maté, 80,000 acres, producing 16,196 tons. Production of cotton in 1926-27, 45,165 tons; in 1927-28 (estimated), 73,410 tons. The production of butter, cheese and caseine in 1927 was, in kilos: butter, 29,176,531; cheese, 16,175,318; and caseine (nearly 75 per cent. of the world's output), 13,380,415. Production of vegetable oils, principally from peanuts, totalled 26,819,485 kilos in 1927. Export of quebracho-extract in 1927 totalled 198,807 tons.

In 1922 (census, December 31) the number of animals within the Republic was: cattle, 37,064,850 (25,866,763 in 1914); sheep, 30,671,841 (43,225,452 in 1914); pigs, 1,436,638. The Province of Buenos Aires contains over 43 per cent. of the sheep within the Republic. Argentine wool production in 1927-28 (sheared in the Autumn of 1927) was estimated at 146,098 metric tons.

In the provinces of Buenos Aires, Santa Fé, and Entre Rios, agricultural lands to the extent of 463,000 acres have been acquired by the Jewish Colonisation Association. Of this land 158,000 acres are under cultivation. Some 30,000 square miles of State lands are cultivated as follows: in Misiones, 1,060,199 acres; in Chaco, 3,592,216 acres; in Formosa, 2,031,285 acres; in Chubut (Patagonia), 8,394,234 acres; in Santa Cruz, 3,805,340 acres; and in Tierra del Fuego, 12,355 acres.

The principal industry is meat refrigeration. In 1926, 430,728 tons of chilled beef, 226,739 tons of frozen beef, and 67,229 tons of frozen mutton were exported. The largest killing and freezing plant in the world, with a daily capacity of 5,000 cattle and 10,000 sheep, is situated at Buenos Aires. Cattle killed and refrigerated in Argentine in 1927, 4,650,530 head; sheep, 5,291,234. Flour milling ranks second to refrigeration. The average yearly output is 7,000,000 sacks. Near Bahía Blanca is being constructed the largest grain elevator in the southern hemisphere, with capacity of 81,000 tons. Mining is of no great importance. Gold, silver, and copper are worked in Catamarca, where there are also two valuable tin mines, and gold and copper in San Juan and La Rioja. Gold is also mined in the south-western territories. Coal is found in the Andine Provinces, in the Cordillera region of Patagonia and in Northern Patagonia. Tungsten is also an important mineral, others being borate, salt, and limestone. During 1927 the crude-oil production in the oil-fields in Argentina amounted to 5,106,900 barrels, compared with 3,773,585 barrels in 1925.

The Government estimated Argentine industrial production in 1927 at: gross 2,889,000,000 paper pesos; raw materials used, 1,624,000,000; net added value, 1,265,000,000 (about 101,000,000%).

Shipping and Navigation.

On January 1, 1922, the registered shipping consisted of 216 steamers over 100 tons, of 181,555 tons.

The total shipping entering Argentine ports in 1927 was 3,376 vessels with 11,862,737 tons, of which 1,563 with 5,620,181 tons were British.

Internal Communications.

The first railway concession dates from 1854. Railways open, January 1, 1928, 22,791 miles, of which 4,418 miles belong to the State, and 18,373 miles to private companies. The total receipts in 1927 of both the State and private railways were 146,840,800 gold pesos as against 137,942,400 gold pesos in 1926. Passenger traffic in 1927 was 149,507,178; freight traffic, 52,928,126 tons. The capital invested amounted in 1925 to 1,276,843,316 gold pesos. Length of motor roads in 1924, 2,992 kilometres (1,858 miles).

Aviation has developed rapidly in the Republic. Aerial routes have been organised from Buenos Aires to Salta, Catamarca, Posadas, Corrientes, Mendoza and San Juan. There is an aerial post service between Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

National post office in 1927, handled 2,319 million pieces of mail and 23 million telegrams. National telegraph lines, 25,763 miles in 1922. Number of telephone exchanges in Argentina in 1927, 395, with 171,000 subscribers.

There are 12 stations for wireless telegraphy. All ships with a crew of over 50 and touching at Argentine ports are compelled by law to be equipped with wireless telegraphy.

Banking and Credit.

According to the First Banking Census taken by the National Department of Statistics, on December 31, 1925, there were 112 banks in Argentina with 1,033,946,000 paper pesos of capital and reserves, and loans amounting to 4,984,014,000 paper pesos. Of those 112 banking establishments, 91 (1 State Bank—Banco de la Nación—77 other Argentine banks, and 13 foreign banks) were ordinary Discount and Deposit Banks with capital and reserves amounting to 710,228,000 paper pesos and loans amounting to 3,552,316,000 paper pesos; 15 Mortgage Banks with 310,000,000 paper pesos of capital and reserves and 1,407,099,000 paper pesos of loans; and 6 Pignorative Banks whose capital and reserves and loans amounted to 13,454,000 paper pesos and 24,599,000 paper pesos respectively.

The Banco de la Nación reported June 30, 1928, capital of 158,189,786 paper pesos; reserves of 63,242,935 paper pesos; loans, 1,259,256,000; deposits, 1,737,243,000 paper pesos. It has 200 branches.

On April 5, 1915, a national postal savings bank (Caja Nacional de Ahorro Postal) was incorporated. On December 31, 1927, it had 1,132,474 depositors with total deposits amounting to 80,397,103 paper pesos.

In August, 1927, the Caja de Conversion returned to the gold standard after a suspension lasting for 18 years. It now undertakes to redeem paper pesos at the legal rate established in 1889, that is, 1 paper peso for 44 centavos in gold. Previously the value of the peso had fluctuated considerably. The stock of gold in the Caja de Conversion, serving as a backing for the paper currency, stood on November 30, 1928, at 492,936,267 gold pesos; paper currency was 1,413,327,929 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary system of the Republic is on a gold standard, the unit being the peso oro (gold dollar) which weighs 1·6129 grammes of gold  $\frac{8}{16}$  fine. The Peso oro which is divided into 100 centavos, is of the value of 47·57*d*. One pound sterling = 5·04 gold pesos. Figures in gold pesos are followed by the abbreviation o/s (oro sellado, minted gold). The monetary law of November 5, 1881, authorizes the coinage of five and two-and-a-half gold peso pieces. The 5-peso gold piece (the Argentino) weighs 8·0645 grammes, .900 fine, and therefore contains 7·25805 grammes of fine gold.

Gold is not widely in circulation. The money in circulation is chiefly paper (peso papel). The paper peso is equal to .44 gold peso, which makes it worth 1*s*. 8½*d*. (11·45 to the £). To convert paper pesos into gold pesos, multiply by .44. To convert gold pesos into paper pesos, multiply by 2·27. Figures in paper pesos are usually followed by the abbreviation m/n (moneda nacional, national money). Ten-centavo pieces of nickel are coined to meet the demand for small currency.

Since January 1, 1887, the use of the metric system is compulsory.

AUSTRIA.

(DIE REPUBLIK ÖSTERREICH.)

Constitution and Government.

The Republic of Austria was proclaimed on November 12, 1918. The Government was taken in hand by a National Assembly which appointed a temporary cabinet and proceeded to pass laws. On February 16, 1919, the National Constitutional Assembly, consisting of only one Chamber, was duly elected on the basis of universal and proportional suffrage; every Austrian subject, male and female, has a vote if 21 years of age, and is eligible for election if 30 years of age. At the elections held on April 24, 1927, the following parties were returned:—Christian Socialists, 73; Social Democrats, 71; German Nationalists, 12; Peasants' Party, 9; total, 165.

The Constitution, which was adopted October 1, 1920, and came into force on November 10, 1920, provides for a President, chosen by the two Houses assembled for a joint session; his term is for 4 years, and he may be re-elected once only; for an Assembly (Nationalrat), elected by popular vote for 4 years; and for a First Chamber (Bundesrat), chosen by the Provincial Diets in proportion to their population (at present the members number 46). The powers of the Bundesrat are advisory. Austria is declared to be a Federal Republic composed of eight provinces and the city of Vienna. All special privileges are abolished, and equal rights granted to all citizens.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Wilhelm Miklas. Born October 15, 1872. Elected December 5, 1928.

The Ministry, constituted on May 19, 1927, is as follows:—

Federal Chancellor and Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Ignaz Seipel (Christian Socialist).

Vice-Chancellor.—Karl Hartleb (Peasant Party).

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Franz Slama (Pan-German).

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Joseph Resch (Christian Socialist).

Minister of Agriculture and Forestry.—Andreas Thaler.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Victor Kienböck.

Minister of Commerce and Communications.—Dr. Hans Schuerff (Pan-German).

Minister of Education.—Dr. Richard Schmitz (Christian Socialist).

Minister of Defence.—Karl Vaugoin (Christian Socialist).

The national flag consists of three horizontal stripes, the top and bottom being red and the centre white.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Republic of Austria comprises 9 provinces, viz., the City of Vienna, Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, and Burgenland. There is in every province a Provincial Assembly (Landtag), consisting likewise of one chamber which is elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the National Assembly. The cultivation of the soil, the educational, ecclesiastical, and charitable institutions, as also public works, chiefly fall within the competence of the provinces. At the head of the Provincial Assembly is the Provincial Committee (Landesausschuss) elected by the Provincial Assembly.

Every commune has a council to deliberate and decide its affairs. The members are mostly elected for 5 years. The council elects from its midst the head of the commune (burgomaster) and a committee for the administration of the affairs and execution of its resolutions. All who are 21 years of age have a vote, while for the passive suffrage the attained age of 24–30 years is required.

Area and Population.

For the boundaries of Austria according to the Treaty of St. Germain, signed on September 10, 1919, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1920, pp. 674–5.

The area and population (census taken on March 7 1923) of Austria are shown as follows:—

Provinces	Area, English square miles	Population (Census 1923)			Percentage of Population 1923	Population per square mile 1923
		Males	Females	Total
Vienna . . .	107	860,119	1,005,661	1,865,780	28.55	17,437
Burgenland . .	1,532	141,144	144,405	285,609	4.37	186
Lower Austria .	7,452	725,884	754,665	1,480,449	22.65	199
Upper Austria .	4,626	425,917	450,157	876,074	13.41	189
Salzburg . . .	2,762	108,847	114,176	223,023	3.41	81
Styria . . . .	6,823	483,291	495,554	978,845	14.98	155
Carinthia . . .	3,680	179,911	190,906	370,817	5.67	101
Tyrol . . . . .	4,882	154,078	159,857	313,885	4.82	64
Vorarlberg . . .	1,005	68,263	71,736	139,999	2.14	139
Total . . . .	32,869	3,147,404	3,387,077	6,534,481	100.00	202

Compared with the total population in 1920, the total for 1923 shows an increase of 108,187, or 1.65 per cent., excluding Burgenland of 117,427, or 1.92 per cent. The male population (excluding Burgenland) has increased by 70,530 or 2·40 per cent. as compared with 1920. Estimated population June 30, 1928, 6,675,283.

Movement of population (including Burgenland) in 1927:—Marriages, 48,523 (7·4 per mille.); living births, 118,741 (18·2 per mille.); deaths, 99,330 (15·2 per mille.); divorces (excluding Burgenland), 5,850 (0·85 per mille.). Emigrants, 1926, 3,895; 1927, 5,339. Of the emigrants in 1927, 1,020 went to United States, 1,396 to Canada, 945 to Brazil, 1,100 to Argentina, 51 to Australia and 108 to Russia.

PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The population of the principal towns of Austria on March 7, 1928, was as follows:—Vienna, 1,857,400 (Census of July 31, 1928; there were at that date 999,922 women); Graz, 152,706; Linz, 102,081; Innsbruck, 56,401; Salzburg, 37,856; Wiener Neustadt, 36,956; St. Pölten, 31,576; Klagenfurt, 27,423; Baden, 22,217; Steyr, 22,111; Villach, 22,070; Mödling, 18,677; Wels, 16,412.

Religion.

Religious liberty is one of the fundamental laws of the Republic, and the principle is embodied in the Treaty of St. Germain (article 63). In 1910 there were (including Burgenland), 6,225,843 Catholics (93·68 per cent.), 206,505 Protestants (3·11 per cent.), 194,584 Jews (2·93 per cent.), and 19,052 'others' (0·28 per cent.). The Catholic Church has 2 archbishoprics and 4 bishoprics.

Education.

The educational organisation of Austria comprises: (1) elementary schools; (2) middle schools; (3) high schools; (4) schools for special subjects; and (5) universities and colleges.

Attendance is compulsory at the elementary schools from 6 to 14 in Austria generally, but there are far-reaching facilities for exemption for pupils of 12 years and upwards. The cost of elementary education is borne in the first instance by the communes and provinces. In 1926 there were in the Republic 5,293 public and private elementary schools, with 28,757 teachers and 712,225 pupils.

Secondary education is provided in the Gymnasias, Realschulen, German Middle Schools, Mädchenlyzeen (Girls' Middle Schools), and High Schools for women. These institutions are maintained by the State, the provinces, the towns, or private individuals. Of all kinds of secondary schools there were (1925-26) 147 with 46,122 pupils, and 3,672 teachers.

There is also a State Commercial Academy in Graz (1925-26), 39 teachers and 344 pupils, in Linz (28 teachers and 258 pupils), and 6 private commercial academies, 4 in Vienna (143 teachers and 1,932 pupils), 1 at Klagenfurt (18 teachers and 121 pupils), and 1 at Innsbruck (29 teachers and 194 pupils), and other High Schools for Agriculture, Veterinary science, Mining, Art and Music.

Austria has three universities maintained by the State, viz., Vienna (in 1925-26, 837 teachers and 9,324 students), Graz (282 teachers and 2,086 students), and Innsbruck (195 teachers and 1,627 students); and there are also two technical high schools at Vienna (292 teachers and 3,562 students) and Graz (105 teachers and 982 students).

The theological high school (Fakultät) at Salzburg for Roman Catholics was, on November 25, 1928, proclaimed a free German Roman Catholic University with the right to confer degrees. There are also 13 other theological colleges, of which 11 are Roman Catholic, 1 Armenian Catholic, and 1 Jewish. In 1926 there were also 36 training colleges for teachers, with 792 lecturers and 4,308 students.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court of Justice (Oberster Gerichtshof) in Vienna is the highest court in the land. Besides there are 8 higher provincial courts (Oberlandesgerichte), 19 provincial and district courts (Landes- und Kreisgerichte), and, in connection with these, the jury courts (Geschworenengerichte) and the Schöffengerichte, which are courts composed of professional and non-professional judges. There are likewise 244 county courts (Bezirksgerichte), and 1 special court for commercial affairs, 1 constitutional court, 1 administrative court, 1 electoral court, and 7 for industry.

Pauperism.

Funds for poor relief are derived from endowments, voluntary contributions, the third of the property left by intestate secular priests, and certain percentages on the proceeds of voluntary sales. In some provinces the poor funds are augmented from other sources, e.g. theatre money (Spectakelgelder), hunting licences, dog certificates, and in some large towns percentages on legacies over a fixed amount. Those who are wholly or partially unfit for work may be provided for in such manner as the commune judges propose. Besides poor-houses and money relief, there exists in many provinces the practice of assigning the poor—in respect of board and lodging—to each of the resident householders in fixed succession.

The law for unemployment insurance bears date March 24, 1920. The means for unemployment relief are contributed as to one-half by the employers, and as to the other half by the workers.

Finance.

The budgets for five years provided revenue and expenditure as follows, in thousands of schillings (1 schilling = 10,000 kronen):—

The public debt of the Republic of Austria was composed as follows on Dec. 31, 1927 (in schillings):—

Pre-War Debt . . . . .	140,470,188
War Debt . . . . .	283,380
Debts incurred by the Republic . . . . .	2,408,706,719

Defence.

1. ARMY.

By the terms of the Treaty of St. Germain, universal compulsory military service is abolished in Austria, and the total number of military forces in the Austrian Army is limited to 30,000 men, including officers and depot troops. The effective strength in 1927 was 20,114.

Austria is permitted at her own discretion to organise this number of troops either in divisions or in mixed brigades.

The latter organisation has been chosen, and the army has been organised in 6 mixed brigades and 1 independent artillery regiment.

The maximum authorised armaments and stocks of munitions are per 1,000 men:—

Rifles or carbines	. 1,150	. 500	rounds of ammunition per arm.
Machine guns	. 15	. 10,000	"	"	"	"	"

" " medium			"	"	"	"	"
Guns . field or	} 3	. 1,000	"	"	"	"	"
Howitzers } mountain			"	"	"	"	"

All officers must be regulars. Officers now serving retained in the army must serve to the age of 40. Officers newly appointed must serve on the active list for 20 consecutive years.

The period of enlistment for non-commissioned officers and privates must be for a total period of not less than 12 consecutive years, including at least six years with the colours. The proportion of officers and men discharged for any reason before the expiration of their term of enlistment must not exceed one-twentieth of the total strength. All measures of mobilisation are forbidden.

The number of gendarmes, customs officers, foresters, and members of police forces must not exceed the number employed in a similar capacity in 1918. Educational establishments and all sporting and other clubs are forbidden to occupy themselves with any military matters. Within two months of the final ratification of the Treaty the air forces of Austria are to be demobilised. The armed forces of Austria therefore do not include any military or naval air forces. The manufacture, importation, and exportation of aircraft, and parts of aircraft, are forbidden.

The military budget for 1927-28 amounted to 79,742,000 schillings.

2. NAVY.

As Austria now has no seaboard, the former Austro-Hungarian fleet has ceased to exist.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture forms the main occupation of the country. In 1927 the total acreage sown amounted to 4,762,740 acres. Of the total in 1927, 2,114,281 acres were in Lower Austria, and 1,023,290 acres in Upper Austria. The chief products are shown as follows for two years:—

Crop	1926		1927
	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)
Wheat . . .	500,334	256,864	505,214	325,495
Rye . . .	972,272	475,315	947,642	511,220
Barley . . .	362,352	197,555	365,617	238,075
Oats . . .	777,042	434,796	768,082	438,809
Potatoes . .	439,043	1,297,782	452,913	2,664,768
Turnips . . .	128,596	1,202,449	131,853	1,600,647

Production of raw sugar in 1926-27, 79,636 metric tons.

The foodstuffs produced do not suffice for the population. Forests abound and timber forms an appreciable asset of Austria. The number of animals in 1923 was: horses, 282,651; cows, 1,074,864; oxen, 302,103; bulls, 68,143; and calves, 717,236.

The mineral output of the country is not unimportant. In 1927 the production of lignite was 3,064,100 tons, and of anthracite, 175,600 tons. There were 5 anthracite mines worked in 1927, and 47 lignite mines. The output of iron ore was 1,598,600 tons in 1927, and of pig iron, 432,749 tons. Some copper, zinc, lead, and salt (81,375 tons in 1927) are also produced.

Of important industries, piano-making and the manufacture of motor-cars, furniture, and textiles still remain in Austria to a certain extent. The knitting industry is an important branch of the textile industry, manufacturing principally sport knitted goods and hosiery. There were about 10,000 knitting machines in use in 1927. The 9 factories of the Austrian tobacco monopoly in 1927 made 203,239,000 cigars, 4,605,522,000 cigarettes, and 51,796 metric quintals of smoking tobacco.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 5 years (in 1,000 schillings) were as follows:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Exports . . .	1,988,099	1,964,485	1,744,930	2,098,093	2,219,300

The following table shows the values of the chief trading groups during 1927 and 1928 in thousands of schillings:—

Group	Imports		Exports
	1927	1928	1927	1928
Livestock . . . . .	276,552	265,900	32,000	21,900
Foodstuffs . . . . .	788,709	789,600	35,777	48,060
Mineral Fuel . . . . .	224,759	226,000	7,128	—
Raw material and semi-manufactured goods . . . . .	671,837	633,000	469,123	498,500
Manufactured goods . . . . .	1,120,749	1,266,800	1,491,753	1,609,600
Precious stones . . . . .	102,192	69,500	63,312	41,800

The trade in 1927 was distributed among principal countries as follows:

Country	Imports	Exports	Country	Imports	Exports
	1000 Schillings	1000 Schillings		1000 Schillings	1000 Schillings
Czechoslovakia . . .	564,956	240,429	Yugoslavia . . .	176,247	156,788
Germany . . .	531,620	382,300	Hungary . . .	297,525	203,122

Italy . . .	129,115	167,908	Rumania . . .	173,286	127,834

The total trade between England and Austria (Board of Trade returns) for five years were as follows:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Imports from Austria to United Kingdom . . . . .	£ 2,522,174	£ 2,596,336	£ 2,890,650	£ 2,426,810	£ 2,819,175
Exports to Austria from United Kingdom . . . . .	2,375,016	2,204,410	1,805,820	2,419,822	2,793,005

Internal Communications.

Austria had in 1927, 4,150 miles of railway lines, of which 3,618 miles were operated by the State, and 532 miles by private companies. At the end of 1927, 370 miles of the State railways had been electrified.

There were 21,315 miles of road in 1928, of which 2,490 miles are national, or first-class; 1,035 miles provincial, or second-class; 11,915 departmental and 5,375 miles municipal, or third-class.

At the end of 1927 there were 135,142 telephones in use on the principal systems in the country.

An Austrian aviation company is subsidised by the State (1,400,000 schillings in 1928), and runs a regular service, Vienna-Salzburg-Innsbruck and Innsbruck-Constance. Some of the international routes are shared with foreign companies.

Banking and Credit.

A new National Bank for Austria was opened on January 1, 1923, with a capital of 30,000,000 gold crowns. It is a private, not a State, institution. The note circulation on February 23, 1929, was 858,280,000 schillings. Savings banks deposits amounted to 940,000,000 schillings in 1927.

According to the Treaty of St. Germain the Austro-Hungarian Bank was liquidated on July 29, 1923.

Money, Weights and Measures.

The Austrian unit of currency was the krone. But as from June 30, 1925, there came into general use a new unit, the gold schilling, made up of 100 groschen. The schilling contains 0.21172086 grammes of fine gold. Since June 1924 the National Bank has issued new token coins as follows:—2 schilling pieces, silver (= 20,000 kronen), issued in 1923; 1 schilling pieces, silver (= 10,000 kronen); half-schilling pieces, silver (= 5000 kronen); 1000 kronen pieces, copper and nickel (= 10 groschen); 200 kronen pieces, copper (= 2 groschen); 100 kronen pieces, copper (= 1 groschen); 10 groschen pieces (copper and nickel), 2 groschen pieces (copper) and 1 groschen pieces (copper).

BELGIUM.

(ROYAUME DE BELGIQUE.)

Reigning King.

Albert, born April 8, 1875, son of the late Prince Philippe of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and of Flanders (died November 17, 1905), and of the late Princess Marie de Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen (died Nov. 27, 1912); married Oct. 2, 1900, to Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria; succeeded his uncle Leopold II., Dec. 17, 1909.

Children of the King.—(1) Prince Leopold, Duke of Brabant, born Nov. 3, 1901; married on Nov. 4, 1926, to Princess Astrid of Sweden. Offspring:—Josephine Charlotte, born October 11, 1927. (2) Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, born Oct. 10, 1903. (3) Princess Marie-José, born Aug. 4, 1906.

Sisters of the King.—(1) Princess Henriette, born Nov. 30, 1870; married Feb. 12, 1896, to Prince Emmanuel of Orleans, Duke of Vendôme. (2) Princess Josephine, born Oct. 18, 1872; married May 28, 1904, to Prince Charles of Hohenzollern.

King Albert has a civil list of 9,500,000 francs.

The Kingdom of Belgium formed itself into an independent State in 1830, having from 1815 been a part of the Netherlands. The secession was decreed on October 4, 1830, by a Provisional Government, established in consequence of a revolution which broke out at Brussels, on August 25, 1830. A National Congress elected Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg King of the Belgians on June 4, 1831; he ascended the throne July 21, 1831. On his death in 1865 he was succeeded by his son, Leopold II., who reigned until 1909.

By the Treaty of London, Nov. 15, 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. It was not until after the signing of the Treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which established peace between King Leopold I. and the King of the Netherlands, that all the States of Europe recognised the Kingdom of Belgium. In the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919), it is stated that as the treaties of 1839 'no longer conform to the requirements of the situation,' these are abrogated and will be replaced by other treaties.

Constitution and Government.

According to the Constitution of 1831 Belgium is 'a constitutional, representative, and hereditary monarchy.' The legislative power is vested in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Representatives. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture. By marriage without the King's consent, however, the right of succession is forfeited, but may be restored by the King with the consent of the two Chambers. No act of the King can have effect unless countersigned by one of his Ministers, who thus becomes responsible for it. The King convokes, prorogues, and dissolves the Chambers. In default of male heirs, the King may nominate his successor with the consent of the Chambers. If the successor be under eighteen years of age, the two Chambers meet together for the purpose of nominating a regent during the minority.

Those sections of the Belgian Constitution which regulate the organisation of the legislative power were revised in October 1921. For both Senate and Chamber all elections are held on the principle of universal suffrage.

The Senate consists of members elected for four years, partly directly and partly indirectly. The number elected directly is equal to half the number of members of the Chamber of Representatives. The constituent body is similar to that which elects deputies to the Chamber; the minimum age of electors is fixed at twenty-one years, and the minimum length of residence required is six months. In Belgium only the following women may vote in parliamentary elections: (1) Widows, not re-married, of soldiers killed in the Great War; widows of Belgian citizens killed by the enemy during the War, or, failing them, their mothers, if the latter are widows; (2) Widowed mothers of bachelor soldiers killed in the War; (3) Women condemned to imprisonment or subjected to preventive detention, for political reasons, during the enemy occupation of Belgium. In the election of members both of the Senate and Chamber of Representatives directly, the principle of proportional representation of parties was introduced by Law of December 29, 1899. Senators elected indirectly are chosen by the provincial councils, on the basis of one for 200,000 inhabitants. Every addition of 125,000 inhabitants gives the right to one senator more. Each provincial council elects at least three senators. There are at present forty provincial senators. No one, during two years preceding the election, must have been a member of the council appointing him. Senators are elected by the Senate itself in the proportion of half of the preceding category. The senators belonging to these two latter categories are also elected by the method of proportional representation. All senators must be at least forty years of age. They receive 4,000 francs per annum. In 1926 the senators voted in their own favour a special grant of 2,000 francs and again in April 1927 a further grant of 2000 francs. The salary, therefore, now stands at 8,000 francs per annum, though the Constitution has not been revised in this respect. Sons of the King, or failing these, Belgian princes of the reigning branch of the Royal Family are by right senators at the age of eighteen, but have no voice in the deliberations till the age of twenty-five years.

The members of the Chamber of Representatives are all elected directly by the electoral body. Their number at present, 186 (law of May 2, 1912), is proportioned to the population, and cannot exceed one for every 40,000 inhabitants. They sit for four years. Deputies must be not less than twenty-five years of age, and resident in Belgium. Each deputy has an annual indemnity of 25,000 francs, and a free pass all the year over Government and Companies' railways between his residence and the place of Session.

The Senate and Chamber meet annually in the month of November, and must sit for at least forty days; but the King has the power of convoking them on extraordinary occasions, and of dissolving them either simultaneously or separately. In the latter case a new election must take place within forty days, and a meeting of the Chambers within two months. An adjournment cannot be made for a period exceeding one month without the consent of the Chambers. Money bills and bills relating to the contingent for the army originate in the Chamber of Representatives.

Parties in the Senate elected 1925:—Catholics, 71; Liberals, 23; Socialists, 59.

The Executive Government consists of 10 departments, under the following Ministers (appointed November 22, 1927):—

Prime Minister and Minister of the Colonies.—Henri Jaspar (Catholic).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Paul Hymans (Liberal).

Minister of Justice.—M. Janson (Liberal).

Minister of Education.—Maurice Vauthier (Liberal).

Minister of Finance.—Baron Houtart (Catholic).

Minister of Agriculture and of Public Works.—Henri Baelis (Catholic).

Minister of Industry and Labour and of Social Insurance.—M. Heyman (Christian Democrat).

Minister of Railways, Marine, Posts and Telegraphs, and Aeronautics.—M. Lippens (Liberal).

Minister of National Defence.—Comte de Broqueville (Catholic).

Minister of Interior.—M. Carney (Christian Democrat).

Local Government.

The provinces and communes (2,672 in 1927) of Belgium have a large measure of autonomous government.

In regard to the communal electorate, the law of April 15, 1920, definitely lays it down that all Belgians over 21 years of age without distinction of sex, who have been domiciled for at least six months, have the right to vote. Proportional representation is applied to the communal elections, and communal councils are to be renewed every six years. In each commune there is a college composed of the burgomaster, the president, and a certain number of aldermen.

Area and Population.

Belgium (including the districts of Eupen and Malmédy) has an area of 30,444 square kilometres, or 11,755 English square miles. The following table shows the population at various dates :—

Religion.

Of the inhabitants professing a religion the majority are Roman Catholic. But no inquisition on the profession or faith is now made at the censuses. There are, however, statistics concerning the clergy, and according to these there were in 1922 :—Roman Catholic higher clergy, 85; inferior clergy, 5,945; Protestant pastors, 21; Anglican Church, 8 chaplains; Jews (rabbis and ministers), 17. The State does not interfere in any way with the internal affairs of either Catholic or Protestant Churches. There is full religious liberty, and part of the income of the ministers of all denominations is paid from the national treasury.

In 1920 there were six Roman Catholic dioceses, 204 deaneries, 3,679 Catholic churches and chapels, 6 large and 11 small seminaries.

The Protestant (Evangelical) Church is under a synod.

Education.

There are universities at Brussels, Louvain, Ghent, and Liège, the two latter being State institutions. In 1927–28 Brussels had 1,945 students; Ghent, 1,551; Liège, 2,278; and Louvain, 3,551. On November 11, 1923, the Colonial School at Antwerp (founded January 11, 1920) and the School of Tropical Medicine were constituted a Colonial University.

There were also 7 commercial high schools, the Royal Academy of Fine Arts at Antwerp, a polytechnic at Mons, a State agricultural institute at Gembloux, and a State veterinary school at Cureghem, 68 schools of design, and 4 royal conservatoires at Brussels, Liège, Ghent, and Antwerp. Higher Education: (Dec. 31, 1927): 24 royal atheneums, with 8,020 pupils; 6 special atheneums with 374 pupils; 4 communal and provincial colleges with 2,017 pupils, and 10 private colleges with 1,609 pupils. The next grades of schools are the higher grade schools, of which there were 134 State schools (88 for boys and 46 for girls) with 27,090 pupils (18,353 boys and 8,737 girls), 15 communal and provincial (7 for boys and 8 for girls) with 5,182 pupils (2,291 boys and 2,891 girls), and 8 private higher-grade schools with 1,022 pupils (6 for boys with 700 pupils, and 2 for girls with 322 pupils). Elementary Education: there were, 3,350 primary schools, with 803,620 pupils; 3,734 infant schools with 245,186 pupils; and 1,941 adult schools with 56,510 pupils. Normal Schools: there are 6 for training secondary teachers (448 students) and 80 for training elementary teachers (8,617 students).

There are many private or free schools, mostly under ecclesiastical care. No statistics are available for these.

Each commune must have at least one primary school. The cost of primary instruction devolves on the communes, with subsidies from the State and provinces.

In 1927, there were 2,131 libraries, with 3,339,680 volumes and 505,259 readers; number of volumes borrowed, 6,740,926.

Justice and Crime.

Judges are appointed for life. There is one Court of Cassation, three Courts of Appeal, and Assize Courts for criminal cases. There are 26 judicial districts, each with a Court of first instance. In each of the 230 cantons is a justice and judge of the peace. There are, besides, various special tribunals. There is trial by jury.

Pauperism.

Apart from private charity, the poor are assisted by the communes through the agency of the bureaux de bienfaisance whose duty it is to provide outdoor relief, and by the governing bodies of the hospices civils. Provisions of a national character have been made for looking after war orphans and men disabled in the war. Certain other establishments, either State or provincial, provide for the needs of deaf-mutes and the blind, and of children who are placed under the control of the courts. Provision is also made for repressing begging and providing shelter for the homeless.

On September 30, 1928, the Belgian public debt amounted to 55,366,287,198 Belgian francs. Internal long term debt was 22,138,885,327 francs; internal short debt, 4,855,734,805 francs; total internal debt, 27,044,620,132 francs; external long term debt 28,321,667,066 francs.

On October 25, 1926, a debt of 20,000,000% was contracted, for 30 years, for the purpose of stabilising the franc.

Defence.

ARMY.

According to the Military Law passed in 1923, the Belgian Army is recruited by means of annual calls to the Colours and by voluntary enlistments. Military service is compulsory for those called to the Colours.

Voluntary enlistment is 5 years (for youths less than 17), 4 years (for youths less than 18), and 3 years (for youths over 18).

The young men called up compulsorily serve for 10 months in the infantry, for 12 months in the heavy artillery and engineers; for 13 months in the cavalry, horse field artillery and horse transport corps. The duration of military obligation is 25 years, of which 15 are in the Regular Army and reserve, and 10 years in the Territorial Army.

The Law provides for the calling out of the reserve only in the event of war or if the country is threatened. The 11th, 12th and 13th Classes are not to be mobilised except in case of absolute necessity and are to be employed in the defence of fortified places and in the non-combatant services. Reservists of the active army are subject to one or more recalls to the Colours up to a total of 6 weeks. These recalls take place during the 2nd, 3rd, or 4th year of service.

The strength of the army with the Colours for 1928 was 4,411 officers and 59,948 other ranks organised as follows:—

	Army Corps	Divns.	Brigades	Regts.	Btns.	Coys.	Squadrons			Batteries	Air Crafts

NAVY.

On grounds of economy, the small Navy formerly maintained by Belgium has been abolished. The ex-British sloop Zinnia, of 1,200 tons, is still employed on fishery protection service.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of 2,945,104 hectares, there were in 1926, 1,786,750 hectares under cultivation, of which 38.98 per cent. were under cereals, 1.18 per cent. vegetables, 5.58 per cent. industrial plants, 13.80 per cent. root crops and 40.46 per cent. forage. In 1925, 1,794,205 hectares were under cultivation. The forest area covers 18 per cent. of the land surface.

The following figures show the yield of the chief crops for three years :—

In 1926 the pig-iron was valued at 1,474,929,000 francs, the wrought-steel at 1,990,000,000 francs, and the zinc at 935,000,000 francs. In 1925 the value of the pig-iron was 828,063,000 francs; of wrought steel 1,151,000,000 francs; and of zinc, 609,000,000 francs. In 1925 the production of lead amounted to 87,480 tons; in 1926, 87,176 tons.

In 1927, there were 54 sugar factories, output 259,490 tons of raw sugar; 19 refineries, output 160,124 tons; 37 distilleries, output 43,300 kilolitres of alcohol, 50°; 1,844 breweries, output 1,325,635 kilolitres of beer; 15 margarine factories, output 34,814 tons; 56 vinegar factories, output 12,668 kilolitres; 19 match factories, output 69,733 million matches.

According to an industrial census taken on October 31, 1926, there were 13,082 industrial concerns (of more than ten employees) with a total number of 1,080,331 workpeople, of whom 874,309 were men and 206,022 women. There were also 96,567 salaried officials (84,005 men and 12,562 women).

Of the more important industries the following may be mentioned: artificial silk, motor-cars, glass, iron and steel, lace (particularly hand-made lace), linen, and gloves.

Commerce.

By the Convention concluded at Brussels on July 25, 1921, between Belgium and Luxemburg and ratified on March 5, 1922, an Economic Union was formed by the two countries, and the Customs frontier between them was abolished on May 1, 1922.

The following table shows imports and exports for 6 years (in thousands of paper francs):—

Shipping and Navigation

On January 1, 1927, the Belgian merchant fleet was composed of 158 ships of 337,624 tons, among which were 151 steamers of 323,345 tons.

There were 37 Belgian shipping companies at the beginning of 1926, of which the most important were the Lloyd Royal Belge, with 35 ships, and the Adolf Dejepe, with 39 ships.

The navigation at Belgian ports was as follows :—Number of vessels entered, 1926, 18,928; tonnage, 26,938,622; 1927, 18,684; tonnage, 27,825,695. Number of vessels cleared, 1926, 18,891; tonnage, 26,934,633; 1927, 18,713; tonnage, 27,828,989. In 1928, 11,333 vessels of 23,604,634 tons entered the port of Antwerp.

Internal Communications.

The total length of the roads in Belgium (1927) was as follows :—State roads, 5,424 miles; provincial roads, 976 miles; conceded roads, 22 miles; total, 6,422 miles. The majority of the roads are paved with stone.

The total length of navigable waterways (rivers and canals) in 1926 was 1,040 miles.

In September 1926 the State handed over its control of the railways to a private company, the Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Belges for a period of 75 years. The length of railway operated on January 1, 1928, was 6,460 miles, of which 2,977 miles were main line and 3,483 miles branch line. There were also 280 miles of private railways. It is proposed to electrify the railway system of the country.

In 1927 the Post Office in Belgium handled 287,280,000 private letters, 65,674,000 official letters, 90,950,000 post-cards, 302,418,000 packets of printed matter, and 859,822,000 newspapers. On December 31, 1927, there were 1,672 post offices in Belgium. The gross revenue of the Post Office in the year 1927 amounted to 279,504,000 francs, and the expenditure to 299,135,000 francs (in 1926, 217,405,000 and 228,469,000 respectively).

In 1927 the telegraph system carried 12,250,050 dispatches, of which 3,870,497 were official. The total length of public telegraph wires was 25,843 miles, and of line 5,792 miles. There were in 1927, 1,606 telegraph offices. Receipts in 1927, 62,000,000 francs; expenditure, 57,000,000 francs (receipts in 1926, 91,000,000 francs; expenditure, 85,000,000 francs).

In 1927 there were 143 radiograph stations and 60,011 radiotelegrams were despatched.

In 1927 the telephone service comprised 401 central stations, connecting 468 public telephone stations and 147,881 subscribers. There were 856,875 miles of telephone line in service, including 675,726 miles of local line, 144,908 miles of inter-urban line and 36,241 miles of international lines, and the total number of calls, including long-distance and international calls, was 157,998,000. Receipts in 1926, 131,600,000 francs; expenditure, 71,920,000 francs; receipts in 1927, 174,000,000 francs.

The following are some traffic figures relating to Belgian Air Service (Brussels, Ostend and Antwerp) :—

Money and Credit.

The franc, containing 0.0418422 gramme of fine gold, is the unit of currency.

No gold has been minted since 1882 (save only 5,000,000 francs struck in 1914), and no silver 5-franc pieces since 1876.

On October 26, 1926, the Belgian franc was stabilised and the paper currency relinked to gold, when all notes of the National Bank of Belgium became payable in gold or its equivalent in foreign currency. A new currency unit—called the Belga—has been introduced. One belga equals five paper francs and 35 belgas equal £1 gold. The franc, however, remains the basis of the monetary system, and will continue to circulate in the country, and is the medium of exchange in all domestic business. The use of the belga is compulsory in all foreign exchange transactions. To provide the necessary funds, a stabilisation loan for the equivalent of 100,000,000 dollars was floated abroad.

The one bank of issue in Belgium is the National Bank, instituted 1850. By law of March 26, 1900, its constitution was modified, and its duration extended to January 1, 1929. In 1926 its privileges were prolonged for a further 25 years. Its capital and reserve amounted in 1927 to 264,063,000 francs. It is the cashier of the State, and is authorised to carry on the usual banking operations. Its position on January 31, 1929, was (in thousands of belgas):—

Gold and silver . . .	906,893	Notes in circulation . . .	2,419,348
Foreign bills . . .	672,901	Treasury bills . . .	42,068
Loans to State . . .	349,542	Private bills . . .	65,082

There are joint-stock and private banks, also agricultural banks, credit unions, and popular banks.

The popular savings bank in Belgium is mainly concentrated in the Caisse Générale d'Épargne et de Retraite, at Brussels. The Caisse d'Épargne is a private company with legally regulated functions and operates under the supervision of the Minister of Finance. It co-operates with the Belgian postal service, thus obviating any need of a postal-savings system. On December 31, 1927, this institution had 4,424,503 accounts, with deposits amounting to 3,516,300,000 francs.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

BELGIAN CONGO

(CONGO BELGE.)

Constitution and Government.—The Congo Independent State was founded in 1885 by Leopold II., King of the Belgians, and the State was placed under his sovereignty.

The annexation of the State to Belgium was provided for by treaty of November 28, 1907, which was approved by the chambers of the Belgian Legislature in August and by the King on October 18, 1908. The Minister for the Colonies is appointed by the King, and is a member of the Council of Ministers. He is President of the Colonial Council, consisting of 15 members, 8 of whom are appointed by the King, and 3 chosen by the Senate and 3 by the Chamber of Representatives. One of those appointed by the King, and one chosen by the Legislative Chambers, retire annually, but may be re-appointed. The King is represented in the Colony by a Governor-General, assisted by several vice-Governors-General. The budget is presented to the Chambers, and voted by them; the financial accounts have to be verified by the Court of Accounts. An annual report on the Congo Administration has to be presented to the Chambers.

The Annexation has been recognised by all the Powers.

Governor-General.—Lieut.-General Tilkens (appointed December 27, 1927).

The precise boundaries of the Congo Colony were defined by the neutrality declarations of August, 1885, and December, 1894, and by treaties with Germany, Great Britain, France, and Portugal.

The territory is divided into twenty-one administrative districts:—

Lower Congo, Urban district of Léopoldville, Kwango, Sankuru, Kasai, Lake Leopold II., Equator, Lulonga, Bangala, Ubangi, Uele-Itimbiri, Uele-Nepoko, Ituri-Kibali, Stanleyville, Aruwimi, Kivu, Maniema, Lomami, Tanganyika—Moero, Lulua, and Upper Luapula. The last four districts form the Province of Katanga, with its capital at Elisabethville; the first five districts form the Province of Congo-Kasai, with Léopoldville as its capital, the five next districts form the Province of Equator, with its capital at Coquilhatville, and the remaining seven districts form the Eastern Province, with its capital at Stanleyville. The capital of the Colony, formerly Boma, was, by royal decision (1923), changed to Leopoldville. At the head of each Province there is a governor, and at the head of each district a commissioner. Each district is divided into territories of which there are 180 in the whole country.

The districts of Ruanda and Urundi (formerly in German East Africa) have been ceded to Belgium as mandatory of the League of Nations. Area about 20,550 square miles. Both districts were united administratively with the Congo, under the direction of a Vice-Governor, by a law of August 21, 1925. Ruanda-Urundi is populated by two races—the Wa-tusi and the Wa-hutu. Both districts are rich in cattle. The frontier was formally ratified on December 31, 1923. Usumbura is the capital.

On July 22, 1927, a convention was signed between Belgium and Portugal by which the former ceded to the latter territory in the extreme south-west portion of the Belgian Congo, having an area of 3,500 square kilometres (480 square miles), in return for a cession by Portugal of an area in the estuary of the Congo, near Matadi, of three square kilometres. Belgium further undertook to commence the construction of a railway to link up with the Portuguese railway (the Lobito Bay-Katanga line).

Area and Population.—The area of Belgian Congo is estimated at 918,000 square miles. The population of Bantu origin according to the latest census was 8,500,000. The white population on January 1, 1928, numbered 20,702. Of these, 14,147 were Belgians, 859 English, 435 Americans, 1,517 Portuguese, 1,032 Italians, 145 Russians, 124 Swedish, 588 French, 334 Dutch, 241 Swiss, 455 Greeks, 182 Luxemburgers, 24 Danish, 18 Norwegians, 27 Spaniards, and 574 of other nationalities, such as Rhodesians and South Africans.

Kiswahili is the language spoken by the natives who have been under Arab influence. Bangala is the commercial language on the Upper Congo; Fiole is used on the Lower Congo.

Religion and Education.—The religion of the natives consists of a gross fetishism, but mission work is actively carried on. There were, in 1927, 1,773 missionaries, of whom 1,181 were Catholic and 592 Protestant. In education they co-operate with the Government. The school statistics give 231,684 children as receiving elementary education. Several educational bodies direct under control of the Government establishments for general and professional training, especially at Boma, Léopoldville, Moanda, Lusambo, Kabinda, Stanleyville, Buta, Elisabethville and Bunia. In 1928 the Government grant to the missionaries for general purposes amounted to 9,484,600 francs, while the total expenditure on education was 23,428,434 francs, while 6,425,925 francs were spent on extraordinary educational expenses (buildings and school furniture).

Justice.—There are 8 courts of first instance, 21 district courts, 21 prosecutors' courts, 173 police courts, and 2 courts of appeal (one at Léopoldville and the other at Elisabethville).

Finance.—Estimates of ordinary revenue and expenditure for five year (in francs) :—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Revenue .	141,603,040	146,555,000	315,708,200	316,708,200	521,563,585
Expenditure .	168,249,290	187,086,745	320,416,547	406,968,114	521,241,955

For 1928 the ordinary receipts and expenditure were estimated as follows :—

Receipts	Francs	Expenditure	Francs
Customs . . . . .	192,845,000	Administration . . . . .	93,384,055

Defence.—The Colony possesses a force of native troops amounting to 198 European officers, 228 European non-commissioned officers and 16,384 natives. The force is recruited by voluntary enlistment. The term of service is seven years, and the recruits are trained in four camps of instruction before being drafted to their companies. The Territorial police number about 8,000 men.

Production.—The chief products in the order of their importance are palm-nuts and palm-oil, white copal, rubber and cacao. Ivory is very abundant. Coffee grows freely, and the cultivation of cacao is successful. Rice and cotton are grown in a great number of the native villages. Plantations of rubber, oil palm, cacao, and coffee have been established by the Government and by private enterprise. Cattle thrive satisfactorily in all districts where there is no tsetse fly, notably in the highlands of Katanga, Ituri and Kivu. Mining flourishes, the chief minerals being gold, diamonds, copper and tin. Other minerals are known to exist—iron, and baurite. The gold mines in 1927 produced 4,266 kilos. The most important mines in the Congo are the copper mines near Kambove in Haut Katanga, operated by the Union Minière. The total output in 1927 was 83,500 tons of copper. The Union Minière produces radium from the Chinkolobwe mines. The output of diamonds in 1927 amounted to 1,042,000 carats.

Commerce and Shipping.—The value of the commerce for six years was as follows :—

According to the Board of Trade Returns the imports into the United Kingdom from the Belgian Congo in 1928 amounted to the value of 475,954 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; and the exports of British produce and manufactures to the Belgian Congo to 592,748 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

At the port of Boma in 1927 there entered 193 sea-going vessels of 663,195 tons. In the coasting trade there entered 155 vessels, including sailing ships, of 16,284 tons, and cleared 155 ships of 16,716 tons. The two other ports are Banana and Matadi. In 1927, 944 steamships with tonnage of 1,875,856 entered, and 939 with tonnage of 1,858,230 cleared the three ports of Belgian Congo.

There are 12 steamers on the Lower Congo, and about 140 private steamers on the Upper Congo.

Internal Communications.—The Congo is navigable for 95 miles from its mouth to Matadi, and on this section 15 steamers belonging to the State ply. Above this, for over 249 miles, are numerous rapids, which render the river unnavigable as far as Stanley Pool (Léopoldville). Above the Pool there are about 1,068 miles of navigable water, as far as Stanley Falls, while several of the great tributaries are navigable over a considerable extent of their course. Above the Stanley Falls the Congo is called Lualaba and is navigable for 585 miles, from Ponthierville to Kindu and from Kongolo to Bukama (Katanga).

There were (January 1, 1928) 9,375 miles of road. The total length of railways on January 1, 1928, was 2,187 miles.

An important development in 1911 was the construction of a pipe line from Matadi to Léopoldville, 246 miles long, for the purpose of transporting crude oil for the use of river steamers. It has a diameter of 4 inches, with 8 pumping stations capable of delivering 50,000 tons of oil at Léopoldville, the terminus. The concession is for 50 years, at the expiration of which period all the pipe lines, with the material, except the vessels and stores of petroleum, will pass into the hands of the Congo Government.

From Léopoldville a river transport service as far as Stanleyville and the tributaries of the Congo is carried out by different companies, of which the chief are the Unatra and the Citas Companies. The fleet of the various companies consists of 247 steamers and 475 barges.

There is a regular postal air service between Borna and Elisabethville, with stages at Léopoldville, Luebo and Ngula. The distance is 1,412 miles. There are also services between Luebo and Tshikapa (99 miles); Luebo and Lusambo (201 miles); and Léopoldville and Coquilhatville (455 miles).

In 1928 there were 72 post offices. There were in addition 52 special telegraph offices. In the internal service (1927) 1,830,600 letters, papers, &c., were transmitted; and in the external, 4,273,600 were handled. The Congo is included in the Postal Union. Total length of telegraph lines 3,090 miles. In 1927, 163,199 internal and 94,141 foreign telegrams were transmitted, besides 16,348 official telegrams. There are 19 stations of wireless telegraphy in the Belgian Congo. There were 52 telephone offices and 28 central stations serving 858 subscribers, 2,520 miles of telephone lines, and 2,741 miles of telephone wire. Number of calls in 1927, 920,400.

Seven banks are in existence, of which the three most important are the 'Banque du Congo Belge,' the 'Banque Commerciale du Congo,' and the 'Crédit Général du Congo,' all three with branches in all the commercial centres.

According to a Law of October 18, 1908, gold and silver money current in Belgium is also current in the Congo. These coins are gold pieces of 20 and 10 francs, and silver pieces of 5, 2, 1 and 0.50 francs. According to the decree of March 15, 1909, there are also current coins of 20, 10 and 5 centimes, and copper coins (perforated) of 2 and 1 centimes special to the colony. By Royal Decree of December 28, 1920, currency has been given to special moneys of inferior metal, in pieces of 1 franc and 50 centimes nominal value. By an arrangement of July 7, 1911, the Banque de Congo Belge was authorised to issue notes payable to bearer. The notes were of the nominal value of 20, 100 and 1,000 francs, and were put into circulation in 1912. In 1914 gold and silver disappeared from circulation, and the bank was compelled to issue notes of a nominal value of 1 to 5 francs.

The Metric System was introduced by law on August 17, 1910.

British Consul.—J. Kelsall (at Boma).

There are British Vice-Consuls at Elisabethville, Stanleyville and Léopoldville.

BHUTÁN.

A STATE in the Eastern Himálaya, between 26° 45' and 28° N. latitude, and between 89° and 92° E. longitude, bordered on the north and east by Tibet, on the west by the Tibetan district of Chumbi and by Sikkim, and on the south by British India. Extreme length from east to west 190 miles; extreme breadth 90 miles. Area about 18,000 square miles; population estimated at 300,000.

The original inhabitants of Bhután, the Tephús, were subjugated about two centuries ago by a band of military colonists from Tibet. In 1774 the East India Company concluded a treaty with the ruler of Bhután, but repeated outrages on British subjects committed by the Bhután hill men led from time to time to punitive measures, usually ending in the temporary or permanent annexation of various duars or submontane tracts with passes leading to the hills. In November 1864 the eleven western or Bengal duars were thus annexed. Under a treaty signed in November, 1865, the Bhután Government was granted a subsidy of Rs. 50,000 a year on condition of good behaviour. By an amending treaty concluded in January, 1910, the British Government undertook to exercise no interference in the internal administration of Bhután. On its part the Bhutanese Government agreed to be guided by the advice of the British Government in regard to its external relations. The treaty also provided for the increase of the subsidy to Rs. 1,00,000.

The form of Government in Bhután, which existed from the middle of the sixteenth century until 1907, consisted of a dual control by the clergy and the laity as represented by Dharma and Deb Rajás. In 1907 the Deb Rajá, who was also Dharma Rajá, resigned his position, and the Tongsa Penlop, Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhután. He died on August 21, 1926, and was succeeded by Maharaja Jik-me Wang-chuk, C.I.E.

Chief fortresses or castles: Punakhá, a place of great natural strength; Tásichozong (Tashichödzong), Páro, Angdaphorang (Wangdupotrang), Trongsa, and Byaka.

The people are nominally Buddhists, but their religious exercises consist chiefly in the propitiation of evil spirits and the recitation of sentences from the Tibetan Scriptures. Tásichozong (Tashichödzong), the chief monastery in Bhután, contains 300 priests.

Beyond the guards for the defence of the various castles, there is no standing army.

The chief productions are rice, Indian corn, millet, lac, wax, different kinds of cloth, musk, elephants, ponies, chowries, and silk. Extensive and valuable forests abound. Muzzle-loading guns and swords of highly-tempered steel are manufactured.

His Highness keeps an Agent at Kalimpong who is also Assistant to the Political Officer in Sikkim for Bhutanese affairs.

BOLIVIA.

(REPÚBLICA BOLIVIANA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Constitution of the Republic of Bolivia (so named in 1825) bears date October 28, 1880. By its provisions the executive power is vested in a President, elected for a term of four years by direct popular vote, and not eligible for re-election; there is a Congress of two chambers, called the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The suffrage is possessed by all males over 21 years of age who can read and write and have an 'assured income.' There are 16 Senators (2 for each Department) elected for six years, and 70 Deputies elected for four years. Both Senators and Deputies are elected by direct vote of the people. Of the Senators one-third retire every two years; of the Deputies one-half retire every two years. Senators receive a salary of 900 bolivianos (70*l.*) per month during the sittings, which, as a rule, last for 60 days, but may be extended to 90 days, and Deputies receive the same. Extraordinary sessions may be held for special purposes. The President's Cabinet consists of the secretaries of six departments—Foreign Relations and Worship; Finance and Industry; Government and Justice; Public Works, Posts and Telegraphs; War and Colonisation; and Education and Agriculture.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Hernando Siles. Assumed office January 1, 1926, for the period 1926-1930.

The supreme political, administrative, and military authority in each department is vested in a prefect. The territories in the north-west of the Republic and in the Chaco and Oriente are governed by three officials, called delegados nacionales. The Republic is divided into 8 departments, 3 territories, 72 provinces administered by sub-prefects, and 681 cantons administered by corregidores. Prefects and sub-prefects are appointed by the President of the Republic; corregidores and village alcaldes are appointed annually by the prefects of the provinces. The capital of each department has its municipal council; the subdivisions have municipal boards, and the still smaller subdivisions have municipal agents.

The boundary line between Bolivia and Peru in the peninsula of Copacabana is (1929) being delimited by a joint commission.

The following table shows area and population of the different political divisions (the capitals of each are given in brackets):—

Departments and Territories	Area : square miles	Census 1900	Estimated 1927	Per square mile 1927
La Paz (La Paz)	40,686	445,616	888,646	21.08
Cochabamba (Cochabamba)	25,288	328,163	654,420	25.87
Potosí (Potosí)	45,081	325,615	585,087	12.99
Santa-Cruz (Santa-Cruz)	144,941	200,592	226,671	1.56
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	36,182	204,434	242,857	6.72
Tarija (Tarija)	81,567	102,887	139,657	1.42
Oruro (Oruro)	20,657	86,081	181,630	8.79
El Beni (Trinidad)	95,354	32,180	25,621	0.26
El Chaco (Villa Montes)	46,561	—	9,215	0.22
Colonial Territories (Riberaíta)	27,988	10,000	21,100	0.75
Total	514,155	1,744,568	2,974,904	5.78

The 1927 estimate showed 1,624,111 Indians, 496,642 whites and 858,152 mixed races.

The last census taken (1910) showed a total population of 1,766,451; the city of La Paz had 54,713.

The Indian population in 1900 was 920,864, or 50.9 per cent. of the whole; the mixed was 486,018, or 26.7 per cent.; the white was 231,088, or 12.7 per cent.; the negro, 3,945, or 0.21 per cent.; and the unclassified, 170,936, or 9.4 per cent. Of the population not under 7 years of age, 564,000 were engaged in agriculture; 399,037 in the industries; 55,521 in commerce; 49,647 in the liberal professions; 36,235 in domestic service; 12,625 in mining, and 3,106 in artistic professions. The foreign population numbered 7,425, of whom 2,072 were Peruvian.

The language of the educated classes is Spanish, that of the natives Qüechüa and Aymará.

The estimated population (1927) of La Paz (the actual seat of Government) was 142,043; Cochabamba, 43,643; Potosí, 33,723; Sucre (the capital), 16,194; Tarija, 11,178; Oruro, 39,618; Santa Cruz, 23,515.

Religion, Education, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic is the recognised religion of the State; the exercise of other forms of worship is permitted. The religious orders have 17 convents (9 for males and 8 for females); the male members number about 230, the female 280; there are about 567 secular clergy. In 1900 the non-Catholic population numbered 24,245. The Church is under an archbishop (resident in Sucre) and 6 bishops (La Paz, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Oruro, Potosí, and Tarija). The maintenance of the Church costs the State 121,108 bolivianos a year, 23,820 bolivianos being devoted to the propagation of the faith among the Indians. By a law of March 19, 1912, all marriages must be celebrated by the civil authorities.

Primary instruction, free and obligatory, is under the care of the municipalities and the State. In 1926 there were 1,598 elementary schools with 2,765 teachers and 79,973 pupils. For secondary instruction there were 27 colleges (17 national), 5 clerical institutions, and 5 private lyceos with, in all, 403 teachers and 4,213 pupils. For special instruction there are 22 establishments with 177 professors and 1,913 students. At Sucre and La Paz are the only two universities which possess more than one faculty. The University at Sucre, known as the St. Francis Xavier University, is one of the oldest in America, having been founded in 1624. There are also a number of training colleges for teachers. There are eight institutions offering university instruction; they have 107 teachers and 802 students. In all departmental capitals there are public libraries; at La Paz there is a museum, and at La Paz, Oruro and Potosi are mineralogical museums.

The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court, in superior district courts, and in the courts of local justices. The Supreme Court sitting in the Capital of the Republic has 7 judges; the district courts have each 5 judges; local tribunals have judges of party, of instruction and parish alcaldes. Public justice is directed by an Attorney-General and by district and local attorneys. The administration of justice is free.

Finance.

The revenue of Bolivia is derived mainly from customs duties, spirit duties, tin, silver, gold, wolfram, antimony, lead and other minerals, rubber export, patents, and stamps. The chief branches of expenditure are public debt, war, and instruction. The budget estimates of ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure
	Bolivianos	Bolivianos		Bolivianos	Bolivianos
1923	85,000,084	87,550,055	1926	48,488,970	48,488,970
1924	38,807,633	44,876,203	1927	49,135,126	50,307,124
1925	44,636,352	44,636,352	1928	51,897,187	55,802,972 <sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> By law of June 29, 1928, the Executive was authorized to reduce the administrative expenses up to 15 per cent. in order to bring about a balanced budget.

In 1928, following the recommendations of the Kemmerer Financial Mission, Congress enacted various laws providing for the legal stabilization of the currency, for the reorganization of the National Bank on the lines of a central bank, for the reform of the budget system and the collection and expenditure of revenues and for taxes on incomes, personal property and real estate.

The principal items of expenditure in the 1928 budget were (in bolivianos): public debt, 25,823,545; war ministry, 10,939,760; instruction, 5,000,411; interior, 2,575,370; finance, 2,498,005; communications, 2,237,221; justice, 2,080,242. Appropriation for public debt includes service on loans contemplated but not yet realized.

The public debt of Bolivia on June 30, 1928, amounted to 168,022,672 bolivianos, being external debt, 128,435,239 bolivianos; internal, 23,243,708 bolivianos; and floating, 16,343,725 bolivianos. A loan of 23,000,000 dollars, largely for refunding purposes, was floated in New York and on the Continent in September, 1928. The Swedish Match Company, through its British subsidiary, secured the match monopoly in 1928.

Defence.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 3 military districts, the Northern, the Central, and the Southern, and 3 'military commands' formed of the departments Santa Cruz, El Beni, Tarija, and the Territories.

The law of December 15, 1915, provides for a permanent force of 3,577 men. Military service is compulsory for all males from the 19th to the 50th year. The army is a militia, with a total service in the first line of 6 years, of which about 1 year is spent in the ranks. For the next 6 years (from the age of 25 to 30) the Bolivian soldier belongs to the 'ordinary reserve. After this the men pass to the 'extraordinary reserve' for 10 years, and finally complete their service by 10 years in the Territorial Guard.

The permanent army consists of 6 infantry regiments, two of 500 men each, and four of 1,300 men; 3 cavalry regiments 300 strong; a mountain artillery regiment of 300 men; a field artillery regiment of the same strength, one with 4 batteries of the Schneider-Canet system; making a total of 8,000, including officers, officials and men.

In addition to the above troops there are small bodies of infantry of from 100 to 200 men (called columnas) at the chief towns of departments, which can be expanded to battalions, if necessary. There also exist other units, for garrisoning the North, the North West, the South West, and the East, consisting of 300 men each.

The infantry armament is the Mauser (Bolivian Model) rifle of 1898.

Production and Industry.

The extensive and undeveloped region of Bolivia lying east of the Andes comprises about three-quarters of the entire area. It is estimated that about 4,940,000 acres are under cultivation, but agriculture is in a backward condition. Irrigation by means of artesian wells is being attempted in some regions. Potatoes, cacao, coffee, barley, coca, highland rice, and rubber are the principal products. Bolivia ranks as the second rubber-exporting country of South America, coming next to Brazil. The public lands of the State have an area of about 245,000 square miles, of which 104,000 square miles are reserved for special colonisation. In 1927 it is estimated that there were 1,404,315 cattle, 4,150,560 sheep, 415,781 goats, 700,000 llamas and alpacas, 1,168,330 donkeys, 267,680 pigs, and 320,000 equines.

Mining is practically the only important industry. The mineral wealth of Bolivia includes silver, copper, tin, lead, zinc, antimony, bismuth, wolfram, gold, and borate of lime. Bolivia produces one quarter of the total tin output of the world, standing next to the Malay Peninsula in the production of this metal. Practically all the tin ore is shipped to Great Britain where it is reduced to tin in pigs and reshipped to the United States which is the ultimate consumer of the bulk of Bolivian tin. Production of minerals in 1927 and 1926 was, in metric tons, as follows: Tin (metal equivalent), 39,473 and 32,111; silver, 145 and 181; lead, 14,974 and 18,463; copper, 8,476 and 8,130; zinc, 4,160 and 7,602; antimony (metal equivalent), 3,715 and 4,353; bismuth, 95 and 224; wolfram and gold in small amounts. Next to China, Bolivia is the world's chief source of antimony. Large deposits of common salt are found near Lake Poopó and in the South of Bolivia. Surface indications of petroleum and gas abound in the whole territory between the Argentine frontier and the north-west territory bordering Peru; the Standard Oil Company with 16 wells is developing production at Chaco Oriental.

Commerce.

The value of imports and exports for five years are given as follows (12·5 bolivianos = 1£):—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Exports . . .	8,615,508	9,215,812	9,542,909	9,814,502	10,166,714

Tin ore (33,858 long tons, in metallic content, in 1927) have constituted over 90 per cent. of Bolivia's exports since 1920. Other exports in 1927 were lead, 25,003 short tons (gross weight of ore); copper, 7,850 short tons (metallic contents); silver, 5,403,000 Troy ounces; rubber, 8,517 metric tons; and antimony, 4,106 metric tons (fine weight).

Bolivia having no seaport, imports and exports pass chiefly through Arica, Mollendo, Antofagasta, and river-ports on the Paraguay, Iténez, Madeira, and the Upper Acre rivers. The chief imports are sugar, flour, coal, iron and steel products, mining machinery, rice, wines and spirits, cotton, textiles, woollen, linen and silk goods, and ready-made clothes.

Export (in metric tons) of metals in 1927:—tin, 66,624; lead, 22,682; copper, 23,996; silver (ore), 5,857; antimony, 6,718; zinc, 12,889; wolfram, 80; and gold, 9 kilograms. The total mineral exportation in 1926 amounted to 141,494 metric tons; in 1927 to 139,264 metric tons. Rubber exports (1927) were 3,863 tons against 3,105 tons (1926).

The chief import of the United Kingdom from Bolivia in 1927 was (according to Board of Trade returns) tin ore and concentrates, 6,648,957. The chief exports from the United Kingdom to Bolivia were cotton piece goods valued at 101,535.

Total trade between U.K. and Bolivia (Board of Trade figures) for 5 years:—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Bolivia to U.K. .	5,117,486	5,399,874	6,623,730	6,739,376	7,248,866
Exports to Bolivia from U.K. .	500,330	521,067	541,231	410,141	498,502

Communications.

In 1927 the total length of railway open in Bolivia was 1,302 miles, including the new line, opened in July, 1917, from Oruro to Cochabamba; an extension from Cochabamba to Santa Cruz (225 miles) is under way. The principal line is the Antofagasta and Bolivian Railway, from Antofagasta, on the Pacific coast (in Chile), to Ollague, thence to Oruro, thence to Viacha, thence to La Paz. Total length in Bolivia, 575 miles. Under the Bolivian-Chilian treaty of October 24, 1904, the Arica-La Paz line (276 miles, of which 151 miles are in Bolivia) was built from La Paz via Lluta with Taregra and to Corocoro. The Bolivian section was handed over to the Government of Bolivia on May 13, 1928; the Bolivian section will be managed by a Bolivian company.

Traffic on Lake Titicaca is carried on by the steamers of the Peruvian Corporation.

There are about 6,843 miles of cart roads connecting the more important towns. Of main highways there were (1927) 1,125 miles.

In Bolivia there were, in 1927, 468 post offices. Number of pieces of mail handled, 7,138,843; parcels, 127,065. The postal expenses amounted to 894,530 and the receipts to 1,319,273 bolivianos. The Marconi Company contracted in 1928 to handle the posts and telegraphs for 20 years.

There are about 4,608 miles of telegraph lines. Length of telegraph wire, 7,150 miles. Number of telegrams dispatched, 1927, 838,577; received, 881,771. There are wireless telegraphic stations at many points. There are (1927) 3,589 miles of telephone wires. The Bolivian Power Co. was given in 1928 a concession to build and operate a countrywide telephone system.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

The four banks in the country are: Banco de la Nación Boliviana (in which a British bank has an interest), Banco Nacional de Bolivia, Banco Mercantil and Banco Aleman Transatlantico. The last-named German bank is the only foreign one. All banks are taxed to the extent of 12 per cent. of their profits. A former note-issuing bank, the Banco Francisco Argandona, has been absorbed by the Banco Nacional. On January 1, 1928, the first three banks had total capitals aggregating 48,325,760 bolivianos and total reserves of 22,610,060; their stocks of gold coin were: Banco de la Nación Boliviana, 17,772,970 bolivianos; Banco Nacional de Bolivia, 2,598,735 bolivianos; and Banco Mercantil, 1,622,719 bolivianos.

On July 11, 1928, a monetary law was passed providing for the adoption of a gold standard, which went into effect by presidential decree on September 2. Notes of the Banco de la Nación Boliviana (which has a monopoly of the note issue) are convertible on demand into gold or gold exchange. The unit of account is the gold boliviano containing 0.54917 grams of fine gold. The law provides for the minting of coins of ten and twenty bolivianos, the former to be called a 'Bolivar' and the latter a 'Double Bolivar', the 'Bolivar' to weigh 6.10189 grams of 900 fine. There is no Bolivian gold yet in circulation. British and Peruvian gold coins are legal tender at the rate of Bs. 13.333 = 1£. (former parity, 12.50 = 1£.). In U.S. money the new boliviano = 36.5 cents. Gold coins of the United States circulate at the rate of 2.7399 bolivianos to the dollar. Gold is legal tender up to any amount, and silver up to 10 bolivianos. Silver coins are minted in denominations of 1 boliviano (15 grams 800 fine), one-half, and one-fifth bolivianos. But paper notes in denominations of 1, 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 bolivianos are the chief circulating medium.

The metric system of weights and measures is used by the administration and prescribed by law, but the old Spanish system is also employed. The quintal is equal to 101½ lbs.

BRAZIL.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DO BRASIL.)

Constitution and Government.

BRAZIL was discovered on May 3, 1500, by the Portuguese Admiral Pedro Alvares Cabral, and thus became a Portuguese settlement. On the French invasion of Portugal, in 1807, the Portuguese Royal family fled to Brazil; on December 16, 1815, the colony was declared 'a kingdom.' The Portuguese Court having returned to Europe in 1821, a national congress assembled at Rio de Janeiro, and on May 13, 1822, Dom Pedro, eldest surviving son of King João VI. of Portugal, was chosen 'Perpetual Defender' of Brazil. He proclaimed the independence of the country on September 7, 1822, and was chosen 'Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Defender' on October 12 following. In 1831 he abdicated the crown in favour of his only son, Dom Pedro II. (born 1825, died 1891), who reigned as Emperor until November 15, 1889, when by a revolution he was dethroned, and he and his family exiled, and Brazil declared a Republic under the title of the United States of Brazil. The decree of banishment against the ex-Imperial family was repealed on August 6, 1920.

According to the constitution adopted by the National Congress on February 24, 1891, the Brazilian nation is constituted as the United States of Brazil. At present the Union consists of twenty States, one Federal Territory (purchased in 1903), and one Federal District. Each of the old Provinces forms a State, administered at its own expense without interference from the Federal Government save for defence, for the maintenance of order, and for the execution of the Federal laws. Fiscal arrangements in such matters as import duties, stamps, rates of postage, and bank-note circulation belong to the Union; but export duties are the property of the various States.

The legislative authority is exercised by the National Congress with the sanction of the President of the Republic. Congress consists of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. It meets annually on the 3rd of May, without being convoked, unless another day be fixed by law, and sits four months, but may be prorogued or convoked extraordinarily. No member of Congress, after his election, can contract with the executive power or accept any commission or paid office, except such as are diplomatic or military or imposed by law. If, in ordinary circumstances, the acceptance of diplomatic or military office would cause the loss of the legislative services of a member, the permission of the Chamber is required. Nor can any member of Congress take part in the administration of any company which receives a subsidy from the Federal Government. Deputies and Senators are paid, and neither can be Ministers of State, and retain at the same time their seats in Congress. Deputies must have been Brazilian citizens for four years. Senators must be over thirty-five years of age and must have been citizens for six years.

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 212 members elected for three years by direct vote (providing for the representation of the minority), in a proportion not greater than one to every 70,000 of population as shown by a decennial census, but so that no State will have less than four representatives. It has the initiative in legislation relating to taxation, and in proceedings against the President of the Republic and Secretaries of State.

Senators, 63 in number, are chosen by direct vote, three for each State, and for the Federal district, for nine years, and the Senate is renewed to the extent of one-third every three years. The Vice-President of the Republic is President of the Senate.

The executive authority is exercised by the President of the Republic. He must be a Brazilian by birth, over thirty-five years of age. His term of office is four years, and he is not eligible for the succeeding term. The President and the Vice-President are elected by the people directly, by an absolute majority of votes. The election is held on the 1st of March in the last year of each presidential period in accordance with forms prescribed by law. No candidate must be related by blood or marriage, in the first or second degree, to the actual president or vice-president, or to either who has ceased to be so within six months.

The President appoints and dismisses ministers, is in supreme command of the army and navy, and, within certain limits, has the power to declare war and make peace. He (with the consent of the Senate) appoints the members of the Supreme Federal Tribunal and the diplomatic ministers. No minister can appear in Congress, but must communicate by letter, or in conference with commissions of the Chambers. Ministers are not responsible to Congress or the Courts for advice given to the President of the Republic.

The franchise extends to all citizens not under twenty-one years of age, duly enrolled, except beggars, 'illiterates,' soldiers actually serving, and members of monastic orders, &c., under vows of obedience.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Washington Luis Pereira de Souza, born in 1870, assumed office November 15, 1926.

Vice-President.—Dr. Mello Vianna.

There are 7 Secretaries of State at the head of the following Departments:—

1. Finance, 2. Justice, Interior and Public Instruction, 3. War, 4. Marine.

5. Foreign Affairs, 6. Communications and Public Works, 7. Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce.

I. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Each State must be organised under the republican form of government, and must have its administrative, legislative, and judicial authorities distinct and independent. The governors and members of the legislatures must be elective; the magistrates must not be elective nor removable from office save by judicial sentence. The Federal executive cannot intervene directly in the local government of the States. Each State is governed by its own Constitution and laws which must agree with the constitutional principles of the Union. In cases of the infringement of the principles of the Federal constitution by the constitutions, laws or authorities of any State, the Federal Government, after due process of Federal law, has the power to interfere even by force of arms, if necessary. The Federal District is administered by a council elected by the citizens of the District, the municipal executive authority being exercised by a Prefect appointed by the President of the Republic.

Area and Population.

Following are the census returns of 1920 and estimate for September, 1926 (capitals of States in brackets):—

Total . . .	3,285,318	30,635,605	36,870,972	9·3

In 1928 the population was estimated at 42,637,000.

In 1920 the population consisted of 15,443,818 males and 15,191,787 females. Of these 1,565,961, or 5 per cent., were foreigners, viz., 558,405 Italians, 433,575 Portuguese, 219,142 Spaniards, 52,870 Germans, 50,251 from Asiatic Turkey, 33,621 Uruguayans, 27,976 Japanese, 26,354 Austrians, 22,117 Argentinians, and 141,650 other nationalities. Some 600,000 Indians are to be found in the Amazon area.

The Acre Territory has an area of 58,672 sq. miles. For this territory Brazil paid to Bolivia 2,000,000*l.* in 1903.

In 1920 (census) the population of Rio de Janeiro was 1,157,873; São Paulo, 579,033; S. Salvador, 233,422; Recife, 238,843; Belem, 236,402; Porto Alegre, 179,263; Manaus, 75,704; Nietheroy, 86,233; Fortaleza, 78,536; Maceió, 74,166; São Luiz, 52,929; Parahyba, 52,990. In 1928 Rio de Janeiro had a population of 1,720,815.

The site for the Federal Capital has been selected in the State of Goyaz, on a table-land between Pyrenopolis, Santa Luzia, and Formosa.

The number of immigrants between 1820 and 1927 was 4,269,007, including 1,474,000 Italians, 1,250,000 Portuguese, 574,000 Spaniards, 194,000 Germans, 110,000 Russians and 89,000 Austrians. In 1927 the number of immigrants was 101,568, against 121,569 in 1926.

Religion.

The connection between Church and State has been abolished, and absolute equality declared among all forms of religion. Eleven Evangelic sects, as also Judaism, Buddhism, Mahometanism, and Positivism have many followers. The Government left to the Church all religious buildings and their properties and income. All churches are perfectly free; religious orders are allowed and are prosperous. They maintain 6 seminaries.

There is a Cardinal whose seat is at Rio de Janeiro and who acts as an Archbishop, and there are besides 14 archbishops, 44 suffragan bishops, 7 prelates, and 3 apostolic prefects. For instruction of the secular clergy there are 20 seminaries. Evangelic sects maintain 10 seminaries.

Education.

Education is free but not compulsory, except in some States (e.g. Ceará, Maranhão, Alagoas, Matto Grosso, Minas Geraes, S. Paulo, Santa Catharina). The Union Government undertakes to provide, in part, for higher or university instruction within the Union, but there are institutions of this nature maintained, some by the States, and some by private associations; while primary schools are chiefly maintained and supervised, either by the States or by the municipalities and private initiative. The Union Government maintains primary schools in the colonial zones of Paraná and Santa Catharina. There is one official university in Brazil, the University of Rio de Janeiro (Federal District), founded on September 7, 1920, and two private universities, at Bello Horizonte (Minas Geraes) and Curitiba (Paraná); there are moreover 56 faculties which confer degrees. In Rio de Janeiro (Federal District) are also the military college, the general staff school, the military school, the veterinary school, the school of aviation, the improvement school for officers, the naval school of war, and the professional schools of the navy. In the State of Rio de Janeiro is the naval school. In Porto Alegre, Barbacena, and Fortaleza there are also preparatory military colleges. At the Capital are maintained by the Federal Government a school for the blind and another for deaf and dumb. The Federal Government maintains also a School of Fine Arts and a National Institute of Music in the Capital, there being similar private institutions in the Federal District and some States. There are seven engineering and mining polytechnics at Rio de Janeiro (University), S. Paulo, Rio Grande do Sul, Bahia, Minas Geraes, and Pernambuco; 19 schools of medicine, pharmacy and dentistry, and 12 schools of law and social sciences. There are, besides, 97 industrial schools, 41 agricultural, and 48 commercial schools.

There were in 1926 in the various States, 30,650 primary schools with 1,470,000 pupils. There were also in the States 212 secondary schools recognized by the National Department of Education, and 367 professional schools with more than 37,000 pupils. There are 76 teachers' training schools.

The National Library in Rio contains more than 400,000 books and manuscripts. There is also a National Museum and a Botanical Garden.

Justice and Crime

There is a supreme Federal court of Justice at Rio de Janeiro, which celebrated its centenary on January 20, 1929; there are also Federal judges in each State. Justice is administered in the States in accordance with State law, by State courts, but in Rio de Janeiro Federal Justice is administered. Judges are appointed for life. There are also municipal magistrates and justices of the peace, who are elected for four years, and whose chief function is to settle cases up to a certain amount.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for 5 years as estimated in the annual budgets (actual receipts and expenditures in recent years have usually not been disclosed):—

—	Revenue		Expenditure
	(Gold) Milreis	(Paper) Milreis	(Gold) Milreis	(Paper) Milreis
1925	101,206,000	890,341,000	84,412,958	1,044,599,321
1926	121,646,000	1,097,716,000	84,412,958	1,044,599,321
1927	140,605,000	1,155,736,000	109,028,000	1,288,519,000
1929	187,897,000	1,352,644,000	184,536,000	1,502,946,000

According to presidential message of May, 1928, actual revenue for 1927 amounted to 1,994,179 contos of reis (49,854,475*l.*), expenditures to 1,968,599 contos (49,214,975*l.*), leaving surplus of 25,580 contos (639,500*l.*). This was the first surplus since 1914. An investigation in December, 1928, revealed errors in calculation; the true surplus was found to be 30,851 contos (771,275*l.*).

The consolidated foreign debt of Brazil on October 30, 1928, amounted to 105,731,442*l.*, 333,577,086 francs, and 153,263,168 dollars (United States). Service on the foreign debt for 1928 totalled 7,729,801*l.*, 17,017,830 francs, and 15,433,379 dollars (United States). The consolidated internal debt amounted (December 31, 1927) to 2,460,156 contos of reis, an increase of 68,102 contos of reis over 1926; the internal floating debt, 397,655 contos paper.

Under the Law of 1912 States must obtain Federal authorization before contracting any loans.

Defence.

Army.—Under the military law of 1923 military service is obligatory on every Brazilian from 21 years of age to 44. The terms of service are 9 years (from the 21st to the 30th years of age) in the army 'first line' (1 in the ranks, the rest in the reserve), and 14 years (from the 30th to the 44th years of age) in the army 'second line' (7 in the 'second line' and 7 in the reserve of the same). The reservists are called up for training annually for 4 weeks, besides which there is rifle practice once a month. The men in the territorial army also have an annual training of 2 to 4 weeks. The total peace strength for 1928 was 40,268 officers and men, organized in 4 divisions, 3 cavalry divisions, 1 mixed brigade, and 1 coast defence district, comprising:—

	Regiments	Battalions	Batteries	Squadrons	Companies	Flights
Infantry .	13	49	—	—	141 <sup>1</sup>	—

Mobilisation would yield about 120,000. The military police under the War Office number 33,450, capable of expansion to 130,000. Infantry are armed with the Mauser rifle, the field and horse artillery with 75 mm. guns.

Navy.—The navy has been reorganised under a United States mission, naval armaments, materials and stores being supplied from the States.

Ships of the Brazilian navy are as follows:—

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	H.P.	Nominal speed
			Belt	Gun
1907	BATTLESHIPS. (Minas Geraes . . . . . São Paulo . . . . .)	10,251	9	9	{ 12-12-in., 22 4-7-in., 2 3-in. A.A. . . . . }	—	23,500	21

There is 1 river monitor (Pernambuco), 2 river gunboats, 11 destroyers, 4 submarines (of which only one is of an ocean-going type), and a submarine depôt and salvage vessel. The cruisers Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul were refitted in 1925-26, new engines and oil-fired boilers being installed.

There are three naval arsenals—at Rio de Janeiro, Pará, and Ladario de Matto Grosso (this latter a river arsenal). Work is in progress at the arsenal in the Ilha das Cobras at Rio.

Production and Industry.

Brazil is an agricultural country, though only a small fraction of its soil has been brought under culture, and she is a heavy importer of wheat and flour. The cultivated area covers 14,880,000 acres, of which 5,145,554 acres are in São Paulo, 2,805,139 acres in Rio Grande do Sul, 2,641,156 acres in Minas, and 4,288,800 acres in other States. The census returns in 1920 gave 650,000 proprietors of land, the value of which was estimated at 11,000,000,000 milreis. Coffee, the chief product cultivated, accounts annually for from 60 to 75 per cent. of Brazil's total exports. The four States of São Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Espirito Santo, and Minas Geraes are the principal districts for coffee growing. Total area planted (1927), 5,184,287 acres, with 1,792,812,681 producing trees. Three-fourths of the coffee of the world comes from these parts; more than half of the world's supply from São Paulo alone. The average annual crop of Brazil may be estimated at about 13 million bags (1 bag = 132 pounds).

Brazil's commanding position in the world's coffee markets is revealed herewith:—

Indiarubber is another great natural product of the country, the principal rubber-growing districts being the Acre Territory and the States of Amazonas and Pará. The best rubber to be found on the world's markets, the 'fine hard Pará,' comes from Brazil.

The chief crops, with estimated production and value for 1926-27, were (1 conto = 254,):—

Crops	Amount	Value	Crops	Amount	Value
	(Metric tons)	(Contos)		(Metric tons)	(Contos)
Coffee . . .	1,096,466	3,280,398	Maté . . .	187,000	142,120

Production of the chief crops for 1927-28 was (in metric tons): Maize, 4,066,136; coffee, 941,754; rice, 890,023; tapioca, 193,023; sugar, 777,715; potatoes, 193,023; yerba maté, 187,943; wheat, 114,898; tobacco, 67,811; cocoa, 51,770; rubber, 27,876. Area under cotton, 1927-28, was 1,177,862 acres, with output of 108,680 metric tons of raw cotton, equivalent when ginned to 473,780 bales. Total value of all crops 1927-28 was 200,000,000.

The census of cattle for 1920 showed that there were in Brazil 34,271,324 oxen; 16,168,549 swine; 7,933,437 sheep; 5,086,655 goats; 5,253,699 horses; 1,865,259 asses and mules.

Both the forests and mines of Brazil are important. Pine has become an important export. Coal deposits exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catharina, Paraná, and São Paulo; the coal is pulverised for the market, owing to its inferior quality. Annual output, from 7 mines, about 370,000 tons. Iron is found chiefly in Minas Geraes. At Itabira foreign capital is now opening up what is believed to be one of the richest iron ore deposits in the world. Gold is also found; the production in 1927 was 3,203,688 grammes. Diamond districts are Diamantina, Grão Mogol, Chapada Diamantina, Bagagem, Goyaz, Matto Grosso, and other States. Manganese ores are worked in Minas Geraes. Exports in 1927, chiefly to the United States, 241,823 metric tons. A great part of the world's supply of monazite comes from Brazil, chiefly from Bahia and Espírito Santo.

The most important manufacturing industry in Brazil is cotton weaving. There were in 1927, 357 cotton factories with 2,584,650 spindles and 78,383 looms employing 128,613 operatives. Production was 760,122,000 yards of cotton cloth, and the value of all products was 974,555,000 milreis. There were (1926) 13 silk mills, 35 woollen mills, and 16 jute mills.

There are 23 paper mills in Brazil, representing capital outlay of 78,860 contos of reis, engaged principally in the manufacture of wrapping paper. There are also over 2,000 tobacco factories, and approximately 216 sugar factories with, in 1927, a production of 850,565 tons. In Rio de Janeiro flour milling is important, wheat being imported chiefly from the Argentine and Uruguayan Republics and the United States. There are 13 packing houses with a total combined capital of 187,000,000 milreis. According to the industrial census of 1920 there were 13,336 factories in Brazil, with a capital of 1,815,156,000 milreis, an annual output of nearly 3,000,000,000 milreis, and 275,512 employees.

The colonies maintained by the Union are Cruz Machado and Candido de Ahren in Parana: some 17 other Federal Colonies have been turned into self-governing municipalities. Several of the states support colonies.

Commerce.

Imports and exports (excluding specie) for 5 years (1 conto of reis = 257) :—

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1926 there entered the ports of Brazil 24,397 steam vessels of 35,924,754 tons (14,553,003 tons Brazilian, 7,088,842 tons British, and 3,898,327 tons German), and cleared 24,515 steam vessels of 36,600,871 tons (14,537,592 tons Brazilian, 7,153,486 tons British, and 3,957,988 tons German).

Inland waterways, mostly rivers, are open to navigation over some 40,300 miles. By means of its waterways Brazil is connected with the neighbouring States. All coasting and river vessels must be Brazilian. Merchant shipping under Brazilian flag in 1927 comprised 2,806 sailing and steam vessels of 761,900 gross tons. The coast has a length of 4,060 miles.

Internal Communications.

Railway history in Brazil begins in 1854 with 89 miles. On December 31, 1927, the total length of railways was 19,544 miles. Of this total 14,615 miles were the property of the Union, and 4,928 miles belonged to the States. The Central Brazil Railway (1,799 miles) is the principal railway in Brazil, and is owned by the State. The entire system joins up the railways of Brazil with those of Uruguay, Argentina and Paraguay. The Paulista railway is electrified from Jundiahy to Tatá. The total length of high-ways in October, 1928, was 33,452 miles, of which 5,161 miles were first-class roads, and 28,291 miles second-class roads. In 1928 a Department of Roads was set up to further national highways, the cost of which, estimated at 25,000 contos annually, will be raised by internal loans.

Of the telegraph system of the country about half, including all inter-State lines, is under control of the Government. There are 61,000 miles of line, including 32,672 miles of Government property, 17,169 miles of railway property and 11,267 miles of submarine cables. In 1927 there were 4,952 telegraph offices. Three submarine cables connect Brazil with Europe, 2 with the United States, and 3 with the River Plate.

About 40 wireless stations, including one very powerful one, have been established.

Brazilian Post-office during 1927 had an income of 35,652,634 milreis, expenditures 43,598,503 milreis, resulting deficit, 7,945,869. International parcel-post packages, 113,877, against 126,136 in 1926. Post-office maintained in 1927 2,753 postal routes covering 103,161 miles, served by 3,298 carriers and by 28 employes aboard ships. Several companies furnish air-mail services.

A decree was issued in 1913 adopting the standard time and longitude of Greenwich (instead of that of Rio de Janeiro) as from January 1, 1914.

Banking and Credit.

Before the War Brazil's currency was a complicated paper system consisting of inconvertible notes issued by the Treasury and convertible notes issued against gold by the Government Conversion Office (Casa de Conversão) founded in 1906. The milreis, which had a par value of 27*d.* was, on the whole, kept fairly stable at from 16*d.* to 18*d.* But the post-war difficulties which led the Government to issue great quantities of Treasury notes brought the milreis down to 4½*d.* in 1923, from which point it was slowly raised to about 5½*d.* in 1926. A law passed on December 18, 1926, adopted a new unit of account called the cruzeiro, a gold coin containing 2 grammes of gold .900 fine, to be exchanged for four paper milreis. The milreis was practically stabilized at the current rate of 5½*d.*, with the volume of currency placed in April, 1927, under the control of the Caixa de Estabilização. On September 29, 1928, the volume of gold in the Caixa de Estabilização, amounted to 791,059 contos (19,776,475*l.*), including 6,844,482*l.* sterling, 47,485,377 U.S. dollars, 9,028,810 French francs, 2,058,200 German marks, 726,010 Spanish pesetas, and 13 contos 450 milreis in Brazilian gold coins. The greater part represented the proceeds of foreign loans. On August 6, 1928, the Government fixed the value of the gold milreis at 4·567 paper pesos for the collection of taxes, custom dues and other Government transactions, and steps were taken to begin the minting and circulation of the new gold cruzeiro. Gold coins of 2, 5, and 10 cruzeiro will eventually be minted, as well as silver, nickel, and copper subsidiary coinage.

The Bank of Brazil with an authorised capital of 70,000 contos of reis (increased in June, 1921, to 100,000 contos of reis) had, in 1927, 70 branches throughout the Republic. Its reserves, August 31, 1928, stood at 14,644 contos; cash on hand, 536,869 contos; balances abroad, 254,466 contos; notes in circulation, 592,000 contos.

At the end of December, 1926, the assets of the banks of Brazil totalled 16,584,872 contos of reis. They had 2,937,903 contos of reis in deposits, 362,831 contos of reis in reserves, and an aggregate paid up capital of 758,989 contos of reis.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The new unit is the cruzeiro (see above), but up to the end of 1926 the unit was the real (pl. reis). The paper currency still in use is of the following denominations: 1,000 reis, 2,000 reis, 5,000 reis, 10,000 reis, 20,000 reis, 50,000 reis, 100,000 reis, 200,000 reis, 500,000 reis, and 1,000,000 reis. One contos of reis = 25*l.*

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The metric system has been in use in all official departments since 1862. It was made compulsory in 1872, but the ancient measures are still partly employed in certain rural districts of the interior. They are:—

The Libra	.	.	.	=	1·012 lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Arroba	.	.	.	=	32·38 „ „
„ Quintal	.	.	.	=	129·54 „ „
„ Alqueire (of Rio)	.	.	.	=	1 imperial bushel.
„ Oitava	.	.	.	=	55·34 grains.

BULGARIA.

(BULGARIYA.)

Reigning King (Tsar)

Boris III, eldest son of Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the late Marie Louise (died January 31, 1899), eldest daughter of Robert the last reigning Duke of Parma, born January 30, 1894, succeeded to the throne on the abdication of his father, October 3, 1918.

Brother and Sisters of the King.—(1) Prince Cyril, born November 17, 1895; (2) Princess Eudoxia, born January 17, 1898; and (3) Princess Nadejda, born January 30, 1899; m. January 24, 1924, to Duke Albert Eugene of Württemberg.

According to the Constitution the Sovereign must profess the Orthodox religion, and must reside permanently in the country. The royal title is hereditary.

According to the budget of 1927-28, the civil list is fixed at 8,000,000 leva, besides 23,550,000 leva for the maintenance of palaces, &c.

Constitution and Government.

The Principality of Bulgaria was created by the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. On October 5, 1908, Bulgaria declared her independence, and the Powers recognised Bulgarian independence, and the title of 'King of the Bulgarians' assumed by Prince Ferdinand. On September 18, 1885, the province of Eastern Rumelia was united with Bulgaria.

On September 30, 1912, Bulgaria allied with Serbia, Greece and Montenegro commenced war on Turkey (First Balkan War), which was ended by the Treaty of London on May 30, 1913, by which Turkey ceded to the Allies all its European territory west of a line drawn from Midia on the Black Sea to Enos on the Aegean, and also Crete.

The Balkan League broke up almost immediately after the signing of the Treaty of London, owing to disagreements among the allies as to the division of the territory ceded to them, and on June 29, 1913, war broke out among the allies (Second Balkan War). On July 10, 1913, Rumania intervened to impose peace on the allies and to exact for herself from Bulgaria an extension of her frontier. Peace came finally on August 10 (July 26 old style), 1913, by the Treaty of Bukarest, between Bulgaria on the one hand, and Rumania, Serbia, Greece and Montenegro on the other.

By the Constitution of 1879, amended May, 1893, and June, 1911, the legislative authority was vested in a single Chamber, called the Sobranie or National Assembly, composed of 227 members. The members of it are elected by universal manhood suffrage at the rate of one member to every 20,000 of the population. On April 13, 1927, the Sobranie agreed to adopt the principle of proportional representation. Every member receives 400 levas a day (including Sundays and holidays) during the session. All over 30 years of age who can read and write (except the clergy, soldiers on active service, persons deprived of civil rights, &c.) are eligible as representatives. The duration of the Assembly is four years, but it may be dissolved at any time by the King, when new elections must take place within two months. Laws passed by the Sobranie require the assent of the King. Questions concerning the acquisition or cession of territory, changes in the constitution, a vacancy on the throne, or the appointment of a regent have to be decided by a Grand Sobranie, elected for the special purpose in a manner similar to that in which the ordinary Sobranie is elected, but with double the number of members.

Parties in the Sobranie (elected May 29, 1927):—Government Coalition, 168; Agrarians 48; Macedonian Independents, 11; National Liberals, 14; Democrats, 12; Radicals, 2; Social Democrats, 10; others, 8. Total, 273.

The executive power is vested in a Council of Ministers nominated by the King. The cabinet (appointed September 12, 1928) is composed as follows:—

Premier and Minister of Interior.—André Liaptcheff.

Minister of Education.—Nicholas Naidenoff.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Theodore Kuloff.

Minister of Commerce.—M. Tzvetco Bobotchevsky.

Minister of Finance.—Vladimir Molloff.

Minister of Public Works.—Slaveico Vassileff.

Minister of Posts and Railways.—E. Madjaroff.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Athanase Buroff.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dimitri Christoff.

Minister of War.—General Bakardjoff (January 11, 1929).

For local administration the country is divided into a number of Departments, each under a Prefect assisted by a Departmental Council and aided by several sub-prefects. Each community has its Kmet or mayor and its Council.

Area and Population.

The area of Bulgaria is 103,146 square kilometres, or 39,814 English square miles, and the census population on December 31, 1926, was 5,488,125 (2,748,060 males and 2,735,065 females), as against 4,846,971 (2,420,784 males and 2,426,187 females) in the census of 1920. Population on December 31, 1928, was estimated at 5,596,800 (2,806,700 males and 2,790,100 females).

By the Peace Treaty of Neuilly, signed on November 27, 1919, Bulgaria ceded Thrace to the Allied and Associated Powers and the Strumnitza line and a strip of territory on the north-west frontier to Serbia. Bulgaria was deprived of its Aegean littoral, but an efficient economic outlet to the same sea was provided to her by the Treaty.

Population of districts, according to census of December 31, 1926 :—

Religion and Education

The national faith is that of the Orthodox Church, though, in 1870, in consequence of its demand for and acceptance of religious autonomy, the Bulgarian Church was declared by the Patriarch of Constantinople to be outside the Orthodox Communion. The Church is governed by the Synod of Bishops. There are 11 Dioceses, viz., Sofia, Plovdiv, Stara Zagora, Sliven, Varna, Rousse, Tirnovo, Vratza, Lovetch, Vidin and Nevrokop, in addition to 4 in Macedonia and 1 in Thrace (suspended at present). The clergy, both Orthodox and of other religious bodies, are paid by the State and also receive fees for services at burials, marriages, &c. There were, according to the last census of 1920, 4,061,829 members of the Orthodox Church of Bulgaria, 690,734 Moslems and 84,072 Catholics.

Elementary education is obligatory and free for children between the ages of 7 and 14.

The following are the educational statistics of Bulgaria for 1926-27.

Justice.

The lowest Court is that of the Justices of the Peace, who possess jurisdiction in minor civil and criminal cases. The Departmental Court, or Court of First Instance, is competent to pronounce sentence of death and penal servitude, and also acts as a Court of Appeal. Above these are three Courts of Appeal, sitting at Sofia, Philippopolis and Ruschuk. The highest tribunal is the Court of Cassation, sitting at Sofia, and composed of 12 judges.

Finance.

Internal debt : 5,354,054,615 leva (consolidated, 754,047,580 leva ; non-consolidated, 4,600,007,035 leva).

Defence.

The pre-war peace strength of the Bulgarian army was about 3,900 officers and 56,000 other ranks. Its war strength was approximately 500,000 men.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly of November 27, 1919, the total military forces of Bulgaria must not in the future exceed 20,000 men, enrolled by voluntary system. The obligatory military service is abolished. All measures of mobilisation are prohibited and, in order to prevent the formation of a reserve, service in the ranks is to be for a minimum period of 12 years. Officers serving at the time when the treaty was signed must undertake to serve at least till the age of 40 and newly appointed officers serve for at least 20 years.

A frontier guard of 8,000 men voluntarily enlisted is permitted, and in addition the number of armed gendarmes, police, customs officials and forest guards must not exceed 10,000.

The maximum authorised armaments and munition supplies are :—

	Per 1000 men.	Munitions per arm. 500 rounds
Rifles or carbines . . . . .	1,150
Machine guns . . . . .	15	10,000
Trench mortars, light . . . . .	2	1,000
" " heavy . . . . .	2	500
Guns or howitzers . . . . .	3	1,000

No military or naval aircraft is permitted.

The manufacture of arms, munitions and war material is only to be carried out at one factory under State control. The importation and exportation of arms and munitions is prohibited.

Owing to exceptional circumstances a slight increase in the treaty establishment has been authorised, and on January 1, 1928, the strength was :—

The military budget for 1927-28 amounted to 1,182,831,000 levas.

Under the terms of the treaty Bulgaria has surrendered all warships and submarines, but is permitted to maintain on the Danube and along the coast 4 torpedo boats and 6 motor boats, now of little value, all without torpedoes and torpedo apparatus, for police and fishery protection duties.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people. Land is held in absolute freehold by the owners and there is a land tax. The communes hold pasture-land and wood-land in perpetuity and pay no rent, and over such lands the members of the communes have grazing and wood-cutting rights.

About two-thirds of the population are engaged in agriculture, most of them being small proprietors holding from one to six acres. The methods of cultivation are primitive, but machinery is being gradually introduced.

The total area of Bulgaria is 10,314,620 hectares, or 25,786,550 acres; of this the cultivated area is 3,716,070 hectares, or 9,182,409 acres, and the forest area 2,881,264 hectares, or 7,203,160 acres (841,100 hectares belonging to the State and 1,516,162 hectares to the municipalities).

Fruit grows in abundance, especially in the neighbourhood of Kustendil. Wine production, 1924, 16,720,000 gallons. Cotton in 1927 yielded 7,496 quintals, and in 1928, 9,417 quintals from 12,880 acres and 12,172 acres respectively. Sugar production in 1926-27 was 295,104 metric tons from 51,837 acres; 13,642 acres were under rose cultivation in 1927, producing 540,047 flasks of essence. Tobacco area in 1927, 60,317 acres, yield, 21,695,000 kilos; 1928 yield (estimated) 25,950,000 kilos. In 1927, the production of silkworm cocoons amounted to 2,038,297 kilos valued at 208,829,700 levks; in 1928, the production was 1,900,000 kilos.

According to the census of December 31, 1920, there were in Bulgaria 8,922,604 sheep, 1,331,853 goats, 398,237 horses, 1,089,699 swine and 1,877,108 other cattle.

Industry is not much developed, though the State encourages industrial enterprise. Mining development has been slow. The country is rich in coal; there are three State mines (at Pernik, Bobovdovl and Maritza), and several privately owned mines. Total coal production in 1927, 1,237,646 metric tons, of which 1,064,870 tons came from State mines and 172,776 tons from privately owned mines. The following were the principal minerals in 1927 in metric tons (figures for 1928 in parentheses):—copper, 10,934 (35,536); lead, 1,229 (11,211); zinc, 1,459 (425); zinc-lead, 6,720; lead-copper, 16,789; aluminium, 2,841 (1,889).

Shipping and Communications.

The number of vessels entered at all the Black Sea ports of Bulgaria in 1926 was 4,003 of 1,634,399 tons; number of vessels cleared, 3,994 of 1,637,432 tons. At all the Danube ports there entered, in 1926, 11,174 vessels of 2,403,483 tons; and cleared, 11,162 vessels of 2,404,658 tons.

In 1927, there were in Bulgaria 4,499 miles of State roads, and 4,229 miles of communal roads; total: 8,728 miles of road.

In 1928, Bulgaria had 1,426 miles of railway of ordinary gauge and 255 miles of narrow gauge; total, 1,681 miles. All the lines belong to the State, which works them. Railways connect Sofia with the general European system. In 1927, there were 29 miles of electric tramways.

There were, in 1927, 579 post offices. Total correspondence handled

43,508,499 letters and postcards, 1,004,285 parcels. Length of telegraph line in 1927, 2,396 miles; number of offices, 579; number of messages, 3,629,296. In 1927 there were 547 telephone stations; length of line, 6,919 miles, number of conversations, 29,984,641.

Money and Credit.

There is a National Bank of Bulgaria, with headquarters at Sofia and branches in the different towns of Bulgaria; its capital is 100,000,000 leva, provided by the State, and it has authority to issue both gold notes and silver notes. On February 7, 1928, it had in hand 1,453,727,748 leva in gold and silver, and deposits of 1,221,214,741 leva. The note circulation on the same date was 3,586,839,903 leva. There is a State Agricultural Bank for making advances on personal security. A law passed by the Bulgarian National Assembly on December 23, 1921, authorises the establishment of a Bulgarian International Bank for facilitating and encouraging international trade. The original capital of this bank is to be 75,000,000 leva, of which 30,000,000 leva are to be apportioned to the Bulgarian National Bank and the Bulgarian Agricultural Bank, and the remainder to foreign banks and organisations.

Deposits in the 508 Postal Savings Banks of Bulgaria during 1927 amounted to 364,651,631 leva, and withdrawals to 238,437,552 leva. There were 762,087 depositors (1925). The balance in hand at end of 1927 was 508,306,855 leva.

There are a few Bulgarian gold coins, of the value of 100, 20, and 10 leva (francs), but the gold circulation is supplied by foreign 10 and 20 franc pieces. There are silver coins of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lev, and 1 lev, 2, and 5 leva (francs); nickel coins of 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ , 5, 10, and 20 stotinki (centimes); the notes of the National Bank circulate at par. The leva contains 0.2903225 gramme of fine gold.

The metric system is in general use. On April 1, 1916, the Gregorian Calendar came into force in Bulgaria.

CHILE.

(REPÚBLICA DE CHILE.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the Crown of Spain by the declaration of independence of September 18, 1810, finally freeing itself from Spanish rule in 1818. By the Constitution which came into force on October 18, 1925, legislative power is vested in the National Congress, consisting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, both of which are elected by direct popular vote. The Senate consists of 45 members, who represent 9 provincial groups. Each group elects five senators. It is renewable every four years, but each Senator holds his seat for eight years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 132 members elected by departments or groups of departments, one member for every 30,000 inhabitants or fraction of not less than 15,000. Electors are all registered citizens of 21 years of age or over, who are able to read and write. All voting is by ballot. Congress is to be in ordinary session from May 21 to September 18. The executive is exercised by the President of the Republic elected for a term of six years, also by direct popular vote. A retiring President is not re-eligible. In legislation the President has a modified veto; a bill returned to the Chambers with the President's objections may, by a two-thirds vote of the members present (a majority of the members being present), be sustained and become law. The validity of all elections of President, Deputies and Senators is determined by a special body called Tribunal Calificador, consisting of five members chosen by lot from among the following: One each from past-presidents or vice-presidents of the Chamber and Senate; two from Ministers of the Supreme Court; and one from Ministers of the Court of Appeal of the city where Congress meets.

The salary of the President is fixed at 120,000 pesos, with 30,000 pesos for expenses.

The President is assisted by a number of Ministers of State, one for each department, who constitute a Cabinet and who are responsible to him. Ministers may speak in Congress but do not vote.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For the purposes of local government the Republic is divided into Provinces, presided over by Intendentes; and the Provinces into Departments, with Gobernadores as chief officers. The Departments constitute one or more municipal districts each with a council or municipality of 5 to 15 members, inhabitants popularly elected for three years. The police of Santiago and of the capitals of departments is organised and regulated by the President of the Republic at the charge of the national treasury.

Area and Population.

The Republic, by a decree of February 1, 1928, is now divided into 16 provinces, subdivided into 62 departments, and 1 territory (Magallanes). Departments and territories are subdivided into sub-delegations and districts.

For local administration purposes, the Republic is divided into 329 townships; for registry offices of births, marriages, and deaths purposes, into 377 circumscriptions; and, for ecclesiastical purposes, into 351 parishes and 95 vice-parishes.

In 1884 the provinces of Tarapacá and Tacna-Arica were ceded to Chile by Peru. The cession of the latter was originally for ten years, at the end of which period a plébiscite of the province would decide to which country it should belong. No plébiscite had been taken by 1928, and the province was occupied by Chile. In 1928, after diplomatic relations had been severed between Chile and Peru for 17 years, they were resumed, and in February, 1929, an agreement was reached whereby Tacna went to Peru and Arica to Chile.

Area and population of the 23 provinces and 1 territory into which Chile was divided at the time of the last census, January 1, 1920:—

Many islands to the north, west, and south belong to Chile. The coastline is about 2,485 miles in length.

In 1885 the population numbered 2,527,320; in 1895, 2,712,145; in 1907, 3,249,279; in 1920 (last census), 3,753,799 (1,865,827 males and 1,887,972 females). Estimated population October 1, 1927, 4,004,014.

The population of the principal towns in 1920 (census figures) was:—Santiago, 507,296; Valparaíso, 182,422; Concepción, 64,074; Iquique, 37,421; Talca, 36,079; Chillan, 30,881; Antofagasta, 51,531; Viña del Mar, 35,441; Curicó, 15,879; Temuco, 28,546; Serena, 15,240; Talcahuano, 22,084; Valdivia, 26,854. November, 1928, a series of earthquakes destroyed the towns of Talca, Constitución and Curicó with much loss of life. Of the total population in 1920 46.60 per cent. were urban. The great majority of the population is of European origin. The indigenous inhabitants are of three branches, the Mapuches, mostly nomadic, living in or near Tierra del Fuego; the Araucans (101,118) in the valleys or on the western slopes of the Andes; the Changos, who inhabit the northern coast region and work as labourers. The total number of foreigners included in the census of 1920 was 120,436, as against 134,524 in 1907.

Births in 1926, 159,540; marriages, 30,314; deaths, 108,223; surplus of births, 513.7.

Religion.

The Roman Catholic religion was maintained by the State, but in 1925 the church was disestablished. There is one archbishop (Santiago), 11 bishops, and four vicars apostolic. There were in 1924, 351 parishes and 95 sub-parishes in the Republic, 610 churches, and 808 chapels.

Education.

Education is gratuitous and at the cost of the State, and since August 26, 1920, compulsory for at least six years in the cities and four years in the rural districts. A decree issued February, 1928, makes it compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 15. Professional and secondary instruction is provided in the State University of Chile, with 1,500 students in 1927, the Catholic University (2,000 students in 1927), the National Institute of Santiago, and in the lyceums and colleges established in the capitals of provinces, and in some departments. A school of technology was opened at Valparaíso (Universidad Industrial de Valparaíso), and another at Concepción (University of Concepción) in 1920. There were in 1924, 3,357 public primary schools with 438,781 pupils, and 9,414 teachers; and 459 private primary schools with 1,430 teachers and 62,099 pupils; 15 public normal schools with 2,507 pupils and 453 teachers; 96 public and 102 private secondary schools with 40,084 and 20,536 pupils with 2,038 and 1,247 teachers respectively; 11 public commercial schools with 181 teachers and 3,133 pupils. There are besides agricultural schools, schools of mines, and professional schools. The cost of maintaining the public primary schools in 1924 was 48,676,289 paper pesos, that of the secondary schools 8,294,620 paper pesos, that of the national normal schools, 4,883,909 paper pesos. The National Library in 1924 contained 327,881 volumes.

There were in 1924, 627 newspapers and journals published in Chile, including 90 dailies and 176 weeklies.

Justice, Crime, Pauperism.

There are, in addition to a High Court of Justice in the capital, eight Courts of Appeal distributed over the Republic, Tribunals of First Instance in the departmental capitals, and second class judges in the subdelegations. In 1925, 171,653 persons were committed to prison; on December 31, 1925, there were 65,459 inmates in the prisons.

The police force (1924) was composed as follows:—Fiscal, 9,225 men; communal, 1,260 men; and country police, 3,964 men, a total of 14,449, including officers and troop.

Finance.

In recent years the revenue and expenditure were as follows (40 pesos = £1):—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1926	23,425,100	25,950,000	1929 <sup>2</sup>	28,082,287	26,790,099

<sup>1</sup> These are to be taken with great reserve, owing to the accounting methods employed; for example, 1925 is now said to have closed with a deficit of 1,500,000, instead of the surplus indicated. Since 1925 the accounting methods have been reformed.

For 1929 total estimated receipts, including estimated surplus of 20,000,000 pesos from 1928, are 1,128,291,500 pesos and estimated expenditure 1,071,603,975 pesos. In addition the Extraordinary Budget for 1929 calls for the expenditure of 225,000,000 pesos for stated objects, chiefly public works, and for emergencies; these will be raised through loans. Revenue from the export tax on nitrate (1929) was estimated at 250,000,000 pesos or 22 per cent. of the total.

Revenue and expenditure for 1928 were:—

Revenue	Pesos	Expenditure	Pesos
Sale of nitrate lands and rentals of fiscal properties . . . . .	7,650,000	Administration . . . . .	590,667,034
Nitrate export and other taxes . . . . .	775,300,000	Public debt service . . . . .	231,753,773
Government services . . . . .	99,078,860	Various charges (fondos, caminos, etc.) . . . . .	53,967,900
Miscellaneous . . . . .	77,090,757	Pensions, etc. . . . .	66,300,000
Total . . . . .	959,119,617	Total . . . . .	942,688,707

Foreign and internal debts on 31st of December of year indicated:—

Years	Foreign Debt		Internal debt
	£	Dollars	Gold pesos	Paper pesos
1923	26,673,192	30,869,728	154,558,000	281,579,604

1925	26,083,092	26,037,578	154,220,000	263,787,080
1926	26,006,872	64,492,853

Defence.

ARMY.

The Chilean Army is a national militia in which all able-bodied citizens are obliged to serve. Liability extends from the 20th to the 50th year, inclusive. Recruits are called up in their 20th year, and are trained for one and a half years. Afterwards they serve for 12 years in the reserve of the active army, after which they belong till the completion of their 50th year to the second reserve. The latter is organised as a second-line army.

Chile is divided into 4 zones or military districts, each of which furnishes a complete division on mobilisation. The army is organised in 5 divisions and 1 cavalry division, comprising: 16 regiments and 8 infantry battalions, 9 cavalry regiments, 5 regiments and 6 artillery groups, 1 engineering regiment and 5 engineering battalions, 5 battalions of railway troops and 2 aviation groups. The total strength of the active army in 1927 was 1,430 officers and 20,950 other ranks.

The infantry are armed with the Chilean Mauser rifle (1895), calibre 7 mm., and the cavalry with a carbine of similar pattern and lance. The field artillery are armed with Q.F. Krupp guns.

In December, 1918, an Air Force was formed under British instruction, with a nucleus of 14 seaplanes and 80 aeroplanes purchased in Great Britain.

NAVY.

The principal vessels of the Chilean fleet are as follows:—

Name	Launched	Displacement, Tons	Extreme Armouring, Inches	Main Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-Power	Nominal Speed
Battleship:
Almirante Latorre . . . .	1913	28,000	9	10 14-in.; 14 6-in.; 2 8-in.	4	37,000	23
Coast Defence Vessel:
Capitan Prat . . . . .	1890	6,900	12	4 9 4-in.; 8 4 7-in.	2	12,000	18 3
Armoured Cruisers:
Esmeralda . . . . .	1896	7,030	6	2 8-in.; 12 6-in.	3	18,000	22
O'Higgins . . . . .	1897	8,500	7	4 8-in.; 10 6-in.	2	16,000	21 5
Protected Cruisers:
Blanco Encalada . . . .	1893	4,420	—	2 8-in.; 10 6-in.	5	14,500	22 0
Ministro Zenteno . . . .	1896	3,900	—	8 6-in.	3	7,500	20 0
Chacabuco . . . . .	1898	4,500	—	2 6-in.; 10 4 7-in.	5	15,500	24 0

The Almirante Latorre served in the British Fleet during the war as the Canada, and it has been proposed to refit her in a British Royal dockyard during 1929. The O'Higgins has been fitted to carry a couple of seaplanes, and the Capitan Prat is being converted into a submarine depot ship. There are 5 large destroyers (the 3 most powerful of which were taken over as flotilla leaders by the British Navy for the period 1914–19), 6 submarines, and various training and auxiliary vessels. Six new destroyers and three submarines have been constructed in England, and will all be delivered during 1929. The general efficiency of the personnel of the Navy appears to be high; the active strength at present is about 8,000.

Five British naval officers are at present lent to the Chilean Navy in connexion with the re-organisation of training in certain branches.

Agriculture and Industry.

There are three zones in Chile—the arid zone in the north, which for many years has furnished the world's entire supply of natural nitrate of soda, 90 per cent. of its iodine and 18 per cent. of copper consumed; the agricultural zone in the centre; and the forest zone in the south. Mining in the north and agriculture in the centre are the principal occupations. Total area of agricultural land is 61,629,857 acres ; of forest land, 12,082,886 acres ; of fruit trees, 240,058 acres ; of meadows, 35,282,685 acres. Number of farms in 1925, 109,853. Chile produces annually large quantities of cereals, besides excellent wine, fruit, and vegetables. Capital invested in vineyards, 1928, was 414,000,000 pesos. Tobacco output from 5,328 acres in 1927 was 4,152,000 kilos. The principal crops of the harvest for 3 years are shown as follows :—

On December 31, 1925, the live stock of Chile comprised 323,581 horses, 27,364 asses 40,187 mules, 1,918,433 cattle, 4,093,872 sheep, 357,033 goats, and 246,636 pigs.

Dairy farms and the production of butter and cheese are on the increase. In 1924, there were 87,212 bee-hives, producing 504,500 kilos of honey and 63,700 kilos of wax. In Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego large tracts of country are devoted to sheep-farming ; wool exports, 1927, 9,812 tons. Extensive natural forests are found, the largest in the provinces of Valdivia (1,729,215 acres), Llanquihue (1,993,515 acres), and Chiloé (183,605 acres). The wealth of the country, however, consists chiefly in its minerals, especially in the northern provinces of Atacama and Tarapacá.

The metals obtained are gold, silver, copper (Chile is the world's second largest producer of copper), cobalt, and manganese ; the non-metallic substances being coal, nitrate, borate, salt, sulphur, and guano. Production of gold in 1924 was 3,483,971 grammes ; of silver, 94,346,040 grammes ; of copper (1926), 188,802,000 kilos. Iron-ore deposits are found in the provinces of Atacama and of Coquimbo, estimated at over 1,000,000,000 tons. Exports now exceed 1,000,000 tons annually. Coal production in 1927-28, 1,482,605 tons.

Nitrate of soda, or 'salitre,' is Chile's most important article of export and a substantial source of governmental revenue. It is found in the section of the desert of Atacama, known locally as the 'pampa salitrera,' a territory comprising an area of some 500 miles in length, lying between latitude 15° and 26° south, and situated at an elevation above sea level of from 2,000 to 6,000 feet. There are 152 nitrate works or oficinas with a productive capacity of 58,136,000 quintals. Production for nitrate year ending June 30, 1927, was divided among the companies as follows : Chilean, 32·57 per cent. ; North American, 13·23 per cent. ; German, 10·87 per cent. ; Anglo-Chilean, 27·92 per cent. ; Slavs, 11·89 per cent. ; British, 3·51 per cent. Sales are controlled by an Association of Nitrate Producers, on the board of which the Government is represented. Sales by the

In 1925 Chile had 7,681 manufacturing establishments, using raw materials to the value of 753,451,265 paper pesos, which were manufactured into merchandise to the value of 1,351,254,634 paper pesos. The number of employees and operators was 90,641, and their wages and salaries 197,081,424 pesos. These establishments represented a capital value of 1,676,731,190 paper pesos. Number of manufacturing establishments in 1927, 9,093.

Shipping and Navigation.

The commercial shipping of Chile consisted, in 1924, of 121 steamers of 88,226 tons net and 15 sailing vessels of 19,624 tons net. The shipping entered and cleared at the ports of Chile in foreign trade in 1926 was as follows: Entered, 1,100 vessels of 3,206,465 tons; cleared, 1,044 vessels of 3,001,892 tons.

Communications.

In 1926, there were in Chile 13,514 miles of first-class road (3,030 ft for motor traffic), and 10,286 miles of second-class road; also 851 miles of navigable river, and 497 miles of navigable lakes.

The length of State Railway lines amounted in 1928 to 3,380 miles; private railway lines, principally British-owned, to 2,057 miles, making a total of 5,437 miles. State Railway lines are:—Arica-La Paz Railway, 128 miles; North Longitudinal Railway, 442 miles; Central North Line, 729 miles; Central South Line, 1,704 miles; and Puente Alto-Valcan Railway, 37 miles, making a total of 3,880 miles. State-purchase of the Chilean Transandine Line was completed in 1929. Electrification of the railways was commenced in 1921 on the line between Valparaiso and Santiago, a distance of 115 miles.

The 979 post-offices dispatched in 1924 117,495,832 postal pieces of which 4,958,116 were sent abroad. These included 2,947,713 letters for abroad, and 43,786,872 home letters.

The length of telegraph lines at the end of 1924 was 16,183 miles (10,207 miles Government and 5,976 miles private). There were 31,656 miles of wire (19,291 miles Government telegraphs and 12,365 miles private). In 1924, there were 408 Government offices, which sent 5,615,000 messages, and 247 private offices, which sent 2,893,331 messages. The length of telephone line was 53,784 miles, and of wire 109,676 miles (1924). Number of subscribers, 28,360 (1925).

Work has progressed on the several wireless stations now under construction along this coast, which with those now completed will form a chain composed of Arica, Antofagasta, Coquimbo, Valparaiso, Talcahuano, Valdivia, Puerto Montt, Magallanes (formerly known as Punta Arenas), and Quilicura (near Santiago). A wireless station is also being erected on the Juan Fernandez Islands, about 400 miles west and south of Valparaiso. Total number of stations in 1919, 32.

Banking and Credit.

In August, 1925, the Government authorised the opening of a Central Bank with 100,000,000 pesos capital, which should have the right of issuing a new peso, value 6*d.*, to be the basis of a new national currency. The Central Bank commenced operations on January 11, 1926, and gold payments were re-established. The Central Bank's gold reserves amounted in December 31, 1928, to 460,500,474 pesos and Bank notes in circulation to 351,710,956 pesos.

There are a number of joint-stock banks of issue with agencies in Chile. Their joint paid-up capital and reserve funds amounted on December 31, 1924, to 10,500,000 in pesos, gold and 371,628,092 pesos paper. The largest of the banks is the Bank of Chile with a paid-up capital of 100,000,000 pesos. The banks are required to guarantee their note issue by depositing gold, bank notes of the Central Bank, and a limited amount of subsidiary currency in the Treasury as a reserve. There are also land banks which issue scrip payable to bearer and bearing interest, and lend money secured as a first charge on landed property and repayable at fixed periods. The State Mortgage Bank reported October 31, 1928, loans to farmers outstanding of 74,369,026 paper pesos. The two institutions which specialised in savings accounts, the National Savings Bank of Chile, and the Savings Bank of Santiago, were amalgamated in 1927, under the name of the former institution. At the National Savings Bank of Chile (Caja Nacional de Ahorros) during 1924, the deposits amounted to 1,396,734,605 paper pesos. The total number of depositors in Chilean savings banks on December 31, 1924, was 1,332,216.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary unit is the gold Peso, containing 0.183057 grammes of fine gold, worth 6*d.* sterling. £1 sterling therefore equals 40 gold pesos. It has been stabilized at this figure since October, 1925. Ten gold pesos = 1 'condor.' Only gold coins of 20, 40 (called the 'condor' and equal to the £ sterling), 50 and 100 pesos are minted. The stability of the currency is the concern of the Central Bank, created in August, 1925. Average rate of exchange has been: 1925, 40.98 to the £; 1926, 39.86; 1927, 39.98. The law also provides for silver coins of, 5, 2, 1 and 1/2 pesos, and nickel coins of 0.20, 0.10 and 0.05 pesos. Actually the currency in circulation is chiefly paper issued by the Government in lieu of gold, in denominations of 1,000, 500, 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 peso; Vales del Tesoro (Treasury Notes) in 1,000, 500 and 50 pesos also circulate. Coins in circulation are, 2 and 1 peso in silver, and 20, 10 and 5 centavos in nickel. The abbreviation m/c (moneda corriente) usually follows the amount, e.g. $1,000 m/c.

The metric system has been legally established in Chile since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent. Greenwich time has been adopted in place of Chilean time.

CHINA.

(CHUNG-HUA MIN-KUO, i. e. REPUBLIC OF CHINA.)

Government.

On February 12, 1912, China, one of the oldest of Monarchies, became a Republic.

The Chinese Imperial family was of Manchu origin, dating from 1644, and was styled Ta Ch'ing Ch'ao ('Great Pure Dynasty'). The last Emperor, P'u-yi, was the tenth of the line; but the official genealogy is carried back six generations earlier than the real founder, and P'u-yi's will be the sixteenth name in the canonised series of Ta Ch'ing Emperors. He was born on February 11, 1906, succeeded his uncle the Emperor Kuang-Hsü on November 14, 1908, and abdicated on February 12, 1912. On December 1, 1923, he was married. He retained the title of Emperor of the Manchu Imperial House up to November 5, 1924 (when it was abolished), together with other rights of preferential treatment secured under the Abdication Agreement, making P'u-yi an ordinary citizen of the republic. For account of the Revolution of 1911, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1912, pp. 699-701, and for later developments, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1919, pp. 740-41, and the STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1928, p. 734.

The present Government at Nanking (March 1929) is a Committee Government, representing broadly the "Kuomintang," or Nationalist party. According to the "Organic law of the Nationalist Government of the Republic of China" which the Kuomintang promulgated on October 4, 1928, the Nationalist Government is to be composed of five Yuan (Councils)—Executive, Legislative, Judicial, Examination, and Control. There shall be a President and from 12 to 16 State Councillors of the National Government, from whom Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the five Councils shall be appointed. The Executive Council shall be the highest organ of the National Government. It shall establish Ministries to which will be entrusted various executive duties, and it may appoint commissions for specified executive matters. It may introduce in the Legislative Council Bills on matters within its competence. Budgets, amnesties, declarations of war, peace negotiations, conclusions of treaties, and other important international matters are to be submitted to the Legislative Council.

The Legislative Council shall be the highest legislative organ. It shall have power to decide, upon legislation, budgets, amnesties, declarations of war, negotiations for peace, the conclusion of treaties, and other important international matters. It shall have a President and Vice-President, and shall be composed of between 49 and 99 members to be appointed by the National Government at the instance of the President of the Legislative Council. The term of office shall be two years, and members shall not concurrently be non-political administrative officials of the various organs of the Central or local Governments.

The Judicial Council shall be the highest judicial organ, and shall take charge of judicial trial, judicial administration, disciplinary punishment of officials, and trial of administrative cases. The granting of pardons, reprieves, and restitution of civil rights shall be submitted by the President of the Judicial Council to the National Government for approval and action.

The Examination Council shall be the highest examination organ, and shall take charge of examinations and determine qualifications for the public service. All public functionaries shall be appointed only after they have passed an examination and their qualifications for the public service have been determined by the Examination Council.

The Control Council shall be the highest supervisory organ, and shall, according to law, exercise the powers of impeachment and auditing. It shall have a President and Vice-President, and shall be composed of 19 to 29 members who are to be appointed by the National Government at the instance of the President of the Control Council. The security of tenure of office by members shall be determined by law, and members shall not concurrently hold any office in any organs of Central or local Governments.

President of the National Government of China.—Chiang Kai-shek (October 10, 1928).

There is also a Cabinet of Ministers, appointed on October 25, 1928, as follows:—

President of the Administrative Council.—Tan Yen-kai.

Minister of Finance.—T. V. Soong.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—C. T. Wang.

Minister for War.—Feng Yu-hsiang.

Minister of Agriculture.—Yi Fei-chi.

Minister of Industry.—H. H. Kung.

Minister of Education.—Chiang Meng-ling.

Minister of Railways.—Sun Fo.

Minister of the Interior.—Yen Hsi-shan.

Minister of Communications.—Wang Po-chun.

Minister of Health.—Hsueh Tuh-pi.

The Ministers are merely the functionaries of the Administrative Council. There are four other councils, but the five councils themselves are subordinate to the "three conferences" over which that of the Kuomintang is supreme, the system of Government being designed to secure the supremacy of the Kuomintang.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Under the 1923 constitution, commonly referred to as the Tsao K'un Constitution, local areas were divided into two grades, the Province (Sheng) and the District (Hsien). The provinces enact laws for provincial self-government, such as education, public works, provincial debts, police affairs, etc. Both the provinces and districts have local single-chamber assemblies elected directly by the citizens.

Area and Population.

The following table gives a statement of the area and population of the Chinese Republic according to the estimate of the Post Office in 1923:—

The 18 Provinces of China Proper	Area: English square miles	Population (Estimated)	Capital
Chihli . . . . .	115,800	34,186,711	Tientsin and Paotingfu
Shantung . . . . .	55,970	30,808,245	Tai-nan

Estimates prepared by the Chinese Maritime Customs in 1927 give the total of 457,787,000, inclusive of 19,290,000 for Manchuria. The figures for Mongolia and Tibet are rough estimates, and a certain amount of reserve should be maintained in regard to all these figures.

In 1925 the Chinese Post Office estimated the total population of China and the Outer Territories at 485,508,838. The latter record, which is the work of provincial officials, is given hereunder for purposes of comparison:

The Island of Formosa was ceded to Japan in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Shimonoseki ratified and exchanged at Chefoo on the 8th of May, 1895. The formal transfer of the Island was effected on June 2, 1895.

Tsingtao, in Kiaochow Bay in Shantung, first seized by Germany in 1898 and subsequently captured by the Japanese in 1914, was returned to China on November 1922, in accordance with the Washington Pact (for a history of the question, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1922, pp. 761-2). Japanese population, 1928, 15,587.

By agreement with the Chinese Government, dated March 27, 1898, Russia took possession of Port Arthur and Talienwan (called Dalny by Russia and Dairen by Japan) and their adjacent territories and waters, on lease for the term of 25 years, with option of extension by mutual agreement. In 1900, in consequence of the 'Boxer' uprising, Russia occupied Manchuria. Japan, after long and unsuccessful efforts to induce Russia to withdraw, broke off diplomatic relations, and on February 8, 1904, commenced hostilities. The war, in the course of which Japan proved victorious both on land and at sea, was brought to an end by the Treaty of Portsmouth signed September 5, 1905. Under this Treaty Russia and Japan agreed to evacuate Manchuria, except the territory affected by the lease of Kwantung (or the Liao-tung Peninsula), where Japan succeeds to the leasehold and other rights of Russia. The exclusive administration of Manchuria (with the exception mentioned) was to be restored to China. By treaty of December 22, 1905, China agreed to the transfer to Japan from Russia of the lease of the Liao-tung Peninsula and the control of the railway from Port Arthur to Ch'ang-chun (Kwan-ch'eng-tsun), and conceded to Japan the right to construct a railway from Antung to Mukden, and agreed to open 16 Manchurian ports and cities to foreign commerce.

The Chinese Government granted to the French in April, 1898, a 99 years' lease of the Bay of Kwang-Chou-Wan, on the coast of the peninsula, between Hong Kong and the Island of Hainan, and in November, 1899, the possession of the two islands commanding the entrance of the bay. This territory has been placed under the authority of the Governor-General of French Indo-China.

Peking, the capital of China until 1928, has a population of 811,138 according to the 1926 census of the Municipal Bureau. According to the Census of the Metropolitan Police Administration, taken in 1927, the population of Peking and its suburbs is close on 1,297,718 (779,704 males and 518,014 females). The population of the treaty ports is given as follows for 1927 by the Chinese Maritime Customs: Aigun, 39,400; Harbin, 184,000; Hunchun, 18,700; Lungchingtsun, 3,400; Antung, 75,500; Dairen, 222,400; Newchwang, 65,600; Chinwangtao, 5,000; Tientsin, 800,000; Lungkow, 7,400; Chefoo, 102,200; Tsingtao, 308,200 (including neighbouring districts); Chungking, 623,300; Wanhsien, 83,600; Changsha, 535,800; Yochow, 4,200; Ichang, 60,000; Shasi, 190,000; Hankow, 1,583,900 (including Wuchang and Hanyang); Kinkiang, 54,500; Wuhu, 117,000;

Nanking, 360,500; Chinkiang, 115,000; Shanghai, 1,500,000; Soochow, 500,000; Hangchow, 380,000; Ningpo, 284,300; Wenchow, 202,700; Santnao, 9,000; Foochow, 814,800; Amoy, 300,000; Swatow, 93,000; Canton, 746,300; Kongmoon, 70,000; Samshui, 7,000; Kiungchow, 59,000; Pakhoi, 35,000; Wuchow, 83,000; Nanning, 66,000; Lungchow, 20,000; Mengtsh, 10,000; Szemao, 10,000; Tengyueh, 18,000. In addition, there are also a number of other places open to international trade; these are called commercial ports or marts, and were opened at the instance of the Chinese Government. Nanking is the present capital.

According to the estimate of the Customs authorities, in 1927 the total number of foreigners resident in China was 302,153, made up as follows:—

American . . .	6,970	Finnish . . .	40	Russian . . .	68,097
Austrian . . .	213	French . . .	2,588	Spanish . . .	293
Belgian . . .	655	German . . .	2,719	Swedish . . .	141

Danish . . .	641	Norwegian . . .	332	Total . . .	302,153
Dutch . . .	425	Portuguese . . .	2,061

The total number of Chinese abroad was estimated in October 1928 to be about 6,246,632 persons, including 1,456,264 in British South India and South Sea Islands.

Until 1928 there were 21 Treaty Powers in China, as follows: Russia (1689), Great Britain (1842), United States (1844), France (1844), Norway and Sweden (1847), Denmark (1863), Netherlands (1863), Spain (1864), Belgium (1865), Italy (1866), Peru (1874), Brazil (1881), Portugal (1887), Japan (1895), Mexico (1899), Chile (1915), Switzerland (1918), Bolivia (1919), Persia (1920), and Germany (1921). Of these powers, Germany, Bolivia, Persia and Chile have renounced the privilege of consular jurisdiction. Normal relations were re-established with the Russian Soviet Government by an Agreement dated May 31, 1924, in which Russia also agreed to relinquish consular jurisdiction, and Mexico, in an Exchange of Notes dated September 26, 1921, expressed her intention of renouncing the same privileges in the expected definitive and formal amendment to the Treaty of 1899.

During 1928 the National Government announced that treaties that had lapsed, or were about to lapse, would be abrogated and new treaties negotiated on a basis of "equality." Treaties of a commercial character have been made with the principal nations.

Religion.

Three religions are acknowledged by the Chinese as indigenous and adopted, viz. Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism.

With the exception of the practice of ancestral worship, which is everywhere observed throughout the Republic, and was fully commended by Confucius, Confucianism has little outward ceremonial.

Buddhism and Taoism present a very gorgeous and elaborate ritual in China, Taoism—originally a pure philosophy—having abjectly copied Buddhist ceremonial on the arrival of Buddhism 1,800 years ago. Most Chinese (not Mohammedans or Christians) profess and practise all three religions. The bulk of the people, however, are Buddhist.

Mohammedans are found in every province of China, being most numerous in Kansu, Sinkiang, Shansi, Shensi, Chihli, and Yunnan. There are 30,000 in Peking, with 30 mosques. Estimates for all China vary widely, from 3,000,000 to 80,000,000; 20,000,000, however, is generally favoured.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than three centuries. In 1923 it counted 2,208,800 native Christians. Protestant Missions date from 1807. In 1920, native Christians numbered 618,601 (345,854 communicants). Attached to Protestant Missions in 1920 were 27 colleges of university standing, 256 middle schools, and 581 higher elementary schools. Under Christian instruction were 189,794 pupils. The Russian Orthodox Mission dates from 1685. In 1923, the Church counted 5,000 baptised Chinese adherents.

Most of the aboriginal hill-tribes are still nature-worshippers, and ethnically are distinct from the prevailing Mongoloid population. There is also a colony of Chinese Jews in K'ai-feng, capital of Honan.

Education.

Since September 3, 1905, an enormous impetus has been given to the new educational movement, schools for the teaching of 'western learning' springing up in every town throughout large portions of the Republic.

There are two kinds of primary schools: the higher and the lower. The former are established by district governments, and are intended as intermediaries between the lower primary schools and the middle schools. The total for the whole country in 1923 was 10,236, with 582,579 pupils. The latter—also called Citizen Schools—are established by local government boards, although in recent years a good number have been founded with private funds. The total number was 167,076, with 5,814,375 pupils in 1923.

The Government Universities are the National University at Peking; Wuchang Normal University; Chung Chow University, Kaifeng; National South-Eastern University at Nanking; North-Western University at Sianfu, in Shensi Province; North-Eastern University at Mukden; Tung Luh University in Yunnan Province; Peking Normal University; and Hangchow University. In addition to the above there are several Universities supported by private funds. The Chiao-tung (Communications) University, under the aegis of the Ministry of Communications, was opened on July 21, 1921. It is now divided into three Colleges, each with a university status; Nanyang, Shanghai; Tangshan, Chihli Province; Communications, Peking. The National University of Peking was established in 1898, and completely reorganised in 1917. In February, 1920, five women students were admitted for the first time.

The Peking Union Medical College was founded early in 1906 for the training of Chinese medical students. On July 1, 1915, the China Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation assumed the full support of the Union Medical College.

There are numerous Protestant and Catholic mission schools, colleges and universities at Shanghai and other ports, where the English and French languages and lower branches of Western science are taught. These institutions have an enrolment of about half a million students.

A modern university for Chinese with British professors has been successfully established in Hongkong, and attracts students from many parts of China.

Wherever possible, the Nanking Government is reorganising the educational system on the French model. According to their plans, all academic and administrative work is to be centralised direct in national and local educational institutions. The country is divided into university districts, with one or two provinces constituting a district. In each university district there is to be one government university, which, being the highest educational unit of the district, will take over administration. Above these district universities there will be a national university, the highest educational organisation for the whole country. The functions of a Ministry of Education will be vested in the National University.

Justice.

A provisional Criminal Code was drawn up in the closing year of the Tsing dynasty, and proclaimed on March 10, 1912, the first year of the Republic. The code was framed after the Continental system, and adopts the most modern legislation in regard to conditional release and postponement of punishments. There are special provisions for the treatment of youthful offenders and insane persons. As regards the power of inflicting penalties, the arbitrary use of power by the court is guarded against by fixing a maximum and minimum sentence for each case. A second draft of this code was completed in 1919. Texts in both English and French have also been published. Altogether, three codes have been drawn up and revised—the Code of Civil Procedure, the Commercial Code, and the Code of Criminal Procedure. The work of drawing up and revising the new Codes is undertaken by the Law Codification and Compilation Commission, which is also engaged in the drafting of commercial laws.

There are at present 276 courts and procuratorates, with the Supreme Court and the Procuratorate-General at the head of all. The Supreme Court of China may be likened to the House of Lords or the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of Great Britain. As its name implies, it is the highest tribunal in the land. It was reorganised in 1912 into two divisions—Criminal and Civil—since increased to seven, five Civil divisions and two Criminal divisions. In each division there is a presiding Judge with four other judges. The cases handled by the Supreme Court in 1926 were: Civil, 5,430; Criminal, 1,953.

Great Britain and the United States have special courts in China, the one, His Majesty's Supreme Court for China at Shanghai (established 1865), and the other, the United States Court for China (established 1906).

For 1929 the estimated revenue was given as 457,000,000 dollars and the expenditure as 507,000,000 dollars.

Principal items of revenue, 1929: Salt tax, 117,000,000 dollars; likin, 76,000,000 dollars; wine and tobacco tax, 47,000,000 dollars; stamp tax, 13,000,000 dollars. Principal items of expenditure: military services, 192,000,000 dollars; loan services, 156,000,000 dollars.

The collection of the revenue on the Chinese foreign trade and the administration of the lights on the coast of China are under the management of the Chinese Maritime Customs, an institution, founded by Sir Robert Hart, which has a large staff of Foreign and Chinese subordinates. By agreement, dated February 13, 1898, China undertook that the post of Inspector-General must be held by a British subject so long as British Foreign Trade predominates.

All Customs Revenue is paid into Foreign Banks designated for the purpose by the Bankers' Commission, who allot therefrom the payments for the service of Foreign loans secured on the Customs Revenue and the Boxer Indemnity, which is also secured on the Customs.

By the terms of the Re-organisation Loan Agreement of 1913, the Chinese Government agreed to take immediate steps for the re-organisation, with the assistance of foreigners, of the system of collection of the salt revenues. A Central Salt Administration was established in Peking under the control of the Minister of Finance, with a Chief Inspectorate under a Chinese Chief Inspector and a foreign Associate Chief Inspector, who exercise the chief authority for the superintendence of the issue of licence and the compilation of reports and returns of revenue.

The Salt Revenue for three years was:—1925, 73,634,425 dollars; 1926, 64,287,617 dollars; 1927, 57,907,000 dollars. Most of the revenue is now retained by the provinces.

The customs receipts for 4 years were (in Haikwan taels):—

Year	Foreign Trade	Home Trade	Total	Total	Exchange
	Taels	Taels	Taels	£	Pence
1924	58,374,426	11,220,705	69,595,131	12,740,984	43½

Defence.

ARMY.

The task of creating an army on modern lines was undertaken during the Sino-Japanese War in 1894, when Judge Hu Yün-mei, a provincial treasurer, was instructed to raise a combatant force. This force was taken over and renamed the New Imperial Army in 1895 by Yuan Shih-kai who came from Korea, where he was Chinese Resident, to act as Director-General of the force. There were 8,000 men—infantry, cavalry, artillery, and pioneers—in this army in the early days of its existence, and they were trained under German instructors at Hsiaoohan, which lies between Tientsin and Taku, and which was the old camping-place of the troops that Li Hung-chang brought up in the '60's after fighting the Taiping rebels. The new army was concentrated at Hsiaoohan till 1899, when Yuan Shih-kai was made Governor of Shantung. He took the troops with him to his new province and they remained there till their Director-General was made Viceroy of Chihli in 1902. By 1904, the force had grown to 6 divisions of 12,000 men each, with headquarters at Paotingfu.

Added to the regular divisions of the army list are numerous bodies of irregulars, and these are directly controlled by independent Tupans and commanders, who, however, look to the Government for the payment of their forces.

According to the 1923 Constitution, the organisation of the national army was based on a system of compulsory citizen service. Service is normally voluntary for three years with the active army and three years in the reserve. Recruits must be between the ages of 20 and 25. The army is at present composed of approximately 1,300,000 men, but the vast majority owe allegiance only to independent and semi-independent commanders.

Civil war in China has caused the disrapture of the national army. Authorities estimate that there are over 3,000,000 men under arms in China at present (1929).

NAVY.

The weakening of the central power has almost destroyed the Navy. In the incessant civil warfare which has troubled the country for some years past, warships and their complements have changed their allegiance frequently from one leader to another as their fortunes have fluctuated.

The largest vessel is the cruiser Hai Chi, of 4,300 tons displacement and 24 knots, carrying a main armament of 2 8-in. guns, 10 4.7-in. guns and 5 above-water torpedo tubes. The Ying Suei and the Chao Ho were built in England (1911), mainly for training purposes, each having a displacement of about 2,600 tons and a contract speed of 20 knots. The main armaments consist of 2 6-in. and 4 4-in. guns. There are also three 3,000-ton cruisers, Hai Yung, Hai Shew, and Hai Chen, each of 19.5 knots speed, carrying armaments of 3 6-in. and 8 4.1-in. guns, together with 3 torpedo tubes. All these 3 vessels were acquired during the years 1897 and 1898. In addition were 17 steel gunboats of over 500 tons, 20 smaller river and other gunboats, 3 destroyers, 8 torpedo-boats, and various other vessels, many of which, as the result of neglect, are believed to be without fighting value.

There are no naval bases of any importance. Existing dockyards are: Foochow, Taku, Kiangnan (Shanghai), and Whampoa (Canton).

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—China is essentially an agricultural country, and the land is all freehold held by families on the payment of an annual tax. Total arable land in China is estimated at about 192,060 square miles. The holdings are in general small; the implements used are primitive; irrigation is common. Chinese agriculture is intensive rather than extensive. Rotation of crops is practised. Horticulture is a favourite pursuit, and fruit trees are grown in great variety. Indeed the Chinese are gardeners rather than farmers. Vegetable culture has reached a high state of perfection. Wheat, barley, maize, and millet and other cereals, with peas and beans, are chiefly cultivated in the north, rice, sugar, and indigo in the south. Treaties forbid the export of grain with the exception of wheat, soya beans, kaoliang, indian corn, buckwheat, and barley from Manchuria. An embargo may be applied in case of a famine in China. China's fibre crops are also important: chief are abutilon, hemp, jute and ramie.

Cotton is grown widely even as far north as the northern part of Chihli, the chief area of production being the Yangtse valley. In 1926, the estimated yield throughout China was 5,680,000 piculs. Tea is cultivated exclusively in the west and south; silk culture is one of the most successful industries of China; about 25 per cent. of the world's supply of raw silk is from China.

Pigs are raised everywhere in China, and pig's bristles have become an important article of export. China abounds in wild game.

Manufacture.—An important feature in the development of the Chinese industries is the erection of cotton and wool mills, and of silk filatures in Shanghai, Canton and elsewhere, while native looms are found in most dwellings. The estimated production of cotton yarn in China during the year ended June 1, 1927, totalled 1,954,000 piculs, of which 676,000 piculs were produced in Japanese, 1,116,000 in Chinese, and 162,000 in British-owned mills. The estimated production of cotton piece goods for the year amounted to 11,165,000 pieces, of which 5,658,000 pieces were manufactured in Japanese, 4,409,000 in Chinese, and 1,098,000 in British mills. In December, 1927, 119 cotton mills in China had 3,541,584 spindles and 29,788 looms distributed as follows: 42 Japanese-owned mills (1,302,676 spindles and 13,985 looms); 73 Chinese-owned (2,033,588 spindles and 13,459 looms); 4 British-owned (205,320 spindles and 2,348 looms). At the large centres flour and rice mills are beginning to supersede native methods of treating wheat and rice. Flour milling is making rapid strides in China. In 1925 there were about 150 modern mills. Manchuria possesses about 50 flour mills. At Hanyang, near Hankow, are large Chinese iron-works, supplied with ore from mines at Tayeh, about 60 miles distant. There are also 400 glass factories.

Mining.—Most of the 18 provinces and the 3 provinces of Manchuria contain coal, and China may be regarded as one of the first coal countries of the world. The coal-fields cover an area of 133,518 acres and the average annual coal output is estimated at 16,000,000 tons, nearly 8,000,000 of which are from modern mines. Iron ores are abundant in the anthracite field of Shansi, where the iron industry is the oldest in the world, in Chihli, in Shantung and other provinces, and iron (found in conjunction with coal) is worked in Manchuria. Three hundred million tons of ore are estimated to be in Shansi; the reserve of other deposits amounts to about 300 million tons. The annual production of iron ore is about 1,500,000 tons. The Tayeh iron deposits, near Hankow, are among the richest in the world. They have an ore reserve of 35,000,000 tons. On the Upper Yangtse and in Shensi province petroleum is being worked; there are 91 wells in the country. Oil is also being extracted from shale beds in South Manchuria and Shansi Province. Copper ore is plentiful in Yunnan where the copper-mining industry has long existed. Tin is the most important mineral export; about 10,000 tons are produced annually. It is mined extensively in Yunnan, and through Mengtsz it reaches Hong Kong, whence it is shipped to foreign countries. In antimony China occupies a unique position; since 1908 the country has produced more than 60 per cent. of the world's total production. More than 90 per cent. comes from Hunan; the annual output is about 25,000 tons. The last-recorded annual output of gold was 71,582 ounces; of silver, 107,155 ounces; of lead, 13,527 tons; of copper, 1,342 tons. Mining for wolfram is being carried on at Swatow, and in the north-western part of Chihli Province; molybdenum ore has been found at Yungtai-hsien, in Fukien; bismuth has also been worked.

In addition to her overseas trade China has an extensive coast and river trade, in which under 'Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations,' steamers under foreign flag are allowed to participate. In 1926, 2,754 vessels were on the register, of which 784 were foreign, and 1,970 Chinese; in 1925, 2,554 vessels, of which 839 were foreign, and 1,715 Chinese.

In recent years the quantities and value of the imports of tea into the United Kingdom from China, including Hong Kong and Macao, were (according to the Board of Trade returns) :—

Shipping and Navigation.

During 1927, 154,275 vessels of 116,210,785 tons entered and cleared Chinese ports. Of these 4,844 of 5,577,115 tons, were American; 33,791 of 40,258,049 tons, British; 1,504 of 1,894,614 tons, French; 955 of 3,260,717 tons, German; 1,327 of 992,695 tons, Italian; 27,105 of 35,745,535 tons, Japanese; 1,959 of 2,932,578 tons, Norwegian; 1,195 of 589,537 tons, Portuguese. Of the total tonnage, 106,588 were steamers with a tonnage of 112.0 million tons, and 47,687 were sailing vessels (all Chinese junks), with a tonnage of 2.16 million tons.

The nationality of the vessels (direct foreign trade) was mainly as follows :—

Internal Communications.

China is traversed in all directions by numerous roads, and, though few are paved or metalled, and most are badly kept, a vast internal trade is carried on partly over them, but chiefly by means of numerous canals and navigable rivers.

Chinese railway history began in 1876 when the Woosung line, built by foreign enterprise, was opened. At the end of 1923, there were over 7,513 miles of railway in China (excluding 1,857 miles in Manchuria), of which about 1,300 miles have been constructed by British enterprise and British capital. Practically all construction work has been suspended owing to lack of funds. The total revenue of the Chinese Government railways for the year 1923 was 119,405,638 dollars; net commercial revenue, 109,928,669 dollars.

The principal railways in China are:—(1) South Manchuria Railway, from Changchun to Dairen, 693 miles [see also under Manchuria]; (2) Peking-Mukden line, from Peking to Mukden, 837 miles; (3) Peking-Suiyuan Railway, from Peking to Kalgan, Tatung Fu, Fengchen, Suiyuan, and Paotowchen, 597 miles; (4) Peking-Hankow Railway, Peking to Hankow, 1,069 miles; (5) Lung Hai Railway, from Haichou to Shenchow in Honan province, 441 miles; (6) Shanghai-Nanking Railway, from Shanghai to Nanking, 253 miles; (7) Tientsin-Pukow Railway, from Tientsin to Pukow, on the Yangtze river, opposite Nanking, 899 miles; (8) Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo Railway, from Shanghai to Hangchow, 219 miles; (9) Hupeh-Hunan Railway, from Wuchang to Yochow, 238 miles; (10) Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway, from Tsingtao to Tsinan, both in Shantung province, 373 miles; (11) Yunnan Railway, from the Tonkin border to Yunnanfu, 290 miles; and (12) the Chinese Eastern Railway running eastward from Manchuli through Northern Manchuria to Suifeiho (Russian name, Pogranichnaya), the last station in Chinese territory, where it joins the Ussuri Railway, and then runs due east to Vladivostok, and southerly from Harbin to Changchun, joining the South Manchuria Railway. This line was built by the Russians, and under agreements dated October 2, 1920, and May 31, 1924, is operated by Russians and Chinese. It runs for 1,100 miles in Chinese territory. The gauge is the Russian standard of 5 feet, whilst that of all the other railways is 4 feet 8½ inches, with the exception of the Yunnan Railway, which has a gauge of 1 metre.

The 1923 Report of the Government railways showed that 7,426 kilometres of line were operated by the Government, also that the provincial and private railways were 1,229 kilometres in length, giving the total length subject to the control of the Ministry of Communications at 8,655 kilometres. There are 3,355 kilometres of concessioned railways, making a grand total of 12,020 kilometres. To this total may be added Government railway under construction, amounting to 387 kilometres, and making a grand total of 12,408 kilometres, or 7,755 miles.

Except in Manchuria, where some lines of much commercial and some political importance were fully or partially constructed, there has been no progress. The railways are still largely under the control of the military. The only line in China Proper that is paying, has sufficient rolling stock and is approximately running to schedule, is the Shantung Railway. It was under the control of the Japanese military when it attained this distinction.

China has a fairly well developed telegraph service. Telegraphs connect all the principal cities in the country, and there are lines to all the neighbouring countries. The telegraph lines have a length of 52,050 miles. Number of telegrams transmitted by the Post-office in 1925, 30,251. The administration is now completely under Government control. Wireless Telegraph Stations have been installed at many centres.

Telephones are in use in the main cities of China, and long distance telephone communication has been introduced along the railways and in the trade areas. Wireless telephone services have also been established.

The postal work of China, formerly carried on by the Government Courier service and the native posting agencies, was gradually taken in hand by the Chinese Imperial Post Office, begun in 1897 under the management of the Maritime Customs. By Edict of November 6, 1906, the control of the Postal Service was transferred to the Ministry of Communications, and the transfer was actually effected in July, 1911. The work of the Post Office extends over the 18 Provinces of China proper, the New Dominion and Manchuria, which have been divided into postal districts, or sub-districts (42,518 at the end of 1924). The Postal Service with Tibet has been suspended. In 1926, there were 12,224 post offices open, and the number of letters posted was 364,811,817; of postcards 40,891,072; of newspapers, 47,633,719; of printed matter, 44,802,948; of commercial papers, 2,314,387; of samples of merchandise, 863,402; of trade circulars, 3,658,414; grand total of 585,788,468. The number of parcels posted in 1926 was 6,011,171. The revenue of the post office in 1926 was 28,311,251 dollars, and the expenditure 28,475,026 dollars. On December 31, 1925, the postal staff numbered 120 foreigners and 38,513 Chinese. China in 1914 joined the postal union.

Banking and Credit.

Banking on modern lines dates from the close of the Tai-ping rebellion in the 'sixties, when the rapid expansion of trade in Shanghai created a demand for credit facilities. In 1902, the Board of Finance established the Ta Ching Bank, with a capital of 4,000,000 Kuping Taels, which was soon raised to 10,000,000 Kuping Taels. Prompted by the success of the Ta Ching Bank, the Board of Posts, Railways, and Telegraphs launched in 1905 a scheme to organise a bank for the control of the finances of the Railways, Telegraphs, Posts and Navigations, and the management of an issue of national loan bonds for the redemption of the Peking-Hankow Railways, and this scheme finally culminated in the establishment of the Bank of Communications in 1906. The year 1905 marked also the beginning of commercial banks in China. The Chekiang Railway Company, which was then a private company, founded the National Commercial Bank in Hangchow, with a capital of 1,000,000 dollars, half of which was subscribed by the Railway itself, and the other half by its stockholders. In the same year was formed the Commercial Bank of China, in the following year, the Ningpo Commercial Bank, and in 1910, the Commercial Guarantee Bank of Chihli. In 1911, the Manchu régime collapsed, and with it the Ta Ching Bank. However, it was speedily reorganised as the Bank of China. From 1914 onwards the establishment of new banks proceeded at a rapid pace, and there are now about 150 banks with over 400 branch offices. The total capitalisation of Chinese banks approximates 400,000,000 dollars, but not more than 150,000,000 dollars have been paid up. Total reserve funds amount to about 20,000,000 dollars.

Of these banks, the Bank of China is the largest, having about 100 branches and sub-branches, and an authorised capital of 60,000,000 dollars, and a paid-up capital of 19,760,200 dollars. Next in order comes the Bank of Communications, whose capital has reached 20,000,000 dollars, 7,713,500 dollars of which are paid-up. It has about 40 branches. The Chinese Government's share in the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications has been wiped out. The Bank of China declared a net profit in 1925 of 1,347,076 dollars; the Bank of Communications, 597,548 dollars.

A new State bank, called the Central Bank of China, was opened in Shanghai on November 1, 1928. It is capitalised at 20,000,000 dollars and will have the right to issue convertible notes, to mint and issue coins, and direct the flotation of foreign and domestic loans. The Minister of Finance is appointed Director-General of the bank. The capital is supplied by the Treasury, and though shares may be issued to the public they must never exceed 49 per cent. of the total capital. Notes issued, January 31, 1929, 14,618,955 dollars.

Other prominent banks are: National Industrial Bank of China, capital 20,000,000 dollars (1919); the Frontier Bank, capital 20,000,000 dollars (1920); China and South Sea Bank, capital 20,000,000 dollars (1924); Yieh Yih Commercial Bank, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1915); Bank of East Asia, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1919); Bank of Agriculture and Commerce, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1920); Commercial Guarantee Bank of Chihli, capital 8,000,000 dollars (1910); Commercial Bank of China, capital 7,500,000 dollars (1896); Kinchong Commercial Bank, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1917); Bank of Canton, capital 1,200,000 (1912).

Sino-foreign banking institutions are numerous, having grown rapidly during 1921. In 1918, the Exchange Bank of China was established with Sino-Japanese capital. It has a subscribed capital of 10,000,000 yen. The Italian Bank of China, the Sino-French Bank, the Sino-Scandinavian Bank, and numerous Sino-Japanese institutions were inaugurated in 1921. The Chinese American Bank of Commerce was established by American and Chinese capitalists, with equal interests, under a special charter issued on April 12, 1920, by the Chinese Government.

On July 1, 1924, the Manchurian Official Bank, Fengtien Industrial Bank, and the Bank of the Three Eastern Provinces were amalgamated under the name of the Government Bank of the Three Eastern Provinces, with a capital of 20,000,000 dollars.

Government ordinances governing savings banks in China were first promulgated in 1908. About May in that year a savings department was organised by the Ta Ching Bank, now Bank of China. This was followed later by the establishment of special savings banks in various provinces and other savings departments attached to commercial banks in recent years. In 1925, there were 20 such institutions with total savings deposits amounting to 33,017,942 dollars.

Post Office savings banks at 11 district head offices were opened on July 1, 1919. By the end of 1923, there were 345 savings banks, with 51,695 depositors, and total deposits amounting to 8,096,118 dollars in big dollar account, and 9,699 depositors with 1,774,264 dollars in small coin currency.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The currency of China is on a silver basis, and consists of taels, dollars, copper cash, and bank notes. The tael is really a weight of silver (about an ounce) of a certain degree of fineness. Theoretically it is divided into 10 mace; 1 mace = 10 candareens. The denominations of the dollar are: 1 dollar = 100 coppers; 1 copper = 10 cash. The tael varies in different parts of the country, the principal taels being (1) the haikwan or customs tael, weighing 583.3 grains (in 1927 it was equal in value to 2s. 9½d.), (2) the K'up'ing tael, weighing 575.8 grains, (3) the Tsooping tael, weighing 565.65 grains. These are all called treasury taels. The principal local taels are: (1) Peking or Kungfah tael; (2) Tientsin or Hong Ping Hua Pao tael; (3) Canton tael; (4) Newchwang tael (nominal); (5) Shanghai tael. Different taels, about 170 altogether, are in use in every province in the country.

There is unparalleled currency confusion. Although a dollar should be equal to 100 coppers, in fact it is worth almost 350 coppers in some parts of the country, varying from day to day. In the treaty of September 5, 1902, China agreed with Great Britain to take the necessary steps to provide a uniform national coinage which should be legal tender for all purposes throughout the Empire, and an Imperial Decree was issued in October, 1908, commanding the introduction of a uniform tael currency, of which the unit must be a silver tael coin of .98 touch weighing 1 K'up'ing or Treasury-scale tael or ounce. This decree was cancelled by a further decree of May 25, 1910, establishing the silver dollar (yuan) of .90 touch and weighing .72

Treasury-weight tael as the unit of currency. The touch and weight of the silver subsidiary coins (50c., 25c., 20c., and 10c.) were also definitely specified, while provision was made for further subsidiary coins (5c. nickel, 2c., 1c.,  $\frac{1}{2}$ c., and  $\frac{1}{10}$ c. copper) of touch and weight to be laid down later. The minting of these silver coins has begun, but as they are at a discount in every province other than the one in which they are minted, confusion has been rendered more confounded. There are ten different varieties of dollars in circulation. Although the law of May, 1910, was intended to bring the provincial mints under the control of the Central Government, the Governors have effected a serious depreciation of silver and copper money by their indiscriminate minting of subsidiary coins.

Several efforts have been made to standardise the dollar. The Peking Bankers' Association, which might be regarded as the unofficial fiduciary adviser to the Government, loaned the Government 2,500,000 dollars on March 3, 1921, with the object of erecting and equipping an independent mint to coin a standard dollar. The establishment of the mint is in the hands of the Chinese bankers until such time as the Government redeems the notes it issued as security for the loan. The Shanghai mint was intended to foreshadow the entire abolition of the tael as a unit of currency and the substitution of a uniform Chinese silver dollar which will be currency throughout China. It was also designed to force the provincial mints to raise the standard of coinage. At the annual conference of the National Bankers' Association, held in Peking on April 15, 1924, the member banks offered to underwrite a further loan of 3,000,000 dollars for the purpose of completing the Mint, on condition that they be given full powers of management. This the Ministry of Finance promised to do, but owing to political conditions, an attempt to raise the second loan failed, and, the available funds having been exhausted in preliminary work, the Government declared a suspension of the scheme on August 18, 1924.

Standardised banking terms were adopted for the first time throughout the country on July 1, 1924.

By treaty between Great Britain and China, the Ch'ih of 14 $\frac{1}{4}$  English inches has been adopted as the standard. The standards of weight and length vary all over the Republic, the Ch'ih, for example, ranging from 9 to 16 English inches, and the Chung (= 10 Ch'ih) in proportion; according to treaty, also, the Tael, Catty, and Picul have been fixed at  $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  lb.,  $133\frac{1}{2}$  lb. avoirdupois respectively. 1 Mow =  $\frac{1}{3}$  of an acre. Except for customs purposes, however, there is just as much confusion in weights and measures throughout the country as there is in currency.

As from January 1, 1929, the standard measure is the metre, called the standard foot, one-third of which equals one market foot.

Chinese Outer Territories.

Manchuria.

Manchuria, lying between the province of Chihli and the Amur river, and extending from the Hingan mountains eastwards to Korea and the Ussuri river, has an area of about 363,610 square miles and a population, according to the latest investigation, of 24,520,661 at July 31, 1927. Immigration from the densely crowded parts of Central China is increasing the population by almost a million yearly. Manchuria consists of 3 provinces, Sheng-King or Feng-tien (area, 56,000 sq. miles; population, 15,000,000), capital Mukden; Kirin (105,000 sq. miles; population, 7,500,000), capital Kirin; and Heilung-chiang or the Amur province (203,000 sq. miles: population, 2,500,000) with Tsitsihar (Heilung Hsien) (population 30,000) for its capital. The chief towns are Mukden, the capital, with about 250,000 inhabitants; Newchwang (65,600) standing about 80 miles up the Liao river, at the mouth of which is the port of Ying-k'ou, often called Newchwang. Besides Newchwang, Mukden, An-tung (72,500), Tatung-kou, Tiehling, Tung-chiangtzu, and Fakumen are open to commerce.

Other important towns are Hsin-min-fu, Liao-yang, Feng-hwang-cheng, and Taonanfu, a town rapidly risen to importance, on the border of Eastern Mongolia. In Kirin province is the town of Chang-chun (Kwangchengtze), with 80,000 inhabitants.

There is no longer a Manchu population in Manchuria. A few scattered communities alone remain. Owing to the enormous development of the soya-bean industry and the improved railway facilities, Manchuria has grown more rapidly in wealth than any other part of China. The bean crop in 1927 was estimated at 5,550,000 short tons. Manchuria is primarily an agricultural country, its soil is one of the richest in the world. Beans, millet, wheat and rice are the principal crops. The area under cultivation in Manchuria totals 81,718,945 acres, of which beans occupy 19,193,756 acres, and wheat 7,241,087 acres. Formerly the whole of the wheat yield was exported, but of late years the flour industry has been growing with the increase in the wheat production. There are now some 40 mills in Manchuria, which turn out about 15,000,000 sacks annually. Tobacco production in 1926 totalled 53,126,000 catties. Extensive forests also abound; their estimated extent is 28,756,000 acres. The soil of certain districts—especially in the vicinity of Mukden and Harbin—is suitable for beet and flax growing, and the industry is slowly developing. The raw silk crop in Manchuria in 1925 amounted to 800,000 piculs, yielding 40,000 piculs tussah. Manchuria is rich in minerals, such as coal, iron, gold, silver, lead and asbestos.

The Russian lease of Port Arthur and Talien-wan (called Dalny by the Russians and Dairen by the Japanese), and the southern extremity of the Liao-tung peninsula and the South Manchuria Railway were transferred to Japan by the Portsmouth Peace Conference, September 5, 1905. On December 22, 1905, China gave official recognition to this transfer and granted Japan the right to extend the railway from Mukden to Antung at the mouth of the Yalu river, where it connects with the Korean railway. In 1912 a branch line (78 miles) from Changchun, the northern terminus of the Japanese South Manchuria Railway to Kirin, constructed by joint Japanese and Chinese enterprise, and operated under special convention by the South Manchuria Railway, was opened to traffic. The total length of the South Manchuria Railway is 693 miles (Dairen to Changchun, main line 438 miles; branch to Port Arthur, 29 miles; branch to Newchwang, 14 miles; Fushun coal mines, 31 miles; branch to Yentai, 10 miles; and Mukden to Antung, 171 miles). On August 1, 1917, the whole of the railway system of Korea (some 1000 miles in length) passed under the management of the South Manchuria Railway, giving the latter a through line under its own management from Fusan, the Korean port nearest Japan, to Changchun, where connection with the railway system to Harbin and thence to Leningrad is effected. The total capital of the company is 440,000,000 yen, and the operating revenue in 1927-28, 113,244,000 yen; expenditure, 39,113,000 yen; net profit, 74,131,000 yen. Besides the South Manchuria Railway, Manchuria is traversed by the Chinese Eastern Railway and the Chinese Government Railways. The operating revenue of the Chinese Eastern Railway in 1927 was 63,000,000 gold roubles; net profit, 10,000,000 gold roubles. There is also a line from Mukden to Harlungcheng (145 miles). There are 265 post offices and 550 postal agencies. In 1927 imports at the three ports, Dairen, Newchwang and Antung were 150,958,320 Hk. taels; and exports, 215,606,908 Hk. taels. In 1927, 7,165 vessels of 11,665,017 tons entered and cleared at the port of Dairen, and 1,336 vessels of 1,268,238 tons at the port of Newchwang.

Tibet.

Tibet, extending from the Pamir region eastwards between the Himalaya and Kwen-lun mountains to the frontiers of China, has an area of 463,200 square miles with a population estimated at between 1,500,000 and 6,000,000. Probably 2,000,000 is near the mark. The only census ever taken was by the Chinese in 1737 and showed a population of 316,800 lamas (monks) and 635,950 laity. Lhasa, the capital, has from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants. The country being bleak and mountainous and strangers having been jealously excluded, wide regions are still unexplored.

Chinese authority was in the past represented by two Ambans who had charge, respectively, of foreign and military affairs. There were three Chinese commandants of troops at Lhasa, Shigatse, and Dingri where the permanent military force of about 4,600, provided by China, were mostly quartered. There were a few other Chinese officials, but the civil and religious administration of the country was left almost entirely to Tibetans. The head of the government is the Dalai Lama, who resides at the Po-ta-la (or palace) near Lhasa. He acts through a minister or regent appointed from among the chief Tibetan Lamas and assisted by five ministers. Early in 1908 the territory of Western Szechuen and the adjoining territory of Eastern Tibet were united into a new 'special administrative area,' Sikañg, or Szechwan Marches, with Batang, re-named Buanfu, as capital.

The prevailing religion is Lamaism, a corrupt form of Buddhism, but along with it there exists the Bon, or Shamanistic, faith. In some places agriculture is carried on, barley and other cereals as well as pulse and vegetables being grown. In some favoured regions fruits, including peaches and even grapes, are produced. In other places the pursuits are pastoral, the domestic animals being sheep and yak (often crossed with Indian cattle), while in some regions there are buffaloes, pigs, and camels. Wool-spinning, weaving, and knitting are common, and there are many hands skilful in making images and other decorations for religious edifices. The chief minerals worked are gold, borax, and salt. There is a large trade with China and considerable traffic across the Indian frontier. A telegraph line, 144 miles long, connects Lhasa with Gyantse.

The trade between India and Tibet has to be carried through lofty passes between 14,000 and 18,000 feet high, most of which are practically impassable during seasons of heavy rain and snow. Sheep and also crosses between yaks and ordinary cattle are used as beasts of burden. The most important route into Tibet from India is from Siliguri, near Darjeeling in northern Bengal, and across the small Frontier State of Sikkim to Gyantse and Yatung in Tibet, the two leading trade marts authorised by the existing Convention. The other chief means of access to Tibet are from Almora in the northern part of the United Provinces, and from Simla over the Simla-Tibet road to Gartok in western Tibet, which is at about 14,200 feet elevation above the sea. From Almora to Gartok the direction is almost due north, and from Simla to Gartok is almost due east.

For the removal of hindrances to the Indian trade a treaty was made with China in 1890, supplemented by a second treaty in 1893, but the hindrances still remained. Consequently, in 1904, the Indian Government sent a mission with an escort to arrange matters directly with the Tibetan Government. The mission met with a good deal of armed opposition, but at length, on September 7, a convention was executed at Lhasa. The convention provides for the re-erection of boundary stones (alluding to former pastoral disputes) on the Sikkim frontier; for marts at Yatung, Gyantze, and Gartok for Tibetan and British merchants; for the demolition of forts on the trade routes ; for a Tibetan commissioner to confer with British officials for the alteration of the objectionable features of the treaty of 1893 ; for the settlement of an equitable customs tariff ; for the repair of the passes and the appointment of Tibetan and British officials at the trade marts. China paid an indemnity of 2,500,000 rupees (166,666*l.*), and the evacuation of the Chumbi valley by the British began in February, 1908. Further, no Tibetan territory may be sold, leased or mortgaged to any foreign Power, nor may Tibetan affairs, or Tibetan public works, be subject to foreign management or interference without the consent of the British. The adhesion of China to this convention was secured by an agreement signed at Peking on April 27, 1906. Under the Convention of August 31, 1907, Great Britain and Russia agree not to enter into negotiation with Tibet except through the Chinese Government, nor to send representatives to Lhasa. But this engagement does not affect the provisions of the British-Tibetan convention of September 7, 1904, ratified by China in 1906. Negotiations were begun at Simla in Sept. 1907, for the conclusion of Trade Regulations between India and Tibet, and were brought to a satisfactory conclusion in April, 1908.

Sin-Kiang, or the New Dominion, consists of Chinese Turkestan, Kulja, and Kashgaria, and comprises all Chinese dependencies lying between Mongolia on the north and Tibet on the south. It is now regarded as a separate province, its Governor residing at Urumchi, or Tihwafu, the capital. Its area is estimated at about 550,340 square miles and population at about 1,200,000. The inhabitants are of various races, known as Turki (Kashgari, Kalmuk, Khirghiz, Taranchi, etc.), mostly Mohammedan and Chinese, who have of recent years greatly increased in numbers. The chief towns are Ili, Kashgar, Yarkand, Khotan, and Aksu. The country is administered under Chinese officials, residing at Urumchi, the sub-ordinates being usually natives of the country. In regions about the Kashgar and Yarkand rivers the soil is fertile, irrigation is practised, and cereals, fruits and vegetables are grown. Other productions of the country are wool, cotton, and silk. Jade is worked, and in some districts gold is found. The whole territory is yearly increasing in population and prosperity. A trade agreement with Soviet Russia was signed in 1924.

Mongolia.

The vast and indefinite tract of country called Mongolia stretches from the Khinghan mountains on the east to the Tarbagatai mountains on the west, being intersected towards its western end by the Altai mountains and the Irtysh river. On the north it is bounded by Siberia and on the south by the outer Kan-su and other regions which are united into Sin-Kiang. The area of Mongolia is about 1,875,000 square miles, and its population about 750,000. A wide tract in the heart of this region is occupied by the Desert of Gobi which extends south-westwards into Chinese Turkestan. The inhabitants are nomadic Mongols and Kalmucks who range the desert with camels, horses, and sheep. Even in fertile districts they are little given to agriculture. But of recent years there has been a great extension of Chinese immigration, and a large area of what was known as Mongolia, extending from China proper and Manchuria to the Gobi Desert, is now indistinguishable from Chinese territory, and has in fact been absorbed within Chinese administration in Manchuria. Chinese settlers are gradually invading the Gobi Desert. Irrigation alone is needed. Inner Mongolia and portions of the adjacent provinces in China proper have been divided into three special districts or administrative areas, Jehol, Chahar, and Suiyuan, each of which is governed by a Tartar-General (Tu'tun) appointed by the Chinese Government. The chief town or centre of population is Urga, 170 miles due south of Kiakhta, a frontier emporium for the caravan trade carried on with China across the Gobi Desert. Kiakhta is a Siberian frontier town, and stands about 100 miles from the south end of Lake Baikal. Chief exports are wool, skins and hides, furs, horns, &c. During the summer months motor-car services crosses the Gobi desert, the journey between Kalgan and Urga occupying three days. It was inaugurated in 1917.

Many gold mines are found in Outer Mongolia, but few are worked. There are also deposits of copper, silver, iron, and tin.

For a history of political events in Mongolia from 1912 to 1923, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1923, p. 794.

Since March, 1915, Mongolia has had a legal currency of its own, but recent political troubles have delayed the passing of the system of barter in business transactions.

Buddhist Lamaism is the prevalent form of religion, the Lamas having their residence at Urga and other centres.

COLOMBIA.

(LA REPÚBLICA DE COLOMBIA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Colombia, which in colonial days was called 'Vice-royalty of New Granada,' gained its independence of Spain in 1819, and was officially constituted December 27, 1819. Soon after it formed with Venezuela and Ecuador the State of 'Greater Colombia,' which continued for about ten years. It then split up into Venezuela, Ecuador, and the Republic of New Granada, on February 29, 1832. The Constitution of April 1, 1858, changed New Granada into a confederation of eight States, under the name of Confederation Granadina. On September 20, 1861, the convention of Bogotá brought out the confederation under the new name of United States of New Granada, with nine States. On May 8, 1863, an improved Constitution was formed, and the States took the name of the United States of Colombia. The revolution of 1885 brought about another change, and the National Council of Bogotá, composed of two delegates from each State, promulgated the Constitution of August 4, 1886. The sovereignty of the States was abolished, and they became simple departments, with governors appointed by the President of the Republic, though they have retained some of their old rights, such as the management of their own finances. A decree of May, 1923, abolished their right to borrow abroad without the sanction of the Government. At present there are 14 departments, 3 "Intendencias," and 6 commissaries.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of two Houses, the Senate, of 48 members, elected for 4 years, and the House of Representatives, of 113 members, chosen for 2 years. The Senators are elected indirectly by electors and the Representatives by the people in electoral circumscriptions (one for every 50,000 of population).

The President is elected by direct vote of the people for a term of 4 years, and is not eligible for re-election until 4 years afterwards; his salary is 30,000 gold pesos per annum. Congress elects, for a term of one year, two substitutes, one of whom, failing the President during a presidential term, fills the vacancy.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Miguel Abadía Méndez. Elected February 14, 1926. Holds office from August 7, 1926, to August 7, 1930.

The ministries are those of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Public Instruction, Industries, Public Works, and Post and Telegraphs.

A boundary dispute with Peru, which has lasted for over 100 years, was settled in 1928.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at about 440,846 square miles. It has a coastline of about 1,109 miles, of which 641 miles are on the Caribbean Sea and 468 miles on the Pacific Ocean. The area and population of the 14 departments, 3 intendencies and 6 commissaries were, according to the census of 1918 (October 14), as follows (the capitals in brackets).

In 1926 there were 37,624 marriages, 196,911 births, and 102,840 deaths. Estimated population in 1926, 7,121,000. Arrivals in the country, of all ages, in 1926, 13,827; departures, 10,779; net gain in population, 3,048.

On November 3, 1903, Panama asserted its independence and was formed into a separate Republic. On April 6, 1914, Colombia signed a treaty with the United States, at Bogotá, agreeing to recognise the independence of Panama and receiving as indemnity for the Panama Canal zone 25 million dollars (5 millions sterling) and certain rights in the zone. This Treaty was ratified by the United States Senate on April 20, 1921, and by the Colombian Congress on December 24, 1921. (See Introduction of THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1915.) Most of the boundary line with Brazil is still undefined.

The capital, Bogotá (census population on July 15, 1918, 143,994; estimated population on October 14, 1923, 166,148), lies 8,600 feet above the sea. The chief commercial towns are Barranquilla (81,330), connected with the coast at Puerto Colombia by 17 miles of railway; Manizales (52,000); Cartagena (68,119); Medellín (86,641), a mining centre; Cali (68,777); Bucaramanga (30,266); Cúcuta (40,151), the last two being coffee centres. The city of Manizales, destroyed by fire in 1925, has been rebuilt.

Religion and Education.

The religion of the nation is Roman Catholicism. There are 4 Catholic archbishops, viz. of Bogotá, Cartagena, Medellín, and Popayán, the first having 4 suffragans and the other three 2 each. One of the suffragan sees is Panamá, belonging to ecclesiastical province of Cartagena, and now also to the Republic of Panamá. Other forms of religion are permitted, so long as their exercise is 'not contrary to Christian morals nor to the law.'

There is a Ministry of Public Instruction which has the supreme direction of education throughout the Republic. In 1926 there were 6,782 primary schools with 427,311 pupils; 312 secondary schools with 6,675 pupils; 25 industrial schools with 1,392 children; and 6 art schools with 349 pupils. There were in 1926, 17 normal schools with 987 pupils. The oldest University is that of Bogotá (founded 1572). This and the School of Mines at Medellín are national institutions. The other Universities are departmental. They are the Universities of Antioquia at Medellín (founded 1822), with 1,007 students in 1926, of Cartagena, of Cauca at Popayán (founded in 1827), and of Pasto. Primary education is gratuitous but not compulsory.

The Republic possesses a national library, museum, and observatory at Bogotá.

Finance.

Ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 years in gold pesos:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1924	33,470,338	38,923,938	1927	63,267,488	55,667,764

The main items of estimated ordinary expenditure in 1928 were: Government, 9,197,017 pesos; Finance, 7,004,340 pesos; War, 6,927,293 pesos; Public Instruction and Health, 5,354,579 pesos; Public Works, 7,947,826 pesos; Posts and Telegraphs, 5,757,639 pesos. The main items of estimated revenue in 1928 were:—National properties, 8,385,418 pesos; national services, 2,585,261 pesos; taxes, 32,168,548 pesos; new revenues, 5,050,000 pesos. Extraordinary expenditures, 1928, will be 31,785,996 gold pesos.

The external debt on June 30, 1928, stood at 168,844,025 gold pesos, divided as follows: Central Government, 80,629,025 pesos; Departments, 63,380,000 pesos; Municipalities, 24,835,000 pesos. A portion has been amortized, and on September 1, 1928, the effective balance stood at 146,014,980 pesos. This does not include about 45,000,000 pesos in loans contracted for but not yet received, nor about 35,000,000 pesos borrowed abroad by various banks and reloaned largely to local authorities.

The internal debt on December 31, 1927, was 8,513,811 pesos.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory, from 1 to 1½ years. The permanent army consists of 3 divisions of 2 brigades of 2 regiments of infantry; total 12 infantry regiments; 1 cavalry regiment of 4 squadrons; 1 artillery regiment; 1 engineer battalion; 1 transport battalion of 3 companies. The peace effective in 1925 was 371 officers and 6,015 other ranks. In war time every fit Colombian is compelled to serve, and the war effective is about 50,000. The infantry are armed with rifles of the improved Remington pattern, with the French Gras rifle, and with the 88 pattern Mauser.

Colombia has 1 seagoing gunboat, 3 coastguard patrol vessels built in 1925, 2 river gunboats, and several motor launches for customs services.

Production and Industry.

Only a small section of the country is under cultivation. Much of the soil is fertile, and is coming into use as roads improve. Coffee is the staple product, and accounts for about 80 per cent. of the total value of exports; amount exported 1926, 147,255 metric tons; 1927, 151,729 metric tons. Tobacco is also grown; cotton is produced in Magdalena, Bolivar, Antioquia and Santander, and is beginning to be cultivated in Boyaca, Tolima, and Cundinamarca. Cotton area is approximately 150,000 acres; production in 1927 was 14,000,000 lbs. Cocoa, sugar, vegetable ivory, tagna (or vegetable ivory nut), and dyewoods are produced, besides wheat, maize, plantains, &c. Banana cultivation is extending; exports in 1927 totalled 196,624 tons. The rubber tree grows wild, and its cultivation has begun. Tolu balsam is cultivated, and copaiba trees are tapped but are not cultivated. Dye and cedar woods are abundant on the Magdalena River, but little or no wood of any sort is exported. Total value of agricultural products in 1927-28 was 628,000,000 gold pesos, of which maize represented 160 millions, coffee 90 millions, and cattle 56 millions.

Colombia is rich in minerals, and gold is found in all the departments; exports in 1926, 1,567,639 pesos. The mines are in Antioquia, Cauca, Caldas, Tolima, and Narino. Other minerals, more or less worked, are copper, lead, mercury, cinnabar, manganese, emeralds, and platinum (first discovered in Colombia in 1735), which is found in abundance in the alluvial deposits of the Choco River and in the basins of the San Juan and Condoto Rivers; exports of platinum in 1926, 882,297*l*. The working of the emerald mines is a Government monopoly. The chief mines are those of Muza and Chivor. No statistics of their output are published. Exports in 1925 amounted to 257,500 gold pesos. Nearly all the emeralds mined to-day come from Colombia. The country also has coal, iron, limestone, sand, manganese, and fireclay deposits, so that in some parts it is highly favourable for the development of metallurgical industries. The extraction of salt from the mines and the evaporation at the numerous natural salt pans along the coast are a Government monopoly. Production in 1927 was valued at 1,500,117 gold pesos. There are extensive deposits of coal, especially near Amaga. Petroleum has recently been found; production has risen from 447,744 barrels in 1924 to 15,760,797 barrels in 1927. The output is piped from the oilfields to the coast. Exports in 1927, 13,679,317 barrels. On the coasts there are valuable pearl fisheries which the Government has under exploitation at present. The richest beds are on the north coast of the Goajira Peninsula, from Cabo de la Vela to Castilletes.

Shipping and Communications.

Owing to the mountainous character of the country, the construction of arterial roads and railways is both costly and difficult. The roads are generally simple mule tracks, though some progress has been made by the Government in the construction of main roads, especially in the case of the road from Bogotá to Villavicencio over the Eastern Cordillera. Total length of motor roads in use, about 2,340 miles.

In Colombia there are 15 lines of railway (11 national, and 4 British companies), with a total length (1928) of 1,740 miles. Of the total, 614 miles have a gauge of 3 ft.; the rest a metre gauge. Most of them are small disconnected lines serving principally as feeders to the Magdalena river, which is the main traffic route between the Caribbean and the interior. A new railway to serve the western section of the Republic, the Bolombolo-Canañistula Railway, 521 miles in length, is under construction.

An airplane service now connects Barranquilla on the Atlantic coast with Buenaventura on the Pacific; other routes are also covered.

The work of clearing and canalising the lower and upper Magdalena is being carried on. That river is navigable for 900 miles; steamers ascend to La Dorada, 592 miles from Barranquilla. Tributaries supply 215 miles more of navigable water, and on these rivers 92 steamers, with a total tonnage of 22,000, regularly plied in 1927.

In 1926, the post-office handled 17,869,101 letters and post-cards and 11,808,015 packets of printed matter, samples, and business papers. Parcels (1926), 245,000. Number of offices, 1,075. A British river-transport company has contracted with the Government to convey mails and passengers to and from the interior every three days. Other companies, British, German, and native, ply on the rivers.

There were 20,460 miles of Government telegraph lines in August, 1927; number of offices, 877; 10,996,012 telegrams were despatched in 1926. Telephone system in 1926 had 18,042 subscribers.

During 1926, 2,362 steamers and sailing vessels of 2,849,366 gross tons entered the ports of Colombia, and 2,074 vessels of 1,895,140 gross tons cleared.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Under the Law of June 12, 1907, the monetary unit is a gold peso equal to one-fifth of a pound sterling and of proportionate weight, the fineness being the same. Gold coins are 2½, 5, and 10 pesos. Silver coins are (900 fine) the half-peso, and 20 and 10 centavos. Nickel coins for 1, 2, and 5 centavos are legal tender. There are also notes representing gold dollars of 1, 2, 5, and 10 dollars respectively. On June 30, 1928, the total currency of Colombia was given as follows:—gold coinage, 16,625,928 pesos; bullion, 9,589,543 pesos in the Banca de la República; paper money (gold certificates and old issues), 8,730,708 pesos; silver and nickel coinage, 11,778,533 pesos; notes of the Banco de la República, 50,977,311 pesos; Treasury bonds, 123,718 pesos; foreign specie, 63,518 pesos. Besides this sum in legal tender, there were also in circulation on June 30, 1928:—Treasury certificates, 82,829 pesos; bank certificates, 52,170 pesos; bank bonds, 12,034 pesos; making a total of 97,133 pesos. Gold reserves on this date totalled 42,200,974 pesos, of which half was in the Banca de la República and half in New York and London banks.

On July 23, 1923, the Banco de la República was inaugurated as a central bank. The capital (1928) is 12,236,106 gold pesos, fully paid, and it has (June 30, 1928) gold reserves 62,418,000 pesos. It has the exclusive privilege until 1943 of issuing banknotes in Colombia. Its deposits and note issues must be covered by a gold reserve of 60 per cent. of their value; total gold coverage (June 30, 1928) was 122¼ per cent.

In 1925 the Agricultural Mortgage Bank of Bogotá was formed by the consolidation of the mortgage departments of 5 principal banks; authorized capital is 5 million pesos subscribed by Government, Departments, and Municipalities.

There are 21 commercial banks with total paid-up capital and reserves

(April 30, 1928) of 42,735,509 pesos, including 4 foreign commercial banks and 2 native mortgage banks. This does not include the Banca de la República. On April 30, 1928, the bank deposits amounted to 68,412,962 pesos gold.

The metric system was introduced into the Republic in 1857. In custom-house business the kilogramme, equal to 2·204 avoirdupois pounds, is the standard. In ordinary commerce the arroba, of 27·5 pounds, or 12½ kilos; the quintal, of 4 arrobas, or 50 kilos; and the carga, of 2½ quintals, or 125 kilos, are generally used. The Colombian libra is equal to 1·102 pound avoirdupois. The Colombian vara, or 80 cm., is still in some cases the measure of length used for retailing purposes, but in liquid measure the French litre is the legal standard.

COSTA RICA.

(REPÚBLICA DE COSTA RICA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Costa Rica, an independent State since the year 1821, and forming part from 1824 to 1829 of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution promulgated on December 7, 1871, and modified very frequently since that date. Practically there was no constitution, but only dictatorships, between 1870 and 1882. The legislative power is vested in a Chamber of Representatives called the Constitutional Congress, and made up of 43 deputies, being one representative to every 8,000 inhabitants. By the Election Law of August 18, 1913, universal suffrage was adopted for all male citizens who are of age and able to support themselves, except those deprived of civil rights, criminals, bankrupts and the insane. Voting for President, Deputies and Municipal Councillors, by the Law of July 26, 1925, secret, direct and free. The members of the Chamber are elected for the term of four years, one-half retiring every two years. The executive authority is in the hands of a President, elected for the term of four years. Diplomatic relations with Panama, severed since 1921, were resumed October, 1928.

President of the Republic.—Don Cleto Gonzalez Viquez, elected on February 12, 1928; assumed office May 8, 1928.

The administration normally is carried on by seven Secretaries of State, who are appointed by, and responsible to, the President. They are the Secretaries respectively of the Interior and Police; of Foreign Affairs, Justice, and Public Worship; of Education; of Public Security; of Finance and Commerce; of Public Works and of Hygiene and Public Health.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at 23,000 English square miles, divided into seven provinces, San José, Alajuela, Heredia, Cartago, Guanacaste, Puntarenas, and Limón. The last Census was taken in May, 1927; it showed a population of 471,525, made up as follows:—

Province	Population	Province	Population
San José . . .	153,183	Guanacaste . .	51,142
Alajuela . . .	97,577	Puntarenas . .	28,789
Heredia . . .	88,407	Limón . . .	32,278

Estimated population on January 1, 1928, was 480,326.

The vital statistics for four years were as follows:—

	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Increase	Immigration	Emigration
1924	2,979	19,872	11,844	8,328	5,186	4,756
1925	—	19,960	12,544	7,416	5,983	5,318
1926	3,705	21,889	10,813	11,076	6,402	5,894
1927	3,769	22,508	10,677	11,911	7,975	7,274

The population of European descent, many of them pure Spanish blood, dwell mostly around the capital, the city of San José (population, 1928, 51,459, with suburbs, 62,637), and in the towns of Alajuela (8,611), Cartago (16,261), Heredia (10,763), Liberia (7,473), Puntarenas (7,848), and Limón (15,690). There are some 18,000 coloured British West Indians, mostly in Limón Province, on the banana farms.

Religion and Education.

The Roman Catholic is the religion of the State, but there is entire religious liberty under the Constitution. The Archbishop of Costa Rica has under him the Bishop of Alajuela.

Elementary instruction is compulsory and free. Elementary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In 1927, there were open 494 elementary schools; the teachers numbered 1,685, and the enrolled pupils 46,249 (average attendance 42,809). For secondary instruction there are at San José a lyceum for boys with 556 pupils in 1927, and a college for girls with 478 pupils. A normal school established in 1915 at Heredia has 343 pupils. The towns of Cartago and Alajuela have each a college. On September 15, 1926, the foundation stone was laid of the St. Thomas University at San José.

Expenditure on education, 1927, 3,684,967 colones. Spanish is the universal language of the country.

Justice.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, two Appeal Courts, and the Court of Cassation. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces, and local justices throughout the Republic. Capital punishment cannot be inflicted. In 1927 there were 10,785 convictions of misdemeanour, drink convictions, 6,499, and 2,014 of crime, and 4,380 civil cases.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years have been as follows (nominally, £1 sterling = 10.45 colones, but in these tables it is figured at the current average rate which is around 19.5 colones to the pound):—

Revenue . . .	£ 1,297,938	£ 1,324,151	£ 1,408,184	£ 1,508,416	£ 1,434,580

The revenue is chiefly derived from customs, liquor, railway, direct taxes (land), posts and telegraphs. The largest items of expenditure are finance, public instruction, and internal development.

The foreign debt of the Republic outstanding on December 31, 1927, was made up of gold refunding bonds, 1911, 1,699,780 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., the French Loan of 1911 (in liquidation), 7,350,000 francs, and a U.S. loan of 1926, 7,876,000 dollars. The internal debt on December 31, 1927, amounted to 80,047,942 colones (4,110,271 $\frac{1}{2}$ .), which included a debt of 112,403 $\frac{1}{2}$ . to an English construction company.

Defence.

Costa Rica has an army, including reserve and national guard, of 150,485 officers and men. The standing and active army is limited to 1,000 by a convention reached in 1923 by the States of Central America. Its strength in 1925 was 325. The Republic has also 1 motor launch on the Atlantic side and 1 on the Pacific side for Revenue purposes.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the principal industry. There are thousands of square miles of public lands in Costa Rica that have never been cleared, on which can be found quantities of virgin rosewood, cedar, mahogany, and other cabinet woods. The principal agricultural products are coffee (16,154 metric tons in 1927, valued at 2,178,931 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., and bananas (7,869,175 stems valued at 1,212,200 $\frac{1}{2}$ . in 1927). Coffee and bananas account for nine-tenths of the exports. The cacao crop is also of importance. In 1927, 3,429 metric tons of cacao were exported valued at 135,823 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Bee-keeping is carried on successfully; it is estimated that there are 3,000 hives in the Republic. The second industry of importance is that of gold and silver mining on the Pacific slope. Deposits of manganese ore have been discovered in the Pacific province of Guanacaste. There are also deposits of quartz, alabaster, granite, oil, alum, slate, onyx, and mercury; and sulphur and copper also exist, but mining in the Republic is not very fully developed. Maize, sugar-cane, cacao, rice, and potatoes are commonly cultivated. About 4,000 acres are under tobacco. The distillation of spirits is a government monopoly. The live-stock, in 1925, consisted of 433,468 cattle, 104,087 horses, 70,625 pigs, 9,857 mules, 355 sheep, and 1,784 goats.

There are officially enumerated 3,296 factories and industries in the Republic, all small, including 71 cigar-making factories, 135 cheese-making establishments, 69 hydraulic sawmills, 22 candle-making factories and many coffee-drying establishments, starch, broom and wood-work factories. The most important industries are shoes, soap, and candles. Electricity, derived from water power in the highlands, is widely used as motive power.

Commerce.

The value of imports into and exports from Costa Rica in 5 years (including coin and bullion) was as follows (for rate of converting colon into sterling, see under Finance) :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports	£ 2,013,553	£ 2,679,244	£ 2,859,999	£ 2,840,408	£ 3,850,097
Exports	£ 2,640,321	£ 3,097,596	£ 3,397,019	£ 3,895,683	£ 3,709,029

The value of the chief imports and exports for 1927 was as follows :—

Chief Imports	1927	Exports	1927
Cotton	£ 380,228	Coffee	£ 2,178,931
Iron and steel other than machinery	276,061	Bananas	1,212,200
Flour	199,805	Cacao	135,823
Mineral oil and derivatives	128,072	Gold and silver bullion	79,780
Motor cars and trucks	105,103	Timbers	39,638
Silk goods	101,693	Fruit and vegetables	11,211
		Hides and skins	9,454

Of the import value in 1927, 50·34 per cent. was from the United States, 15·52 per cent. from Germany, 14·90 per cent. from the United Kingdom, 2·94 per cent. from Central and South America. Of the value exported, 54·75 per cent. went to the United Kingdom, 32·91 per cent. to the United States, 8·22 to Germany, and 2·36 per cent. to Latin America.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Costa Rica (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years :—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Imports from Costa Rica into U.K.	£ 2,340,592	£ 2,578,294	£ 2,507,682	£ 2,719,908	£ 3,237,588
Exports to Costa Rica from U.K.	£ 484,769	£ 886,159	£ 806,235	£ 408,702	£ 394,885

Shipping and Communications.

No official figures are available as regards Costa Rican shipping. On the Atlantic coast there are several small sailing vessels and power launches, and on the Pacific coast some motor launches.

In 1927, there entered the ports of the Republic 696 ships of 1,321,637 tons, and cleared, 698 ships of 1,326,497 tons. Nearly all the steamers of the United Fruit Company are under the British flag.

The railway system connects San José with the Atlantic port, and has been extended to connect the capital with the Pacific port. The length of railway is 413 miles—the Costa Rica Railway, 189 miles (main line and branches; San José to Limón, 103 miles); the Pacific Railway (state owned), 81 miles (San José to Punta Arenas, 73 miles); the Northern Railway, 75 miles, and the United Fruit Co. Railway, 67 miles. When the railway system is completed, through rail communication will be established between Port Limón and the new port of Almirante in Panama. About 130 miles of motoring roads are now open.

In 1927 there were 839 post offices. The number of postal packets despatched and received was 10,076,502.

There were (1927) 2,740 miles of telegraph lines, with 152 telegraph offices. The number of messages in 1927 was 545,544. On December 31, 1920, there were 1,584 telephones; the telephone lines had a length of about 1,387 miles. Wireless telegraphy is working from Limón to Bocas del Toro (Panama) 60 miles, and to Bluefields, in Nicaragua, and to Colon, in Republic of Panama. Limón has a radius of 300 miles. The Government has a large wireless station at San José, and a small one at Colorado (mouth of R. San Juan, near Nicaraguan border). There is an international wireless station at Paraiso of high power; it is open for public service.

Banking and Credit.

In October, 1914, the Banco Internacional de Costa Rica was established as a Government Bank of Issue. It is authorised to issue up to 19,000,000 colones in notes to bearer (guaranteed by Government 6 per cent. Bonds, un-issued balance of Costa Rica Gold Refunding Bonds of 1911, and other Government securities). The Exchange Control Department, founded in November 1922, is authorised to purchase and sell New York Bank drafts at a fixed rate of 400 per cent. (4 to 1), and to issue and to receive in exchange for such drafts its own notes. On January 1, 1928, the Department had balances at New York bankers or in hand of 1,423,697 U.S. dollars gold. The total circulation of the country on September 30, 1928, was: Banco Internacional de Costa Rica, 15,650,000 colones; Exchange Control Department, 6,209,488 colones; silver certificates, 1,450,000 colones; copper, 570,000 colones. Total, 23,884,488 colones.

The National Insurance Bank—a Government bank which has a monopoly of new insurance business—reported September 30, 1928, total insurance written amounting to 67,828,818 colones.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On October 26, 1896, an Act was passed for the adoption of a gold standard, the monetary unit to be the gold colon, weighing 778 grammes, .900 fine (value about 22·9*d.*). Gold coins have, however, practically disappeared from circulation. Silver coins are: 1 colon, 50 centimos, 25 centimos. There are copper coins of 10 centimos, 5 centimos, 1 centimo, and a nickel coin of 2 centimos.

The metric system is now in use; the following are the old weights and measures:—

The Libra	.	.	.	.	=1·014 lb. avoirdupois.
„ Quintal	.	.	.	.	=101·40 „
„ Arroba	.	.	.	.	=25·85 „
„ Fanega	.	.	.	.	=11 bushels (imperial bushel).

The old weights and measures of Spain are in use in the country districts but the introduction of the French metric system is legally established and in general use.

On January 15, 1921, the Republic adopted as its standard time that of the meridian 90 degrees west of Greenwich.

CUBA.

Constitution and Government.

CUBA, except for a brief period of British occupancy in 1762–63, remained a Spanish possession from the date of its discovery by Columbus until December 10, 1898, when the sovereignty was relinquished under the terms of the Treaty of Paris which ended the armed intervention of the United States in the struggle of the Cubans against Spanish rule. Cuba thus became an independent State. A convention which assembled on November 5, 1900, drew up a constitution which was adopted February 21, 1901, under which the Island assumed a republican form of government, with a President, Vice-President, a Senate and a House of Representatives. A law was passed in Washington authorising the President of the United States to hand over the government to the Cuban people upon the undertaking that they should conclude no treaty with a foreign power that would endanger the independence of Cuba, that no debts should be contracted for which the current revenue would not suffice, that the United States should have certain rights of intervention, and be granted the use of Naval Stations. On June 12, 1901, these conditions were accepted. On February 24, 1902, the election of the President and Vice-President took place, and the control of the Island was formally transferred to the national government on May 20. The coaling station of Guantanamo Bay was leased to the United States for 2,000 dollars annually, on July 2, 1903. A reciprocal commercial treaty, December 27, 1903, further strengthened the ties between Cuba and the United States. After political disturbances, an American Commission formed a provisional government in August, 1906, which was continued until January 28, 1909, when the national government was resumed after the institution of electoral reforms. A constitutional convention was convened March, 1928, and approved various changes in the constitution including a proposal to increase the President's term to 6 years without right of re-election. These changes came into effect on May 11, 1928, and, among other things, conferred upon women over 21 years of age the right to vote.

President.—General Gerardo Machado y Morales. Inaugurated (second term) May 20, 1929; term expires May 20, 1935.

There is a Cabinet consisting of the Secretaries of State, of Justice, of War and Marine, of the Interior, of Finance, of Agriculture, Commerce, and Labour, of Public Instruction, of Public Works, Sanitation and Charity, and of Telegraph and Posts (created in 1925).

The National Congress is made up of a Senate (37 members, 6 for each province and the retired President) and a House of Representatives (118 members, 1 for every 25,000 of the inhabitants). The latter, like the Senators, sit for six years.

The country is divided into six provinces and 119 municipalities. The province is ruled by a Governor elected indirectly by the people and a Council; and the municipality by an Alcalde (Mayor), and an elected municipal council.

Area and Population.

Cuba has an area of 44,164 square miles (41,634 square miles for the island of Cuba, 1,180 square miles for the Isle of Pines, and 1,350 square miles for the other islands), with a population, on June 30, 1928, of 3,579,507, including 82,297 immigrants arriving that year. The area, population, and density of population of each of the six provinces, on June 30, 1928, were as follows:—

Province	Area	Population (June 30, 1928)	Pop. per sq. mile
	Square miles
Havana . . . . .	8,170	1,081,518	225.40
Pinar del Rio . . . . .	5,206	801,001	153.81
Matanzas . . . . .	8,256	847,552	102.70
Santa Clara . . . . .	8,257	755,027	91.68
Camagüey . . . . .	10,064	258,712	25.70
Oriente . . . . .	14,211	885,697	62.38
Total . . . . .	44,164	3,579,507 <sup>1</sup>	81.52

The number of whites classified in 1925 was 2,315,928 against 2,294,115 in 1924, and of coloured, 829,201 against 830,791 in 1924.

Between 1900 and 1912 the birth-rate was 31·16 per 1,000 inhabitants; births in 1924-25, 64,098; in 1926-27, 122,044. In 1927-28 the mortality rate in the whole country was 12·03 per 1,000. Marriages in 1925-26, 15,850; in 1927-28, 17,469.

The chief towns (with population, excluding suburbs, 1928) are Havana, 581,076; Cienfuegos, 39,017; Camaguey, 46,604; Santiago de Cuba, 48,500; Guantánamo, 13,464; Santa Clara, 26,740; Manzanillo, 24,670; Pinar del Río, 15,951; Sancti Spiritus, 25,926; Trinidad, 13,463; Cárdenas, 28,748.

Education.

Education is compulsory and free. In the year ending June 30, 1928, 449,478 children were enrolled in the 6,952 elementary schools, which had 7,350 teachers. There were also 70 travelling teachers who taught 3,324 children; 84 night schools for working people with 8,377 pupils. There were also 525 private schools with 1,668 teachers and 81,949 pupils. In each province the Government maintains a special Institute for advanced education, and normal schools for training teachers. Near Havana there is a special school with a staff drawn from English public schools, on which the school is modelled.

University instruction is given at the University of Havana (founded on September 12, 1721). In 1927-28, it had 4,148 students.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure (budget estimates) for 5 years:—

	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29
	£	£	£	£	£
Expenditure . .	18,091,535	17,489,075	17,737,752	16,860,920	17,717,280

The principal items of income in 1927-28 were:—Customs Revenue, 41,173,000 dollars; land duties, 27,626,500 dollars; National Lottery, 4,820,000 dollars; post and telegraphs, 3,198,500 dollars; the principal items of expenditure were: Debt redemption and interest, 9,837,025 dollars; War and Marine, 12,853,684 dollars; Instruction, 15,787,282 dollars.

The debt of the Republic of Cuba on September 30, 1928, amounted to 89,964,200 dollars, made up as follows:—Foreign debt, 79,900,000 dollars, and internal debt, 10,064,200 dollars.

Defence.

The army is composed of 619 officers and 11,954 men, organized in 6 cavalry regiments, 4 battalions and 3 batteries with auxiliary services. The navy consists of 2 cruisers, 5 gunboats, an armed transport, and about a dozen coastguard vessels of small size. Some of these vessels were wrecked or damaged in a hurricane in October, 1926. The strength of the navy is 807 men, 144 officers and 25 cadets. The air force (1926) consisted of 116 men.

Production and Industry.

The staple products of Cuba are tobacco and sugar, but coffee, cocoa, cereals, and potatoes are grown, and a considerable trade is done in fruits and minerals. Cuba is the largest producer of sugar in the world. The sugar crop was in 1925-26, 5,292,714 short tons; in 1926-27, 4,508,270 tons; and in 1927-28, 4,493,123 tons. The total area of the sugar plantations is nearly 1,600,000 acres. Production in recent crop years has been limited by presidential decree, in 1927-28, to 4,480,000 tons. But restriction was abandoned for the crop year 1928-29, though the Export Corporation to control export sales was retained. In July, 1927, there were 177 sugar mills. The production of molasses in 1926-27 amounted to 249,430,027 gallons. Tobacco exports in 1926-27:—cigars, 91,032,529 (10,458,985 dollars); boxes of cigarettes, 2,770,573 (129,466 dollars); leaf tobacco, 27,629,207 lbs. (11,574,610 dollars). A cotton textile factory, with capital of 2,000,000 dollars, was started in 1928. The principal fruits exported are pineapples, bananas, citrus fruit, and coconuts.

Cuba's production of brandy in 1925-26 was 38,093,027 litres, of which 4,567,747 litres were exported, and of alcohol, 20,988,575 litres, of which 1,603,082 litres were exported.

On June 30, 1927, the live stock in the island consisted of 4,785,921 head of cattle, 759,267 horses, 73,454 mules, and 3,464 asses.

Cuba has forest lands, many of which are in private ownership, but the forests belonging to the State have an area of about 1,250,000 acres. These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins, and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar-boxes, and mahogany is exported. Many other hard woods are used for railway sleepers, carts, ploughs and other local purposes.

Iron ore abounds; total exports 1925, 481,093 tons; 1926, 541,055 tons. Copper, manganese (exports, 50,000 tons annually) and gold are also worked.

Commerce.

The value of the imports and exports (including bullion and specie) for 5 years were as follows: £1 = 4.86 pesos):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	60,824,318	58,074,576	59,008,025	53,773,800	52,991,327
Exports . . .	95,027,250	86,973,059	70,621,137	62,208,000	66,286,001

The imports and exports were distributed as follows:—

Countries	Imports from		Exports to
	1926	1927	1926	1927
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
United States . . . . .	160,051,621	159,681,522	242,831,819	254,195,052
Other American Countries . . . . .	24,592,835	23,087,534	10,696,180	10,020,398
Germany . . . . .	7,742,852	7,648,660	1,470,136	2,49,685
Spain . . . . .	11,615,931	10,450,061	1,325,242	1,505,275
France . . . . .	11,873,427	12,415,512	5,977,303	4,284,336

Other European countries . . . . .	13,470,195	14,343,835	5,458,631	9,789,537
All other countries . . . . .	19,105,691	18,006,128	11,717,810	7,582,553
Total . . . . .	260,826,438	257,088,086	801,708,781	821,144,655

The principal exports are sugar and tobacco; the principal imports foodstuffs, tissues and manufactures, machinery, metals and metal manufactures, and chemicals.

In 1927, the United Kingdom imported from Cuba 5,123,546 $\frac{1}{2}$  worth of sugar, and 1,118,294 $\frac{1}{2}$  worth of cigars; and exported to Cuba 383,959 $\frac{1}{2}$  worth of cotton piece goods.

Total trade between Cuba and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for five years.—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Cuba into U.K.	12,510,631	11,628,723	4,499,899	6,608,330	10,170,095
Exports to Cuba from U.K.	3,198,924	2,605,317	2,073,293	2,088,702	1,647,629

Shipping and Communications.

In 1927, 7,134 vessels of 23,202,748 tons entered and 7,016 vessels of 23,419,989 tons cleared the ports of the Republic in the foreign trade. In the coastwise trade 10,873 vessels of 2,267,157 tons entered, and 10,710 vessels of 2,275,796 tons net cleared.

In Cuba there were in 1927, 3,020 miles of railway—the United Railways of Havana, 1,301 miles; Cuba Railway, 647 miles; Cuban Central Railway, 360 miles, and Western Railway of Havana, 147 miles, being the greatest systems. The lines now connect the principal towns and seaports from Pinar del Rio in the west, to Santiago de Cuba in the east. The larger sugar estates have extensive private lines connecting them with the main lines. Several important railway extensions are projected. There were 1,030 miles of highways open to traffic in 1927. An important central highway extending over 631 miles and traversing the different provinces is under construction. There were (1926) 792 post and telegraph offices, and nine wireless stations operated by the Government. There were 10,939 miles of telegraph wires in 1927. The tel phone system (1926) had 63,834 instruments and 214,000 miles of wire. Direct telephone connection with American cities has been maintained since 1921.

Currency and Banking.

On November 7, 1914, a law was published authorising a new coinage issue in Cuba with a gold peso (equal to the U.S. gold dollar) of 1.6718 grammes (1.5046 grammes fine) as the monetary unit. The gold coins are the 20, 10, 5, 4, 2 and 1 peso pieces; the 20, 10 and 5 pesos pieces are of the same weight and value as the corresponding United States gold coins. Silver is coined in pieces of 1 peso, 40 cents, 20 cents, and 10 cents, while nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 cent pieces are also issued.

The coinage of gold is unlimited, but silver must not be minted to the value of more than 12,000,000 pesos. The extent of the nickel coinage is determined by the National Executive. The United States coinage is legal tender.

The total amount of currency on June 30, 1927, was as follows:—Cuban money, gold, 23,786,750 dollars; silver, 8,413,140 dollars; nickel, 1,449,560 dollars; American money, bank notes, 228,572,002 dollars; gold, 13,318,015 dollars; silver, 3,672,260 dollars; nickel, 1,188,271 dollars. Total currency, 230,349,999 dollars.

Banking is largely in the hands of the Royal Bank of Canada, the National City Bank of New York, the Chase National Bank of New York, the Bank of Nova Scotia, and the Banco del Comercio. Total number of banks and branches is 169. Total deposits, June 30, 1927, were 141,894,185 dollars; savings deposits, 42,079,707 dollars; cash on hand, 51,293,026 dollars.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

(ČESKOSLOVENSKÁ REPUBLIKA.)

THE term Czechoslovaks comprises two branches of the same Slav nation : the Czechs (pronounced Tchechs) of Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, and the Slovaks of Slovakia.

The Czechoslovak State came into existence on October 28, 1918. On that day the Národní Výbor (National Council) took over the government of the Czechoslovak countries, including Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, and Slovakia, which had hitherto belonged to the former Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. On November 14, 1918, the Czechoslovak National Assembly met in Prague, and formally declared the Czechoslovak State to be a Republic, with Professor T. G. Masaryk as its first President.

By the Treaty of Peace of September 10, 1919 (the Treaty of St. Germain), the Allied and Associated Powers formally recognized the Czechoslovak Republic, declaring that 'the peoples of Bohemia, of Moravia, and of part of Silesia, as well as the peoples of Slovakia, have decided of their own free will to unite . . . for the purpose of forming a single sovereign independent state under the title of the Czecho-Slovak Republic.' For the sake of brevity the Czecho-Slovak Republic is designated Czechoslovakia.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of the Czechoslovak Republic was passed by the National Assembly on February 29, 1920.

According to the terms of the Constitution, the Czechoslovak State is a democratic Republic having an elected President at its head. The territory of the Republic forms a single and indivisible unity. The region of Carpathian Ruthenia will receive autonomy. The National Parliament, which constitutes the only legislative body for the whole of the Republic, is composed of a Chamber of Deputies elected for a period of six years and containing 300 members, and of a Senate comprising 150 members to be renewed every eight years. The two Chambers in joint congress elect the President of the Republic for seven years. The President, as head of the State, is supreme commander of the armed forces, and can declare war with the consent of Parliament. He appoints the higher officers and officials, exercises the right of reprieve, and is himself amenable to the laws only on a charge of high treason. He also appoints and recalls Ministers. The Constitution guarantees freedom of the press and of speech, and safeguards racial minorities, to whom it assures the maintenance of their schools. Privileges derived from sex, birth or calling are not recognised. Marriage, the family and motherhood are placed under the special protection of the law. All these guarantees and rights are protected by the Supreme Administrative Court, which sees to the legality of public administration.

In principle the two Chambers are equal in so far that they both enjoy the right of initiative, and that even Government Bills may be first introduced in either house. Only in the case of the Budget and Army bills must the measures first pass through the Chamber of Deputies. It is also the Chamber of Deputies alone that by a vote of non-confidence can compel the resignation of the Government. A measure passed by the Chamber of Deputies becomes law, despite an adverse decision of the Senate, if the Chamber of Deputies adheres to its first decision by an absolute majority of all its members.

The franchise for the Chamber of Deputies is open to all citizens, without distinction of sex, who are over 21, while all citizens over 30 are eligible for election. The franchise for the Senate is open to all citizens who are over 26; and all citizens over 45 are eligible for election. The electoral system is based on proportional representation.

The Constitution regulates the parliamentary elections on a 'closed scrutiny' basis, the votes being in favour of parties, not of candidates. The allocation of electoral areas is as follows:—Bohemia, 9 (for Chamber of Deputies), 5 (for Senate); Moravia and Silesia, 6 and 3; Slovakia, 7 and 4; Carpathian Ruthenia, 1 and 1.

At the elections held on November 15, 1925, the political parties were returned as follows:—

Senate (150 members):—Czechoslovak Coalition, 80 (Agrarians, 23; Clericals, 16; Social Democrats, 14; Czechoslovak Socialists, 14; National Democrats, 7; Middle Class Party, 6); Slovakian Clericals, 12; German and Magyar Agrarians, 14; Social Democrats, 9; Christian Socialists, 7; Nationalists, 5; National Socialists, 3; Communists, 20.

Chamber of Deputies (300 members):—Czechoslovak Coalition, 159 (Agrarians, 45; Clericals, 31; Social Democrats, 29; Czechoslovak Socialists, 28; National Democrats, 13; Middle Class Party, 13); Slovakian Clericals, 23; German and Magyar Agrarians, 28; Social Democrats, 17; Christian Socialists, 13; Nationalists, 10; National Socialists, 7; Poles, 1; Ruthene Autonomist, 1; Communists, 41.

President.—Thomas Garrigue Masaryk (born in 1850 in Hodonín, in Moravia). Elected May 28, 1920; re-elected May 27, 1927, for a period of 7 years.

According to the Constitution, no one may be elected for more than two successive terms, but an exception has been made in the case of President Masaryk.

The Czechoslovak Government, appointed on October 12, 1926, and re-constituted on February 2, 1929, consists of the following Ministers:—

Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence.—František Udržal.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Eduard Beneš.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. B. Vlasak.

Minister of the Interior.—J. Černý.

Minister of Commerce.—L. Novák.

Minister of Public Works.—Dr. Franz Spina.

Minister of Railways.—Josef Najman.

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Jan Srámek.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Robert Mayr-Harting.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dr. Otakar Srdínko.

Minister of Education.—Dr. Štefaník.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Dr. František Nosek.

Minister of Health.—Dr. Josef Tiso.

Minister for the Unification of Laws.—Dr. Labay (February 27, 1929).

Area and Population.—The Czechoslovak Republic consists of Bohemia, Moravia, Slovakia, Silesia, and Ruthenia (Sub-Carpathian Russia). Its frontiers have been defined by the Peace Treaties with Germany, Austria, and Hungary. The area and population of the various provinces, according to the census of 1921, and the official estimate at December 31, 1926, are as follows:—

—	Area in square kilometres	Area in English sq. miles	Population Feb. 15, 1921	Population per square mile, 1921	Estimated Population Dec. 31, 1926	Population per square mile, 1926
Bohemia <sup>1</sup>	52,064	20,102	6,670,582	331.8	6,922,000	344.3
Moravia <sup>1</sup>	22,815	8,816	2,662,884	302.1	2,806,500	325.7

Slovakia	48,036	18,585	3,000,870	158.8	3,222,600	176.5
Ruthenia	12,056	4,686	606,568	124.1	688,400	139.8

Of the Czechoslovak citizens 8,760,937 are Czechoslovaks, 3,123,568 Germans, 745,431 Magyars, 461,849 Ruthenians, 75,853 Poles, 180,855 of Jewish nationality, and 25,871 others. There were besides 238,808 aliens.

The population of the principal towns with more than 20,000 inhabitants in 1921 was:—

Prague . . . . .	676,657	Liberec . . . . .	84,085	Ostrava Sl. . . . .	22,890

Religion.—The majority of the population is Catholic. In 1921 the division of the population according to religion was:—Roman Catholics, 10,384,833; Greek and Armenian Catholics, 535,543; Protestants, 990,319; Greek Orthodox, 73,097; Jews, 354,342; Old Catholics, 20,255; other faiths, 4,943; and without any religion, 724,507.

In January, 1920, the reformed clergy of Czechoslovakia decided to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Pope and to found a Czechoslovak Church, which had, according to the Census of 1921, 525,333 adherents.

Education.—Instruction is compulsory between the age of 6 and 14. The schools may be divided as follows: (1) National Schools (Elementary and Advanced Public Schools); (2) Secondary Latin and Technical Schools (Gymnasias and Real-Schools); (3) Universities and Higher Technical Schools; and (4) Trade and Arts, Commercial, Mining and Agricultural, and other special schools. There are practically no illiterates except in Slovakia.

The following table contains the data for elementary and advanced schools (public and private) in Czechoslovakia as at October 31, 1927.

	Elementary Schools (public and private)			Higher Grade Schools (public and private)
	No. of Schools	No. of Pupils (boys)	No. of Pupils (girls)	No. of Schools	No. of Pupils (boys)	No. of Pupils (girls)

Of the 14,333 elementary schools, 9,587 (66·9 per cent.) were Czechoslovak; 3,239 (22·9 per cent.) German; 499 (3·5 per cent.) Ruthenian; 789 (5·5 per cent.) Magyar; 87 (0·6 per cent.) Polish, and 82 (0·6 per cent.) other and miscellaneous schools. Of the 1,781 higher grade schools, 1,296 (72·8 per cent.) were Czechoslovak; 436 (24·5 per cent.) German; 8 (0·4 per cent.) Ruthenian; 14 (0·8 per cent.) Magyar; 10 (0·5 per cent.) Polish, and 17 (0·9 per cent.) miscellaneous schools.

During the school-year 1926-27 there were in Czechoslovakia 356 secondary Latin and technical schools (gymnasias and real-schools) with 102,366 pupils. Of these 246 were Czech or Slovak, 93 German, 4 Magyar, 11 Ruthenian, and 2 other. The public, or state-aided, schools of commerce numbered, during the school-year 1926-27, 171, with 32,148 pupils.

There are 4 universities in Czechoslovakia, and 4 technical high schools with students as follows (winter term 1926-27) :—

Universities	Number of Students		Technical High Schools	Number of Students
	Total	Females		Total	Females
Prague, Czech (1948)	8,225	1,695	Prague, Czech .	5,495	198

Bratislava, Slovak (1919)	1,417	146	Brno, German .	1,732	19
	15,400	2,559		10,861	287

There are, moreover, 2 faculties not comprised in the University Association (in Prague and Olomouc); a Russian academy of law; a Ukrainian University at Prague; and a Ukrainian agricultural academy in Poděbrady; a higher veterinary academy (336 students); a mining academy (409 students); a higher agricultural college (376 students); an academy of arts (162 students); and a high commercial school (in Prague).

Justice.—The courts of the Republic are :—The Supreme Court of Justice and Court of Cassation sitting in Brno; 4 High Courts of Justice (Prague, Brno, Bratislava, Košice); 36 County Courts (besides the Commercial Court and the Penal Tribunal in Prague); and 421 District Courts, besides 4 special district courts.

There are also special courts for commercial, industrial, revenue and other matters.

A special Administrative High Court decides matters in dispute affecting the administration, e. g., appeals against illegal decisions and regulations made by State authorities; in cases of conflict between the central State authorities and the organs of the provincial local government; in cases of claims made against the State or the local administration which have been vetoed by the administrative authorities.

Finance.—Budget estimates for five years in thousands of crowns :—

According to the budget for 1928, the national debt is as follows (in million crowns):—

	Million Crowns
Internal debt . . . . .	23,592
Foreign debt . . . . .	6,368
Debts resulting from the Peace Treaties . . . . .	4,400
Total . . . . .	34,385

This amount does not include the debt of 5,933 million crowns occasioned by the reorganisation of the Czechoslovak currency, which is to be paid out of the revenue derived from the levy on capital.

A Board of Audit and Control was constituted by an enactment of March 20, 1919. It is charged with the superintendence of State economy, the State property and the national debt. This Board has an equal standing with the Ministries and is independent of them. Its president is nominated, at the request of the Government, by the President of the Republic.

Defence.—Service in the army is regulated by the law of March 19, 1920. Liability to service lasts from the ages of 17 to 60, but begins normally at the age of 20. Service in the active army is for 14 months, after which the soldier passes to the first reserve until he attains the age of 40, when he passes to the second reserve, where he remains until 50. By the law of July 2, 1924, the peace strength of the active army during the period of 3 years beginning with October 1, 1924, has been fixed as follows: between October 1 and March 31 in each year, at 150,000; and between April 1 and September 30, at 90,000. The maximum effective in 1927 numbered 10,629 officers and 116,883 other ranks.

DANZIG.

(DIE FREIE STADT DANZIG.)

By Article 102 of the Treaty of Versailles, the Principal Allied and Associated Powers undertook to establish the Town of Danzig with the surrounding territory as a Free City, to be placed under the protection of the League of Nations. The League of Nations also appoints a High Commissioner.

High Commissioner.—Count Manfred Gräfinas. Appointed September 22, 1928.

The proclamation of the Freedom of the City and adjacent territory, as well as the coming into force of the Danzig-Polish Treaty, in accordance with Article 104 of the Treaty of Versailles, took place on November 9, 1920. According to this Treaty Danzig and Poland form a single customs territory. A further Treaty between Danzig and Poland was signed on October 24, 1921, providing for joint economic administration. Since January 1, 1922, the Polish-German customs frontier extends to the sea, i. e., Danzig is a unit in the Polish customs administration.

The Constitution (approved by the League of Nations on May 11, 1922) provides for a Volkstag or Diet of 120 members elected for 4 years, and a Senate. This consists of a President, as Chairman, a Vice-President, and 20 Senators, the President and 7 Senators in main office being elected by the Volkstag for 4 years, the Vice-President and the other 13 Senators for the duration of the Volkstag. Election is by majority of votes. Any citizen over 25 years of age is eligible. Senators in main office may not accept any other public or professional appointment. They are also not allowed to become directors of any trading concern. The President of the Senate directs and supervises the whole routine of the Administration. The Senate is the highest State authority, and its meetings are not public. Plebiscites take place if demanded by a tenth of the voters. Any alteration of the Constitution by the Volkstag can only be effected by a two-thirds majority, with at least two-thirds of the Deputies present.

Elections are universal, direct, equal, and secret on the basis of proportional representation, suffrage being granted to all men and women belonging to the State of Danzig who have attained 20 years of age. The elections for the Legislative Assembly held on November 13, 1927, resulted in the return of the following parties: Social Democrats, 42; German Nationalists, 25; Centre, 18; National Liberals, 5; Communists, 8; German-Danzig People's Party, 5; German Liberals, 4; Poles, 3; smaller parties, 10; total, 120.

Area and Population.—The area of the Free City of Danzig is about 754 square miles, and population 390,000 at the beginning of 1928, of which 1.5 per cent. voted for the Polish party at the last election for the Legislative Assembly on November 13, 1927.

The territory contains a total of 320 localities, of which 252 are rural communes, 64 estate districts, and 4 cities. In addition to the municipality of Danzig, whose administrative district had a population in July, 1927, of 230,000 (the district of Oliva having been incorporated with it on July 1, 1925), the following localities are cities:—Zoppot, 27,600 inhabitants; Neuteich, 2,860; and Tiegenhof, 3,100. Several centres classed as rural communes or otherwise are considerably larger than most of the 'cities,' as appears from the following list:—Ohra, 12,450; Praust, 3,350; Emaus, 2,390; Bürgerwiesen, 2,250; Stutthof, 2,500; Brentau, Hohenstein, Pasewark, Kalthof, Steegen, Lichtenau, Liessau, and Schöneberg, between 1,000 and 2,000.

Births 1927, 8,863; marriages, 3,060; deaths, 5,008.

Education.—In May, 1928, Danzig had the following schools:—9 high schools for boys, 8 for girls and 1 for boys and girls together; 11 middle schools and 293 elementary schools. In the high schools there were 8,043 pupils (2,841 girls); in the middle schools, 3,623 pupils (1,458 girls); in the elementary schools, 42,015 pupils (20,247 girls). Teachers in high schools, 329, and middle schools, 143; in elementary schools, 1,005.

The Technical University had in the summer term of 1928, 72 teachers and 1,618 students.

Finance.—For 1924, the Budget of the Free City of Danzig balanced at 81,182,000 gulden; for 1925 at 113,709,000 gulden; for 1926 at 117,885,180 gulden; for 1927 at 113,209,220 gulden, and for 1928 at 117,028,590 gulden.

Commerce and Shipping.—The total registered gross tonnage on December 1, 1926, was 127,603, comprising 34 steamships, 11 motor-ships, 8 sea lighters of over 250 tons burden each, and 4 motor sailing-boats.

Shipping in 1927: entered, 6,950 vessels of 3,899,854 tons, and cleared 6,942 vessels of 3,932,577 tons, German shipping predominating, followed by Swedish, Danish and English.

In accordance with Article 19 of the Polish-Danzig Convention of November 9, 1920, a Danzig Port and Waterways Board, composed of 5 Polish and 5 Danzig Commissioners with a President of Swiss Nationality, has been formed to administer and exploit the Port of Danzig.

For centuries Danzig has been a well-known grain and timber market and shipping point. Its advantageous geographical situation at the mouth of the Vistula, its vicinity to the great German, Polish, and Russian grain districts, and its foreign shipping connections have placed it at times in the first rank. For lumber Great Britain is Danzig's best customer. Exports in 1927 were as follows: lumber 1,749,000 tons (1,391,000 tons in 1926); grain, 56,000 tons (272,000 tons in 1926); sugar, 189,000 tons (185,000 tons in 1926); coal, 3,603,000 tons (3,405,000 tons in 1926).

Communications.—Danzig is connected with Germany by four main railway lines:—Danzig to Königsberg, 120 miles; Danzig (via Kreuz-Schneidemühl) to Berlin, 292 miles; Danzig to Stettin, 230 miles; Danzig to Breslau (via Posen) 297 miles. Danzig is connected with Poland by three main lines:—Danzig to Warsaw, 236 miles; Danzig to Lodz, 230 miles; and Danzig to Posen, 183 miles. Besides these railway-lines there are regular connections by aeroplanes to Berlin (3 hours), to Königsberg (1 hour), to Warsaw (3 hours), to Marienburg (25 minutes), to Stolp (1 hour), to Kalmar (Sweden) (3 hours), to Elbing ( $\frac{1}{2}$  hour). A regular passenger-steamer service is carried on between Danzig (Zoppot) and Swinemünde, Pillau (Königsberg), and Memel. Other shipping-lines have arranged a regular passenger-service to Libau (weekly), to London-Hull (weekly), to Reval-Leningrad (weekly), to Riga and Helsingfors (weekly), to America and Canada (every third week), to Kalmar and Stockholm (every tenth day), to Copenhagen (every tenth day).

The metric system is the sole legal system of weights and measures in Danzig.

Banking and Currency.—On October 22, 1923, a new gulden currency was issued by the Danziger Zentralkasse, the provisional bank of issue. According to this arrangement the pound sterling becomes current in the Free City, being equivalent to 25 gulden of 100 pfennige each. The introduction of the Danzig currency was effected through the Bank of Danzig, which was founded in January, 1924. Bank of Danzig Return, dated June 30, 1928, in Danzig gulden:—Assets: Coin and bullion 2,510,016 (of which gold coin 5,312, Danzig subsidiary coin 2,504,704), balances with the Bank of England inclusive notes 15,668,025, bills of exchange 20,573,354, balances at notice, reserves 3,693,659, notes in circulation 37,352,440, deposits on demand 3,458,586 (a) public deposits including Savings Banks 2,219,480, (b) foreign public deposits including Banks of Issue 71,781, private deposits 859,783, other liabilities 19,015,432.

At the end of 1927, there were 30,022 depositors in the Savings Banks with deposits amounting to 34,604,000 gulden, compared with 26,468 with deposits of 20,908,000 gulden at the end of 1926.

VI. Princess Dagmar, born May 28, 1890; married November 23, 1922, to Lieutenant Jørgen Castenskiöld.

The crown of Denmark was elective from the earliest times. In 1448 after the death of the last male scion of the Princely House of Svend Estridsen the Danish Diet elected to the throne Christian I., Count of Oldenburg, in whose family the royal dignity remained for more than four centuries, although the crown was not rendered hereditary by right till the year 1660. The direct male line of the House of Oldenburg became extinct with the sixteenth king, Frederik VII., on November 15, 1863. In view of the death of the king without direct heirs, the Great Powers of Europe, 'taking into consideration that the maintenance of the integrity of the Danish Monarchy, as connected with the general interests of the balance of power in Europe, is of high importance to the preservation of peace,' signed a treaty at London on May 8, 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown of Denmark was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse Cassel, niece of King Christian VIII. of Denmark. In accordance with this treaty, a law concerning the succession to the Danish crown was adopted by the Diet, and obtained the royal sanction July 31, 1853.

King Christian X. has a civil list of 1,000,000 kroner. Annuities to other members of the royal house amount to 72,000 kroner.

Subjoined is a list of the Kings of Denmark, with the dates of their accession, from the time of election of Christian I. of Oldenburg:—

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Denmark is founded upon the 'Grundlov' (charter) of June 5, 1915, as amended on September 10, 1920. This may in many respects be said to be a further development along the lines laid down in the 'Grundlov' of June 5, 1849, the charter which introduced the Constitution in Denmark. The amendments of September 10, 1920, are mostly of a formal character, necessitated by the incorporation of parts of Slesvig in 1920.

According to the present 'Grundlov,' the legislative power lies with the King and the 'Rigsdag' (Diet) jointly. The executive power is vested in the King, who exercises his authority through the ministers. The judicial power is with the courts. The King must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State. The King has not the right of declaring war or signing peace without the consent of the 'Rigsdag.' The 'Rigsdag' is composed of two bodies: the 'Folketing' (House of Commons) and the 'Landsting' (Senate). All men and women 25 years of age and with a fixed place of abode possess the franchise and are eligible for election. The 'Folketing' is at present composed of 149 members; 117 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 23 districts. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 31 'Tillægsmandater' (additional seats) are divided among such parties not having obtained sufficient returns at the district elections. One member is elected for the Faroe Islands by simple majority. The term of the Legislature is four years, but the King has power to dissolve the 'Folketing' before the end of the four years. The members of the 'Landsting' are elected indirectly by the 'Folketing's' voters of 35 years of age in the following way. In every 'Folketing's' district electors in a number corresponding to the population are elected by the method of Proportional Representation. The whole country is divided into six 'Landsting's' districts. In each of these the electors elect a number of members of the 'Landsting,' between 10-12. In this way 56 members are elected; one is elected in the Faroe Islands. Moreover, there are 19 members elected by the former 'Landsting,' according to the system of Proportional Representation. The members of the 'Landsting' sit for a term of eight years. There are elections every fourth year for the half of those elected by the electors, while those elected by the 'Landsting' go out all at once after an eight years' term.

The members of the 'Rigsdag' receive 5,600 kr. or 7,200 kr. a year, according to whether their homes are in or outside the capital.

The Rigsdag must meet every year on the first Tuesday in October. To the Folketing all money bills must in the first instance be submitted by the Government. The Landsting, besides its legislative functions, has the duty of appointing from its midst every four years judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Høiesteret, form the Rigsret, a tribunal who can alone try parliamentary impeachments. The ministers have free access to both of the legislative assemblies, but can only vote in the chamber of which they are members.

The executive (appointed December 14, 1926), acting under the king as president, and called the State Council—Statsraadet—consists of the following departments:—

The Presidency of the Council and Ministry of Agriculture.—Th. Madsen Mygdal.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs.—L. J. Moltesen.

Ministry of the Interior.—Oluf C. Kragh.

Ministry of Health.—V. Rubov.

Ministry of Justice.—Svenning Rytter.

Ministry of Defence.—S. Brorsen.

Ministry of Public Instruction.—J. Byskov.

Ministry of Ecclesiastical Affairs.—F. Bruun-Rasmussen.

Ministry of Public Works.—J. P. Stensballe.

Ministry of Finance.—N. Neergaard.

Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Navigation.—J. P. Stensballe.

The ministers are individually and collectively responsible for their acts, and if impeached, and found guilty, cannot be pardoned without the consent of the Folketing.

State of parties in the Landsting, after the election of September, 1928:—28 Liberals, 27 Socialists, 12 Conservatives, and 8 Radicals.

Folketing, elected December, 1926:—47 Liberals, 16 Radicals, 53 Socialists, 30 Conservatives, 1 Slesvig (German Party), and 2 Georgistic Party.

In the year 1920 there were incorporated into Denmark parts of Slesvig which voted for Denmark at the plebiscite held in accordance with the Versailles Treaty of June 28, 1919 (made effective Jan. 10, 1920). The Northern Zone voted on Feb. 10, 1920, and 75,431 votes were cast for Denmark, and 25,329 votes for Germany. The Southern Zone voted on March 14, 1920, and 12,800 votes were given for Denmark, and 51,724 votes for Germany. The new Slesvig territories were incorporated on July 9, 1920, being officially named 'Sønderjydske Landsdele' (South Jutland Provinces).

For administrative purposes Denmark is divided into 22 counties (Amtter), each of which is administered by a Governor (Amtmand). Moreover, the county is a municipal division with a county council superintending the rural municipalities (about 1,300). There are 88 urban municipalities with a mayor and a town council. Rural as well as urban municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage and Proportional Representation. Copenhagen forms a district by itself, and has its own form of administration.

Area and Population.

According to the census held on November 5, 1925, the area of Denmark is 16,568 square miles (42,927 square kilometres), and the population 3,434,555, including North Slesvig with 1,502 square miles (3,891 square kilometres) and 176,433 inhabitants.

The following table gives the area and population of Denmark in 1925:—

Divisions	Area 1925 English sq. m.	Population 1925	Population 1925 per sq. m.
City of Copenhagen (Kjöbenhavn) } without suburbs . . . . . }	28	587,150	20,969
Islands in the Baltic . . . . .	5,133	1,271,872	248
Peninsula of Jutland . . . . .	11,408	1,575,533	133
Total . . . . .	16,568	3,434,555	207

The area of the Faeroe Islands is 540 square miles, and the population in 1925 was 22,835.

The population (excluding the Faeroes) consisted of 1,591,628 males and 1,676,208 females in 1921. The total population at the census of 1921 was 3,267,831, showing an increase during 1921-25 of 1.05 per cent. per annum (excluding North Slesvig). In Denmark (excluding North Slesvig) the town population has increased from 1,344,210 in 1921 to 1,482,297 in 1925; while the rural population has increased from 1,759,999 in 1921 to 1,952,258 in 1925. The population is almost entirely Scandinavian; in 1921, of the inhabitants of Denmark proper, 96.57 per cent. were born in Denmark.

The population of the capital, Copenhagen (Kjöbenhavn), in 1925 was 587,150, or with suburbs, 731,496; Aarhus, 76,226; Odense, 52,376; Aalborg, 42,819; Horsens, 28,135; Randers, 26,856.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriages with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years:—

Years	Total Births (living)	Still Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1925	71,897	1,737	25,786	37,083	34,814
1926	70,734	1,643	25,733	38,093	32,641
1927	68,024	1,598	26,199	40,190	27,834

Of the births in 1925, 10.44 per cent. were illegitimate; in 1926, 10.73; in 1927, 11.05. In 1925, there were 1,899 divorces; in 1926, 1,904.

Emigrants, chiefly to the United States and Canada, in 1925, 4,578; in 1926, 5,804; in 1927, 7,996.

Religion.

The established religion of Denmark is the Lutheran, which was introduced as early as 1536. The affairs of the National Church are under the superintendence of seven bishops, who have no political character. Complete religious toleration is extended to every sect, and no civil disabilities attach to Dissenters.

According to the census of 1921 there were 3,221,843 Protestants, 22,137 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident in Copenhagen), 535 Greek Catholics, 5,947 Jews, 17,349 other or of no confession.

Education.

Elementary education has been widely diffused in Denmark since the beginning of the last century, and in 1814 it was made compulsory. The school age is from 7 to 14. In 1927 Denmark had 4,482 lower schools; of these 34 were maintained by the Government, 3,868 by the local communities and 580 were private institutions. The instruction in the public schools is mostly gratuitous. The number of pupils in the 4,493 schools was on January 1, 1927: 487,083. In 1927, 1,482 pupils were admitted to the university; of these 432 were girls. For higher instruction there are furthermore (1927): a veterinary and agricultural college at Copenhagen with 70 professors and teachers and 560 pupils; 267 technical schools with about 26,000 pupils; 21 training colleges for teachers with 1,900 pupils; 93 commercial schools with 13,000 pupils; 22 agricultural or horticultural schools and 59 folkehøjskoler or popular high schools (adult schools with about 9,600 pupils); a college of pharmacy (founded 1892) with 10 teachers and about 100 students; a school for dentists with 18 teachers and 140 pupils; a Royal academy of arts (founded 1754) with 22 teachers and about 300 pupils; a Polytechnic Institution (founded 1829) with 100 professors and teachers and about 1,000 students. The folkehøjskoler are all private, but to them and the agricultural schools the State annually makes a grant of about 1,465,000 kroner. The University of Copenhagen, founded in 1479, has 5 faculties, to all of which women are admitted on equal terms with men. It has about 120 professors and teachers, and about 4,400 students.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

Ordinary poor relief is regulated by the poor relief law of April 9, 1891 (and its amendments) under which in the financial year 1926-27, 90,151 (2.6 per cent. of the population) were relieved at a cost of approximately 35 million kroner.

A law of August 7, 1922, entering into force on April 1, 1923, and replacing the old age pensions law of April 9, 1891, grants an annual sum of money as old age pension (Aldersrente) to any person being 65 years of age and fulfilling certain conditions. The old age pension, which does not involve the loss of civil rights, is granted according to the principle of fixed rates, the law stating the sums which have to be paid under the various circumstances. The pension varies according as the commune of domicile is a town commune or a rural one, and certain deductions are made for self-earned incomes. In Copenhagen, for example, the old age pension of a married couple, both 65 years of age, without any earned income, is 1008 kroner per annum. The subvention is paid by the commune of domicile and seven-twelfths of it is refunded by the State. For the financial year ending March 31, 1927, 106,000 persons were relieved. The total expenditure was 67 million kroner.

According to a law of 1913, assistance without the loss of civil rights is granted to children living with their widowed mothers. The expenditure (divided between the municipalities and the State) amounted in the financial year 1926-27 to 2,262,000 kroner.

Justice and Crime.

The lowest courts of justice in Denmark are organized in 99 tribunals where cases of only small consequence are dealt with by a single judge. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the superior courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for the above-named minor cases. Of superior courts there are three: Ostre Landsret in Copenhagen with 17 judges, Vestre Landsret in Viborg with 12 judges, and Søndre Landsret in Sønderborg with 4 judges. From this an appeal lies to the supreme court (Højesteret) in Copenhagen, composed of 13 judges. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 1925, 3,925 men and 559 women were convicted of crimes and delicts. On March 31, 1927, 1,253 men and 50 women were in the penitentiaries of Denmark.

Finance.

By the terms of the Constitution of Denmark the annual financial budget called the 'Finanslovsforslag,' must be laid on the table of the Folketing at the beginning of each session, i.e. at the beginning of October. As to the annual financial accounts called 'Statsregnskab,' the Constitutional Charter prescribes them to be examined by four paid revisers, two of whom are elected by the Folketing and two by the Landsting. Their report is submitted to both Chambers which, after due consideration, pass their resolution generally to the effect that they have no remarks to make on the balance-sheet.

The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure for four years ending March 31 and the estimates for two years:—

Year ending March 31	Revenue		Expenditure
	Current	From State Capital	Current	For increase of State Capital
	Kroner	Kroner	Kroner	Kroner
1924-25 . . .	431,500,000	39,805,000	416,900,000	87,740,000
1925-26 . . .	382,732,000	284,824,000	381,647,000	290,519,000

Defence.

The Danish army is a national militia, resembling in some respects the Swiss army. Every able-bodied Danish subject is liable to serve in the army or navy, except the inhabitants of the Faroe Islands. Exemptions in Denmark are few, even clergymen having to serve.

Service commences at the age of 20 and lasts for 16 years. For the first 8 the men belong to the active army, and for the second 8 years to the reserve. At the time of joining, the recruits are continuously trained for 150 days in the infantry, 215 days in the field artillery, 245 days in the coast artillery, and 425 days in the cavalry. The engineers have 200 days, and the train 60 days' continuous training. In the case of about one-fourth of the men, their initial training is prolonged by periods ranging from 2½ to 8½ months, according to the arm of the service to which they belong. Subsequent training for all arms only takes place twice in the remaining eight years of army service, and then only for 28 days on each occasion.

The country is organised in one territorial command.

Infantry and mounted troops are armed with the Krag-Jorgensen 8 mm. rifle or carbine and the Madsen machine gun, field artillery with a Krupp gun, firing a 14·88-pound shell.

In 1927, there were 8,625 recruits called up for training, which with the permanent establishment made up a strength (exclusive of armed police) of 10,892 all ranks. The military budget for 1927-28 was 26,700,000 kroner.

The naval forces have been reconstructed pursuant to the law of National Defence of August 8, 1922. The Navy, as well as the Army, is under the direction of the Minister of Defence.

The fleet is for purposes of coast-defence. It now includes three coast defence ironclads of 3,650-3,800 tons, Peder Skram, Olfert Fischer, Herluf Trolle, each carrying a pair of 9·4-inch and four 6-inch guns; one of 4,300 tons, Niels Juel, with ten 6-inch guns; one of 2,200 tons, Skjold, with one 9·4 and three 4·7-inch guns; the old cruiser Hejmdal, used for training purposes, 3 fishery patrol vessels (Islands Falk, Beskytteren and Diana), the ex-British sloop Fylla (also used for fishery patrol work), 20 torpedo boats, 14 submarines, the depot ship Henrik Gerner, and the minelayer Lossen. Three new torpedo boats and a new sloop (Hvidbjornen) are under construction. Expenditure of the Ministry of Marine in 1926-27, 24,171,707 kroner.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Denmark is greatly subdivided, owing partly to the state of the law, which interdicts the union of small farms into larger estates, but encourages, in various ways, the parcelling out of landed property, and leaves the tenant entire control of his land so long as the rent is paid.

According to the census of July 15, 1928, the extent of the cultivated area in Denmark was as follows (in thousand acres):—grain areas, 3,238; root crop, 1,271; other crop, 78; green fodder and grass, 2,125; fallow land, 180; total cultivated area, 6,892. The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows:—

Crops	Area		Production
	1926	1927	1926	1927
	Acres	Acres	Tons	Tons
Wheat . . . .	251,554	274,041	238,593	256,054

Potatoes . . . .	189,283	177,175	811,700	564,600

On July 16, 1928, there were in Denmark 518,000 horses, 3,021,000 head of cattle, 3,360,000 swine, and 18,000,000 hens.

According to statistics collected on July 15, 1925, there were 89,175 industrial factories and shops in Denmark, employing altogether 392,000 persons, of whom 270,000 were actual labourers. Of the total establishments 26,300 factories used mechanical power. In 1927, there were in Denmark 5 distilleries whose output of brandy reduced to 100° amounted to 6,301,000 litres. In 1927, there were produced 1,362,000 litres of strong beer, and 770,000 litres small beer. In the same year 136,740 tons of beet-sugar were produced at 9 sugar factories, and 71,848 tons of margarine were manufactured at 139 factories.

In the Danish fisheries the total value of the fish caught was, 1923, 1,879,200*l.*; 1924, 2,463,000*l.*; 1925, 2,441,000*l.*; 1926, 1,973,000*l.*; 1927, 1,863,000*l.* The fleet in 1927 consisted of 15,626 boats.

Commerce.

The following table shows the value, according to official returns, of the imports and general exports (excluding precious metal) for six years (18.16 kroner = 1*l.*):—

Shipping and Navigation.

On December 31, 1928, Denmark (without colonies) possessed 2,013 vessels (above 20 registered tons gross) of 1,120,139 registered tons gross in her mercantile marine, of which 610 of 735,974 tons gross were steamers, and 1,104 motor ships of 342,033 tons gross, and 289 sailing vessels of 35,510 tons.

Internal Communications.

Denmark proper (exclusive of Copenhagen) has (March 31, 1928) 7,600 kilometres or 4,722 miles of road, besides 23,740 miles of by-ways. There are (1927) railways of a total length of 3,219 English miles open for traffic in the kingdom. Of this total, 1,526 English miles belong to the State. The total value of the State railways (road, buildings, cars, etc.) up to March 31, 1928, was 446,351,000 kroner. The railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ inches, except 128 miles of which the gauge is 3 ft. 3¼ inches.

The Post Office in the year 1927-28 carried 273,099,000 letters and post-cards, and 209,707,000 samples and printed matter. There are 1,405 post-offices. The State telegraphs in 1927-28 carried 4,475,000 messages, of which 1,088,000 were internal. The length of State telegraph lines (March 31, 1928) was 8,953 English miles; number of offices 513. At the same date the railway telegraphs had 446 offices. On March 31, 1928, the length of telephonic wires of the State and the private companies was 853,600 English miles. In the year 1927-28 there were 486,020,000 telephonic conversations.

Money and Credit.

On December 31, 1928, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 491,165,000 kroner. The assets included 172,755,000 kroner in bullion and specie. The liabilities included 360,157,000 kroner note issue, 27,000,000 kroner of capital, and 11,340,000 kroner reserve fund. In Denmark there are 180 other banks for commercial, agricultural, industrial, and other purposes. On March 31, 1927, there were 528 savings banks, with 1,799,500 depositors, and deposits amounting to 1,951,000,000 kroner, or about 1,084 kroner to each account.

The nominal value of the coin minted (including recoinage of worn pieces) in Denmark since 1873 is given as follows :—

Years ending March 31	Gold	Silver, nickel, aluminium-bronze, bronze and iron	Total

ICELAND.

(ÍSLAND.)

Reigning King.

Iceland is united with Denmark by a personal bond of union under the government of King Christian X. (see Denmark).

The first settlers came to Iceland in 874. Between 930 and 1264 Iceland was an independent republic, but by the 'Old Treaty' of 1263 the country recognised the rule of the King of Norway. In 1381, Iceland, together with Norway, came under the rule of the Danish Kings, but when Norway was separated from Denmark in 1814, Iceland remained under the rule of Denmark. Since December 1, 1918, it has been acknowledged as a sovereign State, and is united with Denmark only through the identity of the Sovereign.

King Christian X. has as King of Iceland a civil list of 60,000 kroner.

Constitution and Government.—By the Act of Union of November 30, 1918, Iceland is temporarily united with Denmark in certain affairs beyond the King's person.

According to the Act of Union, Denmark and Iceland are free, sovereign States, united by one King and by the agreement comprised in the Union Act. The order of succession is not to be altered without the assent of both States. In Iceland, Danish citizens enjoy the same rights as Icelandic citizens, and in Denmark the latter enjoy the same rights as Danish citizens. But citizens of either of the States are exempt from military service in the other. Danish goods and products in Iceland and Icelandic goods and products in Denmark are treated no less favourably than those of any other country. Denmark takes charge of the foreign affairs of Iceland, and if Iceland so desires it, special Icelandic attachés or experts on Icelandic conditions may be appointed to Danish embassies and consulates, the expenses arising out of such appointments to be borne by Iceland. Denmark has a minister at Reykjavík, and Iceland a minister at Copenhagen.

An advisory Danish-Icelandic committee of eight members has been appointed to review Bills of importance to both States, and also to prepare Bills aiming at co-operation between the two States. After December 31, 1940, the Danish Parliament and the Icelandic Legislature may demand negotiations to be opened concerning the revision of the Union Act.

Denmark has informed the Powers that, in conformity with the Union Act, she recognises Iceland as a sovereign State.

The present constitution of Iceland is embodied in the Charter of May 18, 1920. By the terms of this Charter the executive power belongs to the King, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers, while the legislative power rests conjointly with the King and the Parliament, which is called Althing. The Althing is composed of 42 members, of whom 36 are elected for the term of 4 years by universal suffrage in constituencies, each electing one or two representatives by simple majority, except the capital, where 4 members are elected by Proportional Representation. The remaining 6 members are elected for the term of 8 years by Proportional Representation for the whole country. The franchise is enjoyed by all Icelandic citizens (men and women) of good reputation (unless they are indebted for poor-relief) who are over 25 years of age and have resided in the country during the previous 5 years. All voters are eligible as candidates, save only the superior judges.

The Althing is divided into two Houses, the Upper House and the Lower House. The former is composed of 14 members, viz. the 6 members elected by Proportional Representation for the whole country, together with 8 members elected by the whole Althing in common sitting out of the members elected by universal suffrage. The remaining 28 members form the Lower House. The members of the Althing receive payment for their services besides travelling expenses; members residing in the capital are allowed 8 krónur (8s. 11d.) per day, and members residing outside the capital 10 krónur (11s. 1d.) per day. This payment has temporarily been raised by 34 per cent.

The Althing must meet on February 15 in every year, unless it is convoked by the King at an earlier date. The Budget Bills must first be laid by the Government before the Lower House, but all other Bills can be introduced in either of the Houses. If the Houses do not agree they assemble in a common sitting, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters, with the exception of Budget Bills, where a simple majority is sufficient. The ministers have free access to both Houses, but can only vote in the House of which they are members.

The executive power is exercised under the King by a ministry divided into 3 departments. The ministry, appointed August 28, 1927, is as follows:—

President of the Council and Minister of Trade and Communications—Tryggvi Thorhallsson.

Minister of Justice and of Ecclesiastical Affairs—Jonas Jonsson.

Minister of Finance ad interim—Tryggvi Thorhallsson.

The ministers are responsible for their acts. They can be impeached by the Althing, and in that case their cause will be decided by the Landsdómur, a special tribunal, which can only try parliamentary impeachments.

For administrative purposes Iceland is divided into 16 provinces (sýslur), each governed by a chief executive functionary (sýslumaður). Each province forms one or two municipal districts with a council superintending the rural municipalities (about 200). There are also 7 urban municipalities with a town council, independent of the provinces, and forming by themselves administrative districts co-ordinate with the provinces. The municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage (men and women over 25 years of age), in urban municipalities by Proportional Representation, but in rural municipalities by simple majority.

Area and Population.—The following table gives the area and population of Iceland according to the census in 1920:—

Divisions.	Area, English sq. m.	Population, 1920.	Population, 1920, Per sq. m.
The South-West . . . . .	4,125	24,425	8.3
The Western peninsula . . . . .	3,658	12,897	3.7
The North . . . . .	12,695	22,900	1.7
The East . . . . .	5,954	10,214	1.7
The South . . . . .	12,277	18,754	1.1
Total . . . . .	39,709	94,680	2.4

At the end of 1927, the population was estimated at 103,817.

In 1920, there were 46,172 males and 48,518 females. The conjugal condition was as follows:—

	Unmarried.	Married.	Widowed.	Divorced.
Males . . . . .	30,497	13,778	1,681	218
Females . . . . .	30,663	13,694	3,898	263

In 1920, 54,245 were domiciled in rural districts, and 40,445 in towns and villages (of over 300 inhabitants). The population is almost entirely Icelandic. In 1920, the foreign-born population numbered only 710, or 0·7 per cent. of the whole; 352 were born in Denmark, 155 in Norway, and 203 in other countries.

The capital of Iceland, Reykjavík, had in 1927 a population of 24,304; other towns are Vestmannaeyjar, 3,370, Hafnarfjörður, 3,158, Akureyri, 3,156, Ísafjörður, 2,189, Siglufjörður, 1,668, Seyðisfjörður, 981.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriages, with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years:—

Years.	Marriages.	Total living Births.	Stillborn.	Deaths.	Surplus of Birth over Deaths.
1925	623	2,554	67	1,239	1,325
1926	623	2,746	70	1,121	1,645
1927	594	2,642	73	1,282	1,360

Of the births in 1927, 13·6 per cent. were illegitimate (13·5 per cent. in 1926).

Religion.—The national Church, and the only one endowed by the State, is Evangelical Lutheran. But there is complete religious liberty, and no civil disabilities are attached to those not of the national religion. The affairs of the national Church are under the superintendence of one bishop. At the census of 1920 only 463 were returned as Dissenters.

Education.—There is a University in Reykjavík. There is one grammar school, 8 public high schools, besides 2 ladies' schools, a school for elementary-school teachers, 2 schools of agriculture, a school of navigation, a commercial high school, and several other special schools. The elementary instruction is compulsory for a period of 5 years, the school age being from 10 to 14 years. Before the age of 10 the children are usually privately educated, at any rate in the country. In 1919–20, there were 209 elementary schools, with 318 teachers and 6,485 pupils. There are also several continuation schools for young people.

Pauperism and Old-Age Pensions.—Ordinary poor-relief is regulated by the law of November 10, 1905. Each community constitutes a poor district.

There is in every community one Old-Age Pension Fund, to which all men and women from 18 to 60 years of age, to whom pensions are not otherwise secured, are bound to contribute, unless they are considered too poor to do so. In addition the funds receive a subvention from the State. Grants are made to infirm poor persons over 60 years of age who for the preceding 5 years have not received poor-relief.

Justice and Crime.—The lower courts of justice in Iceland are those of the provincial magistrates (sýslumenn) and town judges (þéttarfogelar). From these there is an appeal to the Supreme Court (hæstiréttur) in Reykjavík, which has 3 judges.

In 1926, 47 men and 5 women were convicted of crime.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for 6 years :—

The State possesses a comparatively large reserve fund invested in different loans. On December 31, 1927, it amounted to 2,027,405 krónur (about 112,000<sup>1</sup>).

The public debt of Iceland has been incurred partly by the establishment of telegraph lines and other important public works, partly by increasing the means of the National Bank, but mainly owing to the extraordinary expenses caused by the European War (buying of ships and providing of commodities). The public debt was on December 31, 1927, 11,288,750 krónur. It is in a great measure a foreign debt, due mainly to Danish creditors. The foreign debt amounted to 7,050,079 krónur, and the internal debt 4,238,671 krónur.

Defence.—Iceland possesses neither an army nor a navy, nor any fortifications, and according to the Act of Union of 1918 its permanent neutrality is established.

Production.—Of the total area of Iceland, about six-sevenths is unproductive, but only about one-quarter per cent. is under cultivation, which is confined to hay, potatoes, and turnips. In 1927 the total hay crop from cultivated and uncultivated land was about 3,010,000 cwt., the crop of potatoes 84,000 cwt., and of turnips 37,000 cwt. In the spring of 1927 the live stock was as follows:—Horses 52,800, head of cattle 27,900, sheep 590,000, goats 2,800.

The total value of the fisheries in 1926 was estimated at 24,313,000 krónur (about 1,339,000*l.*), whereof the cod fishery was valued at 24,656,000 krónur, and the herring fishery at 2,657,000.

Shipping and Navigation.—The mercantile marine of Iceland (above 12 gross tons) was, in 1927, 81 steam vessels of 23,788 gross tons, 215 motor vessels of 5,472 gross tons, and 20 sailing vessels of 558 gross tons: total, 816 vessels of 29,818 gross tons.

Internal Communications.—There are no railways in Iceland. At the end of 1924 there were completed about 611 km. (379 miles) of carriage roads outside the towns.

There are 472 post offices.

The length of the telegraph and telephone lines at the end of 1927 was 1,961 miles. The wires had a length of 5,798 miles. There were 246 telegraph and telephone offices. Number of dispatches sent in the year 1927 was 246,282, of which 128,751 were internal. Number of telephone conversations was 465,090. The total receipts amounted to 1,506,022 krónur, and the total expenditure to 1,033,385 krónur, leaving a surplus of 472,637 krónur.

Money and Credit.—There are two banks in Iceland, Landsbankinn (The National Bank), a note-issuing bank which belongs entirely to the State, and Íslands banki (Bank of Iceland), a private joint-stock bank, which has a limited right of issuing notes. On December 31, 1927, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 52,438,226 krónur. The liabilities included 2,606,300 krónur note issue. A special department for loans on mortgage is connected with the National Bank. The accounts of the Bank of Iceland balanced 40,080,672 krónur at the end of 1927. The assets included 1,877,780 krónur in bullion and specie. The liabilities included 4,719,000 krónur note issue, and 4,500,000 krónur of capital.

At the end of 1926 there were 50 savings banks with 22,000 depositors, and deposits amounting to 7,583,000 krónur, or about 842 krónur to each account.

Money, Weights and Measures.—The Icelandic name of the monetary unit is króna, pl. krónur. The króna, which is divided in 100 aurar, is of the value of 1*s*. 1½*d*. or about 18 krónur, to the pound sterling.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA.)

Columbus is said to have discovered the island of Santo Domingo which he called Hispaniola (1492), and the city of Santo Domingo was for long the centre of Spanish power in America.

Constitution and Government.—The Dominican Republic, founded in 1844, is governed in general under the Constitution of 1844, re-proclaimed, with changes, at various dates down to 1924 when the Constituent Assembly passed a new Revised Constitution on June 13, which created the office of Vice-President, provided that a President may not seek re-election for a second successive period of office, abolished the death penalty, and provided for the election of senators, deputies, governors of provinces and certain provincial officials by direct popular vote. An amendment adopted in 1927 extended to 1930, the terms of office of the President and Congress. Each province is represented in the legislature by one senator and (in practice) by two deputies. Senators and deputies are elected for six years, and receive 300 dollars per month.

The executive of the Republic is vested in a Cabinet composed of the President and seven Ministers, who are the heads of the departments of the Interior and Police, Finance and Commerce, Justice and Public Instruction, Health and Welfare, Agriculture and Immigration, Foreign Affairs, and Public Works and Communications.

President of the Republic.—Horacio Vasquez. (Assumed office on July 12<sup>d</sup> 1924.)

Vice-President.—Frederico Velazquez.

The adoption of the Constitution of 1924, and the inauguration of President Vasquez were followed by the withdrawal of the American military occupation which had lasted since 1916.

Area and Population.—The area of the Dominican Republic, which embraces the eastern portion (about two-thirds) of the island of Hayti, Quisqueya or Santo Domingo—the western division forming the Republic of Haiti—is estimated at 19,332 square miles, with 1,017 miles of coast line and 193 miles of frontier line with Haiti, and a population, according to the census of 1921, of 897,405. The population of each of the 12 provinces was as follows: Santo Domingo, 146,446; San Pedro de Macoris, 43,612; Seybo, 58,408; Azua, 100,577; Barahona, 48,180; Samaná, 16,915; La Vega, 105,820; Pacificador, 77,620; Espaillat, 50,956; Santiago de los Caballeros, 122,773; Puerto Plata, 59,025; and Monte Cristi, 67,073.

The population contains some creoles of Spanish descent, but is mainly composed of a mixed race of European, African and Indian blood; there are, however, many Turks and Syrians, especially in Santo Domingo City, where the drapery trade is mainly in their hands. The language used by the populace is Spanish, but on the Samaná Peninsula there are a few hundred farmers, descended from American negro immigrants of 1828, who speak corrupt English. The Haitian patois is spoken to a considerable extent along the frontier.

The capital, Santo Domingo, on the left bank of the river Ozama, founded 1496 by Bartolomeo Columbus, brother of Christopher, was destroyed in 1502 by a hurricane, and subsequently rebuilt on the right bank of the same river. According to the census of 1921, the City of Santo Domingo had 30,957 inhabitants and the City of Puerto Plata 7,807; Santiago de los Caballeros 17,052; San Pedro de Macoris, 13,802; La Vega, 6,564; Samaná, 1,656; Sanchez, 3,075; Azua, 4,707; Monte Cristi, 2,580; Pacificador (San Francisco de Macoris), 5,188; and Espaillat (Moca), 3,994.

Religion and Education.—The religion of the State is Roman Catholic; other forms of religion are permitted. There is a Catholic Archbishopric with one suffragan see, viz., Porto Rico, now belonging to the United States. The Archbishop has been appointed Apostolic Delegate to both these countries (Santo Domingo and Porto Rico) and to Cuba.

Primary instruction is gratuitous and obligatory, being supported by the communes and by central aid. The public or State schools are primary, secondary, technical schools, and normal schools. The Professional Institute was formed into a University by Presidential decree on November 29, 1914. In 1920 there were 972 public schools in the Republic (6 being secondary) with 105,000 pupils (51,585 in 1918), and 1,544 teachers.

Justice.—The chief judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, which consists of a president and 6 justices chosen by Congress, and 1 (Procurador General de la Republica) appointed by the executive; all these appointments are only for 4 years, but may be prolonged indefinitely. The territory of the Republic is divided into 12 judicial districts, each having its own civil and criminal tribunal and court of first instance, and these districts are subdivided into 60 communes, each with a local justice (alcalde), a secretary and bailiff (alguacil). There are three appeal courts, at Santiago de los Caballeros, at Santo Domingo City, and at La Vega.

Finance.—The receipts and disbursements for 6 years were, in United States dollars :—

Chief sources of revenue, 1928, were:—Internal Revenue, 4,393,000 dollars; Customs, 4,800,000 dollars; Lottery, 2,822,400 dollars.

In accordance with the American-Dominican Convention of 1924, which provided for a loan up to 25,000,000 dollars, an American Receiver-General of Customs supervises customs collections and controls the payment of interest and amortization of the three Dominican Bond issues. This arrangement, which dates back to the first American intervention in 1905, is to last until the loans are repaid. The total customs collected by the American Receiver-General from April, 1905, to December 31, 1927, was 90,933,464 dollars.

The bonded debt of the Republic as at December 31, 1927, was as follows:—1927 loan, 6,700,000 dollars; 1922 loan, 3,300,000 dollars; and 1926 loan, 5,000,000 dollars; total, 15,000,000 dollars.

Defence.—The National Military Force consists of a native constabulary known as the 'Policia Nacional.' This body comprises 3,000 officers and men.

The Republic has no navy.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the chief source of wealth, sugar cultivation being the principal industry. Of the total area, about 12,500 square miles is cultivable, and about 3,000,000 acres suitable for grazing. The largest sugar estates are in the southern part of the Republic; production of sugar in 1926, 394,033 short tons; in 1927, 315,470 tons. There are 21 sugar 'centrals,' mostly owned and operated by American companies, although very little of the sugar is sold to the United States. Cacao yield in 1927, 26,000,000 kilos. Tobacco production in 1927, 35,000,000 pounds; coffee production in 1927, 4,093 metric tons. The forest area of the Republic is 9,500,000 acres.

The live-stock census taken on May 15, 1921, showed 360,155 cows, 87,876 oxen, 199,127 calves, 162,800 horses, 64,860 mules, 674,232 pigs, 705,000 goats and 2,949,053 fowls.

Minerals of almost every kind are found at various places in the Republic, principal among which are gold and copper. Iron is found in the form of black magnetic oxide of iron, and petroleum has been found in the Azua region. Coal of the lignite variety of little commercial value is found in considerable quantities, as well as some anthracite coal. Silver, platinum, and traces of quicksilver have been found, and rock salt near Neiba is found in inexhaustible quantities, there being several hills of native salt covered with only a thin layer of soil.

Commerce.—The total imports into and exports from the Dominican Republic for 5 years were valued as follows in pounds sterling (£1 = 5 dollars):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports	£ 3,649,016	£ 4,316,114	£ 5,067,810	£ 4,735,506	£ 5,556,802
Exports	5,208,564	6,052,579	5,354,122	4,979,174	6,235,753

The foreign trade for 2 years was distributed as follows:—

Country	Imports				Exports

In 1927, the chief imports other than foodstuffs were (in dollars): cotton goods, 4,633,819; mineral oils, 1,252,614; and machinery, 1,637,444. Principal exports in 1927, raw sugar, 16,668,000 dollars; cacao, 7,477,000 dollars; coffee, 1,750,000 dollars; and tobacco leaf, 2,582,000 dollars. Of the export of raw sugar in 1927, about 55 per cent. went to the United Kingdom, the principal exporter, and 30 per cent. to Canada.

Total trade between the Dominican Republic and the United Kingdom for 5 years (Board of Trade Returns):—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Imports from Dominican Republic to U.K.	£ 2,767,235	£ 2,189,755	£ 1,887,570	£ 2,024,182	£ 2,649,975
Exports to Dominican Republic from U.K.	284,614	238,995	248,432	291,651	285,435

Shipping and Communications.—The merchant marine of the Republic consists of 30 steamers of small tonnage principally engaged in the coastwise trade.

In 1926, 1,959 vessels of 2,357,444 tons entered the ports of the Republic, and 1585 vessels of 1,959,901 tons, cleared.

A trunk highway extends from the capital on the south coast to Monte Cristy on the north coast, with a total length of 182 miles. The highway from Santo Domingo to San Pedro de Macoris has been extended to Seybo, vidé Hato Mayor, and is being continued to Higüey. Another road runs west to San Cristóbal, Bani and Azua and is being continued to Comendador on the Haytian frontier, where it will join a Haytian road to Port-au-Prince. The journey between the Haytian and Dominican capitals is now possible by motor in 12 hours. Total highway mileage in 1927 was 557 miles.

There are two small railway lines in the Republic: (1) Samaná-Santiago line, belonging to an English company, which runs from Sanchez on the Bay of Samaná to La Vega (73 miles) and manages several branch lines; (2) a Government line, the Dominican Central railway, which runs from Puerto Plata to Santiago and Moca (60 miles). Total length of line (1926) 149 miles. There are, besides, about 255 miles of private lines on the large estates.

On January 1, 1919, the postal and telegraphic services were united. The number of offices handling both services is 62; number of post offices, 87.

The telegraph, in the hands of a French company, has a total length of about 1,034 miles. Submarine cables belonging to the same company and to the All-America Cables, Incorporated, connect in the north Puerto Plata with New York and Porto Rico, and in the south Santo Domingo with Porto Rico, Cuba and Curaçao.

There is a telephone system owned and operated by the Dominican Government with (1924), 2,383 instruments. This telephone system connects the Republic with Haiti. There are wireless stations in Santo Domingo City and in La Romana in the province of Seybo. In addition, Government wireless stations are now also to be found at Santiago de los Caballeros and San Pedro de Macoris, but are not yet available for public service.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—On July 1st, 1897, the United States gold dollar was adopted as the standard of value. A small amount of debased silver coin circulates as small change at the ratio of 5 to 1, viz., 1 peso = 20 cents United States currency. There is about 200,000 dollars in Dominican gold coins or paper money in circulation.

The metric system was adopted on August, 1, 1913, but English and Spanish units are quite common in ordinary commercial transactions.

ECUADOR.

(REPÚBLICA DEL ECUADOR.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Ecuador, which is situated in the north-west of South America, was constituted May 11, 1830, in consequence of a civil war which separated the members of the original Republic of Colombia, founded by Simon Bolivar by uniting the Presidency of Quito to the Vice-Royalty of New Granada and the Captaincy-General of Venezuela, when they threw off the Spanish yoke. The Presidency of Quito became the Republic of Ecuador. Under the present Constitution, promulgated December 28, 1906, the executive is vested in a President, elected for the term of four years, while the legislative power is given to a Congress of two Houses; the first consisting of thirty-two senators, two for each province (chosen for four years), and the second of 48 deputies, on the basis of one deputy for every 30,000 inhabitants, chosen for two years; both elected by adults who can read and write. The Congress meets on the 10th of August of every year at Quito, the capital, without being summoned by the Government. The election of the President takes place in a direct manner by the people. Under the present constitution there is no election for Vice-President. In case of death, or other cause of vacancy in the office of President, he is replaced (1) by the President of the Senate of the last Congress, and (2) if he should also fail, by the President of the Chamber of Deputies.

By the terms of the Constitution privileges of rank and race are not allowed to exist within the Republic. By a Legislative decree of October 20, 1918, peonage, which had prevailed on many landed estates, was abolished. Since 1896 the Indians have been exempted from paying tribute, and have been admitted to citizenship, provided they could read and write.

President.—Dr. Isidro Ayora. Assumed office October 8, 1928.

The Provinces are administered by Governors, appointed by the Government; their subdivisions, or cantons, by political chiefs; and the parishes by political lieutenants. The Galapagos Archipelago is under the administration of a Territorial Chief, whose functions are the same as those of a Provincial Governor.

Area and Population.

Since the frontiers of Ecuador have not been settled, no definite figure of the area of the country can be given. Ecuador is said to have more boundaries than any other country, and there are maps of the Republic showing six different frontiers according to six different authorities. Taking the boundaries arranged with Brazil in 1904, with Colombia per Treaty of July 15, 1916, and those for Peru according to the Royal Decree of 1740, the area of Ecuador is 571,250 square kilometres (220,502 square miles). Taking its Peruvian boundary in accordance with the Protocol Pedemonte-Mosquera of 1830, its area is 443,750 square kilometres (171,287 square miles). According to an estimate made in 1926, the total area is 284,860 square kilometres, or 109,978 square miles. The area of the Archipelago of Colon (Galapagos Islands) adds 7,430 square kilometres (2,868 square miles). The country is divided into 17 provinces and one territory—the Archipelago of Galapagos—officially called 'Colon,' situated in the Pacific Ocean about 600 miles to the west of Ecuador.

So far no exact census has been taken, but the population may be estimated at from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000. Inhabitants of pure European blood number approximately 601,219; those of mixed blood are estimated at about 291,050; Indians at 462,400; negroes at 7,831; savages in the oriental region at 200,000. The foreign community is composed of about 10,000 persons.

The estimated population of the Republic (1926) was distributed as follows among the provinces (capitals in brackets):—

Provinces	Area in Square Miles	Population	Population per Square Mile
Esmeraldas (Esmeraldas)	5,465	20,000	3.6
Manabí (Puertoviejo)	7,892	100,000	12.7
Los Rios (Babahoyo)	2,296	40,000	17.4
Guayas (Guayaquil)	8,331	150,000	18.0
El Oro (Machala)	2,339	35,000	14.9
Carchi (Tulcan)	1,485	36,000	24.0
Imbabura (Ibarra)	2,415	70,000	28.9
Pichincha (Quito)	6,218	200,000	32.1
Leon (Latacunga)	2,505	110,000	42.3
Tungurahua (Ambato)	1,686	107,000	63.4
Chinborazo (Riobamba)	2,939	125,000	41.9
Bolivar (Guaranda)	1,159	45,000	38.8
Cañar (Azogues)	1,521	74,000	42.0
Azuay (Cuenca)	3,874	150,000	38.8
Loja (Loja)	3,703	100,000	26.8
Napo-Pastaza and Santiago-Zamora <sup>1</sup>	53,129	200,000	3.7
Galapagos Islands (San Cristobal)	2,868	500	0.1
Totals	109,978	1,562,500	14.2

The chief towns are the capital, Quito (80,702), Guayaquil (100,000), Cuenca (30,000), Riobamba (12,000), Ambato, Loja, and Latacunga (each about 10,000), Bahia (5,000), Esmeraldas (4,000).

In 1927 there were 89,423 births, 47,065 deaths and 12,935 marriages.

Religion and Education.

According to the Constitution the State recognises no religion, but grants freedom of worship to all. The Catholic Church has one archbishop (Quito) and six suffragan bishops. Since 1895 all State appropriations for the benefit of the Church have ceased. All members of the Episcopate are required to be Ecuadorian citizens. Civil marriages are obligatory in accordance with regulations prescribed by law of December, 1902.

Primary education is gratuitous and obligatory. Higher education is carried on in the Central University at Quito (founded in the eighteenth century by the Dominicans); at the Guayas University, in Guayaquil, and at the Azuay University, in Cuenca. Total expenditure on the Universities in 1925, 587,625 sucres. Number of students at the Central University (1924-25), 808. There is also a law college at Loja. There are 1,500 schools in the Republic, including 1,170 Government schools, 127 municipal, and some 200 private schools. The total attendance at these schools is about 100,000, and they have 1,800 teachers. There are 3 training colleges—2 at Quito and 1 at Guayaquil.

Justice and Crime.

The appellate courts are the Supreme Court in Quito, which is the highest tribunal and consists of 5 justices elected by Congress for a term of 6 years. The eight superior courts are located at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca, Riobamba, Ibarra, Ambato, Loja and Portoviejo. The first two are composed of 6 judges, the remainder of 3 judges each, all elected by Congress for 6 years. In the Republics there are 496 parochial justices.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for recent years are given as follows in sterling (for 1924, at the old rate, 10 sucres = £1; for subsequent years at the new rate, 24·3 sucres = £1).

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	3,162,272	1,602,672	1,985,329	1,727,901	2,680,265

Customs receipts for year ending June 30, 1928, 25,553,096 sucres.

The public debt as at November 30, 1927, was:—Foreign debt 98,791,616 sucres; internal debt, 17,338,571 sucres; total, 116,630,188 sucres.

The reforms in the fiscal and currency system of Ecuador which were recommended by the so-called Kemmerer Financial Mission of 1926 have been adopted by the Government. Under the new financial arrangement, the auditing of public accounts is in the hands of a Comptroller General of the Budget.

Defence.

The Ecuadorian regular army has an establishment of 628 officers and 4,878 men. This force is composed of 3 regiments of artillery, 10 battalions of infantry, 4 regiments of cavalry, and 8 battalions of sappers, which form the native army. Military service was made compulsory on May 24, 1921, but is not enforced. The regular infantry have the Mauser rifle; the artillery have Vickers Maxim, old-fashioned Krupps and new Ehrards. The country is divided into 4 military districts. A military school is established at Quito. An Italian Military Mission of 5 members contracted by the Government of Ecuador is at present instructing the Ecuadorean army.

The Government has established at Duran an aviation school with Italian and Ecuadorean personnel. Several machines have been purchased by the Government, and some, including a hydroplane, presented by the foreign colonies resident in Ecuador.

The Navy consists of the gunboats Libertador Bolívar (1896), 750 tons, and Cotopaxi (1884), 300 tons.

Production and Industry.

Ecuador is divided into two agricultural zones: the coast regions and the lower river valleys, where tropical farming is carried on; and the hill country, the foothills, and the high mountain valleys, adapted to grazing, dairying, and the production of cereals, potatoes, and the fruits and vegetables suitable to temperate climes. The staple produce of Ecuador is cocoa. It is estimated that the cocoa plantations in Ecuador embrace 375,000 acres, divided into 6,000 properties, with approximately 80 million cocoa plants. The production of cocoa was (in quintals of 101.47 lbs.), in 1924, 624,452; in 1925, 658,058; in 1926, 409,427; in 1927, 429,173. Coffee is also grown. Rubber was introduced, but did not flourish on account of the destructive methods employed in its collection. Mangrove bark (for tanning), alligator skins, and kapok (silk cotton tree fibre, Bombax ceiba) are exported in small quantities. Considerable attention is being paid to the cultivation of cotton, especially in the province of Manabí; and ivory nuts are produced and exported in large quantities.

Ecuador is auriferous. In 1927, 11,832 kilos of gold, valued at 4,766,128 sucres, were exported. At Pillzhum in Cañar rich silver ore is found, but is not now worked. Petroleum is found; the estimated annual production in the Republic is about 180,000 tons. In 1927, 46,878,360 kilos of petroleum, valued at 5,342,118 sucres, were exported. The country is known to be also rich in copper, iron, lead and coal; and sulphur exists in great quantities in the Chimborazo district and in the Galapagos Islands. Since December, 1927, all salt mined must be sold to the Government, which has a monopoly of imports, exports and sales.

Excepting the inter-Andean plateau and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. Roughly estimated, 10,000 square miles on the Pacific slope extending from the sea to an altitude of 5,000 feet on the Andes, and the Amazon Basin below the same level containing 80,000 square miles, nearly all virgin forest, are rich in dyewoods, cinchona trees, and other valuable timber. Of the total surface of the Republic only 11,480,000 acres are actually cultivated, rendering an annual gross production of 416,000,000 sucres.

Panama hats, made of Toquilla straw, are made very largely in Ecuador, the principal centres being Monticristi, Jipijapa and Cuenca. Exportation of Panama hats in 1927 amounted to 223,880 kilos, valued at 5,858,250 sucres. The Government of Ecuador attempted to monopolise the hat business for its own people by placing a heavy export duty on 'paja toquilla,' but large quantities of the material still go to Peru; and Payta, Peru, where little 'toquilla' is grown, is a strong competitor of Ecuador in the manufacture of Panama hats. There are flour mills, 18 sugar works, breweries, chocolate factories, and 20 textile factories, with capitalization of 11,500,000 sucres.

Commerce.

The value of imports and exports for five years is given as follows in sterling (for 1923 and 1924 at the old rate, 10 sucres = £1; for 1925 and 1926, at 24·3 sucres = £1; and for 1927, at rate of 24·40 sucres = £1) :—

Shipping and Internal Communications.

Guayaquil, the chief seaport, is visited by the steamers passing through Magellan's Straits, as well as by steamers plying only on the Pacific coast. During 1927, 424 steam vessels of 1,029,095 net tonnage entered, and 417, of 998,120 net tonnage, cleared from Guayaquil.

The roads of the country are mostly bridle-roads only, and often impassable for half the year. The one highway is from Quito towards Guayaquil, for a distance of 115 miles, but the work of thus connecting the capital and the port has long been discontinued. There is river communication throughout the principal agricultural districts on the low grounds to the west of the Cordillera by the rivers Guayas, Daule, and Vinces (navigable for 200 miles by river steamers in the rainy season), and other small affluents thereof.

A railway is open from Duran (opposite Guayaquil) to Quito (280 miles). The total length of Ecuadorean railways actually in operation is about 500 miles. The journey from Guayaquil to Quito takes two days, with a stop at Riobamba. Railways for the development of local trade have been undertaken by several local authorities. A weekly mail and passenger air service has been established between Ecuadorean and Colombian ports.

Quito is connected by telegraph with Guayaquil and the coast, with the Republics of Colombia and Peru, and by cable with the rest of the world. Wireless telegraphy has been installed; there are three stations in Quito, Guayaquil, and Esmeraldas. Further stations are projected.

In 1928 there were 251 post offices in the country.

Banking and Credit.

Ecuador having no mint, the coin of the country is minted in England and the United States.

On March 4, 1927, a decree was issued establishing at Quito the 'Central Bank of Ecuador,' with a capital of 10,000,000 sucres, the only body authorised to issue currency. It is organised to protect the country's gold reserves and its general functions resemble those of the Federal Reserve Banks of the United States. On April 30, 1928, it had gold in its vaults, 5,126,924 sucres; deposits abroad, 23,859,534 sucres; other reserves, 13,411,928 sucres; total reserves (42,398,387 sucres) equaling 77.2 per cent. of its combined note circulation, 37,444,378 sucres, and deposits, 17,422,823 sucres. The member banks affiliated with it number 21, with an aggregate capital and reserves of 34,798,260 sucres.

A new General Banking Law has also been enacted, creating the office of Superintendent of Banks to supervise local banks. In addition, all commercial banks are required to have cash reserves equivalent to at least 25 per cent. of their demand deposits and to 10 per cent. of their time deposits.

In November, 1927, the Swedish Match Company secured the match monopoly in Ecuador for a period of 25 years, in return for a loan amounting to 8,800,000 sucres, which has been applied towards the establishment of an Agricultural Mortgage Bank of Ecuador, with paid-up capital of 8,000,000 sucres. In addition the Swedish match monopoly pays the Government 1,000,000 sucres per annum and a premium of 100,000 sucres every five years.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

A new Monetary Law, prepared by the Kemmerer Financial Mission, was decreed on March 4, 1927. Under this law Ecuador returns to the gold standard with its currency stabilized at the rate of 24.3 sucres to the £ or 5 sucres per American dollar, the previous legal par value of the sucre having been 10 sucres = £1 or 1 sucre = 48.665 cents U.S. The new gold sucre is to contain 0.300933 grammes of pure gold, instead of the previous weight of 0.73224. It is divided into 100 centavos. Gold coins known as 'condors' (25 sucres), and 'double condors' (50 sucres), 900 fine, are minted. Also silver 2 sucre, 1 sucre and  $\frac{1}{2}$  sucre pieces, as well as 10 centavos, 5 centavos, 2½ centavos and 1 centavo in nickel and copper.

By a law of December 6, 1856, the metric system of weights and measures was made the legal standard of the Republic; but it is not adopted by commerce, the Spanish measures being more general. The quintal is equivalent to 101.47 pounds.

The meridian of Quito has been adopted as the official time.

EGYPT.

(MISR.)

EGYPT was originally part of the Turkish Empire. On December 18, 1914, a British Protectorate over Egypt was declared, and the next day a Proclamation was issued deposing 'Abbás Hilmi, lately Khedive of Egypt, and conferring the title of Sultan of Egypt upon Hussein Kamil, eldest living prince of the family of Muhammad Ali. The British Protectorate was recognised by France, Russia, Belgium, Serbia, Greece, Portugal, and the United States of America. Sultan Hussein Kamil died in 1917, and was succeeded by his brother. The Protectorate terminated on February 28, 1922, and the Sultan was proclaimed King on March 15, 1922.

King.

Fuad I. Ahmed Fuad Pasha, G.C.B., was born on March 26, 1868, son of the Khedive Ismail Pasha; became Sultan on October 9, 1917; married Princess Nazli on May 24, 1919; offspring, Prince Faruk, heir to the throne, born February 11, 1920; Princess Fawzieh, born November 5, 1921, and Princess Faiza, born November 8, 1923; and Princess Faika, born June 8, 1926.

According to Article 161 of the Constitution, the King's Civil List is fixed at £E150,000, and the Royal Family's at £E111,512.

The present sovereign of Egypt is the ninth ruler of the dynasty of Muhammad Ali, appointed Governor of Egypt in 1805, who made himself, in 1811, absolute master of the country by force of arms. On April 18, 1922, the King issued a Rescript fixing the order of succession to the Kingdom of Egypt and declaring the Throne hereditary in the dynasty of Muhammad Ali. The Rescript confirms the Sultan's son, Prince Faruk, as Heir Apparent, and establishes the succession of Kings in the direct male line by primogeniture. Failing such direct line, it provides that the Throne shall pass first to the King's brothers and their direct descendants by right of age, whom failing to the King's uncles and their direct descendants by right of age, it being laid down that each new King establishes a new house and that the succession is vested in his direct line. The ex-Khedive 'Abbās Hilmi is expressly excluded, but without prejudice to whatever rights to the succession under the new law his direct and lawful male descendants may acquire.

Female members of the house and their descendants are excluded, also anyone who is not in possession of full mental powers, who is not a Moslem, or who is not the son of Moslem parents. The King's majority is fixed at 18 years, and in the event of his being a minor when he succeeds a Regency Council will be appointed either by his predecessor under a secret seal to be opened after his death and ratified by Parliament, or in default by Parliament. This Council will consist of three members chosen from Princes, ex-premiers, ministers and ex-ministers, and Presidents and ex-Presidents of whatever Houses of Parliament may exist.

The predecessors of the present ruler of Egypt were—

Constitution and Government.

For an account of the government before 1922, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1924, p. 834-5.

The draft Constitution, which was promulgated on April 19, 1923, declares Egypt to be a Sovereign State, its monarchy hereditary, and its government representative. Egyptians have equal legal, civil and political rights, irrespective of race, language, or religion. Liberty of the individual and of religious belief is guaranteed, and compulsory elementary education is established for both sexes free in Government schools. All powers emanate from the nation. The King exercises legislative powers concurrently with the Senate and Chamber of Deputies. Each House has the right to initiate laws, but the King and Chamber of Deputies alone can deal with taxes. No measure can become law unless it is voted by Parliament and sanctioned by the King. The Throne is hereditary in the family of Muhammad Ali, and the succession in accordance with the existing rescript (see above). The King can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies, to which the Ministers jointly and separately are responsible. He is also commander-in-chief of the army and navy. But no war of offence may be declared without the consent of Parliament. All powers shall be exercised through the intermediary of the Ministers. No one who is not an Egyptian, and no member of the reigning dynasty, can be a Minister. The King appoints and dismisses Ministers and, on the proposal of the Foreign Minister, diplomatists. The Parliament consists of a Senate and Chamber of Deputies. The King nominates two-fifths of the Senate and the remaining three-fifths shall be elected by universal suffrage, one Senator to 180,000 inhabitants, for a period of ten years. One half of the Senate is to be renewed every five years. The King nominates the President of the Senate. The Deputies shall be elected by universal suffrage, one Deputy to 60,000 inhabitants, with a mandate for five years. Members of Parliament receive an annual allowance of £E600. Taxes can only be imposed, reduced, or abolished by law, and no public loan, or undertaking committing the Treasury, may be contracted, and no concession or monopoly can be accorded without the consent of Parliament. The Budget must be presented to Parliament three months before the beginning of the financial year, and must first be discussed and voted in the Chamber of Deputies. The existing financial obligations incurred through the Public Debt or other international engagement cannot be modified. The strength and organisation of the army will be fixed by law.

Islam is the State religion and Arabic the official language. Cairo is the capital of Egypt. The King may exercise his powers in regard to religious establishments and pious foundations and the nomination of religious chiefs according to the laws of the country. The Constitution does not affect Egypt's obligations to Foreign States or the rights of foreigners acquired in Egypt by virtue of recognised treaties and customs. The provisions relative to the representative Parliamentary régime, the succession to the throne, or the principles of liberty and equality cannot be revised. The Constitution is applicable to the Kingdom of Egypt without prejudice to the rights which Egypt has in the Sudan. The King's title will be established after the status of the Sudan has been definitely fixed by negotiation.

The Chamber of Deputies was elected in May 1926. State of parties:—Zaghulists, 142; Constitutional Liberals, 28; Nationalists, 5; Independents, 18; and Unionists, 7.

On July 19, 1928, a Royal decree was issued suspending the constitution for a period of at least three years, and the King resumed the power of legislating by decree.

The present Ministry was formed on June 27, 1928, as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of Interior.—Mohammed Pasha Mahmoud.
Foreign Affairs.—Hafez Pasha Afify.

Justice.—Ahmed Pasha Khashaba.

Agriculture.—Naklah Pasha El Motei.

Finance.—Ali Pasha Maher.

Wakfs.—Gaafar Pasha Wali.

Education.—Ahmed Lotfy Pasha El-Sayed.

War and Marine.—Gaafar Pasha Wali.

Communications.—Abd El-Hameed Pasha Soliman.

Public Works.—Ibrahim Pasha Fahmy.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Provincial Councils were endowed in 1909 with the powers of applying bye-laws, authorising public-markets, fixing the number and pay of ghafirs (village watchmen), and authorising the creation of ezbas (hamlets). They are the local authorities in connection with elementary vernacular education and trade schools. They consist of two elected representatives from each Markaz. The Mudir is the ex-officio President of the Council.

Egypt Proper is administratively divided into 5 governorships (muhâfzas) of principal towns, and 14 mudirîas or provinces, subdivided into districts or Markazes.

In fourteen towns (Alexandria, Mansûra, Medinet el-Fayûm, Tanta, Zagazig, Damanhûr, Beni-Suêf, Mahalla el-Kubra, Minya, Mit Ghamr, Zifta, Kafr el-Zayât, Benha, and Port Said), Mixed Commissions composed of both Europeans and Egyptians in equal numbers have been formed to govern locally the towns and look after their interests.

With the exception of Alexandria, all Mixed Commissions have the power to impose taxes on all residents in the town alike, but in case of non-Egyptian residents taxes can only be obtained from those who have already given their express consent to be taxed for municipal purposes.

The Municipal Commission of Alexandria obtained in 1890 from European Powers full power to impose local taxation on all residents in the town.

In 56 other towns, another form of local commission exists with four elected members only. Foreign members, not to exceed two in number, can be nominated at the discretion of the Central Government.

These local commissions have practically the same taxing powers as the Mixed Commissions mentioned above.

A third form of local commissions was formed in 1918 under the name of Village Council and exists now in 39 towns in Egypt. This is composed of four elected members only, but without any power of nomination of Foreign members. It has more or less the same taxing power as the Mixed Commissions.

The Central Government has complete power of Veto on all decisions of every form of Commission in Egypt.

Area and Population.

The total area of Egypt proper, including the Libyan Desert, the region between the Nile and the Red Sea, and the Sinai Peninsula is about 388,000 square miles; but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile Valley, Delta and Oases covers only about 13,600 square miles. Canals, roads, date plantations, &c., cover 1,900 square miles; 2,850 square miles are comprised in the surface of the Nile, marshes, and lakes. Egypt is divided into two great districts—'Masr-el-Bahri,' or Lower Egypt, and 'El-Said,' or Upper Egypt.

The following table gives the area of the settled land surface, and the results of the census taken in 1917 and on February 18, 1927:—

In 1925, Egypt ceded to Italian Cyrenaica the oasis of Jarabub. (For the new frontier between Egypt and Cyrenaica, see map in the 1927 edition of the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK.

The growth of the general population of the country is exhibited by the following figures:—

1846 (Census)	4,476,440	1907 (Census)	11,287,359
1882 (Census)	6,831,131	1917 (Census)	12,750,918
1897 (Census)	9,734,405	1927 (Census)	14,186,898

The annual rate of increase from 1846 to 1882 was 1.18 per cent.; from 1882 to 1897, 2.39 per cent.; 1897-1907, 1.49 per cent.; 1907-1917, 1.23 per cent.; 1917-1927, 1.13 per cent.

Births registered, 1927, 627,583; deaths, 359,455; 1926, births, 623,825; deaths, 377,461; 1925, births, 607,564; deaths, 369,385.

The principal towns, with their populations, according to the census of 1927, are:—Cairo, 1,064,567; Alexandria, 573,063; Port Said, 104,603; Tanta, 90,014; Mansura, 63,676; Asyût, 57,132; Faiyûm, 52,372; Zagazig, 52,351; Damanhûr, 51,709; Mehall el Kubra, 45,642; Minya, 43,973;

Suez, 40,309; Beni Suéf, 39,595; Damietta, 34,907; Benha, 28,412; Qena, 27,523; Shibín el-Kôm, 27,335; Giza, 26,921; Sohâg, 24,991; Rosetta, 23,048; Aswân, 16,453.

Religion and Education.

In 1917, the population (excluding 32,663 Nomads) consisted of 11,623,753 Moslems; 856,670 Orthodox; 47,465 Protestants; 107,531 Latins and Uniats; 14,441 other Christians; 59,581 Jews; 8,814 others and unknown. Thus Moslems formed 91.40 per cent. of the population; Christians, 8.06 per cent.; Jews, 0.47 per cent.; others, 0.07 per cent. The principal seat of Koranic learning is the Mosque and University of El-Azhar at Cairo, founded in the year 361 of the Hegira, being 972 of the Christian era. Other centres of higher learning are the Mosque of El-Ahmadi at Tanta, the Mosque of Damietta, the Mosque of Dessûqi (Dessuq), the Mosque of Asyût, the Mosque of Zagazig, and the Meshiakhhat Ulema of Alexandria. All these institutions are under the supervision of the Council of the University of El-Azhar.

There are in Egypt large numbers of native Christians connected with the various Oriental churches; of these, the largest and most influential are the Copts, the descendants of those ancient Egyptians who adopted Christianity in the first century of the Christian era. Their head is the Coptic Patriarch Mgr. Yoannes XIX, who was consecrated on December 16, 1923. There are three metropolitans and twelve bishops in Egypt, one metropolitan and two bishops in Abyssinia, and one bishop for Khartum; there are also arch-priests, priests, deacons, and monks. Priests must be married before ordination, but celibacy is imposed on monks and high dignitaries. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which differs by 284 years from the Gregorian calendar.

Scattered throughout the country there have existed from time immemorial a number of indigenous schools called 'Maktabs.' In 1897, the Ministry of Education endeavoured to bring these independent 'Maktabs' voluntarily under Departmental supervision by means of a system of inspection and reward. Government aid was made dependent upon daily instruction being given in reading, writing, and arithmetic, apart from any religious teaching, and upon the school reaching a satisfactory level of efficiency. The extent to which the scheme has developed is shown in the following table:

Year	Maktabs awarded grants-in-aid and under inspection					Grant-in-aid £E
	Number of Maktabs	Teachers	Attendance
			Boys	Girls	Total
1923-24	2,904	5,889	190,444	29,622	220,066	22,968

The following table gives statistics concerning the schools under the immediate direction of the Egyptian Government in 1927-28. The schools marked with an asterisk are under Departments other than the Ministry of Education.

Justice.

Before 1883 the only native tribunals in the country were the Mehkemas, presided over by the Qādis. At the present time, they retain jurisdiction only in matters of personal law (marriage, succession, &c.), and wakfs—the latter being either charitable foundations, or family settlements with an ultimate remainder in favour of a charitable foundation—and also in certain non-religious cases (e.g. succession) between non-Moslem natives. In matters of personal law other than intestate succession, non-Mussulmans are, however, in general subject to their own Patriarchate, or other religious authority. In other matters, natives are justiciable before the so-called Native Tribunals established in 1883. These now consist of 93 Summary Tribunals and of three Judicial Delegations, each presided over by a single judge, with civil jurisdiction in matters up to £E250 in value, and criminal jurisdiction in offences punishable by fine or by imprisonment up to three years, that is, police offences and misdemeanours; eight Central Tribunals, each of the Chambers of which consists of three judges; and two Courts of Appeal, one at Cairo and the other at Assiut. Under a law of 1904, there are also weekly sittings in the Governorate Qisms (to the number of 27) for the disposal of petty offences, the judge having powers up to three months' imprisonment or fine of £E10, and the prosecution being conducted by the police. Civil cases not within the competence of the Summary Tribunals are heard in first instance by the Central Tribunals, with an appeal to one of the Courts of Appeal. The Central Tribunals also hear civil and criminal appeals from the Summary Tribunals. Since 1905 serious crimes (and, under a law of 1910, all press offences) are tried at the Central Tribunals by three judges of the Court of Appeal sitting as an Assize Court, assizes being held monthly. There is a recourse on points of law, in criminal matters, to five judges of the Court of Appeal sitting in Cairo as a Court of Cassation. The prosecution before Summary Tribunals and Assize Courts is entrusted to the Parquet, which is directed by a Procureur Général; the investigation of crime is ordinarily conducted by the Parquet, or by the police under the direction of the Parquet: cases going before an Assize Court are further submitted to a special committing judge. Offences against irrigation laws, &c., are tried by special administrative tribunals.

The so-called 'Cantonal Courts,' created by a law of June, 1912, are composed of village notables, and have general civil jurisdiction in suits up to £E5 in value, besides an extended jurisdiction in special matters, and a petty criminal jurisdiction with penalties up to 24 hours' imprisonment or PT25 fine. The jurisdiction of each court extends to a group of villages. The courts are now 242 in number.

Owing to the Capitulations, which still apply to Egypt, foreigners who are nationals of Powers possessing capitulatory rights are exempted from the jurisdiction of the local tribunals. Mixed tribunals were instituted in 1875, consisting partly of native and partly of foreign judges, with jurisdiction, in civil matters, between natives and foreigners and between foreigners of different nationalities, or even between foreigners of the same nationality if the dispute relates to land in Egypt. These Tribunals have, also, a limited penal jurisdiction, notably in cases of police offences, offences against the bankruptcy laws, and misappropriation of property seized by order of the tribunal. There are three Mixed Tribunals of First Instance, with a Court of Appeal sitting at Alexandria.

The final accounts for the year 1927-28, and the budget estimates for the year 1928-29, are as follows :—

	Debt	Charge
	£ sterling	£E
Guaranteed Loan, 3 per cent. . . . .	4,440,100	307,125
Privileged Debt, 3½ per cent. . . . .	30,633,980	1,045,384
Unified Debt, 4 per cent. . . . .	55,652,500	2,176,578
Total . . . . .	90,725,640	3,529,187

The charges on account of debts of all kinds (including tribute), as shown in the estimates for 1928-29, amount to £E4,785,789.

In 1888 and 1890, reserve funds were established, the balances of which, in virtue of the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, were placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government in 1905, less certain sums remaining in the hands of the Caisse de la Dette Publique for the service of the debt. The amount received by the Egyptian Government was carried to a General Reserve Fund. In this Fund on April 30, 1928, there was a balance of £E36,965,140.

Defence.

EGYPTIAN ARMY.

By the terms of the British recognition of the independence of Egypt defence is for the present reserved and remains under British control. Service in the army is compulsory, but, owing to the small contingent required, only a fraction (approximately 4 per cent.) of the men who are liable actually serve. Service is for five years with the colours and five years in the reserve. In the Sudanese battalions service is voluntary and extended. The army consists of 2 squadrons of cavalry, 4 batteries and 2 garrison companies of artillery, 11 battalions of infantry, and various departments. A few of the higher posts are held by British officers. The strength of the army is about 12,500 officers and other ranks, excluding His Majesty's Bodyguard. The strength of the latter is approximately 40 officers and 1,100 other ranks.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

In 1928, the normal British garrison consisted of 3 regiments of cavalry, 3 batteries R.H.A., 3 batteries Light Brigade R.A., 2 companies of engineers and 8 battalions of infantry, and one armoured car company (as well as companies of medical, ordnance, Pay, Service, Signal, and Veterinary departments), the establishment being 11,200. Egypt is also the Headquarters of the Middle East Air Command, and contains four squadrons of aeroplanes and a number of air depôts.

Production and Industry.

The cultivable area of Egypt Proper was reckoned in 1927-28 at 8,245,689 feddâns (1 feddân = 1·088 acre), and of this 726,501 were taken up for public utility purposes and 1,965,062 were uncultivated for want of reclamation. The corvée, or forced labour, has been abolished, but the inhabitants are still called out to guard or repair the Nile banks in flood time. The agricultural population (Fellahin) forms about 62 per cent. of the whole. A large proportion of them are small landholders with under 51 feddâns, while others, almost or altogether landless, are labourers, the relation between the employers and the employed being mostly hereditary. The following table shows, on December 31, 1927, the number of landholders and the distribution of the land among foreigners and natives :—

Extent of holding in feddâns	Foreigners		Natives		Total of area		Total of Landowners

Extensive reservoir works, consisting of a dam at Aswân, a barrage at Esna, a barrage at Asyût, and a barrage at Zifta, have been completed. The original storage capacity of the reservoir was 1,065,000,000 cubic metres. The level of the dam has been raised by 6 metres and the capacity of the reservoir increased to 2,423,000,000 cubic metres. The barrage at Esna ensures adequate irrigation to a large area of basin land even in a year of low Nile. North of Deirût an area of approximately half a million acres has been converted from basin to perennial irrigation in the last ten years. The area and production of cotton in six years were :—

Season	Area. Feddâns	Crop. Qantârs	Season	Area. Feddâns	Crop. Qantârs

1924-25	1,787,543	7,273,974	1927-28	1,516,199	—

In 1926, the area and yield of wheat were 1,475,456 feddâns and 6,750,822 ardebs ; barley, 320,711 feddâns and 1,331,944 ardebs ; beans, 414,044 feddâns and 1,603,562 ardebs ; lentils, 63,422 feddâns and 237,737 ardebs ; onions, 36,404 feddâns and 5,145,958 qantars ; maize, 2,085,538 feddâns and 14,621,323 ardebs ; millet, 272,549 feddâns and 2,392,604 ardebs ; rice, 228,636 feddâns and 316,197 ardebs ; sugar-cane, 52,063 feddâns and 36,635,524 qantars.

In 1927, there were in Egypt 37,651 horses, 750,031 donkeys, 21,153 mules, 739,524 cattle, 757,901 buffaloes, 1,232,220 sheep, 622,339 goats, and 179,141 camels.

The principal mineral products in 1927 were (in metric tons) : Phosphate rock, 279,389 ; petroleum, 184,556 ; manganese iron ore, 152,845. Other products are : Nitrate shale, carbonates and sulphate of soda, ochres, sulphate of magnesia, talc, building stones, clay, gypsum, natron, nitrate of soda, salt, and turquoise. The following minerals are also known to exist, namely, alum, copper ore, beryl, granite, ornamental stones, and sulphur.

The number of passengers (civil and military) who went through the canal was, in 1922, 275,031; 1923, 246,331; 1924, 263,869; 1925, 269,522; 1926, 286,432; 1927, 337,741.

The Suez Canal is 103 miles long (including 4 miles of approach channels for the harbours), connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It was opened for navigation November 17, 1869. The concession to the Suez Canal Company expires on November 17, 1968.

Internal Communications.

On April 30, 1927, there were (exclusive of sidings) 2,272 miles of rails (double and single) belonging to and worked by the State, and 854 miles of rails of agricultural light railways owned by private companies. The State railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. inside rails (the line, 124 miles in length, from Luxor to Assuan being opened on wide gauge in Dec. 1926), except that to the Western Oases, which is 2 ft. 5½ in.

The length of line of the State Railways in 1927 was 1,988 miles; the number of passengers carried in 1927-28, 27,927,000; weight of goods carried, excluding service transports, 5,311,000 tons; and the net receipts, £E2,446,133.

The working expenses, £E4,672,139 in 1927-28, represent an average of 66 per cent. of the gross receipts, which were £E7,118,272.

The telephones have belonged to the Egyptian Government since April 1918. On April 30, 1928, the telegraphs and telephones had a total length of 169,204 miles of wire. The Eastern Telegraph Company, by concessions, have telegraph lines across Egypt from Alexandria via Cairo to Suez, and from Port Said to Suez, connecting their cables to England and India. The number of telegrams in 1927-28 (12 months) was 2,994,773, as against 3,179,929 in 1926-27 (13 months), not including railway service telegrams (2,243,367), and those sent (537,044) and received (473,200) by the Eastern Telegraph. The number of telegrams forwarded and received by Alexandria wireless station in 1927 was 6,117 and 17,924 respectively.

There were, in 1927, 3,646 post offices and stations. In the internal service (1927) there passed through the post-office 65,801,000 letters and post-cards, and 22,858,000 newspapers, &c., and samples; in the external service, 32,565,000 letters and post-cards, and 15,407,000 newspapers, &c., and samples. Official correspondence, not here included, amounted in 1927 to 9,212,000 articles. Receipts £E721,218; expenses £E650,394.

There is a regular fortnightly air mail service via Palestine between Cairo and Mesopotamia, and a similar service in the reverse direction.

Banks and Credit.

The National Bank has a capital of 3,000,000*l.* with reserve funds amounting to 2,775,000*l.* The Agricultural Bank has a capital of 3,740,000*l.* It has Government guarantee of interest at 3½ per cent., and it lends money to the Fellahin at interest ranging from seven to nine per cent.

There are, including the two banks just referred to, six mortgage banks and seven ordinary banks working chiefly in Egypt with a total paid up capital of £E52,239,898, i.e., £E46,712,098 for the former, including Debentures to the amount of £E36,707,136, and £E5,527,800 for the latter. The reserve funds of these two groups of banks amount to £E5,565,267 and £E3,516,882 respectively.

In 1901, a Post-Office Savings Bank was opened, and on December 31 of that year, it had 6,740 depositors with balances amounting to £E47,492. On December 31, 1927, the depositors numbered 165,343, and their balances amounted to £E2,088,836.

In April, 1912, a rural savings bank service was inaugurated. At the end of that year the balance of deposits in the new branch amounted to £E25,413, and the number of accounts to 127,927. On December 31, 1927, the balance amounted to £E6,938, and the number of accounts to 745. The balance of deposits in the savings banks of the foreign banks on the same date amounted to £E1,149,049 and the number of depositors to 15,406.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

By decree of October 18, 1916 (20 Zi-l-Higga 1334), the monetary unit of Egypt is the gold Egyptian pound of 100 piastres. It weighs 8·5 grammes ·875 fine, and therefore contains 7·4375 grammes of fine gold. Its value in sterling is £1 0s. 6½d. A new coinage was introduced at the same time in which the Tughra of the Sultan of Turkey was superseded by that of the ruler of Egypt.

The 10-piastre silver piece weighs 14 grammes ·833 fine, and therefore contains 11·87 grammes of fine silver. The piastre is worth 2·46d. in English money. It is subdivided into tenths (ushr el girsh or millîmes).

Coins in circulation are the Egyptian pound (100 piastres) and half pound in gold; 20, 10, 5, and 2 piastre pieces in silver; 1, ½, ¼, 1⁄8 piastre pieces in nickel, and ½ piece in bronze. Silver coin is legal tender only up to £E2, and nickel or bronze coins up to 10 piastres. For some years gold coins have not been issued, and the gold circulating in Egypt and the Sudan is almost exclusively English sovereigns, which are legal tender at the rate of 97½ piastres. The gold pieces of the former Latin Monetary Union equivalent to the French 20 franc piece are permitted to circulate at a uniform rate of £E0·7715.

Bank notes are issued by the National Bank in various denominations from £E0·25 to £E100. They are in principle not legal tender, but since the war they have been made legal tender and inconvertible. The amount in circulation at the end of August, 1928, was £E21,659,270. In 1918 the Government issued currency notes of 10 piastres and 5 piastres, but these have now been withdrawn, and the amount of currency notes in circulation has shrunk from £E1,715,000 in September, 1920, to £E51,000 at the end of August, 1928.

The principal units of Egyptian weights and measures are defined in terms of the metre of the 'Commission Internationale du mètre' by the Law No. 9 of September 26, 1914. The equivalents remain the same as were defined by the Decrees of April 28, 1891.

Measures of length :	Diraa baladi	= 0 metre 58 centimetres.
"	weight: Dirhem	= 3 grams 12 centigramms.
"	capacity: Ardeb	= 198 litres.

MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

The Ardeb is equal to 43·555 gallons, or 5·44439 bushels.

The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows:—Wheat, 334 rotls; beans, 345 rotls; barley, 267 rotls; maize, 312 rotls; cotton seed, 270 rotls.

WEIGHTS.

Okieh	.	.	.	.	.	=	1·3207 ounce.
Rotl	.	.	.	.	.	=	·99049 lb.
Oke	.	.	.	.	.	=	2·7518 lbs.
Qantâr	{	or 100 Rotls or				=	99·0493 lbs.
		36 Okes

LENGTH MEASURES.

	Inches
Diraa Baladi (town)	= 22·8347
Diraa Mimari for building, &c.	= 29·5276
Qassabah = 3·8823 yards	= 139·7639

MEASURES OF SURFACE.

Feddan, the unit of measure for land, = 7,468·148 sq. pîcs = 1·08805 acres.
1 sq. pic = 6·0547 sq. ft. = 0·5625 sq. metre.

ESTONIA.

(EESTI VABARIK.)

The Estonian Republic is situated on the Eastern shore of the Baltic Sea, South of the Gulf of Finland between 57° 27' and 59° 42' North Latitude and 21° 46' and 28° 21' Longitude (Greenwich), and includes the Baltic Islands Saaremaa (Oesel), Hiiumaa (Dagö), and Muhumaa (Moon). The Eastern border towards Russia is formed by Lake Peipsi and the Southern by the Republic of Latvia.

In 1721, the country, which had belonged to Sweden since the early part of the seventeenth century, was handed over by Sweden to Russia, and remained under the rule of the latter until 1917. In 1917, after the outbreak of the Russian Revolution, Estonia regained her independence, which was declared on February 24, 1918. By the Treaty of Tartu, of February 2, 1920, Soviet Russia recognised the independence of Estonia. On January 26, 1921, the Supreme Council accorded the Republic de jure recognition.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of the Estonian Republic was passed by the Constituent Assembly on June 15, 1920, and has been in force since December 21, 1920.

The power of the State is in the hands of the people. The sovereign power is assured to the people by means of the elections to the Legislative Assembly (Riigikogu, State Assembly), the referendum, and the right of initiating legislation.

The State Assembly is composed of 100 members, elected for three years on the basis of proportional representation, and by universal, direct, equal, and secret suffrage. The Assembly forms the Government, and accepts its resignation, promulgates the laws, passes the budget, decides the financial policy generally, ratifies treaties, the mobilisation decree, and state of siege, &c.

The signatures of 25,000 citizens are necessary in demanding a referendum, proposing a new law, or amending the existing laws. The budget and measures affecting war, peace and foreign treaties cannot be submitted to a referendum.

The executive power consists of the State Head (Riigivanem, State Elder), and ministers, who form the Government. The Government directs the foreign and home policy of the Republic, appoints officials (except where special laws exist), and introduces legislation. It is chosen by the State Assembly, and is responsible to that body. The Government collectively and individually must possess the confidence of the Assembly, and must resign if a vote of no confidence is passed. The Government is the Commander-in-Chief of the Republican defence forces in peace time.

The members of local organs of self-government are elected on a basis similar to that on which rest the elections to the State Assembly. If the law has not created special offices, the executive power of the Government is exercised through the local government institutions.

The national flag of Estonia is blue, black and white in horizontal stripes.

The elections for the Estonian State Assembly were held on May 15-17, 1926, and resulted in the return of the following parties:—Agrarians, 25; Socialists, 24; Settlers, 14; Reformist Labour (Töökeraakond), 13; Populists, 8; Workers' Party, 6; Christian Party, 5; Minority Nationals, 5.

The Prime Minister is called the State Head.

State Head (Riigivanem).—A. Rei (Socialist), appointed December 4, 1928.

Area and Population.—The boundary line between Estonia and Russia is defined by the Peace Treaty of February 2, 1920. The boundaries between Estonia and Latvia were settled on November 1, 1923. The total area is about 47,558 square kilometres, or 18,362 square miles.

The population of 1,117,270 (January 1, 1926) is composed as to 87·7 per cent. of Estonians, 1·7 per cent. of Germans (Balts), and 10·6 per cent. of Russians and other nationalities.

The Republic is divided into eleven districts, as follows (the capitals are given in brackets, and when two are given the second mentioned is the German name):—Harju (Tallinn-Reval), Viru (Rakvere-Vesenberg), Jaerva (Paide-Weissenstein), Laeaeae (Haapsalu), Tartu (Tartu-Dorpat), Voeru (Voru), Viljandi (Fellin), Paernu (Paernu), Saaremaa-Oesel (Kuresaare-Arensburg), Petseri (Petseri), and Valga (Valk). The capital, Tallinn (Reval), was founded in 1219 at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, and in 1926 had 127,000 inhabitants. The university town of Tartu (Dorpat) had 59,000 inhabitants. The population of the port of Paernu, on the Gulf of Riga, was 21,000, and that of the manufacturing town of Narva 27,000.

Religion and Education.—There is no State religion in Estonia. Five-sixths of the population are Lutherans, the rest Greek Orthodox, Catholics, &c.

Elementary education is obligatory and gratuitous. In 1925-26, there were 1,856 elementary schools in the Estonian Republic. Of this number 1,304 were supported by local authorities and 52 were private schools. The number of middle schools for general education, gymnasiums, and so on, was 81, of which number 28 were private schools (mostly supported by the Government).

For special or professional education there are 5 teachers' seminaries, 3 navigation schools, commercial schools with an eight years' course, agricultural schools with a four years' course, mercantile schools with a four years' course, and industrial and art schools with a six years' course.

The minority nationals (Germans, Russians, Swedes, Jews, and Letts) receive education in their mother tongue.

For higher education there are the Tartu (Dorpat) University (founded in 1632), which on December 1, 1919, was re-opened as an Estonian seat of learning maintained by the Government; number of students (1926), 4,651 (3,342 men and 1,309 women); and the Technical Institute at Tallinn, with 484 students.

Justice.—The supreme judicial power is invested in the State Court of Justice, which is elected by the State Assembly and sits in Tartu (Dorpat).

The laws are being gradually revised by the State Assembly.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years were as follows (in thousand Estonian marks):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926-7	1927-8 <sup>1</sup>
Revenue ...	7,131,550	7,339,789	7,750,052	8,571,188	8,022,053

The foreign debt of Estonia (January 1, 1928), was as follows:—15,791,575 dollars to the United States, 1,270,358 $\frac{1}{2}$  to United Kingdom, and 943,768 kroner to Sweden. Financial reform loan (1927), 3,989,000 dollars.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory. The period of service in the active army is 1 year. The army is organised in 4 divisions. The peace strength in 1927 was 1,500 officers and 1,5840 other ranks, and the mobilizable strength 90,000. The military budget for 1927-8 was 1,722,390,400 Estonian marks.

The naval forces consist of two destroyers (1,800 and 2,000 tons, 4-in. guns), a gunboat of 1,100 tons, carrying two 4·7-in. guns, one torpedo boat and half a dozen smaller craft.

Production.—Agriculture and dairy farming are the chief occupations. There are 126,561 allotments on which about 70 per cent. of the total population is engaged. The total area is about 10,851,648 acres, divided as follows: forest land, 2,220,002 acres (20·1 per cent.); fields, 2,532,799 acres (22·9 per cent.); meadows, 2,602,274 acres (24·6 per cent.); pastures, 1,836,402 acres (17·48 per cent.); untillable land, 1,632,206 acres; (15·04 per cent.), including a peat bog of 496,112 acres.

The principal crops, with acreage and yield, are shown as follows:—

	Acreage		Yield in tons.
	1925	1926	1925	1926
Rye . . . . .	382,480	338,330	185,531	114,055
Wheat . . . . .	50,780	59,104	21,880	23,919
Barley . . . . .	283,720	299,932	117,032	131,474
Potatoes . . . . .	170,304	171,814	660,272	925,896
Oats . . . . .	371,390	361,999	128,670	135,106

In 1927, Estonia had 633,870 head of cattle, 666,650 sheep, 354,360 pigs, 229,580 horses, and 830,210 poultry.

In 1926, there were in Estonia 399 dairy factories, of which 81 per cent. were co-operative. Butter is the chief article of export and already represents 26 per cent. of the total exports. In 1928, Estonia exported 220,383 barrels of butter to the value of 33 million kroons.

In 1925, Estonia had 3,738 industrial establishments with 35,579 workmen. Over 10 per cent. of the total population of Estonia finds occupation in the various industries of the country, the most important of which are: textile, paper, cement and oil shale industries, forestry, timber, match, flax and leather industries. Shale oil output, 1928, was 446,216 metric tons; in 1927, 397,609 metric tons.

Imports	82,042,001	96,546,252	95,560,750	96,417,234	131,373,000

Principal imports in 1927 (million Estonian kroons) were: grain and flour, 14·3 (14·9 per cent. of total imports); raw cotton, 11·6 (12·1 per cent.); foodstuffs, 11·5 (11·9 per cent.); textile products, 11 (11·4 per cent.); metals, 10 (10·5 per cent.); machinery, 9·3 (9·7 per cent.). Principal exports in 1927 (million Estonian kroons), dairy produce, 34 (32·1 per cent. of total exports); timber, 19·6; textile products, 16·2; paper, 10·1.

The percentage distribution of trade in 1927 were as follows:—Imports, Germany, 26·4; United Kingdom, 14·3; United States, 14·2; Russia 9·1 and Sweden, 5·1. Exports, United Kingdom, 31·4; Germany, 29·8; Russia, 6·3.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Estonia for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns):—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Imports from Estonia	£	£	£	£	£
into United Kingdom	2,461,701	1,813,045	2,233,226	2,249,448	2,268,402
Exports to Estonia from United Kingdom	628,572	603,729	551,612	671,834	600,892

Shipping and Communications.—During 1927, 2,672 vessels of 849,996 tons entered and 2,729 vessels of 854,975 tons cleared the ports of Estonia. The principal port is Reval. In 1927, the merchant marine consisted of 67 steamers of 32,298 tons, and 303 sailing vessels of 23,676 tons, with a total tonnage of 65,290.

Estonia had a total railway mileage in 1925 of 1,819 kilometres, or 1,187 miles.

Currency.—Since January 1, 1928, the unit of currency is the Kroon, which is the same as a Swedish gold krona, and has a gold content of 0·403226 grammes of pure gold. This is subdivided into 100 cents, each cent being equivalent to one of the old Estonian marks, which were stable for almost three years at the ratio of 100 to 1 Swedish krona. Abbreviation for internal use Kr. for 'Kroon,' for international use Ekr. for 'Estonian Kroon,' and for internal and international uses for 'sent.'

On September 1, 1927, there were in circulation 1,582,438,254 marks of Treasury (currency) notes and 1,966,405,800 marks in Eesti bank notes. The denominations of the currency are: paper notes, 5,000, 1,000, 500, 100 and 25 marks; nickel coins, 10, 5, 2 and 1 marks pieces.

The metric system of weights and measures has been in force since January 1, 1929.

FINLAND.

(SUOMEN TASAVALTA.)

Constitution and Government.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Finland is a Republic according to the Constitutional Law of July 17, 1919.

From 1809 Finland was united to the Russian Empire as an autonomous Grand-Duchy. On December 6, 1917, the House of Representatives unanimously proclaimed Finland an independent and sovereign State, and she has been recognised as such by the Powers. According to the Constitutional Law of 1906, the House of Representatives consists of one Chamber of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election, in which all who are entitled to vote have an equal vote. The suffrage is possessed, with the usual exceptions, by every Finnish citizen (man or woman) who has reached his or her 24th year. There are 16 electoral districts with a representation proportioned to the population, a rearrangement being required every 10 years. Each district is divided into voting circuits. The voting system, devised with a view to proportional representation, provides for the formation of voters' associations which prepare 4 lists of candidates, the votes for whom are in a falling scale according to the order in which the voter has placed them. There may, within limits, be compacts between associations, and joint candidates may be entered in competing lists, while any voter may either support an association list or vote for any candidate he pleases. Every citizen entitled to vote is eligible to the House of Representatives, which is elected for 3 years.

The President is elected for 6 years by the votes of the citizens. He receives a salary of 700,000 marks and 200,000 marks for allowances. The Council of State (Ministry), appointed by the President, must enjoy the confidence of the House of representatives.

At the elections held in July, 1927, the following parties were returned: Social-Democrats, 60; Agrarians, 52; Finnish Coalition Party, 34; Socialist Labour Party, 20; Swedish Party, 24; Finnish Progressive Party, 10.

President of Finland.—Dr. Lauri Relander (born 1883; elected February 16, 1925).

The Council of State, appointed on December 22, 1928, is composed as follows (five members of Progressive Party, four of Coalition Party):—

Prime Minister.—Oskari Mantere.

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Hj. J. Procopé.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. H. M. J. Relander.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. T. M. Kivimäki.

Minister of Defence.—A. K. Cajander.

Minister of Justice.—Antton Kolonen.

Minister of Education.—Prof. Lauri Ingman.

Minister of Agriculture.—K. E. Linna.

Minister of Communications.—Jalmar Castrén.

Minister of Commerce and Industries.—Prof. Kyösti Järvinen.

Minister of Social Affairs.—Niilo A. Mannio.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes Finland is divided into nine departments. The provincial administration is entrusted in each of the departments to a prefect, who is appointed by the President. The unit of local government is the commune. Each rural parish and each town forms a commune in which all men and all women of 21 years of age who have paid the local taxes for the preceding two years are voters. In all communes a communal council is elected to decide questions of administration and local economy. The executive power is vested in rural communes in a college formed by the head of the commune and four or more aldermen elected by the council. In towns the executive authority is the magistrates with the burgomaster as president and other members elected by the council. There were, in 1928, 38 towns, 16 boroughs, and 533 rural communes in Finland. As executive officers of the Prefects there are the bailiffs of 54 and sub-bailiffs of 295 districts.

The department of Åland has a county council (landsting) consisting of one chamber which is elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the Parliament. The county council settles the internal affairs of the government. The executive authority is with an executive council, of which the lantråd is president.

Area and Population.

The area and population of Finland, according to the census taken on December 31, 1920, and that estimated on December 31, 1927, are as follows:—

Departments	Area <sup>1</sup> English sq. miles	Population Dec. 31, 1920	Population <sup>2</sup> Dec. 31, 1927	Population per sq. mile, 1927
Uusimaa (Nyland)	4,388	446,329	484,136	110.8
Turku-Pori (Åbo-Björneborg)	8,397	495,661	516,800	61.6
Åland (Ahvenanmaa)	551	26,911	27,210	49.4
Häme (Tavastehus)	6,787	360,528	382,118	56.7
Vilpuri (Viborg)	12,072	558,202	603,888	50.0

Of the total on December 31, 1920, 1,660,230 were males and 1,704,577 females. In 1920, 2,754,228 spoke Finnish, 340,963 Swedish, 4,806 Russian, 2,378 German, 1,603 Lapponic.

The growth of the population is shown as follows:—

Years	In Towns	In Country	Total	Percentage in towns
1800	46,604	786,055	832,659	5.60
1800	339,618	2,372,949	2,712,562	12.52
1925	599,271	2,927,088	3,526,359	16.90
1926	600,157	2,949,068	3,558,220	17.12
1927	620,471	2,961,935	3,582,406	17.32

According to the census of December 31, 1920, the population was divided according to occupations as follows: agriculture, 2,020,021 (65 per cent.); industry, 459,751 (15 per cent.); communications, 104,142 (3 per cent.); commerce, 106,276 (3 per cent.); public administration, 52,250 (2 per cent.); professions, 49,587 (2 per cent.); others, 318,076 (10 per cent.).

The movement of the population for four years was as follows:—

Year	Living Births	Of which illegitimate	Stillborn	Marriages	Deaths (exclusive of stillborn)	Excess of Births
1924	78,057	6,776	2,101	22,048	53,442	24,615
1925	78,260	6,854	2,004	22,103	47,403	30,767
1926	76,875	6,244	2,202	22,605	47,526	29,349
1927	75,611	6,000	2,088	24,200	51,727	23,884

Emigration: 1921, 3,557; 1922, 5,715; 1923, 13,835; 1924, 5,429; 1925, 2,490; 1926, 6,043; 1927, 6,088.

The principal towns, with the number of their inhabitants at end of 1927, are: Helsinki (Helsingfors), 220,904; Turku (Åbo), 62,599; Tampere (Tammerfors), 53,121; Viipuri (Viborg), 49,912; Vaasa (Vasa), 24,204; Oulu (Uleåborg), 23,286; Kuopio, 23,486; Pori (Björneborg), 17,824; and Kotka, 15,444.

Religion and Education.

The National Church is Evangelical Lutheran religion, but entire liberty of conscience is guaranteed to the members of all religions and confessions. Ecclesiastically Finland is divided into 5 bishoprics (Turku being the archiepiscopal see), 52 provostships, and 589 parishes.

Of the total population there were at end of 1927: Lutherans, 3,473,382; Greek-Catholics and Raskolnics, 60,567; Roman Catholics, 678; Baptists, etc., 8,333; Jews, 1,745; Mohammedans, 181; belonging to the civil-register, 37,520. The Greek-Catholics are under an archbishop, resident at Viipuri.

Finland has 3 universities: at Helsinki (founded in 1640 at Turku, and removed to Helsinki after having been burned down in 1827), with (1928) 309 teachers and 4,032 students (1,341 women); at Turku (Swedish, opened 1919), with 46 teachers and 200 students (38 women); and at Turku (Finnish, opened 1922), with 26 teachers and 290 students (138 women). In 1926, there were also 1 technical school at Helsinki, with 89 teachers and 695 students (20 women), and 2 commercial schools, one Finnish with 17 teachers and 184 students (26 women), and the other Swedish with 16 teachers and 106 students (22 women).

For secondary education there were, in 1927, 119 lyceums, leading to university, 2,363 teachers and 36,302 pupils (17,907 girls); 71 middle schools (with a curriculum of 5 years), with 653 teachers and 9,552 pupils. There were 8 training colleges for elementary school teachers, with 112 teachers and 1,680 students; and 4 for infant school teachers, with 343 students. There were also 58 high schools for the people, with 368 teachers and 2,838 pupils (2,061 females). For elementary education (1927) there were in the country 4,670 elementary schools, with 219,053 pupils (107,580 girls); 3,081 lower elementary schools, with 70,292 pupils; and (1925) 867 infant schools under the superintendence of the Church, with 96,035 pupils. In the towns there were (1927) 1,257 classes of higher elementary schools, with 88,261 pupils (18,483 girls). There were besides 5 navigation schools, with 180 pupils; 41 commercial schools, with 3,336 pupils; 10 industrial schools, with 737 pupils; 2 technical schools, with 141 pupils; 147 schools for arts and crafts, with 7,945 pupils; 45 agricultural schools, with 1,891 pupils; 4 dairy schools, with 86 pupils; 39 cattle-management schools, with 1,211 pupils; 41 household schools, with 1,765 pupils; 6 horticultural schools, with 82 pupils; and 5 forestry schools, with 199 pupils. The school age in primary schools is from 7 to 15 years.

In 1920, only 0·7 per cent. of persons who have completed their 15th year could neither read nor write.

In 1926, there were published 398 newspapers and reviews in Finnish, 98 in Swedish, 58 in Finnish and Swedish, and 6 in other languages.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice is independent of the Government. The lowest courts of justice in Finland are those of the District. In towns these district courts are held by the burgomaster and his assessors; in the country by a judge and 12 jurors—peasant proprietors, the judge alone deciding, unless the jurors unanimously differ from him, when their decision prevails. From these courts an appeal lies to the Superior Court (Hovioikeus) in Turku, Vaasa and Viipuri. The Supreme Court of Judicature (Korkein oikeus) sits in Helsinki. Judges can be removed only by judicial sentence.

Two functionaries, the Oikeuskansleri or the Chancellor of Justice, and the Oikeusasiamies, or the Attorney-General, exercise control over the administration of justice. The former acts also as counsel and public prosecutor for the Government; while the latter, who is appointed by the Parliament, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law.

At the end of 1927, the prison population numbered 6,700 men and 628 women, while the number of sentences pronounced in 1926 was 98,177 for crimes and 34,720 in civil cases.

Pauperism.

The number of paupers in 1926 supported by the towns and the village communities was 112,183 (3·4 per cent. of the population); and the total cost was 227,987,812 marks.

The income of the towns in 1919 was 310,237,838 marks, and the expenditure 277,349,296 marks. Their assets amounted to 1,095,425,613, and their debts to 405,055,545 marks.

Defence.

ARMY.

The military forces of Finland consist of: (1) the army, air force and coast defence, recruited on the principle of universal service, (2) the Civic Protective Guards Organisation, recruited from the voluntarily enrolled citizens.

The President of the Republic is Commander-in-Chief of the Finnish military forces, but during war he may invest a general with that authority. In peace time the Minister of Defence appointed by the President is responsible for the military administration and the Chief of the Army is in command. The Chief of the Army, assisted by the Chief of the General Staff and his Staff, directs the affairs of the General Staff of the Navy.

Every citizen is liable to serve from the age of 17 to the age of 52. The conscripts are divided into troops of the line and the "landwehr."

The troops of the line consist of the standing army and the reserve. All young men who have reached the age of 21 years are summoned to active service. The period of service is generally 12 months—in the cavalry, air force, technical troops, navy, and field and coast artillery 15 months. The term of service is the same for those who are appointed to be trained to officers of the reserve or non-commissioned officers. In the reserve to which the conscript belongs after service with the colours, the period of service is 7 years.

The "landwehr" is divided into three classes; to the first class belong the conscripts who after their service in the reserve are relegated to the "landwehr" (men of 29–52 years); to the second, the conscripts who are considered as incapable for active service (men of 21–52 years), and the third, young men who cannot on account of their youth yet be enrolled as conscripts (17–21 years).

The effectives in 1928 amounted to 2,051 officers and officials and 26,152 other ranks, organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Artillery Groups	Batteries	Companies	Machine Gun Companies
Infantry . . .	3	10	26	—	—	—	79	27
Tanks . . .	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	—
Cavalry . . .	—	3	—	10	—	—	—	2
Artillery . . .	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Field . . .	—	4	—	—	19	25	—	—
Heavy & Coast	—	4	—	—	10	18	4	—
Engineers . . .	—	—	5	—	—	—	18	—
Aviation . . .	—	—	—	7	—	—	—	—

The Civic Protective Guards Organisation is an essential part of the plan of defence. Concerning the administration the Commander-in-Chief of the Protective Guards appointed by the President is subordinated to the Minister of Defence, and directly responsible to the President with regard to his command. The number of the Protective Guards is about 100,000.

The military ordinary and extraordinary budget for 1928 amounted to 548,521,000 Finnish marks. Among the miscellaneous expenses in the total budget of the Republic there is a subsidy for the Protective Guards which, in 1928, amounted to 35,000,000 Finnish marks in the ordinary, and 12,000,000 in the extraordinary.

NAVY.

The naval forces consist of 6 light gun-boats, 2 torpedo-boats, 4 torpedo-motor-boats, 4 minelayers, 2 minesweepers and a number of motor launches. Some additional vessels are projected, and 3 submarines are under construction at Abo.

The coast defence is organised under the Minister of Defence in two sections, viz., the mobile defences, under the Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet; and the fixed defences, under the Inspector of Coast Defence.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people in Finland, although the cultivated area only covers 6.1 per cent. of the land. The land was divided in 1920 into 250,749 farms, and the landed property was distributed as follows:—Less than 3 hectares cultivated, number of farms, 96,474; 3–10 hectares, farms 98,258; 10–25 hectares, farms 41,119; 25–100 hectares, farms 13,961; over 100 hectares, farms 937.

The principal crops of 1927 were as follows:—rye, 566,919 acres, yielding 327,465 tons; barley, 267,000 acres, yielding 143,067 tons; oats, 1,111,800 acres, yielding 632,988 tons; potatoes, 174,310 acres, yielding 758,012 tons; hay, 2,497,376 acres. Total land under cultivation, 1927, 5,337,860 acres. Butter production in 1927 was 22,296 tons.

Domestic animals in 1927:—Horses, 395,968; horned cattle, 1,871,865; sheep, 1,368,173; goats, 11,021; pigs, 417,723.

The total forest land amounts to 62,429,000 acres, of which 24,835,000 acres belong to the State. The productive forest land covers 49,764,000 acres, of which 17,570,000 acres belong to the State.

Finland had, in 1927, 3,789 large factories, employing an aggregate of 159,141 workers, and yielding an aggregate product of 12,382 million marks. The chief were:—

Shipping and Navigation.

The mercantile marine of Finland on January 1, 1928, aggregated 4,991 vessels of 491,689 net registered tons, and consisted of 520 sailing vessels of 80,742 tons; 547 steam vessels of 109,711 tons, 91 motor boats of 11,224 tons, and 3,833 lighters of 290,612 tons.

Vessels entered from and cleared for foreign countries, in 1926, were as follows:—

Countries	Entered		Cleared
	Number	Net tons	Number	Net tons
United Kingdom . . . .	926	897,988	1,741	1,621,460

On the air lines Helsinki-Stockholm, Helsinki-Reval, and Helsinki-Riga, 3,148 passengers and 43,600 kg. goods and mail were transported in 1927.

Internal Communications.

For internal communications Finland has a remarkable system of lakes connected with each other and with the Gulf of Finland by canals. The number of vessels which passed along the canals in 1926 was 50,787, and the number of timber-rafts 13,318; the receipts from vessels, 11,264,300 marks; and expenditure, 6,395,200 marks.

On December 31, 1927, there were 15,613 miles of high roads and (in 1922) 16,162 miles of secondary roads.

Railway history in Finland begins in 1860, when the State built a line 66 miles long between Helsinki and Hämeenlinna. On December 31, 1927, there were 3,164 miles of railways, all but 165 miles belonging to the State. The gauge is 1·524 metres (4·9 feet). The traffic upon the State railways in 1927 was 23 million passengers and 11·1 million tons of goods. The total cost of the State railways to the end of 1927 was 5,500 million marks. The total revenue in 1927 was 836,181,000 marks, and the total expenditure 684,541,000 marks.

Finland had 2,891 post-offices in 1927, and revenue and expenditure were respectively 125,209,000, and 87,064,000 marks. The number of letters and postcards was 75,211,000; samples and printed packets, 17,862,000; newspapers, 164,996,000; money-orders, 2,017,000; total, 260,086,000.

There were in 1926, 14,170 miles of telegraph and 5,264 miles of telephone wires belonging to the State in Finland. The number of telegraph messages sent in the year 1926 was 1,460,131. The telegraph system and part of the telephone system is State property.

Banking, Money, Weights, &c.

The Bank of Finland (founded in 1811) is the State Bank and the only bank of issue. The Bank is under the guarantee of the House of Representatives; its capital and reserves are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and foreign correspondents, and the additional right of issue 1,200 million marks. The paper currency of the Bank of Finland on October 31, 1928, was 1,539 million marks, against which the bank held a stock of gold of 306 million marks, and the foreign correspondents 683 million marks. Finland had in 1927, besides the State bank, 19 joint stock banks with 570 offices. The deposits of all private banks on December 31, 1927, were 6,961.6 million marks.

The number of ordinary savings banks at the end of 1927 was 472; number of depositors over 660,000, who had to their credit 3,105.8 million marks; in the Post Office savings banks over 134,000 depositors had 197.9 million marks; and on Consumers' Co-operative Societies' Savings Account 345.0 million marks were deposited.

The markka of 100 penni is stabilized at the current rate of exchange for the dollar of 39.70, and is of the value of 1.24d.

According to the new monetary law gold coin is to be struck of the value of 100 and 200 marks. The former will contain 315/19 grammes and the latter 711/19 grammes of fine gold. Nickel coins are 1,  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and  $\frac{1}{4}$  markka pieces. Copper coins 10 and 5 penni pieces.

The metric system of weights and measures is officially and universally employed in Finland.

FRANCE.

Constitution and Government.

CENTRAL.

SINCE the overthrow of Napoleon III. on September 4, 1870, France has been under a Republican form of government, confirmed on February 25, and July 16, 1875, by a constitutional law, which has been partially modified in June, 1879, August, 1884, June, 1885, and July, 1889. It vests the legislative power in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, and the executive in the President of the Republic and the Ministry.

The President is elected for seven years, by an absolute majority of votes, by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies united in a National Assembly, or Congress. He promulgates the laws voted by both Chambers, and ensures their execution. He selects a Ministry from the two Chambers, but may, and sometimes does, choose ministers who are not members of either Chamber (e.g. a general as Minister for War, an admiral as Minister of Marine, a civilian as Minister for Foreign Affairs); he appoints to all civil and military posts, has the right of individual pardon, and is responsible only in case of high treason. The President concludes treaties with foreign Powers, but treaties which affect the area of France or of French colonies must be approved by the Legislature, and he cannot declare war without the previous assent of both Chambers. Every act of the President has to be countersigned by a Minister. With the consent of the Senate he can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies. In case of vacancy, the two Chambers united immediately elect a new President.

President of the Republic.—Gaston Doumergue; born August 1, 1863; elected June 13, 1924.

The Ministers or Secretaries of State, the number of whom varies, are usually, but not necessarily, members of the Senate or Chamber of Deputies. The President of the Council (Premier) chooses his colleagues in concert with the President of the Republic. Each Minister has the direction of one of the great administrative departments and each is responsible to the Chambers for his acts, while the Ministry as a whole is responsible for the general policy of the Government.

The Ministry consists of the following members, appointed November 11, 1928:—

Prime Minister.—M. Raymond Poincaré (Senator).

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Justice.—M. Louis Barthou (Senator).

Minister of Finance.—Henri Chéron (Senator).

Minister of the Interior.—M. André Tardieu (Deputy).

Minister of War.—M. Paul Painlevé (Deputy).

Minister of Marine.—M. Georges Leygues (Deputy).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—M. Aristide Briand (Deputy).

Minister of Colonies.—M. André Maginot (Deputy).

Minister of Public Instruction and of Fine Arts.—M. Pierre Marraud (Senator).

Minister of Public Works.—M. Pierre Forgeot (Deputy).

Minister of Commerce.—M. Georges Bonnefous (Deputy).

Minister of Agriculture.—M. Jean Hennessy (Deputy).

Minister of Labour, Hygiene, Assistance, and Social Provision.—M. Louis Loucheur (Deputy).

Minister of Pensions.—M. Louis Antériou (Deputy).

Minister of Air.—M. Laurent Eynac (Deputy).

The Chamber of Deputies is elected for four years, by manhood suffrage, and each citizen 21 years old, not actually in military service, who can prove a six months' residence in any one town or commune, and not otherwise disqualified, has the right of vote. Deputies must be citizens and not under 25 years of age. The manner of election of Deputies has been modified several times since 1871. The scrutin de liste, under which each elector votes for as many Deputies as the entire department has to elect, was introduced in 1871. In 1876 it was replaced by the scrutin d'arrondissement, under which each department is divided into a number of arrondissements, each elector voting for one Deputy only; in 1885 there was a return to the scrutin de liste, in 1889 the universal vote was reintroduced; in 1919 the scrutin de liste, with proportional representation, was again adopted; but in 1927 (July 12) the old system of scrutin d'arrondissement was once more introduced. In each constituency the votes are cast up and the Deputy proclaimed elected by a commission of Councillors-General appointed by the prefect of the department. The Chamber is now composed of 612 Deputies.

Chamber of Deputies, elected 22-29 April 1928:—Communists, 16; Democrats, 22; Independent Radicals, 64; Left Republican Democrats, 84; Socialists, 104; Radicals and Radical Socialists, 110; Republican Socialists and French Socialists, 46; Republicans of the Left, 94; Democratic Republican Union, 110; Conservatives, 12.

The Senate is composed of 314 members, elected for nine years from citizens 40 years old, one-third retiring every three years. The election of the Senators is indirect, and is made by an electoral body composed (1) of delegates chosen by the Municipal Council of each commune in proportion to the population; and (2) of the Deputies, Councillors-General, and District Councillors of the department. Besides the 225 Departmental Senators elected in this way, there were, according to the law of 1875, 75 Senators elected for life by the united two Chambers; but by the Senate Bill of 1884 it was enacted that vacancies arising among the Life Senatorships would be filled by the election of ordinary nine-years Senators, the department which should have the right to the vacant seat to be determined by lot. The Princes of deposed dynasties are precluded from sitting in either House.

Senate, elected on January 11, 1924: Gauche Démocratique, 157; Union Républicaine, 88; Gauche Républicaine, 30; Right, 10; Union Démocratique et Radicale, 23; Independents, 6.

The Senate and Chamber of Deputies assemble every year on the second Tuesday in January, unless a previous summons is made by the President of the Republic, and they must remain in session at least five months out of the twelve. The President is bound to convoke them if the demand is made by one-half of the number of members composing each Chamber. The President can adjourn the Chambers, but the adjournment cannot exceed the term of a month, nor occur more than twice in the same session.

Bills may be presented either in the Chamber or Senate by the Government, or on the initiative of private members. In the first case they are remitted to the bureaux for examination; in the second, they are first submitted to a commission of parliamentary initiative. Financial laws must be first presented to and voted by the Chamber of Deputies.

The Senate, constituted as a High Court of Justice, tries cases of attempt against the safety of the State or of plotting to change the form of government.

Senators and Deputies are paid 62,000 francs a year and the Presidents of the two Chambers receive allowances for the expense of entertainment. Members of both Chambers travel free on all railways by means of a small annual payment. The dotation of the President of the Republic is 1,800,000 francs, with a further allowance of 1,800,000 francs for his expenses. On January 1, 1905, a fund was instituted for pensions to ex-Deputies, or their widows and orphans. It is supported by contributions from Deputies (deducted from their pay) as well as by gifts and legacies.

France has, besides, a special institution under the name of Conseil d'État, which was introduced by Napoleon I., and has been maintained since. It is presided over by the Minister of Justice or (in his absence) by a vice-president, and is composed of Councillors, Masters of Requests (Maîtres des Requêtes), and Auditors, all appointed by the President of the Republic. Its duty is to give opinion upon such questions, chiefly those connected with administration, as may be submitted to it by the Government. It is judge in the last resort in administrative suits, and it prepares the rules for the public administration.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes France is divided into 90 departments including the 'territory of Belfort' (remnant of the department of Haut-Rhin). Since 1881, the three departments of Algeria are also treated for most purposes, as part of France proper. The department has representatives of all the Ministries, and is placed under a Prefect, nominated by Government, and having wide and undefined functions. He is assisted by a Prefecture Council, an administrative body, whose advice he may take without being bound to follow it. The Prefect is a representative of the Executive, and, as such, supervises the execution of the laws, issues police regulations, supplies information on matters which concern the department, nominates subordinate officials, and has under his control all officials of the State. There is a Sub-Prefect in every arrondissement, except in those containing the capitals of departments and the department of the Seine.

The unit of local government is the commune, the size and population of which vary very much. There were, in 1926, in the 90 departments into which France was divided, 37,981 communes. Most of them (33,914) had less than 1,500 inhabitants, and 22,151 have even less than 500; while 159 communes only have more than 20,000 inhabitants. The local affairs of the commune are under a Municipal Council, composed of from 10 to 86 members, elected by universal suffrage, and by the scrutin de liste for 4 years by Frenchmen after 21 years and 6 months' residence; but each act of the Council must receive the approval of the Prefect, while many must be submitted to the Council General or even to the President of the Republic, before becoming lawful. Even the commune's quota of direct taxation is settled by persons (répartiteurs) chosen by the Prefect from among the lists of candidates drawn up by the Municipal Council.

Each Municipal Council elects a Mayor, who is both the representative of the commune and the agent of the central government. He is the head of the local police and, with his assistants, acts under the orders of the Prefect.

In Paris the Municipal Council is composed of 80 members; each of the 20 arrondissements into which the city is subdivided has its own Mayor. The place of the Mayor of Paris is taken by the Prefect of the Seine, and, in part, by the Prefect of Police. Lyons has an elected Mayor, but the control of the police is vested in the Prefect of the department of the Rhone.

The next unit is the canton (3,019), which is composed of an average of 12 communes, although some of the largest communes are, on the contrary, divided into several cantons. It is a seat of a justice of the peace (juge de paix), but is not an administrative unit.

The district, or arrondissement (279), has an elected conseil d'arrondissement, with as many members as there are cantons, its chief function being to allot among the communes their respective parts in the direct taxes assigned to each arrondissement by the Council General. That body stands under the control of the Sub-Prefect. A varying number of arrondissements form a department, which has its conseil général renewed by universal suffrage to the extent of one-half every three years (one Councillor for each canton). These conseils deliberate upon all economical affairs of the department, the repartition of the direct taxes among the arrondissements, the roads, normal schools, and undertakings for the relief of the poor. Their decisions are controlled by the Prefect, and may be annulled by the President of the Republic.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The legal population at the date of the last two enumerations was:—

<sup>1</sup> Not including military and naval forces and crews of the commercial navy abroad which in 1926 numbered 178,534, and in 1921, 192,973.

The population in 1927 was estimated at 40,960,000.

According to the Peace Treaty with Germany (June 28, 1919) Alsace-Lorraine has been transferred to France, to date from the Armistice of November 11, 1918. The districts of Lower Alsace, Upper Alsace and Lorraine have become the departments of Bas-Rhin (1,848 square miles and population 670,985); Haut-Rhin (1,354 square miles, population 490,654), and Moselle (2,403 square miles, population 633,461). Thus the total area added to France is 5,605 square miles, population (1926) 1,795,100.

In 1926 the rural population was 20,759,131 and the urban population 19,984,766.

According to the Treaty of Versailles (article 45), France obtained from Germany as a compensation for the destruction of the coal mines in the North of France, the exclusive rights of exploitation of the coal mines situated in the Saar Basin. The area of this district is about 751 square miles, and the population 657,870. For the next 15 years the Saar Basin will be governed by a Commission of Five, chosen by the League of Nations. At the end of 15 years the population will decide by vote one of three alternatives, viz., the maintenance of the rule set up by the Treaty, union with France, or union with Germany.

Between the years 1811 and 1820, the average annual surplus of births over deaths was 5.7 per thousand of population; between 1881 and 1890, it was 1.8; between 1901 and 1910 it was 1.2; and between 1921 and 1924 it was 2.25.

In the following table, the third, fourth, and fifth columns give [in brackets] for the first five censuses the population, its density, and its average annual increase of France, excluding Alsace-Lorraine, and are thus comparable with the data for the censuses posterior to the loss of Alsace and Lorraine (1872-1911).

The number of divorces was 15,450 in 1913, 20,002 in 1925, 20,006 in 1926, and 18,487 in 1927.

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The following towns, according to the census of 1926, have each a population of over 100,000 (figures for census of 1921 added for comparison):—

	1926	1921
Paris . . . . .	2,871,429	2,906,472

For fiscal and electoral purposes the population of each commune is divided into agglomerated, scattered, and separated (comptée à part); the first two constitute the municipal population, and the third consists of garrison, college, prison, and hospital population. Different from this is the distinction between urban and rural population, a commune being urban where the agglomerated population is over 2,000, and rural where under 2,000.

Religion.

No religion is recognised by the State.

Under the law promulgated on December 9, 1905, the Churches were separated from the State, the adherents of all creeds were authorised to form associations for public worship (associations cultuelles). As transitional measures, ecclesiastics over 45 years of age and of over 25 years of service remunerated by the State were entitled to a pension, and all other ecclesiastics were to receive a grant during a period of from four to eight years. All buildings actually used for public worship and as dwellings in that connection were to be made over, after an inventory was taken, to the associations for public worship: the places of worship for the total period of the existence of these associations, the ecclesiastical dwellings for a time.

The law of January 2, 1907, provides (among other things) that, failing associations cultuelles, the buildings for public worship, together with their furniture, will continue at the disposition of the ministers of religion and the worshippers for the exercise of their religion; but, in each case, there is required an administrative act drawn up by the préfet as regards buildings belonging to the State or the Departments, and by the maire as regards buildings belonging to the Communes. Forms of the documents necessary under the new law have been supplied by the Government.

There are 17 archbishops and 68 bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in France, not including Alsace and Lorraine, Algeria or the colonies, in addition to 51,000 clergy of various grades. The Protestants of the Augsburg Confession are, in their religious affairs, governed by a General Consistory, while the Reformed Church is under a Council of Administration, the seat of which is at Paris. There are about a million Protestants in France.

The Associations law, passed July 1, 1901, requires religious communities to be authorised by the State, and no monastic association can be authorised without a special law in each particular case. Before the passing of that law there were 910 recognised associations, and 753 not recognised; the establishments, mostly not recognised, numbered 19,514, and their members 159,628 (30,136 men and 129,492 women). After the passing of the law, of the 753 associations not recognised, 305 dissolved themselves and 448 asked for authorisation, which was refused by the Chambers to the majority of them.

Education.

The public schools constitute the University of France and are divided into three classes, primary, secondary, and superior. The Superior Council of 52 members has deliberative, administrative, and judiciary functions, and a Consultative Committee advises respecting the working of the school system, but the inspectors-general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local educational administration France is divided into 17 circumscriptions, called Academies, each of which has an Academic Council whose members comprise a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Councils deal with all grades of instruction. Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, one for each department except Nord which has two (one being for primary instruction), and Seine which has eight (one being director of primary instruction), besides primary inspectors of schools, usually one for each arrondissement, 20 inspectors (male or female) for the department of the Seine. Each department has a council for primary educational matters, the prefect being president, and this body has large powers with respect to the inspection, management and maintenance of schools and the opening of free schools.

The law of August 9, 1879, rendered obligatory for each department the maintenance of two primary normal schools, one for school-masters, the other for school-mistresses; there are two higher normal schools of primary instruction: one at Fontenay-aux-Roses for professors for normal schools for school-mistresses, the other at St. Cloud for professors for normal schools for school-masters. The law of June 16, 1881, made instruction absolutely free in all primary public schools; that of March 28, 1882, rendered it obligatory for all children from 6 completed to 13 years of age. The law of October 30, 1886, is the organic law of primary instruction now in force; it established that teachers should be lay; for infant schools it substituted écoles maternelles instead of salles d'asile; it fixed the programmes of instruction, and established freedom of private schools under the supervision of the school authorities.

The following table shows the condition of primary instruction for 3 years:—

On November 15, 1926, there were 282 higher elementary schools for boys and 209 for girls. The number of pupils was on November 15, 1926, 37,900 boys and 36,680 girls, compared with 37,556 boys and 33,907 girls on November 15, 1924.

Courses of instruction for adults are conducted in the evening by teachers in their schools.

In 1926, 9·44 per cent. of the conscripts could not write.

The number of primary normal schools (exclusive of Fontenay and St. Cloud) is 85 for school-masters, and 86 for school-mistresses. The number of pupil-teachers in primary normal schools in 1926-27 was 5,653 men and 6,702 women.

Secondary Instruction: Boys.—Secondary instruction is supplied in two types of schools—by the State in the lycées, and by the communes in the colleges, by associations and by private individuals in free establishments (écoles libres). The course of study extends over 7 years.

The number of public secondary schools for boys and the number of pupils for 3 years were as follows:—

Higher Instruction is supplied by the State in the universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the private faculties and schools. The freedom of higher instruction was established by the law of July 12, 1875, modified by that of March 18, 1880, which reserved to the State faculties the exclusive right to confer degrees. A decree of December 28, 1885, created a general council of the faculties, and the creation of universities, each consisting of several faculties, was accomplished in 1897, in virtue of the law of July 10, 1896.

There are 17 Universities in France. The following table shows the year of foundation and the total number of students on July 31, 1927 :—

The faculties are of four kinds : 15 faculties of Law (Paris, Aix, Bordeaux, Caen, Dijon, Grenoble, Lille, Lyon, Montpellier, Nancy, Poitiers, Rennes, Strasbourg, Toulouse, and Algiers) ; 9 faculties of Medicine (Paris, Montpellier, Bordeaux, Lille, Lyon, Toulouse, Nancy, Strasbourg, and Algiers) ; 17 faculties of Science (Paris, Besançon, Bordeaux, Caen, Clermont, Dijon, Grenoble, Lille, Lyon, Marseille, Montpellier, Nancy, Poitiers, Rennes, Toulouse, Strasbourg, and Algiers) ; 17 faculties of letters (at the towns last named) ; 4 faculties of medicine and 4 faculties of pharmacy (Paris, Montpellier, Nancy, Strasbourg), and 5 mixed faculties of medicine and pharmacy (Algiers, Bordeaux, Lille, Lyons, Toulouse) ; 15 schools with full functions and preparatory schools of medicine and pharmacy.

The following statement shows the number of students by faculties or schools in July, for 3 years :—

There are free faculties: at Paris (the Catholic Institute of Paris comprising theology, law and advanced scientific and literary studies); Angers (theology, law, sciences, letters, agriculture); Lille (theology, law, medicine and pharmacy, sciences, letters, social sciences and politics); Lyon (theology, law, sciences, letters); Marseilles (law); Toulouse (the Catholic Institute with theological, literary, and scientific instruction). There is, besides, in Paris a large institution for free higher instruction in political science, the École libre des Sciences Politiques, and also one for the study of international law, the Institut des Hautes Études Internationales.

The State faculties confer the degrees of bachelor, of licentiate, and of doctor. Yearly competitive examinations in the various branches of teaching (agréations) are open to holders of the degree of licentiate, or doctor in the case of law and medicine, and lead to the title of professeur agrégé in secondary and higher (law and medicine) instruction.

The other higher institutions dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction are the Collège de France (founded by Francis I. in 1530), which has courses of study bearing on various subjects, literature and language, archeology, mathematical, natural, mental and social science (political economy, &c.); the Museum of Natural History giving instruction in the sciences and nature; the École Pratique des Hautes Études (history and philology, mathematical and physico-chemical sciences, and the sciences of nature and of religion), having its seat at the Sorbonne; the École Normale Supérieure, which prepares teachers for secondary instruction and, since 1904, follows the curricula of the Sorbonne without special teachers of its own; the École des Chartes, which trains the archivist paleographers; the École des Langues Orientales vivantes; the École du Louvre, devoted to art and archeology; the École des Beaux-Arts, and the Bureau des Longitudes, the Central Meteorological Bureau; the Observatoire of Paris; and the French Schools at Athens, Rome, Cairo and Indo-China, besides a school for Morocco.

Outside Paris there are eight observatories (Meudon, Besançon, Bordeaux, &c.). The observatory at Nice is dependent on the Academy of Sciences.

Professional and Technical Instruction.—The principal institutions of higher or technical instruction dependent on other ministries are: the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers at Paris (with 20 evening courses on the applied sciences and social economy), the École Centrale des Arts et Manufactures, the École des Hautes Études Commerciales, 18 higher schools of commerce with 2,813 pupils (1926), dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction; the National Agronomic Institute at Paris, the Veterinary school at Alfort, a school of forestry at Nancy, the higher national school of colonial agriculture, national agricultural schools at Grignon, Rennes, Montpellier, 46 practical schools of Agriculture, &c., dependent on the Ministry of Agriculture; the École Supérieure de Guerre, the École Polytechnique, the military school at St. Cyr, the École d'Artillerie at Fontainebleau, the École de Cavalerie at Saumur, and other schools dependent on the Ministry of War; the Naval School at Brest dependent on the Ministry of Marine; the School of Mines at Paris, the School of Bridges and Roads at Paris, the School of Mines at St. Etienne, and the Schools of Miners at Alais and Douai; with other schools dependent on the Ministry of Public Works; the École Coloniale at Paris, dependent on the Ministry of the Colonies. The École des Beaux Arts, the École Nationale des Arts Décoratifs, and the Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation depend on the department of Fine Arts, which is attached to the Ministry of Public Instruction. The municipal school of Industrial Physics and Chemistry is dependent on the City of Paris. In the provinces there are National schools of fine arts, and schools of music, and also several municipal schools as well as free subventioned schools, etc.

Technical schools of a somewhat lower grade (dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction) are very numerous, comprising (in 1926—the latest available figures) seven national schools of arts and trades (Aix, Angers, Chalons, Cluny, Lille, Paris, Strasbourg), two schools of horology, six national professional schools, 129 practical schools of commerce and industry (of which 25 are for girls); 13 municipal professional schools in Paris, with 3,012 pupils, and about 370 private schools, with 92,000 pupils.

Justice and Crime.

The Courts of lowest jurisdiction in France are those of the Justices of Peace (juges de paix, one in each canton) who try small civil cases and act also as judges of Police Courts, where all petty offences (contraventions) are disposed of. The Correctional Courts pronounce upon all graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to 5 years. They have no jury, and consist of 3 judges belonging to the civil tribunals of first instance. In all cases of a délit or a crime the preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by an examining magistrate (juge d'instruction), who may either dismiss the case or send it for trial before a court where a public prosecutor (Procureur) endeavours to prove the charge. The Court of Assizes is assisted by 12 jurors, who decide by simple majority on the fact with respect to offences amounting to crimes. The highest courts are the 26 Courts of Appeal, composed each of one President and a variable number of members, for all criminal cases which have been tried without a jury: and one Court of Cassation which sits at Paris, for all criminal cases tried by jury, so far as regards matters of law.

Formerly there was a tribunal of first instance in each arrondissement for civil cases, wherein the amount in dispute is between 200 and 1,500 francs, but since the decree of September 3, 1926, such a tribunal exists only in each department. Where the department is an important one, this tribunal may be divided into several sections which sit in the towns other than the capital of the department. Above these are the Appeal Courts and the Court of Cassation. For commercial cases there are, in 226 towns, Tribunals of Commerce and Councils of experts (prud'hommes). In the towns are police courts.

All Judges are nominated by the President of the Republic. They can be removed only by a decision of the Court of Cassation constituted as the Conseil Supérieur of the magistracy.

The French penal institutions consist, first, of Houses of Arrest (3,295 chambres de sûreté and dépôts de sûreté at the end of 1923). Next come Departmental Prisons (70 in 1923), also styled maisons d'arrêt, de justice et de correction, where both persons awaiting trial and those condemned to less than one year's imprisonment are kept, as also a number of boys and girls transferred from, or going to be transferred to, reformatories. The reformatories are 13 for boys and 6 for girls, 10 for boys and 3 for girls being public, and 4 for boys and 4 for girls being private. The Central Prisons (maisons de force et de correction), where all prisoners condemned to more than one year's imprisonment are kept, provided with large industrial establishments for the work of prisoners, are 10 for men and 3 for women.

All persons condemned to hard labour and many condemned to 'reclusion' are sent to Guiana (military and récidivistes); the dépôt de forçats of St. Martin-de-Ré is a dépôt for transferred hard-labour convicts.

Pauperism and Relief of Old Age.

In France the poor are assisted partly through public 'bureaux de bienfaisance' and partly by private and ecclesiastical charity. They are partly under the care of the communes and partly of the departments, both of which contribute, and ultimately under the supervision of Government. The funds of the 'bureaux de bienfaisance' are partly derived from endowments, partly from communal contributions, and partly from public and private charity. In 1926, the bureaux expended 145,966,500 francs and assisted 735,201 persons. Public assistance is rendered to poor or destitute children. At the end of 1926 the institutions for this purpose contained 168,846 children; the expenditure during the year amounted to 137,717,600 francs. In 1926 the hospitals for the sick, infirm, aged, or infants, numbered 1,881; and at the end of the year had 78,770 patients, besides 38,607 aged and infirm inmates; their expenditure for 1926 amounted to 1,028,758,700 francs. In the same year 838,388 persons received gratuitous medical assistance at home and 277,061 in hospitals, the expenditure for such purposes amounting to 187,806,200 francs. At the end of 1926 the asylums for imbeciles, national, departmental, and private, had 67,723 patients.

An Act was passed in 1905, for the relief of the aged poor, age limit, 70, the infirm, and the permanently incurable. The Act of 1905 provided that the cost of the scheme should be borne by the communes, the departments, and the State. The number of persons registered for relief on December 31, 1926, was 526,170. The cost to the State for 1926, was 261,440,100 francs. The Old-Age Pensions Law of April 5, 1910, as amended on February 27, 1912, provides for all wage-earners old-age pensions towards which both employers and workers contribute. Contributions are to be paid up to the 60th year of the worker's life, and the State will contribute 100 francs. This sum will be increased by one-tenth for every insured worker who has brought up 3 children of the age of 16. On December 31, 1924, 7,735,000 persons were registered under the scheme.

A law of March 24, 1873, provides protection for new-born infants. In 1923, 69,718 infants came within the scope of the law. In 1913, two further laws were introduced: that of June 17 to give relief, varying from 0.50 to 1.50 francs or more per day, to women in confinement, and that of July 14, to give relief to families with numerous children. The rate is a minimum of 120 francs per year for every child beyond the third. In 1926, the number of women so aided was 333,861, and the amount of relief 21,013,600 francs. Supplementary relief to nursing mothers, under the law of October 24, 1914, amounted in 1926 to 37,229,800 francs. In 1926, the number of families assisted was 172,136, at an expense of 27,066,400 francs, of which 15,346,000 francs were contributed by the State. Since 1922 it has been customary, in accordance with the law of June 29, 1918, to award prizes for large families. In 1924, in 144 departments, 54,096 prizes were awarded to the value of 18,771,200 francs. By law of July 22, 1923, and July 13, 1925, 120 francs per annum is granted to every French family which has more than 3 children living for every child beyond the third under 13.

The annual charge on the foreign debt on December 31, 1927, amounted to 1,040,032,000 francs, and on the internal debt 13,998,345,663 francs.

II. LOCAL FINANCE.

For 1923, the revenue of the departments of France amounted to 2,312,883,080 francs. The departmental debt stood at 2,378,852,524 francs.

For the year 1928, the budget of the City of Paris was balanced at 3,062,800,000 francs (24,700,000*l.*). On March 31, 1924, the debt of the City of Paris was 6,476,014,549 francs.

Defence.

I. LAND DEFENCES.

France has a coastline of 1,760 miles, 1,304 on the Atlantic and 456 on the Mediterranean. Its land frontier extends over 1,665 miles, of which 1,246 miles are along the Belgian, German, Swiss, and Italian frontiers, and 419 along the Spanish frontier.

The permanent land defences of France now include the former German fortresses of Strassburg, Metz and Thionville, the former being in Alsace and the two latter in Lorraine. West of these lies the former first line of French permanent defences, namely the first-class fortresses of Verdun, Toul, Epinal and Belfort. The experiences of the Great War, which brought to light the power of mobile heavy artillery, the fire of which could be observed and directed from aeroplanes against permanent defences, will affect profoundly the principles of permanent fortification, and it is doubtful if many even of the first-class fortresses will in future be maintained, while those of the second and third classes will almost certainly disappear in so far as they have been designed to meet land attack. On the other hand coast defences will probably be maintained. On the coast Toulon, Rochefort, Lorient, Brest, and Cherbourg are naval harbours surrounded by forts.

II. ARMY.

The French Army is divided into the Metropolitan and the Colonial Armies, both are under the War Minister, but the estimates for Colonial troops other than those maintained in Algeria, Tunis, and Morocco are included in the budget of the Minister for the Colonies. The Metropolitan Army is divided into the Active Army, the Reserve Troops and the Territorial Army. The Army, with the exception of the Armies of Occupation is localised and territorialised in the military government of Paris, 20 Army Corps areas and the territories of Alsace and Lorraine. The normal composition of a French Army Corps is 2 infantry divisions, 1 regiment of cavalry, 1 artillery brigade of three regiments, 1 battalion of engineers, 1 group and 1 company of observation balloons, and administrative services.

The infantry division consists of 3 regiments of infantry each of 3 battalions, and 1 regiment of artillery of 3 groups each of 3 batteries. The cavalry division consists of 3 cavalry brigades each of 2 regiments, 1 group of horse artillery, and 1 group of cyclist chasseurs.

The peace establishment of the French Army provides for 5 Cavalry divisions and 30 divisions of the Active Metropolitan Army. The establishment of the Active Metropolitan Army by units was at the end of 1928 as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Independent Battalions	Squadrons	Independent Squadrons	Groups	Independent Groups	Special Coys or Batteries	Flights	Balloon Battalions

The total number of aeroplanes in army service was 1,429.

The peace establishment of the Active Metropolitan Army in 1928, was 413,578, included in this is the Air Force establishment of 32,836. Enlistment for the Metropolitan Army is regulated by the law of April 1, 1923, and is on a compulsory basis, but liberal exemptions are allowed. Service in the active army is for 1½ years, and from 1927, is to begin at the age of 21. At the end of this service the soldier remains on furlough (en disponibilité) for 2 years, he then serves in the first reserve for 16½ years, and in the second reserve for 8 years. A plan has been approved in principle for reducing service in the active army to 1 year. It is proposed to bring the new term of service into application in 1929.

The Reserve Troops form divisions corresponding to those in the Active Army on mobilisation, in the same districts as those to which the Active divisions belong. The Territorial Army forms a second line and is similarly organised in divisions on mobilisation. The Customs Corps is organised in battalions as are the Chasseurs Forestiers, these are both recruited from men who have passed into the Territorial Army.

The Gendarmerie is a police force recruited from the Army but performing civil duties in time of peace. There is a legion in each military district. The strength of the Gendarmerie is 29,736 (including the Garde Républicaine), of whom about half are mounted.

The Garde Républicaine is also a police force and performs duties in Paris similar to those performed by the Gendarmerie in the districts. Its strength is 6,300.

The Colonial Army is distinct from the Metropolitan, and consists partly of white troops and partly of native troops. In 1928, the troops of the Colonial establishment numbered 48,951, the Foreign Legion numbered 10,000, and other coloured troops 110,000, making with the Metropolitan Army a total peace establishment of 672,122. The Colonial white troops are recruited either by voluntary enlistment, or by voluntary transfer from the Metropolitan Army.

The organisation of the Colonial Army and North African troops by units is as follows:—

Infantry (white)		Infantry (white, colonial and native)		Cavalry		Artillery
Regiments (3 battalions) . . .	16	Zouaves Regts. . .	6	Chasseurs Regts. (d'Afrique) . . .	6	Field Regts. . .	10

The administration of the French Army consists of a General Staff and of a number of departments, all under the War Minister. In questions of strategy and of higher military policy the War Minister is assisted by a Council called the Conseil Supérieur de la Guerre, consisting of himself as President, the Marshals of France and twelve selected generals, of whom one must be Chief of the General Staff.

In September, 1919, it was decided that the uniform of the Army should be the horizon-blue dress with kepi. The Chasseurs or Light Infantry battalions were, however, permitted to keep their distinctive dark blue uniform. Khaki was adopted for Colonial and North African troops, and navy blue for the Air Force.

The French infantry is armed with the Lebel magazine rifle: calibre .315. The French field gun is the 7.5 cm. (2.95 in.) Q.F., shielded gun. The French howitzer is the 10.5 cm. (3.35 in.) howitzer, and as the result of the war the French Army possesses a large variety of heavy guns of all calibres.

NAVY.

Under the Washington Treaty, whose provisions affect her very slightly, France was allowed to retain ten capital ships, but the France was lost in Quiberon Bay on August 25, 1922, and the nine remaining displace 197,670 metric tons, while her replacement tonnage is 177,800 metric tons (175,000 tons). She is not called upon to scrap any ship until 1930, though she may begin to build earlier if she wishes. In replacement tonnage she is established as the equal of Italy. The current shipbuilding programme (to be completed by 1929) comprises 6 cruisers of 10,000 tons (of which two are completed), 3 cruisers of 7,880 tons (completed), 21 flotilla leaders (of which 6 are completed), 36 destroyers (20 completed), and 52 submarines, of three distinct types. The whole tendency is thus to devote attention to cruisers and the flotillas. The air service, which is an integral part of the Navy, is to be developed, and the ex-battleship Béarn (discontinued in 1920) has been completed as an aircraft-carrier. The coast defences are now under the control of the Navy, and have been reorganized in four coast 'naval frontier' districts, in relation to 4 divisions of aircraft (40 flotillas), while a fifth division (10 flotillas) is attached to the active fleet. The inclusion of ex-enemy light cruisers, destroyers, and submarines in the Fleet strengthened it where it was weakest, but these vessels will soon need replacement. The naval frontier districts include considerable forces of destroyers, submarines, and mine-layers. The chief stations are Dunkirk, Cherbourg, Brest, Rochefort, Toulon, Corsica, Bizerta, Oran, Algiers, and Bona.

The total naval expenditure in 1927-28, amounted to 1,837,778,819 francs, as compared with 1,761,419,886 francs in 1926-27.

The Navy is under the supreme direction of the Minister of Marine, assisted by a Chief of the Staff. The latter has charge of all that concerns preparation for war, and is commander-in-chief designate. There are two sub-chiefs of the staff, of whom one is in charge of various sections, and the other of the work of the Military Cabinet. The central administration embraces the directorates of personnel, matériel, and artillery, the works section, the finance department, the services of submarine defences, hydrography, and a central flying service. In addition to these are the Superior Council of the Navy, which advises the Minister on high policy, and several special committees. For purposes of administration the French coasts are divided into five maritime arrondissements, having their headquarters at the naval ports of Cherbourg, Brest, Lorient, Rochefort, and Toulon, each under a vice-admiral, but Lorient and Rochefort are being reduced. Two flag-officers are inspectors-general and commanders-in-chief designate in the Channel and Mediterranean.

The French navy is manned partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment. By the channel of the 'Inscription Maritime,' which was introduced by Colbert, and on the lists of which are the names of all male individuals of the 'maritime population,' France was formerly provided with a reserve of 114,000 men, of whom about 25,500 were usually serving with the fleet; now large numbers are taken from the shore for engine-room and other duties.

Certain ex-enemy vessels allotted to France are included in the following summary—4 cruisers, one flotilla leader, 12 destroyers, and 10 submarines. In addition to the units enumerated below, the aircraft carrier Béarn was placed in commission during 1927.

The four older cruisers are all ex-German except the Thionville, which was Austrian. Three cruisers of 10,000 tons, armed with 8 8in. guns (two of which have been named Suffren and Colbert) are under construction, and a fourth is to be ordered in 1929. During and since the war over 50 sloops and despatch vessels have been built.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of France, including Alsace and Lorraine (186,101,760 acres) 24,710,440 acres were under forests in 1926, 11,697,575 acres were returned as moor and uncultivated land, and 98,447,607 acres, of which 55,657,600 acres were arable, were returned as under crops, fallow and grass. Of the forest area (24,710,439 acres), 17,297,308 acres belong to private owners, 4,942,088 acres to communes, and 2,471,043 acres to the government.

The following tables show the area under the leading crops and the production (1 metric ton = 2205 lbs.) for three years:—

Crop	Area (1,000 acres)			Produce (1,000 metric tons)
	1925	1926	1927	1925	1926	1927
Wheat . . . . .	13,897	13,122	13,217	8,990	6,908	7,515

Beetroot . . . . .	586	572	595	5,371	4,860	6,002

In 1928, wheat production was estimated at 7,556,658; tons oats, 4,880,775 tons; rye, 898,235 tons; barley, 1,156,128 tons; mixed corn, 78,889 tons.

The annual production of wine and cider appears as follows:—

Year	Under Vines, acres	Wine produced thousands of gallons	Wine Import, thousands of gallons	Wine Export, thousands of gallons	Cider produced 1,000's of gallons
1900	3,974,970	1,441,330	114,760	41,010	647,000

In Alsace and Lorraine there were 34,432 acres under vines in 1927 compared with 31,550 acres in 1926, the yield being 7,186,696 gallons and 4,924,788 gallons in the two years respectively. The cider produced was 1,569,876 gallons in 1927 compared with 1,014,574 gallons in 1926.

The production of fruits (other than for cider making) and nuts for 1928, is given in metric tons, as follows (figures for 1927 in brackets):—Apples and pears 109,819 (293,420), plums 27,251 (48,495), peaches 15,256 (24,405), apricots 4,569 (10,028), nuts 25,741 (52,785), almonds 4,209 (6,267).

On December 31, 1927, the numbers of farm animals were: Horses, 2,927,230; mules, 182,720; asses, 259,800; cattle, 14,940,960; sheep and lambs, 10,693,120; pigs, 6,019,450; goats, 1,405,050.

Silk culture, with Government encouragement (primes), is carried on in 24 departments of France—most extensively in Gard, Drôme, Ardèche, Var and Vaucluse. Silk production for 4 years:—

Year	Number of producers	Quantities of eggs put into incubation	Total production	Total value of produce

Mineral oil . .	69	70	83	Potash salts .	1,189	1,296	1,246

The output of iron and steel products was as follows (in thousands of metric tons): pig iron, 1926, 9,431; 1927, 9,326; 1928, 10,097; worked steel, 1926, 8,430; 1927, 8,306; 1928, 9,387.

III. MANUFACTURES.

Sugar.—In 1926-27, there were 108 sugar works, employing 25,956 men, 999 women, and 359 children. The yield of sugar during 12 years (expressed in metric tons of refined sugar) was :—

Years	Tons	Years	Tons	Years	Tons	Years	Tons
1914-15	302,961	1919-20	155,101	1922-23	445,368	1925-26	678,545

Alcohol.—In 1906, 59,616 thousands of gallons of alcohol were produced; in 1922, 38,126; in 1923, 39,314; in 1924, 43,168; in 1925, 44,264; in 1926, 32,658; and in 1927, 37,348.

Cotton.—In 1928, there were 11,004,400 spindles, 191,400 looms and 268 textile printing machines used in the cotton industry which employed a total number of 188,630 operatives, and produced 229,000 tons of yarns and 1,239,000,000 metres of piece goods.

IV. FISHERIES.

For the French fisheries, including those of Algeria, the following are statistics for 1926 (the latest available):—Persons employed, 134,532; sailing boats, 19,812; steamers, 566; motor boats, 3,570; value of products, 1,057,567,000 francs.

Commerce.

In French statistics General Trade includes all goods entering or leaving France, while Special Trade includes only imports for home use and exports of French origin.

The chief subdivisions of the special trade in thousands of francs and in tons were for two years :—

—	Imports				Exports
	1927		1928		1927		1928

Internal Communications.

I. RIVERS, RAILWAYS, ETC.

In 1927, there were in France 24,426 miles of national roads, 7,550 miles of departmental roads, 349,002 miles of local roads, making a total of 380,978 miles.

In 1925, there were 6,796 miles of navigable waterways with a total traffic of 37,105,000 tons.

By a law of July 11, 1842, the construction of railways was left mainly to companies, superintended, and if necessary assisted, by the State; which now constructs lines which the companies work, and works on its own account one important State system. There are lines of local interest subventioned by the State or by the departments. The concessions granted to the six great companies expire at various dates from 1950 to 1960, till when (by a Convention made on June 28, 1921), the State guarantees to them working expenses and the interest and redemption of capital and loans.

The length of principal lines open for traffic in 1928 was 25,947 miles, made up as follows: State, 5,629 miles; Nord, 2,378 miles; Est, 3,121 miles; Paris-Orléans, 4,651 miles; Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean, 6,091 miles; Midi, 2,652 miles; Alsace-Lorraine, 1,425 miles. The total receipts for 1928 of all the seven companies was 14,576,975,000 francs; for 1927, 12,996,071,000 francs. Working expenses in 1927 amounted to 10,903,100,000 francs and financial charges, 2,680,900,000 francs, the deficit on the year being 321,700,000 francs.

The electrification of the French railways is now a settled policy. In 1928, there was a total length of 716 miles electrified. The State railway has 56 miles (Paris suburbs); the Orleans railway 144 miles (Paris-Vierzon 127 miles); the P.L.M. 16 miles (Chambéry to St. Pierre d'Albigny), and the Midi about 500 miles.

The following table gives particulars of air traffic for 5 years:—

Years	Miles of airway	Mileage flown (in thousands of miles)	Passengers carried	Freight (1,000 lbs.)	Mail (1,000 lbs.)	Load
						Passengers per trip	Mail and freight per trip lbs.
1921	3,556	1,460	10,619	577	77	1.63	101
1922	5,588	1,710	9,502	1,227	370	1.27	213

II. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

In 1927, the receipts on account of posts, telegraphs, and telephones, amounted to 2,820 million francs; the expenditure to 2,724 million francs. The number of ordinary letters carried in 1927, was 1,535 millions, and of registered letters 73 millions.

The total length of the telegraphic lines in 1927, was 220,467 miles. In 1927, there were despatched 43,895,732 telegrams, of which 28,550,380 were internal and 9,661,482 international. In 1927, gross telegraph receipts were 404,000,000 francs.

In 1927, the telephone systems in France had 112,639 miles of line, and 1,907,281 miles of wire; number of subscribers (1927) 848,522; number of conversations 703,064,826.

Money and Credit.

The nominal value of the French money coined in France during the past years was:—

Year	Gold	Silver	Nickel and Bronze	Total
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs
1914-1924 . . . . .	165,002,990	555,580,361	872,884,136	1,023,467,487
1925 . . . . .	—	—	136,165,058	136,165,058
1926 . . . . .	—	—	87,691,315	87,691,315
1927 . . . . .	—	—	81,827,083	81,827,083

The ordinary savings-banks numbered 558 (with about 1,800 branch offices) on December 31, 1927; the number of depositors was 9,041,817, with deposits to the value of 14,606,237,280 francs, representing an average of francs 1604·43 to each depositor. The National savings-banks, on December 31, 1926, held deposits and interest amounting to 4,418,129,000 francs due to 7,462,025 depositors, representing an average of 592 francs per account.

The Bank of France, founded in 1800, and placed under State control in 1806, has the monopoly (since 1848) of issuing bank notes. The present privileges of the Bank were last renewed on December 20, 1918, for a further 25 years, i.e., until December 31, 1945. The capital of the Bank is fixed at 182,500,000 francs.

The situation of the bank on February 16, 1928, and on February 28, 1929, was:—

	February 16, 1928	February 28, 1929
	1000 francs	1000 francs
Gold . . . . .	5,543,831	34,018,098
Silver . . . . .	342,935	195
Advances to the Public . . . . .	1,721,782	2,314,141
Advances to the State . . . . .	22,750,000	9,130,000
Notes in circulation . . . . .	57,952,175	63,101,466
Capital and Reserve . . . . .	500,777	481,802

At the outbreak of war the maximum note issue of the Bank of France was 6,800 million francs; on August 5, 1914, it was raised to 12,000 million francs; the amount was increased on successive occasions. By the Monetary Law of June 24, 1928, the maximum limit on note issue was cancelled.

The following are the principal banks:—The Cr dit Foncier de France, founded in 1852, which lends money on mortgage; the Cr dit Lyonnais, founded in 1863; the Soci t  G n rale, founded in 1864; the Comptoir-Nationale d'Escompte de Paris; Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas; and the Banque Nationale de Cr dit.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Franc of 100 centimes was in normal conditions of the value of 9½d. or 25·225 francs to the pound sterling.

A new Monetary Law was introduced on June 24, 1928, stabilising the franc on a gold basis. According to this law, the franc, the French monetary unit, consists of 85½ milligrammes of gold, 900/1,000 fine. The Bank of France is bound to convert its notes into gold on demand, and to keep a reserve of gold bullion and coin equal to at least 35 per cent. of the combined total of the notes in circulation and of the credit current accounts. The Mint will strike gold coins of 100 francs, 900/1,000 fine, and these coins shall be unlimited legal tender. To replace the 5, 10 and 20 franc notes of the Bank of France, which will be withdrawn from circulation before December 31, 1932 (from which date they will cease to be legal tender), the Mint, on behalf of the State, will issue silver coins 680/1,000 fine, of a nominal value of 10 and 20 francs. The total issue of such coins must not exceed 3 milliard francs.

The weight of the 10-franc silver coins is fixed at 10 grammes and of the 20-franc piece at 20 grammes, with a margin of five-thousandths both as regards weight and fineness.

The metric system of weights and measures is in general use in France.

ANDORRA:

The valleys of Andorra are of Carolingian origin. Their political status was regulated by the Paréage of 1278, according to which they were placed under the joint suzerainty of the head of the French state and of the Spanish Bishop of Urgel. The country consists of gorges, narrow valleys and defiles, surrounded by high mountain peaks. Its maximum length is 17 miles, and its width 18 miles; it has an area of 191 square miles and a population of 5,231, scattered in 6 villages. The surface of the country is rough and irregular, with an altitude varying between 6,562 and 10,171 feet. It is governed by a council of twenty-four members elected for four years by the heads of families in each of the six parishes. Half of the council is re-elected every two years. The council nominates a First Syndic (Syndic général des Vallées) to preside over its deliberations; in the First Syndic is vested the executive power. A Second Syndic is also nominated as deputy of the First Syndic. The judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by 2 civil judges (Bayles) appointed by the Bishop and by France respectively. There is a Court of Appeal and also a Supreme Court of Andorra at Perpignan. This, and the Ecclesiastical Court of the Bishop, are the highest appeal courts. For criminal suits two magistrates (le Viguié de France and le Viguié Episcopal) preside over a criminal court at Andorra-la-Vieille. The valleys of Andorra pay an annual due of 960 francs to France and 460 pesetas to the Bishop. A permanent delegate, the Prefect of the Pyrénées Orientales, moreover, has charge of the interests of France and his department controls the public services established by France, such as public instruction, posts, and telegraphs, etc. A good road runs from the Spanish frontier to Andorra. Catalan is the language spoken. French and Spanish currency are both in use.

Colonies and Dependencies.

The colonies and dependencies of France (including Algeria and Tunis) have an area which is given officially as about 10,255,510 sq. kilometres, or 3,958,626 square miles, with a population of 55,631,184. Algeria, however, is under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Interior, and Tunis and Morocco are attached to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. For Syria and Cameroon France holds mandates under the League of Nations. The administration of the colonies is directed or controlled by the Ministry of the Colonies, which was organised as a separate department in 1894. Most of them enjoy some measure of self-government and have elective councils to assist the governor. The older colonies have also direct representation in the French legislature, Réunion, Martinique and Guadeloupe sending each a senator and two deputies, French India a senator and a deputy, Senegal, Guiana, and Cochinchina each a deputy, while most of the others are represented on the 'Conseil Supérieur des Colonies.' This council consists of the senators and deputies of colonies, delegates from other colonies, and officials and other persons appointed on account of their special knowledge or qualifications. Some only of the colonies have a revenue sufficient for the cost of administration. In 1929, France is to spend on the colonial service 560,965,910 francs.

The area and population of the colonial domain of France are as follows :

ASIA.

FRENCH INDIA.

The chief French possession in India is Pondicherry. It was founded by the French in 1674, taken by the Dutch in 1693, and restored in 1699. The English took it in 1761, restored it in 1765, re-took it in 1778, restored it a second time in 1785; re-took it a third time in 1793, and restored it in 1814.

As established by the treaties of 1814, and 1815, the French possessions in India consist of five separate colonies, which cover an aggregate of 50,803 hectares (about 196 square miles), and had on January 1, 1928, the following estimated populations:—

*Pondichéry . . . 47,999	Modéliarpeth . . . 14,396	Nédoukadou . . . 7,680
Oulgaret . . . 24,518	Ariancoupom . . . 18,341	Cotchéry . . . 6,718
Villénour . . . 21,774	*Karikal . . . 18,614	*Chandernagor . . . 25,830
Tiroubouvané . . . 25,720	Tirnoular . . . 9,690	*Mahé . . . 11,706
Bahour . . . 19,562	Grande Aldée . . . 7,763	*Yanaon . . . 4,743
Nettapacom . . . 15,096	Neravy . . . 9,023	Total . . . 287,173

In 1928, the population of the Provinces was as follows:—Pondichéry, 187,406; Karikal, 57,488; Chandernagor, 25,830; Mahé, 11,706; Yanaon, 4,743.

The colonies are divided into five dependances (the chief towns of which are marked with an asterisk in the above table) and seventeen communes, having municipal institutions. There is also an elective general council. The Governor of the colonies resides at Pondichéry. The colonies are represented in the Parliament at Paris by one senator and one deputy. At Pondichéry the birth-rate in 1927, was 1·42 per cent. for Europeans, and 3·42 per cent. for Indians: and the death-rate 0·86 per cent. for Europeans, and 3·04 per cent. for Indians. There were in 1927, 59 primary schools and 3 colleges, all maintained by the Government, with 316 teachers and 10,514 pupils. Local revenue and expenditure (budget, 1928) 2,757,550 rupees. The principal crops are paddy, rice, manioc, ground-nuts. On December 31, 1927, there were 118,740 cattle, 59,770 sheep, and 32,890 goats. There are at Pondichéry 3 cotton mills, and at Chandernagor 1 jute mill; the cotton mills have, in all, 1,635 looms and 72,067 spindles, employing 7,925 persons. There are also at work a few oil presses for ground-nuts, and one ice factory. The chief exports from Pondichéry are oil seeds. At the ports of Pondichéry, Karikal, Mahé, and Yanaon in 1927, the imports amounted to 10,795,928 rupees, and the exports to 28,630,790 rupees. At these three ports in 1927, 445 vessels entered and cleared. Railway open, 43 miles, Pondichéry to Villapuram, and Peralam to Karikal.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Governor-General.—Pierre Pasquier (August 22, 1928).

Secretary General.—M. Graffeuil (November 4, 1928).

French Indo-China, with an area of about 285,000 square miles and a population, in 1926, of 20,700,000, of whom 83,000 were European (including military forces), consists of 5 States: the Colony of Cochin-China, the Protectorates of Annam, Cambodia (including the territory around Battambang ceded by Siam in 1907), Tonking and Laos; and Kwang-Chau-Wan, leased from China. The whole country is under a Governor-General, assisted by a Secretary-General, and each of the States has at its head an official bearing the title of Resident-Superior, except in the case of Cochin-China, which, being a direct French Colony while the others are only Protectorates, has a Governor at its head. There is a Government Council for the whole of Indo-China and a Permanent Commission of the Council.

In Cochin-China justice is administered by French magistrates for both Europeans and natives, but in the Protectorates there are native tribunals for matters affecting natives, and French courts for matters affecting Europeans. From the native tribunals there is an appeal to courts at Saigon and Hanoi. In these appeal courts European judges, in matters affecting natives, are assisted by Annamite mandarins.

There is a common budget for the whole of Indo-China, and also a separate budget for each of the States. The Provinces, in Cochin-China only, have also their budget, as have the municipalities. The general budget is supported by receipts from customs, Government monopolies, indirect contributions, posts, telegraphs, and railways in all the countries of the union, and besides maintaining these, provides for military and judicial services, public works, and other matters relating to the whole of the union. For 1928 the revenue and expenditure of the general budget balanced at 97,500,000 piastres. The outstanding debt of Indo-China amounted to 425,969,000 francs, to which must be added the loan of 6,180,000 piastres raised in March 1922, and the loan of 2,060,000 piastres in 1928.

The military force, consisting of two divisions with a special effective force, is commanded by the Commandant-Superior, a general of division with the same rank as army corps generals in France. The naval force comprises 2 gun-boats, 4 torpedo-boats, and 21 despatch vessels.

Indo-China is divided into three main economic areas:—(1) The territory tributary to Saigon (Cochin China, Cambodia, Southern Laos, and Annam South of Cape Varella), which, apart from the fisheries on the Coast and the interior lakes, is almost entirely agricultural, being one of the great rice regions of the world. (2) The region tributary to Haifong (Tonking and the three northern districts of Annam), which is devoted to agriculture, mining and manufacture. (3) Central Annam (the region between Porte d'Annam and Cape Varella), with Tourane as the principal port, which is mainly agricultural, but is not a great rice-growing district; its main exports are cinnamon, sugar and tea. The minerals of Indo-China are coal, phosphates, zinc, antimony, tin, wolfram, graphite and lead.

In 1887, the French possessions in Indo-China, including Annam, Tonking and Cambodia, were united into a Customs Union. In 1927, the total imports amounted to 2,685,864,000 francs, and exports to 2,981,327,000 francs. The chief export is rice, forming about 64 per cent. of the total, and other exports are rubber, fish, coal, pepper, cattle and hides, corn, zinc and tin ore. The principal imports are cotton and silk tissues, metal goods, kerosene and motor cars.

Into Great Britain in 1928, the imports from Indo-China amounted to 813,956 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., and the exports from Great Britain, 346,683 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

There are 5,694 miles of colonial routes and 13,734 miles of local roads (1928).

The principal railways are from Saigon to Mytho (45 miles); from Hanoi to Nacham (111 miles); from Hanoi to Tourane (496 miles); from Saigon to Khanh-Hoa (263 miles); from Haiphong to Yunnanfou (534 miles); and from Touraham to Dalat (86 miles). Total length of line, two-thirds Government, at end of 1927, 1,485 miles. There were 460 principal post offices and more than 700 rural post offices (1927).

The Bank of Indo-China, with an authorised capital of 72 million francs and reserve and redemption funds amounting to eighty million francs, is the principal banking institution of Indo-China. It is above all a bank of issue. This privilege expired in 1920, but has since been renewed from year to year pending the fixing by the French parliament of conditions on which it could be renewed for a further fifty years. For French Indo-China there is a coinage of silver pieces, piastres,  $\frac{1}{2}$ -piastres,  $\frac{1}{4}$ -piastres, and  $\frac{1}{8}$ -piastres; the piastre (since 1895) weighs 27 grams, and the fractional coins in proportion; the piastre and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -piastre are '900 fine, but the  $\frac{1}{4}$ - and  $\frac{1}{8}$ -piastre (since 1898) only '835 fine. The piastre is usually worth about 24d. There is a bronze coin equal to the 100th part of a piastre, and a nickel coin equal to the twentieth part of a piastre. On December 31, 1927, the total circulation of paper currency was 129,902,000 piastres, while the metallic reserve of the Bank of Indo-China was 38,878,000 piastres.

STATES AND PROTECTORATES.

Cochin-China.

The area of French Cochin-China is estimated at 26,476 square miles. The whole is divided into 20 provinces. The towns of Saigon and Cholon have been formed into municipalities. The Colonial Council contains 24 members. The colony is represented in France by one deputy. The population consists mainly of Annamites, Cambodians, Mois, Chams, Chinese, and a few Indians, Malays, Tagals, and foreigners. In 1927, the total population was put at 4,234,591, of whom 16,308 were French and 738 European foreigners (excluding the military forces). Saigon had, in 1927, a population of 123,550, of whom 12,520 were French and 630 other Europeans, exclusive of 3,066 troops; the town of Cholon has 198,713 inhabitants, of whom 1,065 were Europeans and about 92,556 Chinese. There are about 1,445 schools, with 3,337 teachers, and 104,464 pupils.

The total area is put at about 5,720,935 hectares (1 hectare = 2.47 acres) of which 2,410,834 hectares are cultivated. The chief culture is rice, to which 5,118,000 acres were devoted in 1927. The production of cleaned rice in 1927 was 1,493,327 metric tons, or about 35 per cent. of the total crop of the whole of Indo-China. Other crops are maize, beans, sweet potatoes, earth-nuts, cotton, rubber, sugar-cane, tobacco, coffee, coco-nuts, betel-nuts, pepper, oranges, bananas, etc. The farm animals in 1927, comprised 15,350 horses, 444,460 buffaloes, 473,943 pigs, 3,000 sheep and goats.

River and coast fishing is actively carried on; the fishery products are valued at 2,800,000 francs yearly. There are 11 rice mills in Saigon and Cholon, turning out 3,000 tons of rice a day. In these towns are also 2 saw-mills, 2 soap factories, and a varnish factory. Commerce is mostly in the hands of Europeans and Chinese, but about 22,000 Annamites are small traders. The chief exports in 1927 were rice (1,493,327 metric tons), fish (28,785 metric tons), and fish oil, pepper (4,402 metric tons), cotton, copra (96,892 metric tons), silk, shrimps, isinglass, hides, cardamoms. The cultivation of rubber is increasing. In 1926, exports amounted to 8,589 metric tons, and in 1927, 9,509 metric tons. During 1927, 882 steamers of 2,029,297 tons entered at the port of Saigon, of which 103 of 238,243 tons were British, and 374 of 1,077,358 tons French. The vessels of the Messageries-Maritimes and of the Chargeurs-Réunis Companies visit Saigon regularly. There is also constant communication with Hong Kong and Singapore by British vessels. (For railways see Indo-China.) At Saigon there are 7 banks or bank-agencies. The total exports in 1927 amounted to 2,354,879,872 francs, and imports to 2,314,754,255 francs.

In 1928, the local budget balanced at 19,810,136 piastres.

Annam.

French intervention in the affairs of Annam, which began as early as 1787, was terminated by a treaty, signed on June 6, 1884, and ratified at Hué on February 23, 1886, by which a French protectorate has been established over Annam. The King Bao-Dai succeeded to the throne on November 6, 1925. During his minority, the Government is in the hands of a Regency Council. The King governs the country, assisted by a Council of Ministers, in accordance with the wishes of the French Government, represented by a Resident Supérieur. A Chamber of representatives of the people was established in 1926. The ports of Tourane and Qui-Nhon are opened to European commerce, and the customs revenue conceded to France; French troops occupy part of the citadel (called Mang-Ca) of Hué, the capital (population in 1927, 41,275). Province of Binh-Dinh had 528,137 inhabitants in 1927. Annamite functionaries, under the control of the French Government, administer all the internal affairs of Annam. The area of the protectorate is about 39,758 square miles, with a population in 1927, of 5,308,374. There were 2,657 Europeans (exclusive of the military forces) in 1927. The population is Annamite in the towns and along the coast, and consists of various tribes of Mois in the hilly tracts. At the end of 1920 the official schools of Annam were reorganised and placed under the direct control of the French Protectorate. There were in 1928, 751 preparatory schools with 29,385 pupils; 124 elementary schools (107 for boys, 17 for girls) with 9,917 pupils (9,235 boys, 682 girls); 45 secondary schools (4 for girls) with 11,099 pupils (10,643 boys, 456 girls); one higher secondary school for boys at Hué, with 474 pupils, one at Vinh with 455 pupils and one at Quinhon with 404 pupils; one higher secondary school for native girls at Dong-Khanh with 393 pupils; one professional school with 98 pupils; one normal school for boys, and one for girls, both at Hué. Local budget, 1928, balanced at 10,305,790 piastres. The Phanrang river has been utilised to irrigate about 10,000 acres, and similar works, on a smaller scale, have been carried out in Central Annam. Rice is one of the most important products. Others are cotton, maize, and other cereals, the areca nut, mulberry, cinnamon, tobacco, sugar, betel, manioc, bamboo; excellent timber abounds, also caoutchouc, cardamoms, coffee, dye, and medicinal plants. Raw silk is produced. There are about 500,000 head of cattle in Annam, and cattle rearing is of some importance. There are copper, zinc, and gold in the province of Quang-nam; the mines are worked by natives. An important seam of haematite iron is worked about 9 kilometres from Thanhhoa. At Nongson, near Tourane, coal mines are worked. In North, Central, and Southern Annam there are salt works. Imports in 1927, 84,049,402 francs; exports, 88,325,936 francs. The chief imports are cotton-yarn, cottons, tea, petroleum, paper goods, and tobacco; chief exports, sugar, rice, cotton and silk tissues, cinnamon, tea, and paper. In 1927, 222 French ships of 869,764 tons, 26 Chinese of 23,237 tons, 30 ships (41,476 tons) of other nationalities cleared the port of Tourane, the total tonnage being 934,477 tons. The number of native junks entering the port were 2,094, of a tonnage of 15,129.

Cambodia.

Cambodia is bounded on the south by Cochin China, on the east by Annam, on the north by Laos and Siam, on the west by Siam, and on the south-west by the Gulf of Siam.

Area, 67,550 square miles; population according to the census of 1926: 2,535,178, of whom 1,901 were Europeans (excluding the military forces), 152,000 Annamites, 195,300 Chinese, 2,107,450 Cambodians, 61,591 Sino-Cambodians, 61,253 Malaysians, 20,071 Laotians, and 35,612 of various races. The present King, Monivong, succeeded his late father, Sisowath, on August 9, 1927, and was crowned on July 22, 1928. The country is divided into 14 provinces. The four chief towns are Phnôm-Penh (population 81,712), the capital of the territory, located at the crossing of Tonlé-Sap and Mékong rivers, Battambang, 180 miles further north-west, Kampot (92 miles from the capital), a seaport on the Gulf of Siam, but not accessible for sea-going vessels, and Kompong-Cham. The budget for 1928, balanced at 11,839,969 piastres, including a sum of 578,000 piastres allowed for the civil list of the king and princes. There are 171 French schools, including one college and one professional school, with 12,000 Cambodian, Annamite and Chinese pupils.

The soil is fertile, but only a part of it is under cultivation (1,900,000 acres) owing to shortage of labour. The chief product of Cambodia is rice which is exported by way of Cholon where the rice is milled, and Saigon where it is shipped. Amongst the other products are tobacco, kapok, cotton, pepper, indigo, coffee, palm sugar and rubber. Pepper is especially grown in the country of Kampot, the production being over 3,000 metric tons annually. Cotton growing is extending; the production is estimated at 8,000 tons, the whole of which is exported. Cattle breeding is a flourishing native industry, especially between Phnôm-Penh and Manila. Other native industries are: weaving of silk and cotton, pottery and making of rush mats. There is a cotton-ginning mill at Ksach-Kandal, near Phnôm-Penh, and another at Kompong-Cham, a silk factory, several iron foundries, rice-mills, and saw-mills at Phnôm-Penh, but not very important. Valuable forests cover an area of about 10,000,000 acres. Iron ore, limestone, phosphate and sapphires are the principal minerals, but not worked very extensively. The overflow of the Mekong river fills up the Great Lake, which occupies the middle of Western Cambodia. With the low-water season the lake slowly empties and leaves innumerable ponds on the ground it covered during the high-water season. These ponds are filled with an enormous quantity of fish suitable for salting and smoking. This is the principal native industry. The external trade is carried on mostly through Saigon in Cochinchina. Imports in 1926: 68,009,173 francs; exports, 26,253,000 francs. The imports comprise salt, wine, textiles, chemicals; the exports comprise rice, salted fish, pepper, maize, cotton, tobacco, fish-oil, palm-sugar, pea-nuts, sticklac, nux vomica, kapok, lime, wood, resin, hides, and cattle. This last trade is carried between Phnôm-Penh and Manila.

Cambodia possesses two little sea-harbours, Kep and Réam, both on the Gulf of Siam and connected to Bangkok and Saigon by the steamers of the "Siam Steam Navigation Company," and the "Sté des Affréteurs Indochinois." Total tonnage of the different little steamers and junks that enter and clear out the different ports of Cambodia is about 1,000,000 metric tons per year. The Mékong and the Great Lake, with their affluents, give a total of 875 miles of waterways, of which about 370 are not navigable to launches during the low-water season. Sea-going steamers can easily reach Phnôm-Penh, which has good quays and embankments.

Cambodia possessed in 1927, 1,209 miles of good metalled roads and nearly 435 miles of unmetalled roads and 1,160 miles of roads in course of construction. The chief roads are from Saigon to the Siamese frontier, via Phnôm-Penh and Battambang, from Phnôm-Penh to the Gulf of Siam, from Saigon to Kratié, and from Phnôm-Penh to Angkor via Kompong-Thom.

Of all the countries of the Far East, Cambodia is among the richest in ancient monuments. The ruins of Angkor are specially famous.

Tonking.

This territory, brought under France's protectorate in 1884, has an area of 40,530 square miles, and is divided into 23 provinces, and 4 military territories, with 10,885 villages and a population in 1926 of 7,401,912, of whom 9,143 were Europeans (exclusive of military forces). The King of Annam was formerly represented in Tonking by a viceroy, but, in July, 1897, he consented to the suppression of the viceroyalty and the creation of a French residency in its place. Chief town Hanoi, a fine and large modern town, with a population of about 103,235 in 1926. This town on January 1, 1902, became the capital of Indo-China, instead of Saigon. In 1926, there were 14 native primary schools (57,686 pupils), 2 native normal college (416 students), 1 native college (670 students), 1 school of applied arts (298 students), 2 French High Schools (148 pupils), and 1 French Lycée (600 pupils). The University of Indo-China was organised in 1917, and contains 10 faculties. There were in 1926, 404 students. The local budget for 1928, balanced at 18,200,670 piastres. The chief crop is rice (total exports 1927, 182,476 tons valued at 232,633,000 francs) exported mostly to Hong Kong. Other products are maize, arrow-root, sugar-cane, coffee, tea, various fruit trees, and tobacco. A large quantity of raw silk is produced annually, most of which is used in native weaving and the remainder exported. There are rich limestone quarries, calamine and tin mines, and also rich hard coal beds.

Imports in 1927, 805,815,128 piastres; exports, 573,198,000 piastres.

Chief imports are metal tools and machinery, yarn and tissues, beverages; chief exports, rice, maize, and animal products. The principal port is Haiphong, which is visited regularly by the steamers of three French lines.

The Laos territory, under French protectorate since 1893, is estimated to contain 82,604 square miles, and in 1926, there were 879,668 inhabitants. The capital is Vientiane. In the country there is a protected state, Luang

Prabang, which has a capital of the same name, the residence of the King, who is assisted in his government by a French Administrator. The soil is fertile, producing rice, cotton, indigo, tobacco and fruits, and bearing teak forests, from which the logs are now floated down the Mekong to Saigon. Gold, tin, lead and precious stones are found, and concessions have been granted to several French mining companies. It can be entered by the Mekong, which is barred at Khone by rapids, and by two new roads from Vinh to Thakhek and from Quang Tri to Savannakhet. A railway, four miles in length, has been constructed across Khone island, and by means of it several steam launches have been transported to the upper waters, where they now ply. A telegraph line connects Hué in Annam with the towns on the Mekong, and these with Saigon and Hanoi. The local budget for 1928, balanced at 3,890,000 piastres.

In 1900, the territory of Kwang Chau Wan on the coast of China, leased from China in 1898, and increased in 1899, by the addition of 2 islands in the bay, was placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Indo-China. The territory has been divided into 5 administrative circumscriptions, including 2 Municipalities (Fort-Bayard, the seat of the local Administration, and Tchekham, a commercial centre), but the Chinese communal organisation is maintained. Its area is about 190 square miles and its population 250,000. The imports are chiefly cotton yarns, petroleum, matches, refined sugar, cunao (for tinctorial purposes); the exports are straw sacks, swine, cattle, brown sugar, and ground-nuts. Imports in 1927, 8,661,166 piastres; exports, 7,559,613 piastres. The port is free. The territory is regularly visited by the vessels of a French company; in 1927, 283 vessels of 189,561 tons entered. The local budget for 1928, balanced at 680,000 piastres.

MANDATED TERRITORY IN ASIA: SYRIA AND LEBANON.

Syria, a province of Turkey-in-Asia, has been recognised as an independent State to be placed under a Mandatory Power. By decision of the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers at San Remo (April 25, 1920), France has been assigned the Mandate for Syria, which was confirmed by the League of Nations on July 24, 1922 (Declaration of London).

High Commissioner.—M. Henri Ponsot (October 12, 1926).

Area and Population.—Syria under the Mandate is bounded by the Mediterranean on the west, by Palestine on the south, by Mesopotamia on the east, and by Turkey on the north.

For details of the frontier between Syria and Mesopotamia and Palestine, see the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1928, p. 893.

The country was originally organised into 5 territories (ets), but since January 1, 1925, two of these, viz. Damascus and Aleppo, were united to form the single State, now the Republic of Syria (Sanjaks of Hama, Homs, Damascus, Hauran, Aleppo, Alexandretta and Deir ez Zor). The remaining territories are those of the Alawiyya (Sanjaks of Latakia and Tartus); of the Greater Lebanon (Sanjaks of North Lebanon, Mount Lebanon, South Lebanon and Bekaa); of Jebel Druze (south of Hauran).

THE SYRIAN REPUBLIC.—A Provisional Government was formed in February 1928, which held elections for a Constituent Assembly in April. The former Head of the Syrian State, the Damad Ahmed Bek Namy then resigned and a new Constitution was elaborated. This has not yet been approved in its entirety by the Mandatory Power.

THE LEBANESE REPUBLIC, or Greater Lebanon, was proclaimed a State on September 1, 1920. It has the following frontiers:—North, the Nahr-el-Kebir; south, the frontier of Palestine; west, the coast; and east, the heights of Anti-Lebanon. Beirut is the seat of the Government.

The total area of Syria subject to the French Mandate may be estimated at 60,000 square miles. The total population of this area in 1926, was 2,046,857. The population of the 4 territories was as follows:—Syria, 1,120,792; Lebanon, 597,789; Alawiyya, 277,948; and Jebel Druze, 50,328. The bulk of the population of Syria is of Arabic origin, and Arabic is the prevailing language, with many dialectical varieties. But there is a large influx of foreign elements, including Turks, Turkomans, Kurds, Circassians, Armenians, Persians, Jews, and a certain number of Europeans. The principal towns are Damascus, population 170,000; Aleppo, 140,000; Beirut, 80,000; Homs, 60,000; Hama, 35,000; Tripolis, 30,000; Antioch, 30,000; Latakia, 20,000; Alexandretta, 15,000; and Zahlah in Lebanon, 13,000. There are no statistics of births and deaths.

Religion and Education.—The population of Syria is composed mainly of Moslems, of whom there are 1,514,755. The majority are Sunni Moslems (1,075,816). The Druses number about 86,125, the Alawiyya 227,930, and Ismailians 14,882. There have been Christians in Syria since the earliest times. They number at present 505,419, of whom 186,676 are Maronites, 66,762 Greek Catholics (Uniate), 7,305 Armenian Catholics (Uniate), 32,859 Armenians, 8,887 Protestants, 28,885 Gregorians, and 151,326 belong to the Orthodox Church. There are also 16,526 Jews. There are now one Orthodox, one Gregorian Armenian, one Latin, and three Uniate Patriarchs (Melkite, Syrian, and Maronite) of Antioch, none of whom reside in that city. Apart from this there are in French Mautakd territory 4 Orthodox Archbishops, one Armenian Uniate Archbishop, six Melkite (Uniate) Archbishops and six Bishops, three Syrian (Uniate) Archbishops, five Maronite (Uniate) Archbishops and four Bishops, one Latin delegate Apostolic, a Grand Mufti and a Grand Rabbi.

There were, in 1927, 552 public elementary schools with 38,873 pupils; 5 lycées for boys, one each at Damascus, Aleppo, Homs, Hama, and Deir Ez Zor, with a total of 669 pupils; 2 secondary schools for girls at Damascus and Aleppo, to each of which is attached a department for the training of teachers; 2 secondary schools for boys at Beirut and Tripoli, and one secondary school for girls at Beirut.

At Damascus there is a Syrian university (founded June 15, 1923), with a faculty of medicine (115 students) and a faculty of law (287 students). There is also an Arab High School, founded and maintained by the High Commissioner, and also agricultural colleges at Sélémié and Bekaa. There is a school of arts and crafts at Beirut (95 pupils).

The private elementary and higher-grade schools had 86,648 pupils, of whom 44,724 were in local institutions, 26,246 in French, 6,120 in American, 2,010 in English, 1,147 in Italian, and 401 in Danish. The private secondary schools had 8,674 pupils, of whom 6,687 were in French colleges and 1,987 in local colleges.

There are also two universities in Beirut, one French and one American. The American university contains a faculty of medicine and several schools, with 1,178 students, of whom 468 were Moslems, 24 Druses, 25 Bahairtes, 584 Christians, and 77 Jews. The French university has a faculty of medicine with 450 students, and several schools.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for four years was as follows in Syrian pounds (Syrian pound = Francs 20):—

Revenue . . .	Syrian Pounds 7,569,813	Syrian Pounds 10,606,279	Syrian Pounds 12,003,741	Syrian Pounds 12,790,521

The Budget for 1926 was distributed as follows:—(in Syrian pounds), Lebanon, 3,470,546; Alaouite, 788,550; Syria, 8,041,050; Sanjak of Alexandretta, 355,000; and Jebel Druze, 144,375.

Defence.—A French army is in occupation of the whole country.

Production and Industry.—Syria is essentially an agricultural country, the bulk of the population being engaged in the cultivation of the soil and in cattle breeding; the total area under crops is roughly 2,000,000 hectares (7,719 square miles). The principal products in 1927 were: wheat, 396,900 metric tons; barley, 333,650 metric tons; maize, 80,600 metric tons; olives, 50,900 metric tons; silk cocoons, 3,185 metric tons; and cotton, 1,920 metric tons. Sesamé, from which oil is produced, is one of the most valued crops, but is very uncertain, the annual yield being about 30,000 tons, a third of which is exported. Chickpeas, lentils, beans, vetches, and lupins are largely cultivated, the annual crop of chickpeas being estimated at 50,000 tons. About 4,700 acres in Latakia, Aleppo, Beirut, and Damascus produce about 3,000,000 lb. of tobacco, valued at 200,000*l*. The cultivation of cotton has been considerably extended during the last two years. The chief cotton-growing centre is the Aleppo district, where in 1927 the area under cotton was 50,000 acres, and the yield 1,500 metric tons. Hemp and sugar-cane are also cultivated. The most important fruit trees are the olive, vine, mulberry, lemon, banana, and orange. In 1927, there were about 8,500,000 olive trees yielding 50,000 metric tons of olives. There were also produced 25,000 tons of apricots and 23,000 tons of grapes. The white mulberry is largely cultivated in Northern Syria for feeding silk-worms. Sheep-raising is also of importance.

Syria is poorer in minerals than in other resources, but this may be due to insufficient exploration. Northern Lebanon has been worked for iron in ancient and modern times. At Majerba the ore is rich, and the iron good. There is a comparatively rich mine of lignite in South Lebanon. There are indications of petroleum in various places, but the attempts to work it so far have not been successful. There are indications of phosphates, lead, copper, antimony, nickel, chrome; gypsum is widely distributed. There is abundance of marble and good building stone.

The industries of Syria are on a very small scale. Flour, oil, soap, and silk thread are the most important. In 1927, 3,200 metric tons of cocoons were produced. The chief centres of the silk industry are Beirut, Aleppo, Tripoli, and Latakia. There were 90 spinning factories in 1927. Wine and tobacco are also produced.

Commerce.—The imports and exports for four years (in thousands of Syrian pounds, paper) were as follows:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927
	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds
Imports . . .	89,832	48,780	63,357	64,559
Exports . . .	16,097	22,960	27,241	27,857

The following are the principal articles of import and export :—

Animal products	239,150	272,283	Colonial products	46,180	59,405

The following table shows the distribution of trade in 1927 :—

Country	Value in Lebanese-Syrian gold pounds
	Imports	Exports
France	1,958,114	880,907
United Kingdom	1,814,845	291,809
Italy	1,229,559	426,699
Turkey	1,261,563	528,019
United States	888,821	752,820
Belgium	695,146	73,994
Egypt	508,433	639,237
Palestine	220,901	737,667

According to Board of Trade Returns the imports from Syria into Great Britain amounted to 220,024*l.* in 1928, and 339,805*l.* in 1927, while the exports to Syria amounted to 1,196,444*l.* in 1928, and 1,620,905*l.* in 1927.

Communications.—Most of the ports of Syria are visited regularly by the steamers of various shipping companies. In 1927, 1,612 vessels of 3,099,278 tons entered the ports of Lebanon and Syria. Beirut was the principal port of call with 828 steam vessels of 1,859,786 tons.

In 1927, there were 2,240 miles of macadam roads and 2,754 miles of dirt and gravel roads. Syria is comparatively well provided with railways, and new lines and branches are proposed. The following railways were open in 1927 :—from Beirut to Damascus, 91 miles; Rayak to Aleppo, 206 miles; Homs to Tripoli, 64 miles; Beirut to Mameltein, 11 miles; Damascus to El Hammé, 120 miles. Three companies operate passenger routes across the Syrian Desert between Beirut and Baghdad.

Currency.—The official currency as from May 1, 1920, is the Syrian Bank Note, issued by the Bank of Syria, under French Treasury control. The monetary unit is the Syrian pound, divided into 100 piastres (1 piastre = 20 centimes), which are exchangeable in Paris at the fixed rate of 20 francs to the pound. On December 31, 1927, the notes in circulation amounted to 7,675,000*l.* (Syrian).

There is a Consul-General at Beirut, and Consuls at Aleppo and Damascus.

Government.

The government and administration of Algeria are centralised at Algiers under the authority of the Governor-General, who represents the Government of the Republic throughout Algerian territory. With the exception of the non-Mussulman services of Justice, Public Instruction, Worship, and the Treasury, which are under the appropriate ministries in Paris, all the services are under his direction. He has to prepare a special budget for Algeria, he grants concessions for works, and he contracts loans in the name of the Colony.

The budget of Algeria which, since 1901, has been entirely distinct from that of France, comprises under revenue the imposts of every sort which are collected within the Colony and under expenditure the whole of the civil disbursements. The expenditure on War and Marine is still at the cost of the mother country, as is also the burden of guarantees of interest on railways up to 1926. The budget, prepared by the Governor under the control of the Minister of the Interior, is discussed and voted by the Financial Delegations and the Superior Council. These Delegations were instituted in 1898 to enable the body of tax-payers to state their views on questions of imposts by means of elected delegates. There are three Delegations representing respectively the French colonists, the French tax-payers other than colonists, and the Mussulman natives. The Superior Council is composed of elected members and of high officials. Lastly, the Governor is assisted in the exercise of his functions by a purely consultative council of government.

* See also Morocco.

The territories of the South, forming a separate colony, are each under a military command which directs all the administrative and civil services under the authority of the Governor. They have a budget distinct from that of Algeria. The natives are represented on the communal administration. By the law of February 4, 1919, the position of French citizens is accorded to natives, above the age of 25 and monogamous, who served in the war, who are proprietors or farmers, who can read or write or hold a French decoration. It is proposed to create in Paris a Consultative Committee on the same lines as the British Council of India.

The French Chambers have alone the right of legislating for Algeria, while such matters as do not come within the legislative power are regulated by decree of the President of the Republic. Each department sends one senator and, since 1923, three deputies to the National Assembly.

Governor-General.—M. Pierre Louis Bordes, appointed November 20, 1927.

Area and Population.

The census of March 7, 1926, which is the last taken, showed a population (including the military forces) amounting to 6,063,496 (of whom 833,359 were Europeans, 5,147,872 natives, and 82,265 military forces and officials) on an area of 847,500 sq. miles. The colony has been organised in 2 great divisions called respectively Northern (80,117 sq. miles) and Southern Algeria (767,435 sq. miles). Northern Algeria consists as formerly of Civil Territory and Territoire de Commandement, but the Civil Territory has been extended, while the Territoire de Commandement has been diminished and will before long be completely merged in the Civil Territory. Northern Algeria contains 17 arrondissements, 276 communes, and 76 mixed communes, in the Civil Territory, and 3 mixed communes in the Territoire de Commandement. Southern Algeria consists of the 4 Territories of Ain-Sefra, Ghardaia, Touggourt, and the Saharan Oases, organised under decree of August 14, 1905. These territories contain 14 communes of which 7 are mixed and 7 native.

Population, including military forces, according to the revised figures of the census of March 7, 1926:—

	Municipal Population			Population numbered separately			Grand Total
	European	Native	Total	European	Native	Total
Northern Territory	833,580	4,615,781	5,444,361	34,476	42,434	76,910	5,521,271
Southern Territory	4,779	532,091	536,870	2,535	2,520	5,355	542,225
Grand Total	838,359	5,147,872	5,981,231	37,011	45,254	82,265	6,063,496

The total population in 1891, was 4,124,732, in 1896, 4,429,421. In 1926, the native municipal population numbered 5,147,872; French, 549,146; naturalised French, 108,495; Spaniards, 135,032; Italians, 28,594; Maltese, 3,985; other foreigners, 8,107; total foreigners, 175,718.

The chief towns with the total communal population in 1926 were: Algiers, 226,218; Oran, 150,301; Constantine, 93,733; Bona, 51,895; Sidi-bel-Abbes, 43,148; Philippville, 29,242; Mascara, 28,033; Tlemçen, 26,758; Sétif, 26,677; Mostaganem, 26,355; Blida, 24,758; Bougie, 15,941; Tizi Ouzou, 2,944.

Religion and Education.

The native population is entirely Mussulman, the Jews being now regarded as French citizens. The Roman Catholic Church has an archbishop and 2 bishops, with 386 officiating clergymen. There are 13 Protestant pastors and 6 Jewish rabbis sharing in Government grants.

At Algiers (city) there is a University, attended (July 31, 1927) by 1,720 students (820 for Law, 430 Medicine and Pharmacy, 199 Science, 271 Arts). There are also special schools for commerce, the fine arts, hydrography, and agriculture. There were also in 1927, 541 Mussulman schools with 47,781 pupils (519 for boys, 44,479 pupils; and 22 for girls, 3,302 pupils). There are higher Mussulman schools (médersas) at Algiers, Tlemçen, and Constantine, with 152 students (1927) (180 Arabs, 22 Kabyles). In Algeria there are 17 establishments for secondary education with, in 1927, 9,135 pupils (6,626 boys and 2,509 girls). In 1927 there were 1,380 primary and infant schools, public and private, with 114,250 pupils (59,011 boys and 55,239 girls). There were (1927) two normal schools for men teachers with 27 professors and 238 students (52 Mussulman), and three normal schools for women teachers with 16 professors and 221 students.

Justice and Crime.

There is an Appeal Court at Algiers, and in the arrondissements are 17 courts of first instance. There are also commercial courts and justices of the peace with extensive powers. Criminal justice is organised as in France for Europeans. Since 1902, there have been criminal courts and special repressive tribunals for trying natives accused of crime.

Mussulman justice is administered to natives by Justices of the Peace and Cadis in the first instance with an appeal to French courts.

Finance.

Europeans and natives pay the same direct and indirect taxes. The departments of War and Marine are excluded from the estimates, but the proceeds of the Military tax, the Government monopolies, and some other revenues are paid to France. The total expenditure (including military and extraordinary disbursements) exceeds the Algerian revenue by about 75,000,000 francs.

The budget estimates for five years were as follows in francs:—

The extraordinary budget for 1929 balanced at 307,718,622 francs.

There is a separate Post Office budget which is estimated to balance revenue and expenditure for 120,466,866 francs.

Defence.

The military force in Algeria and Tunis comprises the XIXth Army Area, which includes 3 divisions. French residents are under the same obligation to serve as in France; natives are under the obligation to serve 3 years with the colours and can be called up as reservists in case of mobilisation. The troops may be stationed in North Africa or employed on Colonial expeditions, but they belong to the 'Metropolitan,' not to the Colonial Army. There are 6 regiments of zouaves, each of 3 battalions, of 5 companies; 6 regiments of cavalry (Chasseurs d'Afrique), of several squadrons; 3 groups of field and 1 of heavy artillery; 1 battalion of engineers; and 1 regiment of the Flying Corps. These are all European troops, and in the case of the artillery and engineers their recruiting depôts are in France. The Foreign Legion of 4 regiments of a varying number of battalions is recruited from foreigners of any nationality, but officered chiefly by Frenchmen; the headquarters of the regiments is in Sidi-Bel-Abbes, in Oran, but battalions are sent to any colony There they may be required. The Natives are 12 regiments of Algerian Tirailleurs each of 3 battalions, and 6 regiments of Spahis (Arab cavalry) each of several squadrons. The officers and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers of the native regiments are French. In November, 1928, the strength of the garrison of Algeria and Tunis was 62,497.

Agriculture and Industry.

There exists in Algeria a small area of highly fertile plains and valleys in the neighbourhood of the coast, mainly owned by Europeans, which is cultivated scientifically, and where profitable returns are obtained from vineyards, cereals, &c., but the greater part of Algeria is of limited value for agricultural purposes. The northern portion is mountainous and generally better adapted to grazing and forestry than agriculture, and a large portion of the native population is quite poor. In spite of the many excellent roads built by the Government, a considerable area of the mountainous region is without adequate means of communication and is very inaccessible.

The soil is, under various systems, held by proprietors, by farmers, and by métayers or khammés. Most of the State lands have been appropriated to colonists. The chief crops in 1927 were wheat, 3,513,153 acres with a yield of 767,877 tons; barley 3,399,822 acres with a yield of 766,451 tons; and oats, 530,790 acres with a yield of 153,947 tons; maize, potatoes, artichokes, beans, peas and tomatoes. Flax, silk, and tobacco (the cultivation of the latter being most remunerative) are also produced. In 1927 there were 17,509 tobacco planters, the area under cultivation was 87,024 acres, and the yield 26,550 tons. Sericulture is in an experimental stage and subsidised by the government. There were 326 growers in 1926, and 186 in 1927. In 1927, 17,600 pounds of cocoons were produced against 15,400 in 1926.

In 1927, the yield of wine was 176,908,072 gallons from an area of 567,000 acres. The yield of oranges in 1927 was 27,300 tons from an area of 10,322 acres; of mandarines, 30,000 tons from an area of 8,277 acres; of lemons, 4,057 tons from an area of 2,397 acres. Date, banana, pomegranate, almond, fig, and many other fruits grow abundantly. The production of olive oil amounted to 3,457,762 gallons from 7,803,700 trees. The area under cotton in 1927 was reduced to 10,000 acres from 15,500 acres in 1926. State forests (1927), 5,552,775 acres, and, for the most part, belong to the State and communes. The greater part is mere brushwood, but on 1,099,150 acres are cork-oak trees, 1,691,950 acres Aleppo pine, 1,627,730 acres evergreen oak, and 97,812 acres cedar. The dwarf-palm and alfa are worked on the plains. Timber is cut for firewood, also for industrial purposes, for railway sleepers, telegraph poles, &c., and for bark for tanning. Considerable portions of the forest area are also leased for tillage, or for pasturage for cattle, sheep, or pigs. The forest revenue in 1926 was 49,538,313 francs.

On December 31, 1926, there were in Algeria 167,324 horses, 165,156 mules, 284,569 asses, 945,507 cattle, 6,786,266 sheep, 3,125,714 goats, 92,742 pigs, and 173,328 camels.

There are extensive fisheries for sardines, allaches, anchovies, sprats, tunny-fish, &c., and also shell-fish. In 1927, 1,084 boats of 4,663 metric tons, and 5,187 persons were employed in fishing, and the quantity of fish taken amounted to 21,850,197 kilos. The yield of coral, 1,224 kilos, was valued at 1,085,690 francs. Sponges, 4,810 kilos, were valued at 1,269,640 francs (1926).

Algeria possesses iron, zinc, lead, mercury, copper, antimony, and petrol. The mineral output in 1927 was as follows: iron ore, 2,028,782 tons; lead, 17,599 tons; zinc, 44,797 tons; copper, 1,455 tons; antimony, 131 tons; phosphate of lime, 847,163 tons; kaolin, 2,000 tons; marble and onyx, 2,500 tons; salt, 36,936 tons; coal (approx.), 29,000 tons.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Algiers in recent years has been as follows (in 1,000 francs):—

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	1,000 francs	1,000 francs		1,000 francs	1,000 francs
1923	2,525,280	1,851,600	1926	4,119,041	4,014,986

Shipping and Communications.

In 1928, 4,585 vessels of 7,758,459 tons net entered, and 4,915 vessels of 8,233,606 tons cleared Algerian ports.

On January 1, 1928, the mercantile marine of Algeria consisted of 21 vessels of 15,733 tons (overseas trade); 114 coasting vessels of 85,947 tons; and 386 harbour craft of 2,459 tons.

There were 21 national roads in 1927, with a length of 3,323 miles, apart from Departmental roads, which, added to the smaller type of road, aggregate 9,215 miles. In 1928, 8,000 francs per kilometre were allotted to the upkeep of the roads.

In 1927, there were 2,715 miles of railway open for traffic (exclusive of lines on Tunisian territory), the railway receipts amounting to 294,200,000 francs. There is a regular postal air service between Algiers and Marseilles (800 kilometres). In 1927 Algeria budgeted a contribution of 1,300,000 francs to civil aviation.

The postal receipts in 1927 were 31,879,796 francs, and there were 721 post offices. The telegraphic receipts were 13,547,320 francs, and those from telephones 12,768,777 francs.

There were on January 1, 1928, 20,434 telephone subscribers, 773 public telephone offices, and 16,935 miles of inter-urban line.

Postal cheque accounts were opened at Algiers on February 1, 1921, and on December 31, 1927, there were 9,899 accounts with a total balance of 66,121,108 francs.

The Bank of Algeria is a bank of issue, with a capital of 20,000,000 francs, but its note circulation must not in any case exceed 2,100,000,000 francs (law of August 6, 1926). Several co-operative agricultural banks, assisted by Government funds, are in operation. Barclay's Bank (Overseas), Ltd., have branches at Algiers and Oran.

TUNIS.

(AFRIKIYA.)

Government.—Sidi Ahmed Bey, born 1858, succeeded his cousin, Sidi Mohamed el Habib Bey, February 11, 1929.

The reigning family of Tunis, occupants of the throne since 1705, descend from Hussein ben Ali, commonly believed to be a native of the Isle of Crete, who made himself master of the country, acknowledging, however, the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey.

After the French invasion of the country in the spring of 1881, the treaty of Kasr-es-Said (May 12, 1881), confirmed by convention signed June 8, 1883, placed Tunis under the protectorate of France. The government is carried on under the direction of the French Foreign Office, which has a special department for Tunisian affairs, under the control of a French Minister Resident-General, who is also Minister of Foreign Affairs, and a ministry of 11 heads of departments, 8 of the ministers being French and 3 Tunisian. The country is divided into 19 districts (contrôles civils), and 6 military circles; the district governors (contrôleurs) are French; the subordinate officials (Caid, Kahias and Sheiks) are Native. French tribunals administer justice between subjects of European powers, and also between them and natives; there are Native courts for cases between natives (tribunals at Ouzara and Charaa). In 1914, the Tunisian penal law was codified. French administration in Tunis has been confirmed by conventions with all the European Powers regulating the status and the conditions of trade of their respective citizens within the Regency.

French Resident-General.—M. Manceron (appointed January 2, 1929).

Area and Population.—The present boundaries are: on the north and east the Mediterranean Sea, on the west the Algerian province of Constantine, and on the south the great desert of the Sahara and Libya. Area about 48,300 English square miles, including that portion of the Sahara which is to the east of the Djerid, extending towards Gadamés.

According to the census held on April 20, 1926, the total European population was 173,281, composed of 71,020 French (exclusive of the army of occupation and of the navy), 89,216 Italians, 8,396 Maltese, 517 Spaniards, 646 Greeks, and 3,486 other foreigners. The total native population was 1,986,427, of whom 1,932,184 were Arabs and Bedouins, and 54,243 Jews. Grand total was 2,159,708.

The capital, the city of Tunis, had, in 1926, a population of 185,996, of whom 106,860 were Moslems, and 24,131 Jews, besides 27,922 French, 44,076 Italians, 4,994 Maltese, and 1,763 other Europeans. By means of the channel, which was opened in 1898, Tunis is directly accessible to ocean-going vessels. Other towns are Bizerta with 20,593 inhabitants (6,738 Europeans); Sousse with 21,298; Sfax with 27,723; Kaisouan, the Holy City of the Moslems, with 18,527 natives exclusively; Ferryville with 4,462 (4,155 Europeans), and Tinja, 1,500 inhabitants.

The bulk of the population is Mohammedan under the Sheik-ul-Islam, and the revenue from the 'Habus' lands, like that from the 'Wakf' lands in Egypt, is applied to religious, educational, and charitable purposes. There are about 170,000 Roman Catholics, under the ministration of the Archbishop of Carthage, and about 125 other clergymen. The Greek Church (400), the French Protestants, and the English Church are also represented, and there are 30 English Protestant missionaries at work.

Education.—Within the Regency there are (1928) some 441 public schools, including 8 lycées and colleges, and 32 private schools (of which 6 Jewish schools are provided for by the Government). In the schools there are 68,150 pupils, of whom 41,158 are boys. Of the total number of pupils, 14,514 are French; 28,871 Mussulman; 11,267 Jews; 9,528 Italian; 1,189 Maltese and 433 others. In the Great Mosque at Tunis there is a Mohammedan university. In the city are 88 and in the interior 1,219 Mussulman primary schools, some of them assisted by Government funds. 24 Moslem apprenticeship-schools have been created during the last few years numbering 490 native pupils. Many private schools have recently sprung up at Tunis and Sfax. The abolition of congregational teaching decreed in France has been extended to the Regency as regards French children. The Italian Government and certain Italian societies still maintain Italian schools at Tunis and other large towns.

Defence.—The army of occupation consists of 25,000 men, including 1,145 officers, supported by native regiments (tirailleurs and spahis), and the Foreign Legion.

Production and Industry.—Tunis may be divided into five districts—the north, characterised by its mountainous formation, having large and fertile valleys (e.g., the valley of the Medjerdah, and the plains of Mornag, Mateur, and Beja); the north-east, with the peninsula of Cap Bon, the soil being specially suited for the cultivation of oranges, lemons, and citrus fruits; the Sahel, where olive trees abound; the centre, the region of high table lands and pastures; and the south, famous for its oases and gardens, where dates grow in profusion. The chief industry is agriculture, and large estates predominate. The area of the country is divided as follows :—

7,282,500 acres of tillage land; 2,550,000 acres of cork and pine forest, 68,490 acres of vineyards (the production in 1928 was 20,145,136 gallons); and 11,435,000 acres of stockland. The area of wheat in 1927 was 960,000 acres; the production was 225,000 tons; of barley 867,500 acres, and the production 90,000 tons; of oats 80,000 acres, and the production 21,500 tons. There were 16,181,744 olive trees; the produce is about 40,000 tons of oil yearly. In the south of Tunis date palms abound; there were in 1927, 2,598,181 date palms, of which 1,327,922 produced 818,984 pounds of dates. Other products are almonds, oranges, lemons, shaddocks, pistachios, alfa grass, henna, and cork. Considerable areas of agricultural land have been acquired either on lease or by purchase by immigrants.

In 1927, the farm animals were:—horses, 92,348; asses, 162,044; mules, 38,484; cattle, 501,223; sheep, 2,142,366; goats, 1,380,855; camels, 155,356; pigs, 13,473.

In 1927, 79 mines were worked; value of ore exported (including phosphate) in 1927, 13,698,000l. These are being developed, and the output steadily increases. Lead-ore, zinc-ore, and iron are all found. By far the greatest development has been in phosphates, the output of which is increasing yearly. Mineral output in 1927:—lead, 37,000 tons; zinc, 18,000 tons; mixed, 9,000 tons; iron, 915,000 tons; phosphate of lime, 3,075,000 tons.

Native industries are the spinning and weaving of wool for garments, carpet weaving, leather embroidery, saddle making, the manufacture of slippers, pottery (in ancient style), and matting; tanning and silk weaving are declining.

The fisheries are principally in the hands of Italians and Tunisians. In 1927, 3,848 boats (9,753 tons) were engaged in this industry, with a total of 14,531 men. Sardines, anchovies, allaches, tunny (6,921 tons of fish) were caught.

In the year 1927, there entered the ports of the Regency 9,435 vessels. Good roads to the length of 3,290 miles have been constructed between 1882 and 1927.

Length of railways, 1,258 miles in 1927 (315 miles broad gauge and 942 miles narrow).

There were in 1927, 3,375 miles of telegraphs; 273 telegraph offices; messages, 1,278,232. Urban telephone systems had 9,569 miles of line; inter-urban systems had 14,096 miles of wire. There were in 1927, 520 post offices; letters sent and received, internal service, 51,507,196; external service, 62,819,108.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The Banque d'Algérie has begun operations in the Regency and issues Tunisian bank notes.

The legal coinage since 1892 consists of pieces similar to the French, the pieces being coined in France.

The ounce = 31.487 grammes; the multiples of the ounce are the various denominations of the Rottolo, which contains from 16 to 42 ounces.

The Kafis (of 16 whibas, each of 12 sahs) = 16 bushels.

The principal measure of length is the pik: the pik Arbi for linen = '5392 yd.; the pik Turki for silk = '7058 yd.; the pik Andoulsi for cloth = '7094 yd.

French weights and measures have almost entirely taken the place of those of Tunis, but corn is still sold in kafis and whibas.

British Consul-General at Tunis.—J. M. MacLeod, C.M.G.

There is a Consul at Bizerta, and Vice-Consuls at Sfax and Susa; and Consular Agents at Mehdiä, Monastir, Gabes, and Djerba.

FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA (FRENCH CONGO).

The French Congo extends along the Atlantic coast between Cameroon and the territories of the Belgian Congo, with the exception of the Spanish territory on the coast from the Muni river on 1° N. lat. to Cameroon, and inland to the meridian of 11° 20' E. of Greenwich, and the Kabinda region, which is Portuguese. Inland it is bounded by the Congo and Ubanghi rivers and stretches northwards to the Bahr-el-Ghazal and Lake Chad. French acquisition began on the Gabun river in 1841; Libreville was founded in 1849; Cape Lopez was gained in 1862, and the French possessions extended along the coast for about 200 miles. Since then the territories have been increased by exploration and military occupation and their limits have been defined in a series of international conventions. The boundary between French Equatorial Africa and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan was fixed by a protocol signed on February 28, 1924.

By decree of January 15, 1910, the French Congo was divided into three circumscriptions which form three colonies, viz. :—the Gabun Colony (capital Libreville), the Middle Congo Colony (capital Brazzaville), and the Ubangi-Shari Colony (capital Bangui). The Chad Territory, which was formerly a dependency of the Ubangi-Shari Colony, was, by decree issued on March 17, 1920, made a separate colony. It extends from Lake Chad across the Eastern Sudan and includes Wadai. Capital, Fort Lamy.

By decrees issued on January 15, 1910, the name of the French Congo was changed into French Equatorial Africa, which extends over the Gabun, the Middle Congo, the Ubangi-Shari and Chad Colonies.

The area is about 912,049 square miles, containing a population which at the 1926 census numbered 3,127,707; the Europeans numbered 2,502. The area and population of the separate colonies are shown as follows for 1926 :—

Colony.	Area in square miles.	Men	Women	Boys	Girls	Total
Gabun . . . . .	104,320	125,840	161,388	51,524	49,147	388,899
Middle Congo . . . . .	172,411	212,035	261,447	118,862	106,409	698,753
Ubangi Shari . . . . .	236,368	350,800	377,594	174,349	163,701	1,066,444
Chad . . . . .	898,915	331,011	317,259	166,491	158,850	973,611
Total . . . . .	912,049	1,026,686	1,117,688	511,226	478,097	3,127,707

The Colonies have each a Lieutenant-Governor; they all have financial and administrative autonomy, and each has an administrative council; the Lieutenant-Governors are under the Governor-General of French Equatorial Africa, having his headquarters at Brazzaville, who is assisted by a Secretary-General and a Council of Government. There is a general budget for the whole of French Equatorial Africa, and also separate budgets for the colonies. Local revenues accrue chiefly from customs duties; there are native poll taxes. The sale of alcohol to natives is restricted. The budgets showed the following figures :—

	1928	1929
General Budget—	Francs	Francs
French Equatorial Africa . . . . .	46,550,000	54,500,000
Local Budget—
Gabon . . . . .	12,900,000	16,250,000
Middle Congo . . . . .	15,051,000	17,230,000
Ubangi-Shari . . . . .	13,500,000	14,240,000
Chad . . . . .	10,127,000	11,000,000

In the colony there were in 1927, 50 public schools with 3,553 pupils, and 24 European teachers with 52 native assistants. There is also 1 Higher Elementary school at Brazzaville and another is in course of construction at Libreville.

The resources of French Equatorial Africa are quite undeveloped. There are about 300,000 square miles of tropical forest extending to the Gabun coast, containing many species of trees of industrial value. Wild caoutchouc is the most important. Palm oil is produced to some extent. Coffee, cacao and cotton are also cultivated. In the Chad Colony large numbers of cattle, sheep, asses, camels, horses, and ostriches are raised, but there are no facilities for export. Ivory is an important article of export. At the beginning of 1927 there were calculated to be 880,576 head of cattle in Chad. Copper, zinc, and lead are found.

Imports and exports for 1926 and 1927 were as follows :—

Colony	Imports		Exports
	1926	1927	1926	1927
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs
Middle Congo . . . . .	89,756,750	82,516,494	26,495,431	29,200,650

Ubangi-Shari . . . . .	19,622,452	15,848,736	13,052,181	13,492,968
Chad . . . . .	4,761,819	5,589,541	2,083,424	10,173,706
Totals . . . . .	170,431,683	172,819,683	94,249,135	136,747,844

There is considerable shipping at Port Gentil and Libreville, the chief ports; but at Loango steamers must anchor about three miles off the coast. Whale fishing commenced in 1922.

On February 6, 1921, a new railway was commenced to connect Brazzaville with the Atlantic at Pointe-Noire, and is expected to be completed in 1930.

The Central African telegraph line connects Brazzaville with Pointe-Noire, the terminus of the French cable from Brest via Dakar and Libreville, and is in communication with the English Atlantic cable. Wireless telegraphy connects Brazzaville and the head of the Southern Railway in the Loango Region, a distance of 300 miles, and also Brazzaville and Leopoldville, and a radio service with France was inaugurated in 1927. In the Chad region there are several stations connecting Fort Lamy, Ati, Faya, and Maô. A line has been laid to connect Brazzaville with Bangui, and another to connect Bangui with Fort Lamy. The total length of telegraph line in operation is about 3,253 miles.

On the north-east of Lake Chad is the state of Kanem, which was completely subjected to France in 1903, and is now only a district of the Shari territory with Maô for its capital. Wadai, to the east of Kanem, with an area of about 170,000 square miles, and a semi-civilised population of about 1,000,000, accepted the French Protectorate in the summer of 1903. In 1911 a French force occupied Arada, some miles to the north of the capital, Abeshr, which is in communication with Benghazi, on the coast of Tripoli, by caravans, and in 1913 Ain-Galakka.

The principal banks are Banque Française de l'Afrique and Bank Commerciale Africaine.

MADAGASCAR.

Government.

The last native sovereign of Madagascar, Rânavalona III. (born 1861, died 1916), succeeded in 1883. The French having claimed a portion of the north-west coast as having been transferred to them by local chiefs, hostilities were carried on in 1882-84 against the Hovas, who refused to recognise the cession. In 1885 peace was made, Diégo Suarez having been surrendered to France. A French Resident-General was received at the capital, and the foreign relations of the country were claimed to be regulated by France. By the Anglo-French agreement of August 5, 1890, the protectorate of France over Madagascar was recognised by Great Britain; but the Native Government having refused to carry out the clauses of the treaty of 1885, a French expedition was despatched in May 1895 to enforce the claims of France, and on October 1, the capital having been occupied, a treaty was signed whereby the Queen recognised and accepted the protectorate. By a unilateral convention made in January, 1896, Madagascar became a French possession, and by law promulgated August 6, 1896, the island and its dependencies were declared a French colony.

Governor-General.—Marcel Olivier (appointed January 11, 1924).

A Consultative Council of Administration has been established at Antananarivo. The Colony is not represented in the French Parliament, but there is an Economic and Financial Delegation, composed of 24 French citizens and 24 natives. The former are elected by the Chambers of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture and the Municipal Councils. The native members are chosen by the votes of a body of representatives itself elected by the chiefs of the villages. This delegation meets once a year for examination of the budget proposals. Four Europeans and two native members of the Council of Administration also take part in the meetings of this assembly. Madagascar is divided into 22 provinces and 76 districts. Natives are employed to a large extent in subordinate positions both in the civil and military administration. In all parts of the island the natives are allowed to choose chiefs who represent them in their relations with the Government.

Area and Population.

Madagascar is situated to the south-east coast of Africa, from which it is separated by the Mozambique Channel, the least distance between island and continent being 240 miles; its length is 980 miles; greatest breadth, 360 miles, and it has a coast line of over 3,000 miles. The area is estimated at 241,094 square miles. According to the last census (1926) the population (including that of the Mayotte and Comoro islands) was 3,621,342 (15·0 per sq. mile of), whom 3,591,943 were Malagasy, 18,040 were French and 11,359 foreigners, including Europeans and others. Of the native population in 1925, 1,024,109 were males, 1,177,726 females, and 1,374,266 were children under fifteen years of age. In 1925, there were 74,244 births among the native population (38,517 boys and 35,727 girls). In the same year there were 74,850 deaths.

The Malagasy races or tribes are very numerous, the more important being the Hova (906,938), the Betsileo (479,686), the Betsimisaraka (403,475), the Tanala (151,071), the Sakalava (141,726), and the Bara (157,096). Hindus, Chinese, Arabs, and other Asiatics carry on small retail trade. The most intelligent and enterprising tribe is the Hova or Merina, whose language, allied to the Malayan and Oceanic tongues, is understood over a large part of the island. The people are divided into a great many clans, who seldom inter-marry.

The slave trade was nominally abolished in 1877; slavery in Imerina and in all parts under French authority was abolished by proclamation on September 27, 1896. The system of forced labour in the public service was abolished on January 1, 1901, but the personal tax due from 16 to 60 years of age, formerly 5 francs, has been increased to 10, 15, in some provinces 20, and in Antananarivo to 30 francs. The populations of the chief towns were, in 1926, the capital, Antananarivo, in the centre of the island, 70,847 (3,648 French and 661 foreigners); Tamatave, 15,022; Fianarantsoa, 11,156; Antsirabe, 19,130; Majunga, 16,570; Diégo Suarez, 8,604; Tulear, 7,780; Mananjary, 12,013; Saint-Marie, 8,127; Nosy-Be, 14,022. The principal ports are Tamatave, on the east coast, Majunga on the north-west coast, Diégo Suarez in the north, and Tulear in the south-west.

In 1896, Diégo-Suarez (a French colony from 1885), the island of Noss Bé (area 130 sq. miles) on the west coast, and the island of Ste. Marie on the east coast (area 64 sq. miles), and in 1914 the Comoro Islands, were placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Madagascar.

Religion, Education, Justice.

Up to 1895, a large portion of the Hova and of the other tribes in the central districts had been Christianised. The Christian population was estimated at 450,000 Protestants, and 150,000 Roman Catholics. There are many missionary societies at work, French (Catholic and Protestant), British (the London Missionary Society, the Friends' Mission, and the Anglican Mission); there is also a Norwegian Lutheran Mission and an American Mission. French Catholic missions had 258 European workers (67 female); Protestant and Anglican missions had 173 (54 female). The outlying tribes are still mostly heathen.

Education is compulsory from 8 to 14 years of age. On September 15, 1925, there were 991 official schools for European and native children, with 90,833 pupils (56,865 boys and 33,968 girls), and 1,739 teachers, and 517 private schools, with 49,750 pupils and 1,144 teachers. Children are required to learn the French language. At Antananarivo there is a school of native medicine, an administrative and commercial school, a normal school, and a school of agriculture.

For the administration of French justice there are a Parquet consisting of a Procureur-Général and other officials, a court of appeal, 4 courts of first instance in the principal towns, and justice of peace courts at 17 centres. For native justice there are tribunals in the districts and provinces, and the natives have the right of appeal from lower to higher tribunals. There were also arbitration courts for settling labour disputes.

Finance.

The local revenue of Madagascar is derived chiefly from direct taxation (including a poll tax and taxes on land, cattle, and houses), from customs and other indirect taxes, from colonial lands, from posts and telegraphs, markets, and miscellaneous sources. The chief branches of expenditure are general administration, public works, the post office, and the public debt. The budgetary estimates for the calendar year 1927 aggregated 289,991,138 francs for the receipts, and the same amount for the expenditures. The various budgets balanced at the following figures:—ordinary and extraordinary, 207,777,000 francs; public works, 33,000,000 francs; railways, 33,917,000 francs; native medical services, 15,297,138 francs.

The colony has since 1897 contracted debt to the amount of 4,200,000*l.* at the average yearly rate of interest of 3·02 per cent. The loans were made for the purpose of public works or for the conversion of loans for that purpose.

Defence.

In peace time the troops in Madagascar (including the forces at Diégo-Suarez) consist of 1,542 Europeans, and 5,736 natives. The police and militia, consisting of 8,300 natives, are maintained on the local budget.

Production and Industry.

In 1896, on the completion of the French occupation of the Island, the Malagasy system of land tenure was modified; foreigners were permitted to acquire land, and registration of land was begun. Government lands, urban or non-urban, are let or sold to private persons, or to companies for agriculture, pasturage, or mining. On December 31, 1926, there were 3,048,367 acres of land under cultivation by natives and 285,607 acres by Europeans. The principal crops are rice, sugar, coffee, manioc, cotton, cacao, vanilla, tobacco, butter beans, lima beans, cloves, mulberry trees, and rubber trees. The areas under cultivation in 1927 were:—rice, 1,392,425 acres; manioc, 682,925 acres; maize, 213,540 acres; sweet potatoes, 244,825 acres; haricot beans, 91,097 acres; potatoes, 77,207 acres; coffee, 113,537 acres; vanilla, 53,260 acres. Sericulture is encouraged. The forests contain many valuable woods, while caoutchouc, gum, resins, and plants for textile, tanning, dyeing, and medicinal purposes abound.

Cattle breeding and agriculture are the chief occupations of the natives. There were on December 31, 1925, 7,139,900 cattle in the island; 2,384 horses; 116,114 sheep; 62,833 goats; 1,057 ostriches, and 386,305 pigs.

Silk and cotton weaving are carried on, and the working of metal and the making of panama and other straw hats. The preparation of sugar, rice, soap, tapioca, &c., is being undertaken by Europeans, as well as the canning of meat. There are large meat-preserving factories at Bo-anumary (Majunga), Diego-Suarez, Tamatave, Antananarivo and Antsirabe.

The value of the total output of minerals in 1926 was 59,231,042 francs, graphite accounting for 44,368,343 francs, gold for 6,934,068 francs, and mica for 4,121,528 francs. The production of phosphates was valued at 1,840,500 francs, that of precious stones at 1,680,679 francs, of industrial stones at 126,055 francs, of corundum at 94,209 francs, radio-active minerals (betafite and euxenite) at 65,292 francs, and zircon at 258 francs.

The following were the principal minerals in 1925 and 1926:—

Mineral	1925	1926
Gold . . . . . kilos.	419·7	306·6
Precious stones . . . . . "	128·5	6,643·0
Mica . . . . . tons	287·5	330·2

Graphite . . . . . "	13,005·0	15,902·6
Phosphates . . . . . "	—	6,135·4

Commerce.

The trade of Madagascar has been as follows in five years:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs

France supplies the bulk of the imports (489,105,617 francs in 1926 and 473,671,029 francs in 1927), and that country also receives the bulk of the exports (419,562,835 francs in 1926 and 286,515,357 francs in 1927).

According to Board of Trade returns, the imports from Madagascar into Great Britain in 1927 amounted to 456,421L., and in 1928 to 499,149L., and the exports from Great Britain amounted to 81,792L. in 1927 and 84,994L. in 1928.

Shipping and Communications.

Tamatave, the principal seaport of the island, is visited by the steamers of two French shipping companies, and the principal ports are connected with each other by coasting steamers plying regularly. In 1927, 5,914 vessels of 2,554,619 tons entered and 5,934 vessels of 2,543,899 tons cleared at the ports of Madagascar. Of the total vessels entering, 4,107 were French and 1,337 were British; and of those clearing, 4,107 were French and 1,337 British.

At the end of 1926, there were 1,800 miles of roads. Three railways are at present worked in Madagascar. The first is the through railway line between Antananarivo and Tamatave (229 miles) which was opened for traffic on March 9, 1913, and soon to be electrified. The second is the railway between Antananarivo and Antsirabe (noted for its thermal springs), 98 miles south of Antananarivo, opened for traffic on October 15, 1923. The third is the branch line of the Tamatave railway, from Moramanga to the Antsihanaka provinces, towards the north of the island, which was opened for traffic in October, 1917, a distance of 103 miles. Total railway mileage (including narrow-gauge local lines) on December 31, 1926, 430 miles. A new line from Fianarantsoa to the east coast of the island (105 miles) is projected. This will be electrified. There is also a motor-car service with a network of routes covering 612 miles.

There is postal communication throughout the island. There were in 1926, 185 ordinary post offices and 500 rural offices. The telegraph line has (1925) a length of 4,787 miles, and 7,452 miles of wire. There is cable communication to Mozambique, Mauritius, Réunion, and Aden. In 1925 there were 745 miles of urban telephone line, 1,490 miles of inter-urban circuits, and seven Government wireless telegraph stations. The important wireless station at Antananarivo, forming part of the French inter-colonial network of wireless stations, was opened towards the end of 1924.

Money and Banks.

By the decree of 22 December, 1925, a Bank of issue was established—the Bank of Madagascar, with a capital of 20 million francs. The Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris has agencies at Antananarivo, Tamatave, Diégo-Suarez, Mananjary, Majunga and Tuléar. The Crédit Foncier de Madagascar and La Banque de l'Océan Indien are also established in the island.

On January 1, 1920, a Savings Bank was established, and on January 1, 1924, it had 3,420 depositors with 2,717,491 francs to their credit.

The monetary system is the same as that of France, and all coins and notes which are legal tender in France are also legal tender in the Colony. Since the war, postage stamps affixed to cardboards, for smaller values, viz., 5, 10, 25 and 50 centimes, and 1 and 2 francs, are current.

MAYOTTE AND THE COMORO ISLANDS.

The archipelago of the Comoro Islands, is formed by the islands of Mayotte, Anjouan, Grande Comore and Moheli. Before 1912, Anjouan, Moheli and Grande Comore were only under French protection; Mayotte alone being a colony. But by a law of July 25, 1912, and a decree of February 23, 1914, the whole archipelago has become a colony, attached to the general government of Madagascar, of which it forms a twenty-first province, the Province de 'Mayotte et Dépendances.'

In 1925, the combined population was 119,305, including 804 Europeans.

The island of Mayotte (140 square miles) had a population (1925) of 12,674. There is an increasing emigration to Zanzibar and Madagascar. The chief product was formerly sugar, but the cultivation of vanilla has now superseded that of the sugar-cane. There are now only two sugar works and two distilleries for rum. Besides vanilla and sugar, cacao, aloes and perfume plants (citronella, ylang-ylang, patchouli, &c.) are cultivated.

Grande Comore, Moheli, Anjouan, and a number of smaller islands, have an area of about 650 square miles and population in 1925 of 106,625. Grande Comore itself is about 40 miles long and 18 miles at its broadest points. Vanilla, cacao and perfume plants are successfully cultivated. Grande Comore has a fine forest and exports timber for building and for railway sleepers.

The principal imports are cotton fabrics, metals, and rice; the principal exports, hides, sugar, copra, and vanilla.

Consular and other Representatives.

OF GREAT BRITAIN IN MADAGASCAR.

Consul at Antananarivo.—J. Helm Smith.

There is also a Vice-Consul at Majunga and at Tamatave.

RÉUNION.

Réunion (or Bourbon), about 420 miles east of Madagascar, has belonged to France since 1643. It is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council, and an elective Council-General, and is represented in the French Parliament by a Senator and two Deputies. It has an area of 970 square miles and population (1926) of 186,637, of whom 180,694 were French; there were also 628 British Indians, 1,963 natives of Madagascar, 411 Africans, 1,626 Chinese. The chief towns are: St. Denis, with 23,390 inhabitants in 1926; St. Pierre, 20,479; St. Paul, 21,643; St. Louis, 15,867. The towns are under the French municipal law. Réunion has a lycée with (1927) 37 teachers and 467 pupils. Primary education is given in two schools, one for boys with 532 pupils and 13 teachers, and one for girls with 497 pupils and 14 teachers, and elementary schools with 337 teachers and 13,602 pupils. There is a teachers training course at the lycée attended by 33 pupils with 4 teachers. The chief port, Pointe-des-Galets, is connected by a coast railway of 80 miles with St. Benoît on the one hand, and St. Pierre on the other. In 1888 this railway was taken over by the State. The chief productions are sugar (62,000 acres), rum, coffee (8,000 acres), manioc (12,000 acres), tapioca, vanilla, spices, essences. The forests occupy about 150,000 acres. The production of rum in 1927 amounted to 1,202,298 gallons (pure alcohol). The sugar production was 50,122 metric tons. The chief imports are rice (valued at 29,745,967 francs in 1927), grain, cotton goods (18,373,645 francs in 1927), &c.; the chief exports are sugar (62,762 metric tons in 1927) and rum. Total value of imports in 1927, 173,640,398 francs; of exports, 146,991,441 francs. In 1927, 143 vessels entered and cleared at the ports of the island. There are about 80 miles of railway. The Tamatave-Réunion-Mauritius Telegraph Cable is open for traffic. During the year 1927, there were 172,050 telephone conversations and 112,601 telegraph communications. There are 42 post offices and 513 central telephone offices. The budget for 1927 showed 51,799,299 francs for receipts, and 48,759,085 francs expenditure. The currency of Réunion consists of local bank notes and token nickel coinage. It has nominally the same value as that of France. The Bank of Réunion has a capital of 6 million francs.

St. Paul and Amsterdam, small islands in the Indian Ocean, belong to France.

Kerguelén, a desolate island, about 50 S. lat. and 70 E. long., was annexed by France in 1893.

British Consul at Réunion.—J. A. Mancini.

FRENCH SOMALILAND.

The colony of the Somali Coast lies between the Italian Colony of Eritrea and British Somaliland. On the north it is bounded by Cape Doumeirah, which separates it from the Italian possessions ; on the south by a line drawn from the wells of Hadou to Gueldessa, which separates it from the British possessions ; the inland boundary towards Abyssinia being, by convention of March 20, 1897, at a distance of 90 kilometres (about 56 miles) from the coast. The territory has an area of about 5,790 square miles, and the population was estimated in 1928 at 85,778, including Europeans. It is administered by a Governor, assisted by an Administrative Council. The port of Obok was acquired for France in 1862, but it was not till 1884 that its active occupation began. In 1884, Sagallo and Tajurah were ceded to France ; in 1885, Ambado ; in 1888 the territory was delimited by agreement with Great Britain ; in 1888, a port was created at Djibouti, now the seat of government.

Djibouti has (1928) 9,414 inhabitants, of whom 540 are European (317 French). The native population is made up as follows (1928) : Somali, 4,170 ; Arabs, 4,063 ; Danakils, 351 ; Jews, 141 ; Sudanese, 132 ; Annamites, 15 ; total 8,872. In 1902 a French mission school for boys and one for girls were opened at Djibouti. In October 1922, these were replaced by a public elementary school. The local budget for 1928 balanced at 13,002,000 francs. The country has scarcely any industries, but with the coast fisheries and inland trade there is considerable traffic. The salt mines, opened in 1912, exported in 1926 34,218 metric tons of salt. The chief imports are cotton goods, butter, coal, sugar ; the chief exports were coffee, ivory, hides and skins. The total imports in 1928 amounted to 457,751,424 francs, and the total exports to 401,543,750 francs. Much of the traffic with Abyssinia which formerly passed by Zailah now goes by railway from Djibouti to Addis Ababa (485 miles). The vessels of 3 French, 2 English, and 2 Italian shipping companies visit Djibouti, which is also in communication with Aden by means of French and English steamboats for local traffic. In 1928 there entered at Djibouti 1,423 steam merchant vessels of 1,145,271 tons. Of these vessels, 245 were French, 81 English, 30 Italian, 7 Dutch, 15 Norwegian, 13 German ; a total of 2,960 vessels cleared, with a tonnage of 2,280,861.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

French West Africa comprises the following colonies :—(1) Senegal, (2) French Guinea, (3) the Ivory Coast, (4) Dahomey, (5) French Sudan, (6) Upper Volta, (7) Mauritania, (8) Niger, and (9) Circle of Dakar and Dependencies.

906 FRANCE:—FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

The approximate area and population of French West Africa in 1926 are shown as follows:—

Colony	Area (in Square Miles)	Population 1926			Total	Population per sq. mile
		Europeans		Native Races
		French	Foreign
Senegal . .	74,112	3,057	1,598	1,818,637	1,818,287	17.7
Guinea . .	89,436	1,135	1,127	2,093,726	2,095,988	23.4
Ivory Coast . .	121,590	1,410	204	1,722,931	1,724,545	14.1
Dahomey . .	41,302	737	147	978,725	979,600	23.7
French Sudan . .	360,331	1,453	366	2,638,163	2,634,982	7.3
Upper Volta . .	142,820	358	37	3,259,722	3,240,147	22.6
Mauritania . .	154,400	178	101	288,905	289,184	1.9
Niger . .	463,200	253	7	1,218,457	1,218,717	2.6
Dakar and Dependencies . .	—	2,488	718	36,946	40,152	—
Total . .	1,247,191	11,099	4,300	13,526,212	13,541,611	—

Of the French population, 7,207 were men, 2,578 women, and 1,314 children; while of the foreign population, 2,466 were men, 939 women, and 895 children.

A treaty of October 19, 1906, determines the course of the Anglo-French boundary from the Gulf of Guinea to the Niger. The delineation of the boundary was completed in 1912, and approved by the two governments in 1914. The British government has leased to France for purposes of commerce two pieces of land, one on the right bank of the Niger between Lealaba and the confluence of the rivers Moussa and Niger, and the other on one of the mouths of the Niger, each to form one block of from 25 to 120 acres with a river frontage not exceeding 436 yards; the lease, at first, to be for 30 years. It is further stipulated that, within the boundaries indicated in the convention, British and French as regards persons and merchandise shall enjoy for 30 years the same treatment in all matters of river navigation, of commerce, and of tariff and fiscal treatment and taxes of all kinds.

Under the Anglo-French Convention of April 8, 1904, the river port of Yabatabenda on the Gambia (belonging to the British colony of Gambia), with all its landing places, was ceded to France, and, if this port should prove inaccessible to sea-going merchantmen, access to the river will be granted to France at an accessible point lower down. At the same time the Los Islands were ceded to France.

By an agreement dated July 6, 1911, between England and France, the boundary line between French Guinea and Sierra Leone was readjusted.

By a Convention between Great Britain and France the former recognised the right of France to all territory west of the Nile basin, which practically includes the whole of the Sahara (exclusive of the Libyan Desert), and the State of Wadai. The French Sahara may be roughly estimated at about 1½ million square miles.

Over the whole of French West Africa there is a Governor-General, who is assisted by a Council, the seat of the general government being at Dakar. The Colonies are each under a Lieutenant-Governor, the Circle of Dakar and Dependencies under a Governor of Colonies, all subject to the direction of the Governor-General, who has been relieved of the direct administration of any portion of his Government, and is free to devote the whole of his attention to directing and controlling the common interests of all the Colonies. To facilitate this object a General Budget has been created, drawn up by the Governor-General, which provides for all the services which are common to all the Colonies, and the funds for which are provided by the customs and shipping dues of each of the Colonies, which have now only their internal revenues to depend upon for their local budgets, which have, however, been relieved of the cost of all the general services.

The following are the financial estimates for 1929 :—

	General Budget	Local Budgets	Supplementary Budgets	Total
Revenue . . .	245,044,000	400,000,000	150,153,500	801,197,500
Expenditure . .	245,044,000	375,000,000	151,835,000	771,879,000

The military forces in peace times consist of 16,000 men, of whom 3,000 are Europeans. The police force numbers 7,000.

There were in 1927-28, 281 preparatory schools with 16,087 pupils (1,106 girls); 147 elementary schools with 13,704 pupils (694 girls); 88 urban schools with 5,918 pupils (1,274 girls); 8 higher primary schools with 659 pupils; 12 technical schools with 588 pupils. There were besides 146 evening schools for adults with 5,888 pupils, 9 orphan schools with 331 pupils, and 2 'medersas' or Mussulman schools with 107 pupils; also 3 higher technical schools with 305 students, and 2 Lycées with 370 pupils. The expenditure on education was 21,226,115 francs.

The imports into French West Africa are mostly food substances, textiles, mechanical implements, and beverages; the exports from these colonies are chiefly fruits, oils and oil seeds, as well as rubber, cotton, cocoa and timber.

The following is a comparative table of values of the imports and exports during 1927 and 1928 for each of the colonies :—

Colonies	Imports		Exports
	1927	1928	1927	1928
	francs	francs	francs	francs
Senegal . . .	823,067,983	909,998,954	739,460,455	885,945,699

Total . . .	1,407,620,740	1,550,729,015	1,280,700,189	1,412,098,809

Of the imports, 820,019,013 francs were from France in 1927, and 792,406,426 francs in 1928; of the exports 688,758,456 francs went to France in 1927, and 767,943,465 francs in 1928.

Total trade between Great Britain and French West Africa<sup>1</sup>, according to Board of Trade Returns for three years, was as follows :—

	1926	1927	1928
Imports from French West Africa from U.K. . .	2,087,680	1,230,430	1,414,259
Exports to French West Africa from U.K. . .	2,266,703	1,951,840	2,492,280

In 1927, 20,229 vessels of 16,466,259 tons entered and cleared the ports of French West Africa.

There were (1927) 1,950 miles of railway in operation and 345 miles under construction; 14,386 miles of telegraph, with 19,824 miles of wire. In 1927 there were 321 post offices, divided as follows:—Senegal, 62; French Sudan, 77; Guinea, 54; Ivory Coast, 43; Dahomey, 33; Mauritania, 14; Upper Volta, 19; and Niger, 19.

A savings bank was established by a decree of July 22, 1920, and began to function on October 1, 1922, with a single office at Dakar. There are now 4 branch offices at Saint-Louis, Conakry, Porto-Novo, and Niamey. On December 31, 1927, there were 4,415 depositors with 3,363,781 francs to their credit. The Banque de l'Afrique Occidentale Française has the right to issue notes. Its capital is 35,000,000 francs. The use of French weights and measures, and money, is compulsory throughout French West Africa.

Governor-General of French West Africa.—M. Carde. Appointed February 20, 1923.

The colony of Senegal was reorganised by the law of December 4, 1920. The capital is St. Louis, an old town founded in 1658 (population, 1926, 19,746, Europeans, 1,038). Two other important towns are Dakar, a fortified naval station, and the seat of the Government General of French West Africa (population, 1926, 33,697, European, 2,939), and Rufisque (population, 1926, 8,953, European, 799). These three towns, with Goree, a small island situated in front of Dakar (population, 998), are municipal communes governed by a mayor and corporation.

The total area is 74,112 square miles, and the total population in 1926 was put at 1,318,237. The natives of the four towns and their descendants are French citizens, and other natives are French subjects.

The Colony is represented in the French Parliament by a deputy.

The Colony is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by a Colonial Council of 40 members, 24 elected by French citizens and 16 by representatives of native chiefs of cantons and provinces. The Colony is divided into 15 'circles,' each under the rule of an administrator. The local budget for 1927 was 134,442,000 francs.

All towns having a sufficiently numerous European or assimilated native population have urban schools giving the same instruction as the French primary schools, modified to suit local requirements. At Dakar there are grouped superior technical schools common to all the colonies, a normal school for teachers, a professional school, a commercial and administrative school, a school of medicine. At St. Louis are a secondary school, a superior primary school. In 1929, 867,400 francs were provided for secondary education. There is a large hospital for natives at Dakar.

The soil is generally sandy. In 1926, there were 585,972 sheep and goats; 415,945 cattle; 58,012 asses; and 40,923 horses. The natives cultivate ground-nuts, millet, maize, and some rice; other products are castor beans, some coco-nuts, gum from Mauritania, and rubber from the Casamance river. Ground-nuts form the bulk of the exports. A salt industry is being developed. Native industries comprise weaving, pottery, brick-making and jewellery.

Imports in 1927, 823,067,983 francs; exports, 739,460,456 francs. The chief imports are cottons, foodstuffs, metal-work, coal. The chief exports are ground-nuts (740,946,438 francs in 1927), hides and skins, rubber and gums.

There are 4,860 miles of telegraph and about 408 miles of telephone lines. A submarine cable from Brest to Dakar was completed in April, 1905, so that the French West African Colonies are now independent of foreign cables.

There are three other cables, one Spanish, one French West African, and the third belonging to a South American company.

One railway connects Dakar, Rufisque and St. Louis (165 miles); another one Thiès and Kayes (French Sudan), 435 miles.

There is a river service on the Senegal from St. Louis to Kayes, the former a principal town of French Sudan (490 sea miles) on the Senegal river, during the rainy season, and extensive works for the improvement of the river have been carried out. The Senegal river is closed to foreign flags. Dakar, the principal port, is in regular communication with French ports by the steamers of 4 French lines, and with Liverpool by a British line. The Bank of West Africa (established June 23, 1901), with a capital of 6,000,000 francs, and reserve funds 3,920,000 francs, was founded for the purpose of carrying on financial, industrial, or commercial operations; it has a branch at Dakar, and agencies at St. Louis, Rufisque, and Kaolack. La Banque Française de l'Afrique has branches at Dakar and St. Louis. The Banque Commerciale Africaine has agencies at Dakar, Rufisque and Kaolack.

H. B. M.'s Consul-General at Dakar (for French Western Africa, including the Sudan).—R. C. F. Maugham.

French Guinea lies on the coast between Portuguese Guinea and the British colony of Sierra Leone, and extends inland so as to include the territories of Koumbia, Dinguiraye, Siguiri, Kouroussa, Kankan, Kissidougou, Dabola, Beyla, Macenta, Boffa, Boké, Conakry, Faranah, Forécariah, Kindia, Labé, Mamou, Pita, Gueckédou, and N'zérékoré. The area is about 92,840 square miles, and the population (1928) was 2,185,697, including 2,093 Europeans (945 French). A regular system of Government lay schools has recently been introduced all over French West Africa. The principal products are palm oil and nuts, rubber, millet, earth-nuts, rice, gum, cotton, bananas, pineapples, and coffee, which is grown in the Rio Nunez region. There is an experimental garden at Camayenne near Conakry (the capital), where the culture of bananas, pineapples, rubber trees, and other plants is being tried. Fouta Djallon contains cattle in abundance. In 1927 there were 460,000 cattle, 125,000 sheep, 170,000 goats, 2,400 horses, and 580 asses. Gold is found in the river Tinkisso and in the Bouré and Siecke districts. Imports in 1927, 100,431,695 francs; exports, 73,702,870 francs. The principal exports in 1927 were rubber, 11,213,910 francs; cattle, 3,100,180 francs; ground-nuts, 5,490,285 francs; hides, 8,125,629 francs; bananas, 3,040,828 francs; and palm kernels, 21,614,082 francs; animal wax, 2,838,304 francs; palm oil, 1,689,052 francs. The principal imports in 1927 were cotton fabrics, 40,860,172 francs; metal goods, 8,289,866 francs; petrol, 1,593,767 francs; wines, 2,609,978 francs; leaf tobacco, 2,276,603 francs; salt, 1,484,659 francs. A network of roads is being made to connect with the railway station from Conakry to the Niger. The French Guinea railway which runs from Conakry on the coast to the Niger at Kouroussa (366 miles long) was opened in January, 1911 and in August, 1914, was continued to Kankan (412 miles from Conakry). The jetty 1,066 feet long, at Conakry has been completed. In the colony there were (1927) 2,220 miles of telegraph and 410 miles of telephone line, of which 136 miles are urban and 274 miles inter-urban. The Colony is connected by cable with France and Pernambuco; also with Freetown, Monrovia, and Grand Bassam. There is a wireless station at Conakry affording communication with Dakar (Senegal), Bamako (French Sudan) and Grand Bassam (Ivory Coast). Conakry is visited regularly by the steamers of three French companies and one English company. The budget of the colony provided for 1928 the sum of 36,030,679 francs.

The Ivory Coast lies between Liberia and the British Gold Coast Colony. It has common frontiers with French Guinea, French Sudan, and the Upper Volta Colony. France asserted and obtained rights on the coast about 1842, but did not actively and continuously occupy the territory till 1882. Area about 121,976 square miles; population, 1,724,545; Europeans, 1,614. The seat of administration is Bingerville, the capital, formerly called Adjame (European population, 98). There is a central school group at Bingerville, and a number of Government schools in the districts. The chief ports, in respect of population and commerce, are Grand Bassam, Assinie, Grand Lahou, Sassandra, and Tabou. The chief centres in the interior are Abidjan (9,128 inhabitants, including 431 Europeans), Dimbokro, Bouaké, Aboisso, Bondoukou, and Korhogo. The natives cultivate maize, rice, plantains, pineapples, and many other fruits. They have also been taught to grow cocoa, the export of which increased from an average of 4 tons in 1904-1908 to 8,491 tons in 1925, 6,993 tons in 1926, and 9,808 tons in 1927. Coco-nuts and rubber are collected. The mahogany forests inland are worked. Gold is found near Grand Bassam in Baoulé, on the Comié and Bia Rivers, and in Indenié. The imports in 1927 amounted to 193,305,193 francs, and the exports to 235,467,066 francs. Chief imports in 1927 were: tissues, 49,706,104 francs; tobacco, 4,064,617 francs; wines, 6,838,789 francs; metal work, 29,860,565 francs. Chief exports were: palm kernels, 18,637,441 francs; palm oil, 13,991,064 francs; cacao, 59,150,938 francs; rubber, 3,798,140 francs; cabinet woods, 115,342,111 francs; cotton, 12,730,581 francs. The ports of the Colony are visited by liners of several French, English and Belgian shipping companies. Number of vessels entered in 1927, 1,087 of 3,060,600 tons, and cleared 1,084 vessels, of 3,057,538 tons. From Abidjan, on the north side of the lagoon, a railway has been constructed, running between Abidjan and Tafré (304 miles). Contracts have now been made to lengthen this to the north, to the Niger and Upper Volta. There is a large network of roads suitable for motor traffic, total length about 3,028 miles. At the end of 1927, there were 2,166 miles of telegraphic and 184 miles of telephonic lines. The telegraph connects the principal towns and extends to adjoining colonies. Telephonic communication exists between Bassam, Bingerville, Abidjan, Aboisso, and Dabou. The budget of the colony for 1928 has been fixed at 55,525,000 francs.

Dahomey stretches from the coast between Togoland on the west and the British possessions of Lagos and Nigeria on the east, and is bounded on the north-east by the river Niger and on the north and north-west by the colony of the Upper Volta, northwards to the French Military Territories. France obtained a footing on the coast in 1851, and gradually extended her power until in 1894 the whole kingdom of Dahomey was annexed. The colony has only about 70 miles of coast, but opens out northwards into a wide hinterland. The area is about 62,772 square miles, and the population, according to the latest census of 1927, 1,057,260, including 1,000 Europeans. The seat of government is Porto Novo (the chief business centre), which has about 27,000 inhabitants. Village, regional, and urban schools are instituted under the new West African educational system. In 1927, 1,524,274 francs were spent on education. The natives are of pure Negro stock, and belong to the Fon branch of the Ewe family. They are industrious agriculturists in the coast region, and grow maize, manioc, yams, and potatoes. In 1926, there were 1,800 horses; 500 asses; 90,000 cattle; 40,000 sheep; 90,000 goats; and 110,000 pigs. The forests contain oil palms, which have been profitably utilised. These furnish the chief exports—kernels and oil. Cotton cultivation has recently been successfully introduced in the central provinces. Imports in 1927, 159,023,671 francs; exports, 135,517,857 francs. The principal exports (1927), were palm kernels, 48,250 tons; palm oil, 18,226 tons, and cotton 727 tons.

A new metalled road, called the East Road (297 miles in length), for motor traffic runs from Savé to the Niger. There is also a road from Darsa-Zoumé to Natitingou (202 miles). There are now altogether more than 2,711 miles of carriage road, of which 495 miles are first-class roads. At Kotonu an iron pier has been erected, and from that port a railway runs into the interior to Savé (162 miles) with a branch line to Whydah and Segboroué on Lake Aheme (36 miles). The line is intended to run to Chaorn (400 miles). The gauge is a metre. A metre gauge railway has also been constructed from Porto Novo to Pobé (50 miles) along the Lagos frontier. A new railway linking the Capital with the port of Kotonu is in course of construction (22 miles). A telegraph line connects Kotonu with Abomey, Togoland, the Niger, and Senegal. In the colony there were (in 1927) 2,045 miles of telegraph line, and 560 miles of telephone line. In 1927, 535 vessels entered and cleared the ports of Dahomey. French coins only are in circulation. The local budget for 1928 was 19,102,000 francs.

The Colony of French Sudan was formed in 1904, from the Territories of Senegambia and the Niger, less the Senegal Protectorate, which was restored to Senegal. Its old name of Upper Senegal-Niger was changed to French Sudan by decree of December 4, 1920.

The Colony is bounded on the north by the Algerian sphere; on the west by Mauritania, the Falmé river, and the frontier of French Guinea; on the south by the frontiers of the Ivory Coast, and the Upper Volta, and on the east by the Colony of the Niger. It therefore includes the valley of the Upper Senegal, about two-thirds of the course of the Niger, much of the country enclosed in the great Bend, and a large part of the Sahara to the Algerian sphere of influence. The area is 360,331 square miles, with a population of about 2,632,618 in 1927.

At the same time that this Colony was formed the Military Territories, which now form an integral part of it, were broken up. The Second Military Territory, which included nearly all the country within the Bend, was handed over to the Military administration, and the First (Timbuktu) incorporated in Upper Senegal-Niger, was administered by a colonel under the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor. Since January 1, 1923 however, the region of Timbuktu has been converted into a "Civilian Territory," presided over by a chief administrator under the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor. The Third (Zinder-Chad) Territory has been constituted an autonomous unit. In 1919 the greater part of the southern portion in the bend of the Niger was created a separate Colony in the name of the Upper Volta (Haute Volta, see below).

The whole of the French Sudan is under civil administration, with the same judicial and educational systems as the other Colonies comprised in the Government General. The budget of the Colony for 1928 provided for 54,134,005 francs.

The most important and populous towns in the French Sudan are: Bamako, the capital, (24,041 inhabitants), Segou (7,597 inhabitants), Kayes (9,878 inhabitants), Djenné (5,450 inhabitants), Timbukta (5,485 inhabitants), Goundam (4,251 inhabitants), Niore (4,001 inhabitants), Sikasso (9,197 inhabitants), San (3,582 inhabitants), Mopti (3,907 inhabitants). All the principal towns have regional or urban schools; Bamako has a professional school, a junior high school and a veterinary school; there is a Mussulman superior school at Timbuktu with 67 pupils and one médessa (official).

The natives cultivate ground-nuts, millet, maize, rice, cotton, sesame ; other products are rubber and kariti. Large stocks of cattle abound in the colony.

Native industries comprise pottery, brick-making, jewellery, weaving, leather-making. Chief imports are cottons, food-stuffs, metal-work ; total in 1927, 85,724,473 francs. Chief exports are ground-nuts, cattle, rubber, gum, kopak, skins, cotton and wool ; total in 1927, 1,108,261 francs.

There is a very complete system of telegraphs throughout the Colony from Kayes to Niamey, Zinder, and Lake Tchad.

Since the completion of the section from Thiès to Kayes (January 1924), French Sudan is connected with the coast by a railway 760 miles in length, stretching from Dakar to Koulikoro by way of Thiès, Kayes and Bamako. For about seven months in the year small steamboats perform the service from Koulikoro to Timbuktu, and from Bamako to Kouroussa.

Wireless telegraph connects Kabara, Kidal and Bamako with the Eiffel Tower in Paris, and with Dakar, Rufisque, Conakry.

The Colony of the Upper Volta was formed by a decree of March 1, 1919, from the southern section of the Upper Senegal Niger. It lies within the bend of the Niger. By a decree of December 28, 1926, the circle of Say and the eastern part of the circle of Dori were detached from the colony and added to the colony of the Niger.

The eastern boundary, therefore, follows an irregular line through the villages Yatakala, Bossé, Tangou and Botou ; its southern boundary is formed by the river Mekrou and the northern boundary of Dahomey, Togoland, the Gold Coast, and the Ivory Coast: thence the boundary runs in a north-easterly direction from the river Bagoë to the Niger, about 16° N., below Ansongo. It embraces the circles of Gaoua, Bobo-Dioulasso, Dédougou, Ouagadougou, Ouahigouya, Tenkodogo, Kaya, Koudongo, and Fada. Area about 142,000 square miles, and native population 3,028,655 (census 1926), with 450 Europeans. The administrative centre is Ouagadougou (population 10,000) ; other towns are Bobo-Dioulasso (10,000), Didougou (3,000), and Ouahigouya (6,000). Administratively, it is on the same footing as the other Colonies of French West Africa. Economically, industrially and commercially it possesses the same characteristics as the French Sudan. Imports in 1927, 16,422,773 francs ; exports, 7,491,430 francs. The budget for 1927 balanced at 22,000,000 francs. An automobile service between Bouaké and Ouagadougou connects this colony with the Ivory Coast Railway. There are 5,500 miles of good roads.

Mauritania, formed into a Protectorate in May, 1903, converted into a special "Civilian Territory" in October, 1904, became a Colony on January 1, 1921, with a Lieutenant-Governor at its head. It consists of the districts of Trarza, Brakna, Gorgol, Assaba, Guidimaka, Adrar, Levrier Bay, and Tagant, with a total area of 347,400 square miles. The native population numbers 289,184, mostly Moorish Mussulmans. European population about 300. The northern limit of the Colony is approximate, and the foregoing area is obtained by taking the latitude 23° 3' N. as the northern boundary.

The budget of the Colony for 1927 was 11,725,800 francs.

The Colony of the Niger was formed by a decree of October 13, 1922. Estimated area, 404,914 square miles ; population (1928), 1,427,536 (313 Europeans). It was originally a Military Territory (1912); in 1920, it was placed under civil administration. The country is composed of a zone in the north, which is largely desolate country; a central strip which is wooded; and the southern zone, richly wooded and abounding in cattle. By a decree dated December 28, 1926, the circle of Say and part of the circle of Dori were transferred from the Colony of Upper-Volta to the Colony of the Niger, the new districts comprising 119,946 inhabitants. On January 1, 1928, there were, including the new territories, 53,695 horses, 767,859 oxen, 1,857,020 sheep and goats, 135,419 asses, 29,560 camels. In the southern zone rice, cotton, wheat, tobacco, maize, barley and indigo can be produced. In 1927 the chief agricultural products were, millet and sorghum (590,200 tons), manioc (14,400 tons), dates (1,000 tons), earth-nuts (15,700 tons), and beans (56,800 tons). The whole colony lacks water, with the exception of (1) the western districts which are watered by the Niger and its tributaries, (2) part of the southern zone where there are a number of wells, (3) the extreme south-west touching Lake Chad. Local budget in 1927, 13,225,650 francs. Niamey is the capital.

MANDATED TERRITORIES IN AFRICA: TOGO AND CAMEROON.

Togo.—Togo, the former German Colony, lies between the Gold Coast Colony on the west and French Dahomey on the east. It was surrendered unconditionally by the Germans to British and French forces in August, 1914, and is now divided between the French and British. The Mandate was approved by the League of Nations on July 20, 1922. Of the total area of 33,700 square miles, the French have obtained about two-thirds, 21,893 square miles, the boundary running from the north-east in a generally south-east and south direction to Lome, in such a manner that no part of the coast is included in the British sphere. Lome is the seat of the administration. The total population of the whole of Togo is estimated at 747,000 natives, with a European population of 448.

The southern half of Togoland is peopled by natives using 30 different languages, of which the principal is Ewe—these may be regarded as an offshoot of the Bantu peoples. The northern half contains, ethnologically, a totally different population descended largely from Hamitic tribes and speaking in all 16 languages, of which Dagomba and Tim are the most important. The majority of the natives are pagans, but many profess Mohamedanism, while Christianity has, latterly, been making some progress in the coast districts.

Inland the country is hilly, rising to 3,600 feet, with streams and waterfalls. There are long stretches of forest and brushwood, while dry plains alternate with cultivable land. Maize, yams, cassada, plantains, ground-nuts, etc., are cultivated by the natives; oil palms, caoutchouc, and dye-woods grow in the forests; but the main commerce is the barter trade for palm oil, palm kernels, coco, rubber and copra carried on with the European factories. There are considerable plantations of oil and coco palms, coffee, coco, kola, and cassada. During the last four years the natives have engaged in the cultivation of cocoa and cotton. Production of cotton amounted to 678 tons in 1922, 1,230 tons in 1926, and 1,472 tons in 1927. Production of cocoa amounted to 4,606 tons in 1925 and 5,226 tons in 1926. Other products in 1927 were, palm oil, 2,080 tons; palm kernels, 9,350 tons; maize, 1,866 tons. In the Sokodé and Sansane-Mangu districts in the French sphere there are about 65,000 head of cattle; sheep, goats, poultry and pigs are found, but nowhere in large numbers; in some districts horses of small size are bred. Native industries are: weaving, pottery, smith-work, straw-plaiting, wood-cutting, etc. There is no mining by Europeans, but the natives in the Sokodé and Misahöhe districts smelt iron, in which this Colony is very rich. For 1927, imports amounted to 81,242,102 kilograms, valued at 100,715,688 francs, and exports to 27,779,200 kilograms, valued at 82,242,712 francs. The local budget for 1927 balanced at 33,478,000 francs. There was also a railway budget, 10,200,000 francs; and a budget for public health and native medical services, 6,200,000 francs.

There are good roads, connecting the more important centres of the Colony. There are three railways connecting Lome with Anecho (Little Popo) (27 miles), with Palime (74 miles), and with Atakpame (103 miles). Total, 204 miles, with 5 stations and sub-stations. There are 13 post and telegraph stations and 4 sub-stations, connected by telegraph and telephone with the Gold Coast Colony, French Dahomey, and with Europe.

The port of Lome has a wharf with a capacity of 600 tons of traffic daily. At Anecho the embarkation is made by means of surf boats. In 1927, 382 vessels cleared at the two ports.

Cameroon.—The former German Colony of Kamerun, including the area of French Equatorial Africa ceded by France to Germany, was occupied by French and British troops in 1916. The greater portion of the territory has been placed under French administration, and a strip on the southern border of Nigeria under British. The total area allotted to France amounts to 166,489 square miles, excluding the 107,270 square miles ceded to Germany in 1911, which is now included in French Equatorial Africa. Population in 1926 was 1,878,683, of whom 647,341 were men, 680,886 women, and 548,886 children. The Europeans numbered 1,570, of whom 1,233 were French. The portion of Cameroon placed under the Mandate of France by the Treaty of Versailles has, by a decree of March 23, 1921, been constituted an autonomous territory both administratively and financially. The seat of government is Yaoundé. In 1925, there were 73 government schools, of which 1 was a high school at Yaoundé, 9 regional schools, and 51 village schools, 7 professional schools, and 5 schools for domestic training, with a total attendance of 10,549. There are also 36 private schools. The budget provided for 938,474 francs for public education. General budget for 1927 balances at 41,768,350 francs; special railway budget, 16,000,000 francs; special medical budget, 3,597,000 francs. Chief products are tobacco, palm oil, almonds, rubber, timber, cacao and ivory. In 1926, there were 11,600 horses; 10,000 asses; 331,900 cattle; 410,000 sheep and goats; and 8,000 pigs. Imports in 1927 amounted to 194,476,148 francs, and exports to 160,797,699 francs. In 1925, 217 vessels entered at the port of Douala. The country has 1,120 miles of roads, and 369 miles of railway.

AMERICA.

GUADELOUPE AND DEPENDENCIES.

Guadeloupe, situated in the Lesser Antilles, consists of two islands separated by a narrow channel, called 'Rivière Salée.' That on the west is called Guadeloupe proper or Basse-Terre, and that to the east Grande-Terre; they have a united area of 1,380 square kilometres (532 square miles), and a circumference of 275 miles. There are five dependencies consisting of the smaller islands, Marie Galante, Les Saintes, Désirade, St. Barthélemy, and St. Martin; the total area with these is 688 square miles. The colony is under a Governor and an elected council, and is represented by a senator and two deputies. Population (1926) 243,243. Instruction (1926-27) is given in 1 lycée with 464 pupils, a secondary course for girls at Pointe-à-Pitre, with 322 pupils, and 113 public and private elementary schools. The public elementary schools have 324 teachers and 17,180 pupils, and the private have 878 under 40 mistresses. The seat of government is Basse-Terre (8,379 inhabitants). Pointe-à-Pitre (26,455 inhabitants) has a fine harbour. Revenue and expenditure balanced at 29,018,596 francs for 1927. Outstanding debt, December 31, 1926, 499,078 francs.

Chief products are sugar, coffee, cocoa, and rum. For local consumption there are grown bananas, sweet potatoes, manioc, tobacco, indian corn, and vegetables.

In 1926, the imports were 144,849,469 francs, and the exports 167,663,138 francs (sugar, 33,847,169 kilogrammes; coffee, 593,439 kilogrammes; rum, 12,009,494 litres; cacao, 609,956 kilogrammes; vanilla, 34,888 kilogrammes; bananas, 1,431,340 kilogrammes). Guadeloupe is in direct communication with France by means of two steam navigation companies. A new wireless station at Destrellan was opened in 1918. Within the islands traffic is carried on by means of roads, of which there were 230 miles in 1928. The Bank of Guadeloupe, with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, and reserve funds amounting to 848,746 francs, advances loans chiefly for agricultural purposes, even on the security of jewellery. The Royal Bank of Canada has also established a branch. There is likewise another bank, the Banque de Commerce, but while this is a private institution, the Banque de la Guadeloupe and the Royal Bank of Canada have a semi-official character. Silver coin has disappeared from circulation; nickel treasury tokens (bons) of 1 franc and of 50 centimes are authorised up to a total emission of 1,000,000 francs.

GUIANA.

The colony of French Guiana, on the north-east coast of South America, is administered by a Governor, assisted by a Privy Council of 5 members. The colony has a Council-General of 16 members elected by French citizens resident in Guiana, and is represented in the French Parliament by one deputy. Area about 34,740 square miles, and population, census of 1926, 47,341. Cayenne, the chief town, has a population of 13,936, and the other 14 communes have 28,995. These figures are exclusive of the population of the penal settlement of Maroni, of the floating population of miners without any fixed abode, as also officials, troops, and native tribes. At Cayenne there are a court of first instance, a court of appeal, and justices of the peace, with jurisdiction in other localities. The military force consists of 200 officers and men of the Colonial Infantry. Primary education is given gratuitously since 1889 in lay schools for the two sexes in the communes and many villages. There is also a college for secondary and higher primary education, with a department for professional education and a normal course for teachers. There are also several Congregational schools. The school population in 1927-28 was 3,500. The penal settlement also has 3 schools with 236 pupils. The budget for 1927 amounted to 11,000,000 francs receipts, and 10,500,000 francs expenses. The country has immense forests rich in many kinds of timber. There is little agriculture in the colony; only about 7,900 acres are under cultivation. The crops consist of rice, maize, manioc, cocoa, coffee, sugar-cane, indigo, tobacco, and gutta percha. The most important industry is gold-mining (placer). Silver, iron, and phosphates are also worked. The exports consist of cocoa, phosphates, various woods, gold, rosewood essence, balata, and hides. The total imports in 1927 were valued at 61,641,424 francs, and the exports at 29,769,728 francs. There are three ports—Cayenne, Saint-Laurent-du-Maroni, and Oyapoc. Cayenne and Saint-Laurent are visited once a month by a cargo boat of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique. There is also steamboat communication between the capital and the other towns and with the neighbouring colonies. There are three chief and many secondary roads connecting the capital with various centres of population in the interior.

Since 1885, Cayenne has had a penal settlement for habitual criminals and convicts sentenced to hard labour. On December 31, 1927, the penal population consisted of 6,000.

The Bank of Guiana, under Government control, with a capital of 600,000 francs, with statutory reserve fund amounting to 650,000 francs, advances loans for agricultural and other purposes.

MARTINIQUE.

The colony is under a Governor assisted by a Privy Council. An elected General Council votes the Budget, and elective municipal councils administer the communes. It is represented by a senator and two deputies in the French Chamber. Area 385 square miles, divided into 32 communes; population (census 1927) 234,695. The military force consists of one company of infantry and a battery of artillery. There is a law school (at Fort-de-France) with 70 students; a lycée for boys, with 800 pupils; a high school for girls with 815 pupils; primary schools, with 21,037 pupils (including 7 private schools); a commercial school with 137 pupils, and a school of arts and crafts (93 pupils). Chief commercial town, Fort-de-France (population, 43,338). The budget for 1927 balanced at 66,103,756 francs. Sugar, rum, and cocoa are the chief productions, then come coffee, tobacco, pine-apple, and bananas. There are 15,000 hectares under sugar-cane and food-producing crops. Tobacco culture is under special regulations. There are 15 sugar works, with 15 distilleries attached, 117 agricultural distilleries, 4 industrial distilleries devoted to the production of rum, and 17 industrial establishments. In 1927, 40,397 metric tons of sugar, 5,224,021 gallons of rum, and 475 metric tons of cocoa beans were exported. The total imports in 1927 were valued at 212,594,604 francs, and the exports at 229,373,089 francs. Vessels entered in 1927, 550 of 1,040,764 tons; vessels cleared, 560 of 1,053,861 tons. The island is visited regularly by the steamers of French and American companies. For local traffic there are subsidised mail coaches and motor-cars; and subsidised steamers ply along the coast. The colony is in telegraphic communication with the rest of the world by telegraph cables and wireless. The Bank of Martinique at Fort-de-France with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, the Crédit Martiniquais with a capital of 3,500,000 francs, and a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada advance loans for agricultural and other purposes.

ST. PIERRE AND MIQUELON.

The largest islands of two small groups close to the south coast of Newfoundland. Area of St. Pierre group, 10 sq. miles; population in 1925, 3,040; area of Miquelon group, 83 sq. miles; population, 544; total area, 93 sq. miles; total population, 3,584. Since July, 1921, a Governor organises and regulates the various branches of the public service. He is assisted by a consultative council of administration and municipal councils. Chief town, St. Pierre. Primary instruction is free. There are 2 public schools for boys, and 3 for girls, with (in all) 26 teachers and 772 pupils. There are, besides, infant schools, 'salles d'asile,' frequented by 140 children. There are a private boarding school and two private schools.

The islands, being mostly barren rock, are unsuited for agriculture. The chief industry is cod-fishing. Imports in 1927, 165,801,030 francs; exports, 127,409,172 francs. The imports comprise textiles, salt, wines, foodstuffs, meat; and the exports, cod, dried and fresh, and fish products. St. Pierre is in regular steam communication with North Sydney and Halifax; and is connected by telegraph cable with Europe and the American continent. Local budget for 1928: Receipts, 10,011,500 francs; Expenditure, 10,011,500 francs.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA.

NEW CALEDONIA AND DEPENDENCIES.

Governor.—M. Guyon (1925).

New Caledonia is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council consisting of the Secretary-General, the Procureur-Général (the head of the Judicial administration), the Superior Commandant of the Troops, the head of the Department of Domains and Colonisation, and two notables of the colony appointed by the President of the Republic. The colony has also an elective Council-General. Nouméa, the capital, has a municipality; other centres of population are locally administered by municipal commissions. The colony contains a penal settlement at Nou Island. Since 1896, however, no convicts have been sent thither, and the convict element in the population is quickly decreasing.

The island is situated between the 20° 1' and 22° 26' parallels south latitude, and 161° 30' and 144° 40' east longitude. It has a total length exceeding 248 miles and an average breadth of 31 miles. Area, 8,548 square miles. According to the census of July 5, 1921, the population was 47,505, of whom 14,172 were free, 2,310 of convict origin, and 25,123 Melanesians and Polynesians. On October 31, 1925, the native population was 27,061. Nouméa had (1921) 9,336 inhabitants, of whom 6,328 were free. The immigrants from France are not numerous. Other immigrants (July 1, 1925) were 2,604 Javanese, 2,929 Tonkinese, 64 Indians, and 244 islanders from the New Hebrides. Primary instruction is provided in public and also in private elementary schools, the latter being assisted by the local budget. In 1925, there were 55 public and private primary schools with 2,779 pupils (1,425 being girls), and 74 native schools with 2,746 pupils. In Nouméa the 'Collège La Pérouse' gives classical tuition to 140 pupils and professional instruction (iron and wood) to 60 pupils. Local budget for 1927, receipts and expenses, 28,080,437 francs, of which 23,207,860 francs were for the ordinary budget, and 4,878,431 extraordinary budget. In 1925 the military force consisted of 95 Europeans and 69 native troops. Of the total area more than half is mountainous or not cultivable; about 1,600 square miles is pasture land; about the same area is cultivated or cultivable; and about 500 square miles contain forest which is being worked. The land is divided into 3 domains: that of the state (in which gratuitous concessions may be made); that of the penal establishment (about 400 square miles); and that of the native reserve. The chief agricultural products are coffee, copra, cotton, manioc (cassava), maize, tobacco, bananas, pine-apples. There are 200,000 cattle and about 25,000 sheep. The mineral resources are very great; chrome, cobalt, nickel, iron, and manganese abound; antimony, mercury, cinnabar, silver, gold, lead, and copper have all been obtained. The nickel deposits are of special value, being without arsenic. Local industries are developing; there are a grain storage and cleaning dépôt, meat preserving works, barking mills for coffee and cotton, and two blast furnaces melting nickel ore. A hydro-electric factory was established in 1926. About 128,000 hectares of mining land are owned, and 137,000 hectares have been granted for prospecting. In 1925, mineral export comprised chrome ore, 20,715 tons; nickel, 4,400 tons; phosphates, 10,000 tons. The value of the mineral export was 4,019,384 francs. The blast furnaces produced 4,435 tons matto of nickel valued at 12,475,006 francs. The imports in 1927 were valued at 154,771,189 francs, and the exports at 87,195,849 francs. The imports comprise wine, coal, flour, rice; the exports, minerals, coffee, copra, cotton, guano, and preserved meats. In 1927, 129 vessels of 198,019 tons entered and 133 of 190,825 tons cleared at the ports of New Caledonia. Of those which entered, 83 (122,312 tons) were French. Nouméa is connected three times monthly with Sydney in New South Wales by regular steamers sailing monthly, and by other vessels sailing irregularly. There is a mail service by steamer along the coast. There is a narrow-gauge railway (single line) from Nouméa to Paita, about 20 miles long. The proposed extension to Bourail, 105 miles from Nouméa has, however, been postponed. There is a daily motor road service for passengers from Nouméa to Bourail, but most of the roads are only suitable for horseback transport. There are 921 miles of telegraph line and 707 of telephone line.

Dependencies of New Caledonia are:

1. The Isle of Pines, 30 miles to the south-east, with an area of 58 square miles and a population of about 600.

2. The Wallis Archipelago, north-east of Fiji, with an area of 40 square miles and about 4,500 inhabitants. The islands were placed under the French protectorate in 1842. There is a French Resident, and the archipelago is in regular communication with Nouméa. Budget for 1927, 298,640 francs.

3. The Loyalty Islands, 60 miles east of New Caledonia, consisting of 3 large islands, Maré, Lifou, and Uvea, and many small islands with a total area of about 800 square miles. The chief culture in the islands is that of coconuts; the chief export, copra and rubber.

4. The Huon Islands, 170 miles north-west of New Caledonia, a most barren group.

5. Futuna and Alofi, south of the Wallis Islands, with about 1,500 inhabitants, were annexed by France in 1888.

The New Hebrides, in accordance with the Anglo-French convention of February (ratified in October), 1906, are jointly administered by the High Commissioners of His Britannic Majesty and the French Republic. In 1914 an Anglo-French conference was appointed to devise means of remedying the defects of the condominium. Population (census of May 1, 1924), 2,161. In 1825 there were 746 French and 322 English. There are French and English courts, and a mixed court with a judge foreign to both nations. Local budget for 1928, 5,148,000 francs. Exports in 1926 amounted to 43,267,835 francs, of which 34,371,306 were French trade, and 8,896,529 francs British trade; imports to 30,457,405 francs, of which 20,326,172 francs were in French trade, and 10,131,233 in British trade. Maize, coffee, cotton, cocoa, vanilla, coconut trees are grown, and are the chief articles of export. In some places sulphur is abundant. In 1926, 63 vessels of 82,675 tons entered, and 61 vessels of 81,686 tons cleared the ports. Of these 40 entering were British (62,255 tons), and 25 French (20,335 tons). Of those clearing 37 were British (61,067 tons), and 23 French (20,594 tons).

FRENCH ESTABLISHMENTS IN OCEANIA.

Governor.—M. B. J. V. Stadous (appointed Jan. 13, 1928).

These, scattered over a wide area in the Eastern Pacific, are administered by a governor with an Administrative Council consisting of certain officials, the maire of Papeete, and the Presidents of the Chambers of Commerce and Agriculture. The establishments consist of the Society Islands, the most important of which are Tahiti and Moorea, the former with an area of about 600 square miles and (census 1926) 8,585 inhabitants, the latter with an area of 50 square miles and 1,837 inhabitants; the principal product is phosphate (annual production, 80,000 metric tons). Other groups are the Marquezas Islands, with a total area of 480 square miles and 2,255 inhabitants, the two largest islands being Nukahiava and Hivaoo; the Tuamotu group, consisting of two parallel ranges of islands from King George's Island on the north to Gloucester Island on the south, their total population being 4,276; the Leeward Islands (Iles sous le Vent) (8,502 inhabitants), of which the more important are Huahiné (pop. 1,283), Raiatea and Tahaa (pop. 4,307), and Bora-Bora-Maupiti (pop. 1,330); the Gambier, Tubuai, and Rapa Islands; the Gambier group (of which Mangareva is the principal) having six square miles of area and 501 inhabitants; the Tubuai (or southern) Islands, of which Rurutu is the largest, Raiavavae (or Vavitu), Rimatara, and, far to the south, Rapa, having together an area of 115 square miles and 3,170 inhabitants; Makatea, 1,086 inhabitants; Island of Maiao, 81 inhabitants. The total area of the Establishments is estimated at 1,520 square miles, and their population, according to the census of 1926, was 35,862, of whom 29,644 were natives. There were 870 French, 217 English, and 3,989 Chinese. In 1903 it was decreed that separate islands or groups should no longer be regarded as distinct Establishments, but that all should be united to form a homogeneous colony. Budget for 1927 balanced at 15,167,573 francs.

The most important of the islands is Tahiti, whose chief town is Papeete with 4,601 inhabitants, of whom 2,126 are French. A higher primary school, with a normal school, has been established at Papeete, and there are (1925) 63 primary schools, with 91 teachers and 3,750 pupils. Pearls and mother-o'-pearl are important products. The island is mountainous and picturesque with a fertile coastland bearing coconut, banana, and orange trees, sugar-cane, vanilla, and other tropical fruits, besides vegetables grown in temperate climates. The chief industries are the preparation of copra, sugar, and rum. Value of imports (1927) 50,596,237 francs, exports, 49,032,248 francs. The chief imports are tissues, wheat, flour, metal work. The chief exports were copra (14,242 tons), mother-o'-pearl, vanilla, coconuts and phosphates. The export of phosphates in 1926 was 127,177 tons, in 1927, 135,666 tons. The New Zealand company (with a French subvention) has a monthly service connecting San Francisco, New Zealand and Australia with Papeete, the Tuamotu Islands, the Marquesas, and the Leeward Islands. The shipping between the islands is carried on by sailing boats.

GERMANY.

(DEUTSCHES REICH.)

ON November 9, 1918, the abdication of the German Emperor was announced, and from that date Germany became a Republic.

(For the constitution of the Empire and its rulers see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1918, pp. 881-884.)

Constitution and Government.

The Council of People's Commissioners in Berlin took over the Government of the country; the reigning princes of the Federal States were either deposed or abdicated, the existing Imperial Parliament was declared dissolved, and arrangements were made for summoning a National Assembly.

The elections for the body (for which all Germans, men and women, over 20 years of age voted) were held in January, 1919, and resulted, on the basis of proportional representation, in the return of the following parties :—Majority Socialists, 165 ; Centre (Catholic) Party, 90 ; Democrats, 75 ; Conservatives, 42 ; Independent Socialists, 22 ; German People's Party, 22 ; and minor parties, 7 ; total, 423. The National Assembly was summoned to meet at Weimar on February 6 and on February 11, 1919, it elected the first President of the Republic, Friedrich Ebert, who held office from February 11, 1919, until his death on February 28, 1925.

President of the Republic.—Paul von Hindenburg. Elected the second President on April 26, 1925 ; assumed office on May 12, 1925.

The President is elected by the direct vote of all citizens, male and female, over 20 years of age. The election must be held either on Sunday or on a day of public rest. The President holds office for 7 years.

On June 29, 1928, the following Cabinet was appointed :—

Chancellor.—Hermann Müller (Socialist).

Minister of Justice.—Erich Koch-Weser (German Democratic Party).

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Gustav Stresemann (German People's Party).

Minister for Home Affairs and Minister for the Occupied Provinces.—Karl Severing (Socialist).

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Rudolf Hilferding (Socialist).

Minister of Defence.—Lieut.-General Wilhelm Groener.

Minister of Labour.—Rudolf Wissell (Socialist).

The Constitution of the Republic was adopted on July 31, 1919, by the National Assembly at Weimar, and promulgated on August 11, 1919. It declares that the new Commonwealth is a Republic and that the power of the State is derived from the people. The colours of the Republic are black, red and gold. The trade flag is black, white, and red with the colours of the Reich in the upper inside corner. The Constitution provides for Central, and State Legislative organs ; makes foreign relations, defence, customs duties taxation and railway services matters for the central authority ; lays it down that every component State in the Federation must have a Republican Constitution, with a universal, equal, direct, and secret franchise of male and female voters on the proportional system. A State Council (Reichsrat) is to be formed for the representation of the component States (Länder). All Bills (Gesetzesvorlagen) before they are introduced into the Reichstag require the assent of the Reichsrat, but the Reichstag can pass a Bill into law with a two-thirds majority over the head of the Reichsrat. The principle of the Referendum is provided for in the Constitution. The Constitution further declares all Germans equal before the law, and abolishes all privileges or disadvantages of birth, class, or creed. Freedom of speech and of the Press is guaranteed ; so is the right of meeting. Members of the Legislature of the Republic (Reichstag) are to be elected by universal, equal, direct and secret votes of male and female voters, on the proportional system. The Reichstag is to be elected for 4 years. The Cabinet appointed by the President must enjoy the confidence of the Reichstag. Declarations of war and conclusions of peace are made by a law of the Republic.

The Reichsrat consists of 68 members (Prussia 27, Bavaria 11, Saxony 7, Württemberg 4, Baden 8, and the other States 16).

The Reichstag, elected on May 20, 1928, is composed as follows: Socialists, 153; German National People's Party, 73; Centre Party, 62; German People's Party, 45; German Democratic Party, 25; Bavarian People's Party, 16; Communists, 54; Middle Classes Party, 23; and minor parties, 39; total, 490.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITIONS.

The following table gives the area and population of the present States (Länder) of Germany in the order of their magnitude, embodying the returns of the census of June 16, 1925:—

According to the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919) Germany has agreed to the following territorial arrangements:—(1) Alsace-Lorraine ceded to France, (2) the greater part of the Provinces of West Prussia and Posen ceded to Poland, (3) a part of Eastern Silesia and of East Prussia likewise to Poland, (4) a portion of Upper Silesia to Czechoslovakia, (5) Memel to Lithuania, (6) Danzig, a Free State under the protection of the League of Nations, (7) Eupen and Malmedy to Belgium, (8) a part of Schleswig to Denmark.

Provision was made in the Treaty to settle the ultimate fate of the following areas by plebiscite:—(1) The Saar Basin (after 15 years), (2) Schleswig (in two zones), (3) districts in Southern East Prussia, in West Prussia and in Upper Silesia. Results of the plebiscites:—Schleswig (March, 1920), northern zone for Denmark, southern zone for Germany; East and West Prussia (July, 1920) for Germany; Upper Silesia (March, 1921) for Germany. Despite the decision in Upper Silesia, 1,241 square miles, with a population of 892,537, were transferred to Poland.

An estimate of the actual areas and populations (according to the Census of 1910) lost to pre-war Germany has been made as follows: Alsace-Lorraine, 5,607 square miles, population 1,874,014; ceded to Belgium, 490 square miles, population 60,003; ceded to Poland, 17,816 square miles, population 3,854,961; Memel, 1,026 square miles, population 141,238; Danzig, 739 square miles, population 330,630; ceded to Denmark, 1,542 square miles, population 166,348; ceded to Czechoslovakia, 122 square miles, population 48,446; total 27,252 square miles, population 6,475,640.

The Saar Basin, which has been placed under the government of the League of Nations for 15 years, has an area of 738 square miles and a population (1926) of 773,764. (See also p. 956.)

The area of the territory occupied under the Treaty was originally about 12,528 square miles, containing about 7 million inhabitants, but by January 31, 1926, the Cologne zone, with 2,527 sq. miles and 2,640,798 inhabitants, had been evacuated.

The population of the German Empire (without Heligoland) was 24,831,396 in 1816, and 31,589,547 in 1837, showing an average annual increase of nearly 1·3 per cent. The following table shows the actual increase in population at various periods, with the annual rate of increase per cent. The small increase in 1867-71 is explained by the intervention of the war with France.

Year	Increase	Annual Rate per cent.	Year	Increase	Annual Rate per cent.

The number of foreigners in Germany, according to the census of June 16, 1925, was 957,096, or 15·3 of the total population of the country. Poles numbered 259,804, Austrians 128,859, Czechoslovaks 222,521, British 6,876, French 7,290.

II. MOVEMENT OF THE POPULATION.

The following table shows the movement of the population of the Empire during three years:—

Year	Marriages	Total Births	Stillborn	Illegitimate	Total Deaths	Surplus of Births
1925	482,792	1,386,327	43,828	160,452	788,519	+547,808
1926	483,198	1,269,419	41,519	159,572	775,878	+493,541
1927	538,525	1,198,323	38,117	—	795,374	+402,949

Of the children born in 1925, 691,110 were boys and 645,217 girls; in 1926, 655,678 were boys, and 613,741 girls.

The number of divorces in Germany was in 1925, 35,451, being 56.8 per 100,000 inhabitants; in 1926, 34,105 or 54.3.

The following table shows the annual number of German emigrants for six years:—

Year	Total	Destination

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

German towns are distinguished as large towns (with 100,000 inhabitants and upwards); medium towns (20,000-100,000 inhabitants); small towns (5,000-20,000 inhabitants), and country towns 2,000-5,000 inhabitants). In 1925, 2 towns had over 1,000,000 inhabitants; 18 others over 250,000; 26 others over 100,000; 50 between 50,000 and 100,000; and 166 between 20,000 and 50,000. According to the results of the census of June 16, 1925, the population of the principal towns at that date was:—

Religion.

According to the census of June 16, 1925, there were in Germany 40,014,677 Protestants (64 per cent. of the total population), 20,193,334 Catholics (32 per cent.), 87,580 other Christians (0.1 per cent.), and 564,379 Jews (0.9 per cent.).

The Constitution provides for entire liberty of conscience. There is no State Church. Every religious community manages its own affairs, and makes appointments to its offices without interference from the State.

The Evangelical Churches are now united in the German Evangelical Church Union.

There are 5 Roman Catholic archbishoprics, 14 suffragan bishoprics, and 6 bishoprics immediately subject to Rome; there are 3 apostolic vicariates. The 'Old Catholics' have a bishop at Bonn.

The Jewish congregations are federated in the 'Deutsch-Israelitischer Gemeinde-Bund.'

Education.

Education is general throughout Germany, all children between the ages of 6 and 14 being bound to attend some recognised school. The teachers in German schools are required to hold a Government certificate, and to have undergone a period of training and probation.

According to a school census taken in 1926-27 there were in that year 52,785 public elementary schools in Germany with 180,964 teachers (187,178 males and 43,791 females), and 6,659,769 pupils (3,356,740 boys and 3,303,029 girls). There were in 1922, 675 private schools with 35,534 pupils (14,986 boys and 20,598 girls).

According to the law of April 28, 1920, German children are all bound to receive a four years' course of instruction in the 'Foundation School' (Grundschule). The next highest school for elementary education is the 'People's School' (Volksschule), which like the Grundschule, is supported partly by the State (mostly for personnel), and partly by the municipalities (mostly for school buildings, etc.). Besides the Volksschule there is found the 'Middle School' (Mittelschule), which differs from the former in that instruction is provided in English and French. Apprentices and young people at work must attend Continuation Schools for 6 to 8 hours weekly during working hours. In addition there is a large number of special schools which prepare the pupils for particular callings.

To prepare for the Universities and for admission into certain professions, there are several kinds of secondary schools with a course of study extending in the main over 9 years. Of these the oldest is the Gymnasium, which specializes in classical studies; side by side with this is the Realgymnasium, which specializes in mathematics, natural science and modern languages, but also teaches classical subjects. The Gymnasien are the most fully developed classical schools; the Progymnasien differ from these only in not having the highest classes. The Oberrealschulen give instruction in mathematics, natural science and modern languages, but not in classics. Experimentally two other kinds of schools have been established—the German High School (Deutsche Oberschule) and the Aufbauschule, the former to stress German subjects (besides modern languages), and the latter to provide an intensive and curtailed high school education for the bright scholars of elementary schools.

For girls there are Lyceen, Oberlyceen and special Studienanstalten which prepare for the universities.

In 1921-22 the number of secondary schools was as follows:—For boys, Gymnasien, 515, with 10,061 teachers and 152,367 pupils; Realgymnasien, 322, with 6,678 teachers and 115,615 pupils; Oberrealschulen and Realschulen, 506, with 9,404 teachers and 184,175 pupils. For girls, High Schools, 824; with 14,852 teachers and 299,285 pupils.

There are 10 fully equipped Technical High Schools, with the power of granting degrees. They are all aided by the States to which they respectively belong. The statistics for 1927 were as follows:—

Schools	Teaching Staff (1927)	Students (1927)	Schools	Teaching Staff (1927)	Students (1927)
Berlin . . . .	308	4,554	Stuttgart . . .	110	1,771

There are, besides, 2 Veterinary Colleges, with number of students in 1927 (484), 4 Agricultural Colleges (1,701), 3 Afforestation Academies (334), 2 Mining Academies (768), 5 Commercial High Schools (3,898), 1 Academy for Practical Medicine (65), 14 Schools of Art (2,351), and 10 Colleges of Music (3,777).

There are 23 universities in the German Republic, besides the Philosophical and Theological High Schools at Braunsberg, with number of students in 1927 (39), Augsburg (40), Bamberg (82), Dillingen (140), Eichstätt (136), Freising (138), Passau (152), and Regensburg (198), which have only faculties of theology (Roman Catholic) and philosophy (Augsburg has philosophy only).

The following table gives the date of foundation, the number of teachers and students for 1927:—

In three universities, namely, Freiburg, Munich, and Würzburg, the faculties of theology are Roman Catholic; four are mixed, both Protestant and Roman Catholic—Bonn, Breslau, Münster, and Tübingen; and the rest are Protestant. Cologne, Frankfurt, and Hamburg have no theological faculties.

Justice and Crime.

A uniform system of law courts exists throughout Germany, though, with the exception of the Reichsgericht, all courts are directly subject to the Government of the special State in which they exercise jurisdiction, and not to the Central Government. The appointment of the judges other than those of the Reichsgericht is also a State function, and not that of the Central Government.

The lowest courts of first instance are the Amtsgerichte (1,745 on January 1, 1927), each with one or more judges, competent to try petty civil and criminal cases. Cases relating to property in which the amount involved does not exceed 500 marks are usually tried by a single judge. In the trial of more serious criminal cases the judge is assisted by two assessors (laymen), to whom on the request of the public prosecutor a professional magistrate may further be added (Schöffengericht). The Landgerichte (159 on January 1, 1927), contain both civil and criminal chambers. The former, consisting of three judges, exercise a revising jurisdiction over the Amtsgerichte, and also, a more extensive original jurisdiction, including divorce cases, &c. For trying commercial cases there are further commercial chambers, consisting of one judge and two laymen. The criminal chamber hears appeals from the Amtsgerichte in criminal cases; if the appeal is from the decision of a single magistrate it is heard by one judge with two lay assessors (small chamber); if from a decision of the Schöffengericht, by three judges and two laymen (large chamber). For the trial of capital cases, the Landgerichte are transformed into Schwurgerichte, consisting of three judges and six laymen. The first court of second instance is the Oberlandesgericht. There are twenty-seven such courts in Germany. The Oberlandesgerichte contain criminal and civil senates consisting of three judges. They exercise appellate jurisdiction over the Landgerichte in civil cases, and over the 'small chambers' (and in some cases over the 'large chambers') in criminal cases. The total number of judges on the bench in all the courts above mentioned was 9,498 (Jan. 1, 1927). The supreme court is the Reichsgericht, which sits at Leipzig, and has 91 judges. This court exercises an appellate jurisdiction over all inferior courts, and also an original and final jurisdiction in cases of treason. It has 5 criminal and 7 civil senates, consisting of 5 judges each.

Number of persons condemned after trial, 1925, 592,051; 1926, 598,460.

Poor Relief.

The relief of the poor, war invalids, dependents of those killed in the war and of minors in need of assistance was regulated by the law of February 13, 1924. Relief is granted by District Unions (Bezirksfuersorgeverbände) or Provincial and State Unions (Landesfuersorgeverbände). The former are either identical with the larger municipalities, or are a union of smaller ones. Relief is granted in the ordinary place of residence of the recipients, usually by the District Unions. But where the recipient has no ordinary place of residence, the Landesfuersorgeverbände make the grant. Relief may be made dependent on labour. Poor rates are not levied.

Compulsory Insurance.

Social insurance has existed in Germany since 1883. It comprises compulsory insurance of workmen and employees against sickness (including maternity), accidents, unemployment old age and infirmity.

Under a law of 1883 and amending Acts, workmen and employees with an annual income up to 3,000 marks must be insured against sickness, and must themselves pay two-thirds of the contributions, their employers paying one-third. For accident insurance, under an Act of 1884 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid entirely by the employers, and they, for mutual protection, have been obliged to unite into associations according to the nature of the industries in which they are engaged. The working of these insurance associations is controlled by Government. For invalidity and old age insurances, under an Act of 1883 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid half by the employee and half by their employers, while towards each pension the Government grants an annual subsidy. The employers are responsible both for their own and the workmen's contributions, but the latter may be deducted from wages paid subsequently. Insurance for old age pensions for employees was introduced by law of December 20, 1911, and amending Acts, 65 being the pensionable age.

The State makes a grant for sickness insurance, also provides for maternity benefit.

For the year 1927 the average of those insured against sickness was 19,706,000. Of this total, 19,958,000 (12,708,000 men and 7,250,000 women) were insured in ordinary societies, and 748,755 in Knappschaften or societies for miners, and 1,182,008 in supplementary offices. In 1926, about 24,862,031 persons were insured against accident in 66 industrial and 39 agricultural societies.

The total receipts in 1927 of the ordinary societies were 1,507,886,000 R. M., and of the Knappschaften 126,109,000 R. M. The total expenditure of the ordinary societies was 1,415,216,000 R. M., and of the Knappschaften 121,701,000 R. M. For accident insurance the receipts were 3,608,000 R. M., and the expenditure 321,599,000 R. M. For sickness insurance the receipts in 1927 were 960 million R. M., and the expenditure 802·4 million R. M.; for the insurance of employees the receipts in 1927 were 340·6 million R. M. and the expenditure 141 million R. M.; for the miners' societies the receipts in 1927 were 178·9 million R. M., and the expenditure 183·5 million R. M.; for unemployment insurance the receipts in 1927 were 908 million R. M. and the expenditure 906 million R. M.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, and in accordance with the law of March 23, 1921, enlistment is voluntary and for 12 years. Officers have to engage to serve for 25 consecutive years on appointment. The Reichswehr is organized in 7 divisions of infantry and 3 divisions of cavalry, with two army corps headquarter staffs. The strength of an army corps staff is 30 officers and 150 N.C.O.'s and men; of an infantry division, 410 officers and 10,830 men; of a cavalry division, 275 officers and 5,250 men. The total strength of the army in 1928 was 4,291 officers and 94,900 other ranks. The President is the supreme head of all land and sea forces. Under his orders the Minister of National Defence exercises actual command through the medium of a General Officer appointed chief of the army command, organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Companies	Groups	Batteries

By June, 1921, the fortresses specified in the Treaty, and also the coast defences of Kiel and Heligoland had been razed. The equipment of the fortresses of Kustrin, Glatz, Neisse, Glogau, Loetzen, and Marienburg had been surrendered. The maximum armaments authorised are 84,000 rifles, 18,000 carbines, 792 heavy machine guns, 63 trench mortars, 204 7·7 c.m. field guns, and 84 10·5 c.m. howitzers. No military aircraft is permitted.

The army estimates for 1928-29 amounted to 492,164,000 gold marks.

II. NAVY.

The German Navy is now mainly a coast-defence force and is directed and administered by the Chief of Naval Direction, under the Ministry of National Defence. In addition to the central administrative division are the Office of Naval Command (staff), the General Naval Office (supply, research and construction), also the Naval Administrative Office, and some departments dealing with the relations of the Navy to the Defence Ministry, which also controls the Army.

The Treaty allows to the German Government the right of maintaining a navy, recruited and maintained on a volunteer basis. The fleet consists of eight pre-Dreadnoughts completed between 1902 and 1906, each displacing approximately 13,000 tons and mounting four 11-inch and from ten to fourteen 6·7 or 5·9-inch guns. They are the Braunschweig, Elsass, Hannover, Hessen, Schlesien, Schleswig-Holstein, Preussen and Lothringen, of which four are usually kept in reserve. They possess little fighting value, though a certain amount of money has been spent in modernising them. A new fast shallow draught coast defence ironclad, of 10,000 tons, to be driven by Diesel engines, was ordered in 1928 to replace the Braunschweig. The cruisers authorised by the Treaty are the Medusa, Thetis, Amazona, Hamburg, and Berlin, completed between 1899 and 1903, and each of them mounting ten 4·1 inch guns; the Emden, completed at the end of 1925, armed with 8 6-inch guns; the Königsberg and Karlsruhe, completed in 1928, armed with 9 6-inch guns; two more of the last mentioned type (Köln and "E") are under construction, and will replace two of the older vessels in due course. By treaty the cruisers built since the war are limited to a displacement of 6,000 standard tons. There are also 32 destroyers and torpedo-boats, 19 of which date from 1907-13; the remainder were built in 1926-28 to replace worn-out vessels. All these ships are maintained in an efficient state. No submarines and naval aircraft are permitted.

The battleships, cruisers, destroyers and torpedo-boats are divided equally to constitute squadrons severally in the North Sea and the Baltic. The cruisers Berlin and Emden are training ships, and have recently made extensive cruises with naval cadets and men.

The total personnel may not exceed 15,000, including a maximum of 1,500 officers and warrant officers. The officers and warrant officers engage for a minimum of twenty-five consecutive years, and the petty officers and men for twelve years. The vessels of war are to have a fixed allowance of arms, munitions, and material.

Naval Estimates: 1926-27, 223,300,000 marks; 1927-28, 220,850,000 marks; 1928-29, 212,029,000 marks.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Generally speaking, small estates and peasant proprietorship prevail in the West and South German States, while large estates prevail in the north-east.

The subdivision of the soil, according to the latest official returns for Germany at the beginning of June, 1928, was as follows (in acres):—Arable land, 51,556,972; grass, meadows, pasture, 20,165,876; vineyards, 204,575.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, and the yields, in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lb. or '984 an English ton), were for three years as follows:—

—	Acreage.			Produce (Metric tons).
	1926	1927	1928	1926	1927	1928
Wheat . . .	4,003,025	4,370,242	4,825,800	2,597,185	3,260,104	3,441,786

In 1927 the area devoted to vines was 181,872 acres, the wine yield 31,407,618 gallons. Area devoted to tobacco, 1926, 16,512 acres; 1927, 22,997 acres; 1928, 24,652 acres; yield 1926, 14,410,467 kilos; 1927, 19,964,106 kilos. Sugar production, 1926-27, 1,663,547 tons; 1927-28, 1,675,200 tons. In 1928 the hop production was 252·8 tons, and in 1927, 717·9 tons.

The number of domestic animals in Germany according to the census of December 1, 1928, was:—

Prussia . . . . .	2,547,000	10,325,400	2,379,700	13,781,400	1,684,400

II. FORESTRY.

Forestry in Germany is an industry of great importance, conducted under the care of the State on scientific methods. The forest area of Germany in its present extent was put in 1913 (latest statistics) at 31,587,209 acres, of which crown forests occupy 704,338 acres; State and partly State forests, 9,819,471 acres; communal forests, 5,071,010 acres; private forests, 14,727,054 acres, and forests belonging to various associations or foundations, 1,265,336 acres. Of the whole forest area 9,465,708 acres are under foliage trees, oak, birch, ash, beech, etc., and 22,120,446 acres bear pine, larch, red and white fir, etc.

III. MINING.

The great bulk of the minerals raised in Germany is produced in Prussia, where the chief mining districts are Westphalia, Rhenish Prussia, and Silesia, for coal, iron and metal smelting works, Central Germany for brown coal, the Harz for iron and copper ore, and the Westerwald for iron ore. Saxony has coal mines.

In 1925 there were 2,942 mines in Germany employing 808,593 persons (797,350 men, and 11,243 women). Number of blast furnaces in 1927, 191; in 1926, 206.

The quantities of the principal minerals raised were as follows in metric tons:—

	1925	1926	1927
Coal . . . . .	132,622,125	145,295,724	153,599,855
Lignite . . . . .	139,724,614	139,150,557	150,608,914

Zinc ore . . . . .	122,204	200,144	260,112
Lead ore . . . . .	105,863	133,735	138,513
Copper ore . . . . .	810,729	932,332	950,396
Rock salt . . . . .	1,767,282	1,965,847	2,268,807
Potash . . . . .	12,029,576	9,408,109	11,071,541

Coal output in 1928, 150,876,000 metric tons.

In 1913 the total output of pig iron was 16,763,809 tons; in 1926, 9,636,054 tons; in 1927, 13,102,528 tons. Ingot steel production in 1913 totalled 16,942,808 metric tons; in 1925, 11,866,362 tons; in 1926, 12,100,846 tons; in 1927, 15,959,391 tons.

IV. FISHERIES.

In 1927 the yield of the North Sea fisheries was 214,086,508 kilos of fish and 292,569 oysters; and of the Baltic fisheries, 33,084,761 kilos of fish and 18,348 wild ducks, etc.

V. MANUFACTURES.

The chief seats of the German iron production are the Ruhr, the Saar and Upper Silesia ; to a less extent also in Hanover, Bavaria, and Saxony. Steel is made in the Ruhr. The manufacture of both iron and steel is carried on in the vicinity of the coal mines in the district of the Lower Rhine, in Westphalia, and in Thuringia. The electrical industry is found principally in Berlin. The chemical industry is centred on the Rhine and the Main, in the Ruhr, and in Prussian Saxony. Saxony (Free State) is the leading State in the production of textiles, but Westphalia and Silesia also produce linen; Rhenish Prussia, Westphalia, Württemberg, Baden, and Bavaria produce cotton goods. Woollens are manufactured in several Prussian provinces, also in Saxony and Bavaria; silk in Rhenish Prussia, and Baden. Beetroot sugar is an important manufacture in Prussia, chiefly in the provinces of Saxony, Hanover, Silesia and Pomerania. Potash is produced mainly in Prussian Saxony and Anhalt. Glass, porcelain, and earthenware in Silesia, Thuringia, Bavaria, and Saxony; clocks and wooden ware in Baden, Württemberg and Bavaria; and beer principally in Bavaria.

The following are the statistics of the beet sugar manufacture in Germany :—

Years beginning 1 September	Number of Factories	Beetroot used in Metric Tons	Production in Metric Tons		No. of Kgs. Beetroot to produce 1 Kg. of Sugar

Internal Communications.

I. RAILWAYS.

In 1927 there were 3,906 miles of tramway, and 6,134 miles narrow gauge railways.

On April 1, 1920, all the various German State railways were transferred to the Central Government. On October 11, 1924, as a result of the adoption of the Dawes Scheme, the German railway system was transferred to a private company—the German Railways Company—which manages and administers the system. The railways, however, remain the property of the State. The total length of railway line was 53,126 kilometres, or 33,126 miles on December 31, 1927. Of this total 53,535 kilometres, or 33,191 miles are State lines.

In 1927, 467,286,559 tons of merchandise were carried on the German railways.

II. CANALS AND NAVIGATION AND AIRWAYS.

The length of inland waterways in 1927 was 12,269 kilometres, or 7,606 miles. Of this total 6,201 miles are rivers or canalised rivers, and 1,404 miles are canals. The inland waterways fleet at the end of 1927 comprised 18,679 vessels of 6,511,953 tons. In 1927, 111,400,000 tons of goods were carried on the inland waterways.

In 1926, 56,286 passengers were carried by air traffic over a total distance of 4,065,382 miles. In 1927, the number of passengers was 102,681 and the mileage 3,841,764.

III. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

The postal and telegraphic services are retained in the hands of the Central Government.

Statistics for 1926 :— Employees, 360,339 ; total number of post, telegraph, and telephone offices, 47,163. In 1926, 267,297,000 letters and packets were delivered.

The following are the telegraph statistics for the year 1926 :— Length of telegraph lines, 222,220 kilometres or 137,776 miles ; of wire, 4,055,841 kilometres or 2,514,621 miles ; number of foreign telegrams, 17,934,200 ; of inland telegrams, 28,923,500, including official service telegrams. Length of telephone lines, 172,567 kilometres or 106,991 miles ; of wire, 12,260,890 kilometres or 7,601,751 miles ; number of telephone boxes, 2,688,495 ; of telephone connections, 2,052,350,740.

Banking and Credit.

By the Currency Law of August 30, 1924, which came into operation on October 11, 1924, the currency was once more established on a gold basis, with the following gold coins as legal tender: 20 and 10 Reichsmark pieces. Provision was also made for silver coins of 1, 2, 3 and 5 marks, and for 1, 2, 5, 10 and 50 pfennige. The notes of the Reichsbank (10 marks and upwards) are likewise legal tender; they have a minimum gold cover of 40 per cent. of their face value. For the present the convertibility of these notes is suspended. Besides the Reichsbank there are the four so-called 'private note banks' (1) Bayerische Notenbank, in Munich; (2) Sächsishe Bank, in Dresden; (3) Württembergische Notenbank, in Stuttgart; and (4) Badische Bank, in Karlsruhe, which also have the right of issuing notes (50 marks and upwards), on the same terms as the Reichsbank. They may issue notes up to a total of 194 million marks.

On October 16, 1923, a proposal was adopted for the setting up of a Renten Bank to issue notes (Rentenmark) secured (since August 30, 1924) by first mortgages in gold marks on the entire German landed property.

On January 31, 1928, there were in circulation Reichsbank notes to the value of 4237·2 million marks; 'Private Bank' notes (see above), 176·3 million marks; notes of the Rentenbank (all of which must be withdrawn by the Reichsbank within 10 years), 625·7 million marks; and coins 883·0 million marks; making a total of 5922·3 million marks.

The condition of the Reichsbank of Germany on February 28, 1929, is shown as follows (in thousands of marks) :—

Assets	Amount February 28, 1929	Liabilities	Amount February 28, 1929
Gold . . . . .	2,643,307	Old capital . . . .	122,788
Gold abroad . . . .	55,625	New capital . . . .	177,212
Foreign currencies . .	90,380	Reserves . . . . .	319,608
Bills and cheques . .	1,883,919	Notes . . . . .	4,553,028
Token coins . . . .	114,352	Other liabilities . .	695,547
Notes of other Banks .	7,244

By the Bank Law of August 30, 1924, the privileges of the Reichsbank were renewed for 50 years.

The Renten Bank commenced operations on November 15, 1923; it is now in liquidation and the process is expected to be completed by April 11, 1935 at latest. On August 31, 1928, its only credits outstanding were those to the Central Government, which amounted to 719·0 million Rentenmarks. The Renten Bank had issued notes to the value of 648·8 million Rentenmarks, of which the Reichsbank had 8.6 million Rentenmarks, and the rest (570.1 million Rentenmarks) were in general circulation.

By a law of March 19, 1924, there was established the German Gold Discount Bank (Deutsche Golddiscountbank) for the purpose of providing foreign currencies for German business. The capital of the institution is 10 millions sterling, one half provided by the Reichsbank (with the aid of English credits); the other half, from private sources, is not wholly paid up. On August 31, 1923, the German Savings Banks had deposits amounting to 6252.3 million Reichsmarks.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Reichsmark, of 100 Reichspfennig, is of the normal value of 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ l., or 20.43 Reichsmark to the pound sterling. It contains 0.358423 grammes of gold. The metric system of weights and measures is in force.

BADEN.

(DEMOKRATISCHER FREISTAAT BADEN.)

Until 1771, Baden was a Margraviate divided into two or more lines; it was then united, and subsequently received various additions, and its ruler took the title of Elector in 1803, and of Grand-duke in 1806. On November 22, 1918, the Grand-duke abdicated, and the Provisional Government proclaimed Baden a Republic.

Constitution.—The Constitution of the Republic of Baden was determined by the National Assembly which met on January 5, 1919, and which was elected on the basis of equal, secret, direct, universal suffrage (with proportional representation) of all males and females over 20 years of age. According to this Constitution of March 21, 1919, the Free State of Baden is a Republic and a component state of Germany. All privileges of birth, religion, and caste are abolished. Women enjoy the same rights as men and are eligible for all public offices. There is no State or established church, but religion is taught in all schools. The right of combining is granted to all citizens, including civil servants. The Initiative and Referendum have been adopted, as also proportional representation. The suffrage is granted to all adults, male and female, who are over 20 years of age. There is only one Chamber (Landtag), the members of which are elected for 4 years. Qualified electors over 25 years of age are eligible as members of the Chamber. No fixed number of seats has been provided for, but generally one member is allocated for each 10,000 voters. The present Landtag, elected on October 25, 1925, will continue until October 25, 1929; it contains the following parties :—Centre, 28; Socialists, 16; German Democratic Party, 6; German Nationalist People's Party, 8; German People's Party (Liberals), 7; Communists, 4; Economic Union, 3; total 72.

The Cabinet consists of 4 Ministers and 2 State Councillors (Ministers without portfolio), elected by the legislature. The Landtag also nominates the President of the Cabinet, who is styled officially 'State President.'

The Government is made up as follows :—

State President and Minister of the Interior.—A. Remmele (Socialist).

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Franz Josef Schmitt (Centre).

Minister of Justice.—G. Trunk (Centre).

Minister of Religion and Education.—O. Leers (Democrat).

For general administrative purposes there are (since April 1, 1924) 40 'Amtsbezirke,' superintended by four general commissioners (Landes-Kommissäre). For local government there are 11 circles (Kreise), and 1,557 communes (Gemeinden), 124 communal cities, and 1,433 parishes.

BAVARIA.

(FREISTAAT BAYERN.)

Bavaria was for over a century a kingdom, ruled by descendants of the ancient Counts of Wittelsbach, who flourished in the twelfth century. Duke Maximilian I. of Bavaria was elevated to the rank of Elector of the Holy Roman Empire in the Thirty Years' War; and Elector Maximilian Joseph was raised to the rank of king by Napoleon I. in 1805. On November 22, 1918, the dynasty was deposed, and Bavaria was declared a Republic.

Constitution and Government.—On the outbreak of the Revolution the Government was taken over by a cabinet under the leadership of Kurt Eisner, an Independent Socialist. Eisner was assassinated in February, 1919, and a struggle ensued between the extremists of the Left, who proclaimed themselves Bolsheviks, and their more moderate opponents, with varying success on either side. By May, 1919, the moderate party had returned to power.

The constitution of August 14, 1919, establishes the Free State of Bavaria. The supreme power lies with the people. The Diet consists of one Chamber, elected for 4 years on the basis of 1 member for every 62,000 inhabitants; at present there are 128 members. The suffrage is universal, equal, direct, secret and proportional. All citizens over 20 years of age have the vote. The supreme executive power is exercised by the Ministry as a whole. All privileges of birth and caste are abolished. The Church is separated from the State. All religious associations have equal rights, and are free in their activities.

State of parties in the Bavarian Landtag (elected May 20, 1928): Bavarian People's Party, 46; Social Democrats, 34; National Socialists, 9; German Nationalists, 13; Bavarian Peasants' and Middle-Class Union, 17; German People's Party, 4; Communists, 5.

The Cabinet, constituted on July 31, 1928, is as follows:—

Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Held.

Minister of Education.—Dr. Goldenberger.

Minister of Agriculture and Labour.—Professor Dr. Fehr.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Stuetzel.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Schmeltzle.

Minister of Justice.—Herr Gürtner.

PRUSSIA.

(FREISTAAT PREUSSEN.)

On November 13, 1918, Prussia was proclaimed a Republic.

Until that date the country was ruled by sovereigns of the Hohenzollern family, the last of the line being William II (1888-1918). For an account of the rise of Prussia, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1922, p. 973.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution, adopted on November 30, 1920, gives a vote to every citizen, male and female, over 20 years of age in general, equal, secret, and direct suffrage. Prussia is declared to be a Republic. Besides the Diet (Landtag) there is a State Council (Staatsrat) elected by the Provincial Assemblies on the basis of one representative for every 50,000 inhabitants. The function of the State Council is to advise and control the Diet, and is intended to be a kind of parallel institution to the Reichsrat in the Empire. The State Council has the right of rejecting legislation adopted by the Diet. The Diet elects the Premier, and he appoints the other members of the Cabinet. The Diet is elected for 4 years on the principle of proportional representation by secret and direct ballot, and the ministry is invested with the powers of the former King.

The Prussian Constituent National Assembly, elected by universal, equal, and secret suffrage of men and women, met on March 14, 1919.

On May 20, 1928, the elections were held for a Parliament, and resulted in the return of the following parties: 137 Social Democrats; 71 Centre (Catholics); 82 German National Party; 6 National Socialists; 40 German People's Party; 21 Democrats; 56 Communists; 21 Economic Party; 4 German Hanoverians; 8 Farmers' Party; 2 German Race Party; 2 People's Right Party. Total, 450.

The Cabinet appointed on April 4, 1925, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Herr Otto Braun (Socialist).

Minister of National Welfare.—Herr Hirtsiefer (Centre).

Minister of Justice.—Herr Dr. Hermann Schmidt (Centre). Appointed March 6, 1927.

Minister of Commerce.—Herr Dr. Schreiber (Democrat).

Minister of the Interior.—Herr Grzesinski (Socialist).

Minister of Finance.—Herr Dr. Höpker Aschoff (Democrat).

Minister of Education.—Herr Dr. D. Becker (Independent Democrat).

Minister of Agriculture, Domains, and Forests.—Herr Steiger (Centre).

For local government Prussia is divided into Provinces, Government districts (Regierungsbezirke), urban circles (Stadtkreise), and rural circles (Landkreise). According to the Constitution, there are 14 Provinces. Urban circles consist of towns of over 25,000 inhabitants; rural circles consist of the smaller towns, rural communes (Landgemeinden), and manors (Gutsbezirke). For provinces and rural circles the local authorities of the constituent areas elect deliberative assemblies which appoint executive committees. Each province has a governor (Oberpräsident); each government district has a president, and deals chiefly with local affairs of State concern. In towns the deliberative authority is the town council (Stadtvorordnetenversammlung), elected on the system of proportional suffrage. The executive is a magistracy with the burgomaster as president. Each rural circle has a Landrat. Local administrative business varies according to the nature of the administrative division. The matters dealt with are such as poor-relief, roads, light railways, etc., but in rural districts they include agricultural interests, and in towns, education, sick-insurance, valuation, collection of certain taxes, management of gas, water, and electric works, etc.

Religion.

Absolute religious liberty is guaranteed in the Republic. According to the census of 1925 there were in Prussia 24,751,368 Protestants (65 per cent.), 11,940,978 Catholics (31 per cent.), 54,617 other Christians (0·1 per cent.), 403,969 Jews (1·1 per cent.), and 969,241 others.

The Evangelical or Protestant Church has since October 31, 1817, consisted of a fusion of the Lutheran and Calvinistic bodies, from which, however, there are still a few dissenters. It is governed by 'consistories,' or boards elected by the people. There are also synods in most circles and provinces, and general synods representing the old provinces only. The constitution of the Catholic Church differs in the various provinces. Altogether in Prussia there are one archbishop and ten bishops.

Education.

Education in Prussia is compulsory. Every town, or community in town or country, must maintain a school supported by local rates, supplemented by the State, and administered by the local authorities, who are elected by the citizens, and called aldermen or town councillors. All parents are compelled to have their children properly taught or to send them to one of these elementary schools, in which all fees are now abolished. No compulsion exists in reference to a higher educational institution than elementary schools, but parents who send more than one child to any school supported by the community have, in many cases, a reduction made in the charge, and a limited number of pupils (about 10 per cent.) whose parents cannot afford to pay the full rate, either enjoy this reduction or are admitted entirely free, at the discretion of the authorities. The school age is from 6 to 14 years.

The following table gives the educational statistics of Prussia :—

There are also 4 technical high schools (Berlin, Hanover, Aachen, Breslau), 2 forestry schools (Eberswalde, Münden), 1 technical mining school (Klausthal), 2 agricultural high schools (Berlin, Bonn-Poppelsdorf), agricultural institutes connected with universities, 2 veterinary high schools (Berlin, Hanover), a great number of other schools for various aspects of agriculture, 2 commercial high schools (Berlin, Königsberg i. Pr.), 1 academy of local government work (Düsseldorf), besides other special schools and State establishments for art and music.

The Universities, the high schools (exclusive of commercial high schools), some of the Gymnasias, Realgymnasias, and similar schools, as also the normal schools, are maintained and administered by the Government, while all the other scholastic institutions are supported by the community, etc., under control of the Government.

Justice, Crime.

Prussia contains 13 Oberlandesgerichte (see under German Empire). The Oberlandesgericht at Berlin is called the Kammergericht. The prosecution in all criminal cases is conducted by Staatsanwälte, or public prosecutors, paid by the State.

Religion.—The vast majority of the inhabitants of Saxony are Protestants. In 1925, there were, Protestants, 4,507,654 (90 per cent.); Roman Catholics, 179,549 (3 per cent.; other Christians, 9,688; Jews, 23,252 (0.4 per cent.). Of the Lutheran Church, the chief governing body is the 'Landes-Consistorium' or National Consistory at Dresden; and it also has a representative Synod (Synode) with 28 clerical and 46 lay members (1927).

Education.—On February 28, 1927, there were 2,129 public elementary schools with 16,977 teachers and 507,234 pupils, besides 58 private and chapter schools. In addition there were 1 technical high school at Dresden (summer term, 1928, 2,705 students), 1 mining academy at Freiberg (summer term, 1928, 289 students), 1 forestry academy at Tharandt (74 students, summer term, 1928), further, 18 Gymnasias, 24 Realgymnasias, 15 'Oberrealschulen,' 23 other high schools, 17 higher girls' schools and 'Studienanstalten,' altogether 123 educational establishments, exclusive of the University and a large number of industrial, commercial, agricultural, musical, and art institutes. The University of Leipzig is one of the largest in Germany (summer term, 1928, 5,579 students). See under Germany.

Justice and Crime.—Saxony has one 'Oberlandesgericht,' at Dresden, 7 'Landgerichte,' and 112 'Amtsgerichte.' The 'Reichsgericht' has its seat at Leipzig. In 1926, 65,497 persons were convicted of criminal offences.

Finance.—The following table shows the estimates for four financial budget periods ending March 31 (£1 = 20.43 marks).

	1925-6	1926-7	1927-8	1928-9

Production and Industry.—Saxony is, in proportion to its size, the busiest industrial State in the German Republic, rivalled only by the leading industrial provinces of Prussia. Textile manufactures form the principal branch of industry, but mining and metal working are also important. According to the Industrial Census of June 16, 1925, Saxony had 391,447 industrial establishments with 2,144,197 workpeople (743,311 women).

In 1928, of the total area, 2,491,435 acres were under cultivation, viz. :—1,888,739 acres (75·81 per cent.) arable; 444,874 acres (17·85 per cent.) meadow; 112,873 acres (4·53 per cent.) orchards and gardens; 44,522 acres (1·79 per cent.) pasture; and the rest vineyards.

Areas under the chief crops in acres and the yield in metric tons (of 2,204 lb.) in 1928 :—wheat, 209,830 acres (246,924 tons); rye, 436,146 acres (421,824 tons); barley, 79,133 acres (84,595 tons); oats, 394,063 acres (367,701 tons); potatoes, 267,046 acres (1,691,752 tons); meadow, 444,874 acres (hay, 652,577 tons). The census of live-stock taken in December, 1928, showed 161,200 horses, 693,200 cattle, 676,300 pigs, 153,100 goats, and 61,400 sheep.

The following shows the mining statistics for five years :—

THURINGIA.

(LAND THÜRINGEN.)

The seven Thuringian States after much negotiation, which commenced in May, 1919, and ended on December 24, 1919, decided to combine into one State. The two Republics of Reuss had by a law of April 4, 1919, already been merged into the one People's State of Reuss, and Coburg had elected to merge with Bavaria. On March 31, 1922, the 'Administrative Districts' (Gebietsregierungen) of Thuringia were abolished, and instead the country was divided into 10 town and 15 country Districts (Kreise) and one sub-district (Kreisabteilung).

The elections to the first Diet of Thuringia were held in June, 1920, and the Diet adopted the Constitution on March 11, 1921. At the election on January 30, 1927, the following parties were returned : Conservative bloc, 19 ; Socialists, 18 ; Communists, 8 ; Other Parties, 11 ; total, 56.

President of the State Council.—Dr. Leutheusser.

GREECE

(HELLENIC REPUBLIC)

GREECE gained its independence from Turkey in 1821-29, and by the Protocol of London, of February 3, 1830, was declared a kingdom, under the guarantee of Great Britain, France, and Russia. The crown was accepted by Prince Otto of Bavaria, who ascended the throne January 25, 1833, being under the age of eighteen. He was expelled the Kingdom, after a reign of 29 years, in October, 1862, which event was followed by the election, in 1863, under the directing guidance of the three guaranteeing Powers, of King George I. George I., who was assassinated on March 18, 1913, was succeeded by his son Constantine, who reigned until June 11, 1917, when he was excluded from the throne by the allied Powers. Alexandros, second son of King Constantine, then reigned till his death on October 25, 1920. Constantine returned to Greece on December 19, 1920, reigned until his abdication on September 27, 1922, and died in exile on January 11, 1923. He was succeeded by his eldest son Georgos II, who was forced to leave Greece on December 18, 1923.

Constitution and Government.

By a plébiscite on April 13, 1924, the Republic was established. In the voting 758,742 votes were for a Republic and 325,322 votes against. A new Constitution was published on September 22, 1926. It was revised by the Chamber elected on November 7, 1926. The new constitution was published on June 3, 1927. It prescribes among other things that a Second House (Senate) consisting of 120 members shall be established, that Parliament shall be elected by direct universal and secret voting and that the Senate shall be elected partly by the people, partly by the Parliament and the Senate in a common meeting, and partly by the corporations of the different professions:

Provisional President of the Republic.—Admiral Konduriotis (Appointed Dec. 4, 1926).

Elections to the Chamber were held on August 19, 1928, with the following result: Republican Parties, 227 (including 186 Venezelest Liberals); Royalist Popular Party, 22; Metaxists, 1. Total, 250.

Mount Athos, the easternmost of the three prongs of the peninsula of Chalcidice, is inhabited by the monks of Greek (17), Russian (1), Bulgarian (1), and Serbian (1) monasteries and hermitages (Sketari). The monks and the novices till the fields, tend the vineyard, take in the harvest, fish, weave, transact business in their own shops, and, indeed, carry on the secular duties of the community as well as the sacred. Originally inhabited by one mediæval ascetic, Peter the Athonite, it has in the course of time grown to a religious colony of 4,858 males (Census of 1928), distributed in 20 monasteries with their respective dependencies ; and after having passed in the fifteenth century from the sovereignty of the Greek Emperors of Byzantium to that of the Sultans it fell again into the hands of the Greeks, who occupied it in November, 1912. Each of the 20 monasteries is a sort of little republic in itself, those of the 'coenobitic' category being ruled by abbots elected by the brethren of the monastery, while the 'idiorrhhythmic' monasteries are administered by a board of overseers (epitropoi) elected for a certain term of years. Hitherto the peninsula has been administered by a Council of 4 members, and an Assembly of 20 members, the latter consisting of 1 deputy from each monastery. The Greek government on September 10, 1926, recognized the autonomous form of government existing in Mount Athos for centuries and ratified it by Articles 106-109 of the Constitution. It has also sanctioned by a law the Charter of Mount Athos, which was drawn up at the extraordinary double meeting held by representatives of its 20 monasteries on May 20, 1924.

Religion.

The great majority of the inhabitants of the country are adherents of the Greek Orthodox Church. By the terms of the Constitution of 1864, the Greek Orthodox Church was declared the religion of the State, but complete toleration and liberty of worship was guaranteed to all other sects. The government of the Orthodox Church is at present vested in a permanent council, called the Holy Synod, consisting of the Metropolitan of Athens as president and 6 bishops, who must during their year of office reside at Athens. The Orthodox Church has 33 archbishops in the old territory and 38 archbishops and 7 bishops in the new territories.

Education.

All children between the ages of seven and twelve years must attend school, but the law is not well enforced in country districts.

There were (1926-27) 323 infant schools with 375 teachers and 12,513 pupils ; 7,619 primary schools with 13,747 teachers and 632,933 pupils. For secondary education there were 687 high schools with 2,823 teachers and 92,735 pupils. There were 28 commercial schools with 269 teachers and 3,013 pupils (2,384 boys and 679 girls). There are 7 agricultural schools in Greece with 405 pupils. There was also 1 commercial high school with 20 teachers and 388 pupils, 10 military colleges with 1,388 students, and 8 naval colleges with 275 students. There are 2 universities in Athens, the National University (founded 1836) and the Capodistria University, with 61 professors and 9,799 students ; and 1 at Salonica (founded in 1925), with 14 professors and 65 students. The Polytechnic, with 22 professors and 170 students, provides instruction in painting, sculpture, mechanics, architecture, surveying, etc.

The Ministry of Education is also charged with the Service of Antiquities, managed by an Archæological Council, which is responsible for the conservation and reparation of ancient monuments of all periods (Prehistoric, Classical, Byzantine and Mediæval), the upkeep of museums and the conduct of excavations.

British scholarship is represented in Athens by the British School of Archæology, which, by the aid of grants from the Government, universities, and private subscribers, is able to encourage and carry out scientific research of all kinds, but especially art, archæology and history. Members of the school have in recent years been responsible for the excavations at Knossos, in Crete, in Melos, at Sparta, in Thessaly, at Mycenae, and elsewhere. There are also similar French, American, Italian, Austrian and German institutions.

The total public debt of Greece amounted on June 30, 1928, to 36,886,238.419 drachmai, distributed as follows: Loans in gold, 25,883,461,594 drachmai; loans in banknotes, 4,480,482,808; floating debt, 4,130,375,158; and railroad debt, 2,391,918,859 drachmai. The service on this debt during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1929, is estimated at 3,132,541,867 drachmai.

In accordance with the peace preliminaries between Greece and Turkey and the Greek Law of Control of March, 1898, the financial commission of delegates representing France, Great Britain, and Italy (the mediating Powers) is established at Athens in direct relation with the Greek Minister of Finance. The public debt of Greece is in large measure under the control of this commission. To this commission were assigned, for the payment of the interest on the external debt, the revenues (for the most part in Old Greece) from certain Government monopolies, the stamp duty, and the import duties at the port of Piræus. The total income from these sources was, 1928, 232,399,929 drachmae from monopolies, and 879,788,249 from the Piræus customs. The surplus at the disposal of the Greek Government was 1,758,450,137 drachmai in 1926 and 2,587,060,318 drachmai in 1927.

The payments made by the commission in 1927 for the service of Greek foreign debts totalled 1,297,514,056 drachmai as compared with 1,239,482,850 drachmai in 1926.

The collection of the assigned revenues and the administration of the monopolies is entrusted to a Greek Company, called the "Société de Régie des Revenues affectés au Service de la Dette Publique," which is under the control of the international commission.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Military service in Greece is compulsory and universal. It commences in the 21st year, and lasts up to the 50th. The normal term of service in the active army is 18 months for all arms, followed by 19 years in the first reserve of the active army and 8 years in the second. The normal annual contingent of recruits is about 35,000.

The country is divided into 12 military areas. To these correspond 11 divisions and 1 brigade, out of which 4 army corps are organised in time of peace. Moreover there are two divisions of cavalry and a number of units (telegraphists, railwaymen and engineers), as well as of Army Service Corps directly under the Minister of War. Each division contains three regiments of infantry (8 battalions) and one regiment of Mountain Artillery (3 or 4 batteries).

The effective strength in 1928 was 7,121 officers and 60,000 other ranks.

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher-Schönauer and the Lebel rifle, the polybole guns, Höthkiss as well as French ones, and the mitrailleuses Schwargloze, St. Etienne and Höthkiss. The artillery is armed with mountain guns of 65 mm. and Schneider 75 and 105 m. 1919 and by field guns Schneider, M.P.O.F. and Krupp as well as with heavy short guns, Schneider 155. The budget expenditure for the army for 1927-28 amounted to 1,525,000,000 drachmai.

II. NAVY.

The Greek Navy is not a force of any considerable importance. The principal vessels are as follows:—

	Launched	Displacement Tons	Armour		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Horse Power	Max. Speed Knots
			Belt In.	Gun In.
Georgios Averoff.	1910	9,960	8		4 9·2; 8 7·5in.; 14 3in.	3	19,000	22·5

The old battleships, Spetsai, Hydra, and Psara, 5,000 tons, have been relegated to harbour training service. There are 11 destroyers, 11 torpedo boats, 4 minelayers, 2 submarines, and a variety of miscellaneous craft. Four new submarines are approaching completion, and the Georgios Averoff has been completely refitted and modernised.

Preliminary work has been done on the new arsenal intended to take the place of the establishment at Salamis. The cost of the new work was estimated at 2,800,000*l*.

The services of a British naval mission to reorganise the Greek fleet were lent by the Admiralty, 1927.

Production and Industry.

Greece is mainly an agricultural country, and the economic life is directly dependent on the products of the soil. Of the total area only one-fifth is cultivable. The total area (old Greece) is 6,534,530 hectares (16,146,823 acres), made up as follows: 1,391,503 hectares (3,438,403 acres) is cultivated land; 5,055,122 hectares (12,486,151 acres) is covered by mountains; and 87,905 hectares (217,125 acres) occupied by lakes and marshes. Forest area, 1,514,488 hectares (938,982 acres).

By the draining of Lake Copais, an area of about 53,000 acres has been acquired for agricultural purposes. Irrigation and drainage canals, farm roads and buildings are being constructed, tree planting is undertaken, and the breed of cattle is being improved.

The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows:—

	Area in Acres		Production in Metric Tons
	1926	1927	1926	1927
Wheat . . .	1,319,321	1,247,244	337,552	352,994

Currants . . .	170,044	160,217	174,261	169,881

Olives are abundant, about 865,000 acres are under cultivation; olive oil production in 1927, 72,402 metric tons, valued at 1,559,382,261 drachmai, compared with 61,434 metric tons, valued at 1,182,284,301 drachmai in 1926. The production of edible olives amounted to 14,826 metric tons in 1927, valued at 123,647,471 drachmai, compared with 14,006 metric tons in 1926, valued at 85,306,435 drachmai. Rice is cultivated in Greek Macedonia—Vodena, near Salonika, being the principal centre. Two kinds of cheese are produced in Greece—sliced cheese in brine (commercially known as Fetta cheese) and head cheese.

There were in Greece (1927) 276,741 horses, 135,299 mules, 328,152 asses, 947,143 cattle, 6,441,830 sheep, 4,759,199 goats, and 452,595 pigs, 7,787,826 poultry.

Greece has a great variety of mineral deposits, and there are now in force about 60 mining concessions embracing a total area of nearly 20,000 acres. The ore and other minerals worked include iron, iron-pyrites, emery, copper, zinc, lead, silver, manganese, aluminium, antimony, nickel, magnesite ore, lignite, sulphur ochre, and various other earths. The Laurium district, Thessaly, Euboea, the Aegean islands and other parts of Greece yield a large output of ores and earths.

The principal mineral output of Greece for three years is given as follows (in metric tons):—

	1925	1926	1927		1925	1926	1927
	Metric tons	Metric tons	Metric tons		Metric tons	Metric tons	Metric tons

				Salt . .	65,260	90,791	105,000

The total value of minerals and metallurgical products sold was (in drachmas), in 1925, 224,676,614; in 1926, 262,047,701; in 1927, 266,855,857.

Industry is making considerable progress in Greece. The leading industrial products are olive oil, wine, textiles, leather, and soap. In 1927 the value of the production of food industries was 4,535,000,000 drachmai; textile industries, 1,557,000,000 drachmai; chemical, 996,000,000 drachmai; leather, 1,115,000,000 drachmai; metallurgical and mechanical, 288,000,000 drachmai; and tobacco, 211,600,000 drachmi.

Commerce.

Value of the commerce of Greece (at the average rate of exchange for the year, viz.: 1924, 247'39; 1925, 313'40; 1926, 388'70; 1927, 380'50; 1928, 373 drachmai = 1*l*.) for five years is as follows:—

Navigation and Shipping.

The merchant navy of Greece on June 30, 1928, had 724 sailing vessels of 58,670 tons and 517 steamers of 1,187,699 tons. In 1927, 20,885 steamers of 13,079,887 tons and 4,937 sailing vessels of 267,464 tons entered the ports of Greece.

Internal Communications.

There are about 8,611 miles of roads in Old and New Greece, and 570 miles under construction. There is a canal (opened November 9, 1893) across the Isthmus of Corinth (about 4 miles). In 1927, 5,210 steamers of 2,700,657 tons and 3,288 sailing vessels of 91,729 tons passed through the canal.

Railways were open for traffic in 1928 for a length of 1,991 miles, of which 884 miles were operated by the State. Before the war with Turkey (1912-18) Greece was completely isolated by land from the rest of Europe, but on May 8, 1916, the railway was completed between Gida, on the Salonika-Monastir line, and Papapouli, on the Thessalian frontier, a distance of 56 miles, whereby Greece was linked up with the European railways. The Government has also purchased from England for two million francs the Salonika-Angista-Stavros line, 75 miles long, which was built by the British during the war. The operating revenues of the State railways in 1927 reached 309,401,242 drachmai, and other revenues 3,391,807 drachmai, while operating expenses were 317,982,807 drachmai, other expenses 14,333,226 drachmai, the deficit for the year being 19,522,349 drachmai.

The telegraph lines on December 31, 1927, had a length of 12,009 miles, with 80,894 miles of wire. The number of offices was 2,448. They handled 3,719,843 inland telegrams, and 995,665 international, of which 490,378 were despatched abroad and 505,665 were received.

In 1927 there were 238 miles of urban telephone lines with 2,852 miles of wire, and 3,771 miles of inter-urban lines with 4,887 miles of wire. The number of subscribers was 6,450, and the number of offices 17.

There were 1,130 post offices at the end of 1927, and there passed through the post in that year:—Inland post:—letters, 46,982,378; post-cards, 2,523,496; printed matter, journals and samples, 19,896,758; postal orders, 708,572, of a total value of drachmai 454,360,516; parcels, 543,648. Foreign postal service (dispatched):—letters, 14,358,756; post-cards, 1,346,758; printed matter and journals, 2,658,345; postal orders, 1,340, valued at 321,640 drachmai; parcels, 21,624. Foreign postal service (received):—letters, 15,478,685; post-cards, 1,538,760; journals and other printed paper, 4,208,796; parcels, 140,156; money orders, 5,143, of a total value of drachmai 6,586,715.

Banking, Money, Weights and Measures.

The National Bank (founded in 1841) was authorised to issue bank notes, the amount being increased each time the privilege of the bank was extended. According to a decree of May 12, 1928, the note-issuing privilege of the National Bank was transferred to the new issuing bank, the Bank of Greece, as from May 14, 1928, in accordance with the conditions of the tripartite loan. By the same decree, the drachma was stabilised, its gold content being fixed at 0.01952634 grammes of gold, corresponding to 375 drachmai to the pound sterling. The new paper money is to be in circulation within five years. Meantime, notes of the National Bank for 20, 1,000, and 5,000 drachmai, overprinted with the name of the Bank of Greece will be issued. On October 31, 1928, the total bank-note circulation amounted to 5,758,981,532 drachmai.

On January 1, 1928, there were 25 banks in Greece with deposits amounting to 9,682 million drachmai, and capital, 2,159 million drachmai.

The Drachma consists of 100 lepta. Nickel coinage in circulation consists of 10, 20 and 50 lepta, 1 and 2 drachmai.

In September, 1898, it was announced that it had been decided to introduce the metric system as regards measures of length, weight, and capacity. In 1922 the metric system was made compulsory. The use of the Gregorian Calendar has been authorised as from March 1, 1923.

The old weights and measures are still met with. The principal are:—

1 oke = 400 drams = 2·832 lbs.
 1 kantar = 44 okes = 124·608 lbs.
 1 pii = 27 inches.
 1 stremma = 2471 acres.

GUATEMALA.

(REPÚBLICA DE GUATEMALA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Guatemala, established on March 21, 1847, after having formed part for twenty-six years of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution proclaimed December, 1879, and modified in 1887, in 1897, and in 1913. Finally, in July, 1927, a further revision was proposed which, after ratification by the constitutional assembly, came into effect January 1, 1928. By its terms the legislative power is vested in a National Assembly, consisting of representatives (one for every 30,000 inhabitants) chosen by universal suffrage for 4 years; a Council of State of 7 members, 3 elected by the National Assembly, and 4 appointed by the President of the Republic, has supervision of public concessions and contracts, and large advisory powers. The executive is vested in a President, elected for 6 years, and barred from re-election for a period of 12 years.

On May 27, 1927, the Foreign Ministers of Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador signed a convention binding the three countries to a unified foreign policy in the recognition of governments, declarations of war and other matters; this has been ratified by Salvador.

President of the Republic.—General Lazaro Chacon (December, 1926).

The administration is carried on, under the President, by the heads of seven departments—of Foreign Affairs, Government and Justice, Finance and Public Credit, Public Instruction, Public Works, War, and Agriculture.

Area and Population.

Area estimated at 109,724 sq. kilometres, or 42,353 English square miles. In 1903 the population was 1,842,134; and according to the 1920 census it was 2,004,900. About 60 per cent. are pure Indians, most of the remainder being half-caste, there being very few descendants of Europeans. Guatemala is administratively divided into 22 departments.

Capital of the Republic and seat of the government is Guatemala City, with 115,928 inhabitants, according to census of 1921, almost all ladinos or descendants of Europeans. Other towns are Quezaltenango, 30,125, Coban, 26,774, and Zacapa, 18,094.

Religion and Education.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion; but all other creeds have complete liberty of worship. Guatemala has an archbishopric.

In 1926-27 there were 3,297 primary schools with 3,430 teachers, and 113,308 pupils. There were 50 professional, normal, secondary and special schools in 1927-28, with an enrolment of 3,278. The Bureau of Indian Education maintains (1928) 1,451 rural and ranch schools with 1,808 teachers and 27,142 Indian pupils of whom 16,248 were previously illiterate. The University of Guatemala was established in 1910. The National Central Institute confers degrees which are recognised in all the Central American Republics. Among the other institutions are a School of Handicraft for Women, a National Conservatoire of Music, a School of Art, and a College of Pharmacy and Natural Sciences. Total expenditure on education in 1927, 1,251,792 quetzales. The national library contains 19,400 volumes.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered in a supreme court, 6 appeal courts, and 26 courts of first instance. All judges, under the 1927 constitution, are appointed by the National Assembly. In all the municipalities there are Justices of Peace.

Finance.

Ordinary revenue and expenditure in currency (1 quetzal = 1 U.S. dollar):—

Revenue . .	Quetzales. 7,700,839	Quetzales. 10,174,511	Quetzales. 11,555,352	Quetzales. 12,411,182	Quetzales. 12,500,000
Expenditure .	7,866,164	9,719,860	11,715,949	12,259,067	12,500,000

Customs duties (imports and exports) provided 7,582,122 quetzales in 1927-28, or about 70 per cent. of the revenue.

On December 31, 1927, the outstanding amount of the 4 per cent. External Debt of 1895 was 936,700 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Certificates in respect of unpaid interest bring the total up to 1,752,423 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The debt owing to the International Railways of Central America stood on that date at 2,515,000 dollars. The public debt on December 31, 1927, excluding the sterling debt and including a small internal and floating debt, amounted to 10,108,968 quetzales. Service on the public debt, 1927, 2,376,290 quetzales.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory between the ages of 18 and 50. By the Washington Convention of February 7, 1923, between the 5 States of Central America, Guatemala agreed to limit her standing army in time of peace to 5,200 men. The approximate strength of the reserves in 1923 was 40,000.

Military expenditures, 1927, 2,204,487 quetzales; military budget, 1928, 1,809,220 quetzales.

Production and Industry.

The Cordilleras divide Guatemala into two unequal drainage areas, of which the Atlantic is much the greater. The Pacific slope, though comparatively narrow, is exceptionally well watered and fertile between the altitudes of 1,000 and 5,000 feet, and is the most densely settled part of the Republic. The Atlantic slope is sparsely populated and has little of commercial importance beyond the timber cutting of the Peten, coffee cultivation of Coban region, and banana raising of the Motagua Valley and Lake Izabal district.

The soil in general is exceedingly fertile and agriculture is the most important industry. The principal crop is coffee; coffee exports in 1926-7, 647,965 bags; in 1927-8, 789,433 bags. Germans own and control between 30 and 40 per cent. of the coffee plantations of Guatemala. Next to coffee, sugar is the most important crop; other crops are rice, maize, and bananas. Banana exports in 1927 were valued at 3,010,990 quetzales. Guatemala has almost a monopoly of the chicle gum which is used for chewing in the United States; exports in 1927 were valued at 484,396 quetzales. On the high plateaux the cattle-grounds (potreros) occupy about 758,640 acres.

The forest area has an extent of 1,316,482 acres. The department of Peten is rich in mahogany and dye woods, for which there is a ready market in the United States.

There are silver, gold, copper, iron and lead mines, but owing to the lack of transport, mining is little developed. Chrome was discovered in 1916.

Commerce.

Value of the commerce in pounds sterling for 5 years (at £1 = 5 quetzales):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	2,752,699	3,654,251	4,678,774	5,320,317	5,006,417
Exports . . .	2,948,664	4,898,307	5,332,391	5,795,617	6,733,045

The values of the principal imports and exports in quetzales (or U.S. dollars) for 2 years were:—

Imports	1926	1927	Exports	1926	1927
	Quetzales	Quetzales		Quetzales	Quetzales
Cotton . . .	4,517,064	$,540,015	Coffee . . .	23,338,521	28,568,290
Woolen . . .	721,600	421,001	Chicle . . .	717,885	484,396
Silk . . .	250,869	182,451	Timber . . .	278,010	684,155
Artificial Silk . . .	502,908	460,749	Hides . . .	195,852	166,184
Leather . . .	364,063	334,078	Bananas . . .	2,780,533	3,010,990
Drugs . . .	608,498	656,415	Sugar . . .	788,105	412,597
Petroleum . . .	1,939,646	516,602	Honey . . .	123,856	180,870
Total (including all others)	23,010,562	17,907,768	Total (including all others)	28,968,050	38,915,225

In 1927, 55.8 per cent. of the imports came from the United States, 11.8 per cent. from Great Britain, 14.1 per cent. from Germany, and 3.1 per cent. from Japan. In 1927, 42.6 per cent. of the exports went to the United States, 38.4 per cent. to Germany, and 11.4 to Holland.

Total trade between Guatemala and the U.K. for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns) :—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Guatemala to U.K.	109,245	159,987	59,598	69,897	60,313
Exports to Guatemala from U.K.	587,286	536,980	508,250	434,028	457,509

Shipping and Communications.

In 1927, total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared was 1,889,992 tons. The chief ports on the Atlantic side are Puerto Barrios and Livingston; on the Pacific side, San José and Champerico.

International Railways of Central America was incorporated in 1912 and represents a consolidation of the Guatemala Railway (198 miles), the Guatemala Central Railway (139 miles), the Occidental Railway (51 miles), and the Ocos Railway (22 miles). Control was purchased by American capital in 1924. The company's main lines at present extend from Puerto Barrios to Guatemala City, a distance of 198 miles, thence to San José de Guatemala, on the Pacific Ocean, a distance of 74 miles. This route carries both freight and passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific more quickly than the Panama Canal, and promises eventually to be a formidable rival for fast traffic. The company receives subsidies from the Governments of Guatemala and Salvador for construction, and controls a railway mileage of 652 miles. The Salvador division of 40 miles is operated separately, but will be connected with the Guatemalan line in 1929. Since 1914 the International Railways of Central America has extended northward to Ayutla on the Mexican border where it connects with the Pan-American Railway of Mexico. When all its lines in Central America, projected or under construction, are completed, a direct through route will be afforded between Vera Cruz, Mexico, and Panama and Colon, extending along the western portion of Central America through the five Republics of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica. All roads are of 3 ft. gauge. Total mileage of all lines in 1925 was 597 miles.

There are (1928) 1,364 miles of highways. Motor traffic is possible almost everywhere during nine months of the year.

There are 362 post-offices. Revenue of the Post Office in 1927, 202,213 quetzales; expenditure, 369,404 quetzales. The national telegraph lines have a length of 4,267 miles, and the telephones 2,238 miles. There are 261 telegraph offices and 87 central telephone stations; number of telephones in use, 1,992. In 1927, the revenue for the combined telegraph and telephone systems was 292,716 quetzales; expenditure, 605,317 quetzales. A radio station has been opened at Quezaltenango.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The creation of the Central Bank of Guatemala, with an authorised capital of 10,000,000 quetzales and the exclusive right to issue paper money for 10 years, was decreed on June 30, 1926. Total circulation of banknotes on January 1, 1928, was 9,436,376 quetzales, of which 6,241,095 quetzales represented notes of the old banks not yet called in and cancelled.

Other important banks are: Anglo-South American Bank; Pacific Bank and Trust Co. (1927), paid-up capital, 1,000,000 dollars; Bank of Guatemala (1895); International Bank of Guatemala (1877); American Bank (1895); Western Bank of Quezaltenango (1881); Agricultural Mortgage Bank.

The unit of currency is the gold quetzal, equal to the United States dollar. Gold coins in circulation, 20, 10, and 5 quetzales; quetzal notes in circulation, 100, 20, 5, 2, and 1. Silver coins are in circulation of the value of 1,  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and  $\frac{1}{4}$  quetzales, and 10 cents and 5 cents. The inconvertible paper currency has been stabilised at the rate of 60 pesos to the quetzal, and is being gradually withdrawn from circulation. Notes in circulation (no longer issued) for 500, 100, 50, 25, 20, 5 and 1 pesos, and there are copper-aluminium coins for 5, 1, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  pesos, and for 1 cent.

The Spanish Libra of 16 ounces . . .	= 1·014 lb. avoirdupois.
„ Arroba of 25 libras . . .	= 25·35 lb. „
„ Quintal of 4 arrobas . . .	= 101·40 „
„ Tonelada of 20 quintals . . .	= 18·10 cwt. „
„ Fanega . . .	= 1½ imperial bushels.

The metric system has been officially adopted.

HAITI.

(RÉPUBLIQUE D'HAÏTI.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Haiti, formerly a French colony, was proclaimed independent January 1, 1804, and is now governed under a Constitution ratified on June 12, 1918, and considerably amended in January, 1928. Pending the creation of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies, the legislative and executive power are exercised by a Council of State composed of twenty-one members appointed by the President, and holding office during his pleasure. The President is elected by the Council of State for a period of six years, but cannot be re-elected.

President of the Republic.—Louis Borno; elected April 10, 1922; assumed office, May 15, 1922. Re-elected April 12, 1926, for a further period of six years.

The administration of the Republic is carried on, under the President, by ten departments supervised by five Secretaries of State. The President receives an annual salary of 24,000 dollars.

In November, 1915, both Houses of the Haitian Congress ratified a treaty with the United States by which the latter agreed to assist in the establishment of responsible, orderly government. The treaty provides for a number of American Advisers to the Haitian Government, appointed by the President of Haiti on the recommendation of the President of the United States; these supervise the constabulary, finances, public health, public works, and agriculture.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic, which embraces the western portion of the island of Haiti—the larger but less populated eastern division forming the Dominican Republic—is estimated at 10,204 English square miles. On January 1, 1927, the estimated population was 2,300,200, excluding 3,000 white foreign residents and the military forces of the United States. The majority of the population are Negroes; there are also great numbers of Mulatto Haitians, the descendants of the former French settlers. Capital, Porto-au-Prince, with 125,000 inhabitants, situated on a large bay, and possessed of an excellent harbour. Cap Haitien has an estimated population of about 22,000; Cayes and Jacmel about 12,000 each; Gonaives, 10,000; Port de Paix, 5,000. The official language of the country is French, though most of the common people speak a dialect known as Creole French. Emigration from Haiti was prohibited by ministerial decree on July 13, 1928.

Religion and Education.

The religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop with 4 suffragan bishops. The Catholic clergy are French.

Public elementary education is free, the country being divided into 24 inspectors' districts. The sum allotted for public instruction amounts to nearly 1,000,000 dollars annually, chiefly for agricultural education, but the educational system is still very imperfect, especially in rural districts. In 1910 education was made compulsory. In the 6 national lycees in 1925-26 there were 1,042 pupils, in 11 private secondary schools, 3,219 pupils; in 14 national primary schools, under friars, 5,820 pupils; and in 34, under nuns, 7,440 pupils. During 1925-26, 53 private rural primary schools had 4,105 pupils, and 85 private city primary schools 5,517; 417 national rural primary schools, 25,348 pupils; 115 religious national rural primary schools, 5,868 pupils; 240 national urban primary schools, 24,462 pupils.

Justice.

Justice is administered by a Court of Cassation, appointed for 10 years, and by lower courts appointed for 7 years. All the judges are nominated by the President and are irremovable, except on impeachment.

Finance.

About 90 per cent. of the revenue of Haiti is derived from customs, paid in American gold on exports and imports. In 1928-29 debt charges will absorb 30 per cent. of revenue.

The following table shows the revenue and expenditure (fiscal year ending September 30) for five years (in United States dollars):—

Revenue . . . . .	8,097,533	9,072,930	7,772,306	10,080,202	7,579,697

In 1922, the Haitian Government secured a loan of 16,000,000 dollars (net, 14,755,253 dollars) from the National City Company and the National City Bank of New York for the conversion of the two external loans in France, the cash settlement of outstanding debts and for public works. A second loan was secured in 1923 for 2,660,000 dollars to meet the default on the government-guaranteed National Railway Bonds. The internal debt comprises a 6 per cent. thirty-year loan of 5,000,000 dollars (of which 3,955,015 dollars was outstanding on September 30, 1926), and the portion of the fiduciary currency of the government uncovered by reserves which, on that date, amounted to 1,046,465 dollars.

On September 30, 1928, the total debt was 18,887,623 dollars.

Defence.

An armed constabulary (Gendarmerie d'Haiti), both urban and rural, was instituted in 1916. The officers are in part drawn from the United States Marine Corps and Navy. The establishment consists of 183 officers and 2,537 non-commissioned officers and men.

Production.

The industries of Haiti are mainly agricultural. The most important product is coffee of excellent quality grown by peasants. Cocoa is grown extensively and cotton is exported in increasing quantities. The cultivation of tobacco is extending; production in 1927-28 reached 2,500,000 lbs. Sugar is likewise grown, and there are 2 sugar-making establishments. An extensive sugar central, founded with American capital, has been constructed near Port-au-Prince. Rum and other spirits are distilled but not exported: the rum is of a superior quality. Logwood is an important product, and other valuable woods are now exported. Cattle breeding is encouraged.

Haiti possesses considerable mineral resources quite undeveloped. Gold, silver, copper, iron, antimony, tin, sulphur, coal, kaolin, nickel, gypsum, limestone and porphyry are found but are little worked.

Commerce.

Imports and Exports for 4 years (in U.S. dollars):—

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1924-25	20,237,565	19,403,762	1926-27	15,751,320	15,299,088
1925-26	18,851,406	20,184,005	1927-28	20,248,256	22,667,246

In 1927-28, the principal exports were coffee, 41,146,804 kilos (17,916,462 dollars); raw cotton, 4,427,337 kilos (2,001,520 dollars); logwood, 36,361,678 kilos (706,968 dollars). France took 49.7 per cent. of all the exports. Imports to the extent of 75 per cent. (15,246,503 dollars) came from the United States.

Total trade between Haiti and the U.K. for 5 years (Board of Trade Returns):—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	199,401	223,915	201,445	162,455	165,075
Exports	258,502	423,980	228,249	181,666	334,917

Shipping and Communications.

In 1927 there entered and cleared at the port of Port-au-Prince 304 steam and 4 sailing vessels of 788,866 tons. Several lines of steamers (French, Dutch, and Norwegian) connect the ports of Haiti with New York.

Port-au-Prince is connected with Cap Haitien by a road 169 miles long, and with Mirebalais and Lascahobas by a road 33 miles long. Total length of motor road in 1928 was 929 miles. A light railway has been constructed from Port-au-Prince to Lake Assuéi (28 miles), and to Léogane (22 miles), but the traffic is small. The 'National Railroad of Haiti' runs from Port-au-Prince to Verrettes, distance 85 miles. Port-au-Prince has 5 miles of tramway. The two railroads, the National and the P.O.S. (Compagnie des Chemins de Fer de la Plaine de Cul de Sac) are both American-owned.

The principal towns are connected by the Government telegraph system, with 1,490 miles of wire in 1927. A cable runs from the Mole St. Nicholas to Santiago de Cuba and from the Mole to Port-au-Prince, and also to Cap Haitien, whence it runs to Puerto Plata (Santo Domingo) and to New York and South America. The All-America Cables has a cable to Haiti.

There were 95 post offices in 1925. Haiti joined the Postal Union in 1880.

Port-au-Prince has a modern automatic telephone exchange; 1,200 miles of telephone cables connect 46 commercial and 17 local exchanges.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti, established October 21, 1910, with a capital of 10,000,000 francs (present capital, 2,000,000 dollars), undertakes to render services to the Government in respect of loans and other matters; it has a monopoly of the note issue. In 1916, the National City Bank of New York purchased control over this bank. In 1919 the Royal Bank of Canada established a branch at Port-au-Prince.

The unit of currency is the Gourde which has a fixed value in relation to United States currency, i.e. 1 gourde is equivalent to 20 cents U.S. currency. There were in circulation on September 30, 1928, 12,275,000 goudes of notes guaranteed by the Banque Nationale and of fiduciary nickel and copper coins. It is also estimated that there are United States notes to the value of 1,600,000 dollars in circulation in the coast towns; to reduce the use of American money the Banque Nacional was authorized in April, 1928, to issue notes of 20, 50 and 100 goudes.

Use of the metric system of weights and measures has been made obligatory since July 1, 1922.

HONDURAS.

(REPÚBLICA DE HONDURAS.)

Constitution and Government.

On September 15, 1821, the State of Honduras declared its independence of Spain and set up as a Republic which is governed under a charter proclaimed on October 3, 1824. This gives the legislative power to a Congress of Deputies consisting of 43 members, chosen for 4 years directly by popular vote, in the ratio of one per 15,000 inhabitants. It meets for 60 days on January 1 each year. The executive authority rests with a President, nominated and elected by popular vote for 4 years, and holding office from February 1st. The Constitution of the Republic was re-written in 1924, the most important innovation being the appointment of a Permanent Commission of five members who sit whilst Congress is not in session for the transaction of such routine business as usually falls to the latter.

President.—Dr. Vicente Mejia Colindres. Assumed office February 1, 1929.

The administration of the Republic is carried on by a Council of six ministers, to whom are entrusted the departments of Foreign Relations, Government and Justice, War and Navy, Treasury and Public Credit, Public Works and Agriculture, and Instruction.

Area and Population.

Area about 44,275 English square miles, with a population, on January 1, 1923, of 773,408, according to official figures, or 15·2 inhabitants to the square mile. The inhabitants are chiefly Indians with an admixture of Spanish blood. On the north coast there is a considerable proportion of negroes, chiefly employed by the fruit exporting companies, of whom about 10,000 are British subjects. The Republic is divided into 17 departments and one territory. La Mosquitia is still practically unexplored and is inhabited by native races who speak little or no Spanish. The capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa, with approximately 40,000 inhabitants. Other towns are Pespere, 7,132;

Nacaome, 8,152; La Esperanza, 11,453; Santa Rosa, 10,574; Choluteca, 8,065; San Pedro Sula, 7,820. The main ports are Amapala on the Pacific, and, on the Atlantic, Puerto Cortez (2,500), Omoa (1,000), La Ceiba, Trujillo, Puerto Castilla, and Tela. The port of entry for the Bay Islands is Roatan. Amapala, on Tiger Island, is 2 hours by gasoline launch from San Lorenzo on the mainland, where an automobile road starts for Tegucigalpa 81½ miles (130 kilometres) distant.

Religion, Education, Justice.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion, but the Constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any.

Instruction is free, compulsory (from 7 to 15 years of age), and entirely secular. In 1926-27 there were 859 public and 36 private schools, with 35,216 children enrolled. The secondary schools had 283 pupils, the normal schools 165, and the commercial schools 374. There is a school for the teaching of agriculture with (1925) 17 pupils. At Tegucigalpa there is a National University (72 students in 1925); also a military school, and at Comayagua there is a school of jurisprudence.

The Judicial power resides in the Supreme Court with five judges chosen directly by the people for 4 years; four Appeal Courts, and departmental and local judges. In 1923 a Supreme Court was established at San Pedro Sula to serve the Northern Provinces.

Finance.

For the years stated, ending July 31, the revenue and expenditure are given as follows (the silver peso is legally fixed at one-half the value of an American dollar; conversion into sterling herewith is at the rate of 1 peso = 2s.)

—	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1927-28	1928-29 <sup>1</sup>
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	1,361,785	858,594	920,130	966,299	1,070,562

The internal debt was estimated at about 1,392,214*l.* on July 31, 1927. The external debt, held principally in England and unpaid as to principal or interest since 1872, had reached by 1925 the sum of 30,000,000*l.* But by an agreement reached in Washington in 1925 between the Honduran Government and the British Council of Foreign Bondholders it was scaled down to 1,200,000*l.* to be repaid in 30 annual instalments of 40,000*l.* each. A special Consular tax on imports to Honduras, collected abroad and deposited in New York, has sufficed to insure regular payments every six months of 20,500*l.* to the bondholders. In addition the Government has borrowed 300,000*l.* in New York, repayable in monthly instalments of 5,000*l.* at 7 per cent. interest. Total external debt stood on July 31, 1928, at 1,160,000*l.*

Defence.

Every citizen of Honduras is liable to serve in the army from the age of 21. Service in the active army is for two years, and in the reserves from the age of 23 to 40. Foreigners are exempt from service, naturalised citizens being exempt for 10 years. Under the terms of the Washington Central American Conventions of 1923 the size of the Regular Army is fixed at 2,500 men, including the National Guard. The strength in 1925-26 was 344 officers and 2,253 men. The military budget for 1926-27 was 1,949,933 pesos.

Production and Industry.

The chief culture is that of bananas, on the Atlantic coast, where coconuts are also grown. For the year ended July 31, 1927, there were exported 17,332,182 stems of bananas. The coconut groves of Puerto Sal extend from the Ulua River to the Cuero River, a distance of about 60 miles, and are said to contain over 28,000 fruit-bearing trees. The export of coconuts in 1926 was 9,267,000. Coffee of fine quality is grown; 3,152,961 lbs. were exported in 1927. Tobacco too is grown. The production of sugar is increasing, 49,827,666 lbs. having been exported in 1927.

Honduras is essentially a cattle producing country, but little is done to encourage breeding.

The mineral resources of Honduras are—gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron, antimony, some of them being found in almost every department. Gold, bar silver, some copper and lead, and various ores are exported. Deposits of brown and other coal have also been found. The production of silver for the year ended July 31, 1927, was 2,828,288 ounces, and of gold 8,288 ounces.

Straw hats and cigars are manufactured for local consumption. A good quality of Panama hat is manufactured in the Departments of Copan and Santa Barbara. There is a large number of small factories of all classes in the Republic, chiefly for the manufacture of shoes, soap and candles, beer, non-alcoholic beverages, cigarettes and ice. There is a flour mill at San Pedro Sula.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 5 years :—

—	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	3,585,559	2,227,582	2,550,550	1,980,000	2,126,080
Exports . . .	2,504,067	1,579,409	2,306,510	2,691,200	3,509,258

The United States takes nearly all the exports of Honduras (2,697,146*l.* in 1926-27), and furnishes practically all its imports (1,689,077*l.*).

Total trade between Honduras and United Kingdom for 5 years was (according to Board of Trade returns) as follows :—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Honduras . . .	726,228	1,159,242	567,917	1,332,098	822,861
Exports to Honduras . . .	683,192	481,879	167,652	552,817	185,320

Communications.

In general, travelling and transport are accomplished by means of mules and ox-carts. Slow improvements in road-making and repairing continue to be made. There is a fair mail service by automobiles, and a daily autobus passenger and freight service connects Tegucigalpa with both the northern and southern sections. The two principal roads are the Carretera del Sur from San Lorenzo, on the Pacific Coast, to Tegucigalpa, 84 miles; and the Carretera del Norte, from Tegucigalpa to Comayagua, and Lake Yojoa, 154 miles. Transport from Lake Yojoa (20 miles across) is continued by road to Potrerillos (25 miles), the head of the railroad to San Pedro Sula and Puerto Cortés. A road from Tegucigalpa to Juticalpa and one from Santa Barbara to San Pedro Sula are being built. Total mileage of motor roads in 1928 was 349 miles.

There is a railway of 66 miles from Puerto Cortez to Potrerillos, which was taken over by the Government in 1912. The other four railroads are owned and operated by the various fruit companies on the north coast. Total length of line (1924) 934 miles.

In 1924 the country had 868 miles of telephone lines and 4,977 miles of telegraph lines. Number of telephone offices, 714 (1923); number of telegraph offices, 280. Number of post-offices, 1928, 332.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The silver peso or dollar, of 100 cents, weighing 25 grammes, .900 fine, is the monetary unit. The value of the silver peso is legally fixed at one-half the value of an American dollar. The fractional silver money consists of 50, 25, 20, 10, and 5 cent pieces. The real is also in popular use. It is equivalent to 12½ cents. There are 1-cent and 2-cent copper coins. On the north coast the currency is almost entirely American paper money. Despite a law forbidding the importation of silver, large quantities of coins—Argentine, Chilean and Peruvian—which contain only 50 per cent. silver, as against the 90 per cent. of the Honduran peso, are smuggled into the country and circulate. United States paper currency circulates extensively. A law passed in 1926, but not yet in effect, authorizes the issue of a new unit, the Lempira (named after a native chief), which is ultimately to be sole legal tender.

There are two banks. One is the Banco de Honduras, founded in 1889, which in 1922 and for a short time thereafter acted as the Bank of the Republic. It still has the power to issue silver notes but does not act as the Government's fiscal agent. A law to create a National Bank for that purpose is under discussion. The second bank, Banco Atlantida, which belongs mainly to Americans, also issues silver notes which are exchangeable for American currency at the rate of 2 pesos for 1 dollar.

The metric system of weights and measures has been legal since April 1, 1897, but English pounds and yards and the old Spanish system are still in general use:

1 Vara	. . . . .	= 32 inches.
1 Arroba	. . . . .	= 25 lb.
1 Quintal	. . . . .	= 100 lb.
1 Tonelada	. . . . .	= 2,000 lb.

HUNGARY.

(KINGDOM OF HUNGARY.)

Constitution and Government.

HUNGARY first became an independent kingdom in 1001. On October 31, 1918, a revolution broke out in Hungary with the object of establishing a Republic. On November 13 King Charles issued a letter of abdication, and on November 16, 1918, Hungary was proclaimed an independent Republic (Hungarian People's Republic), of which Count Michael Károlyi became Provisional President. The two Houses of the Legislature were abolished, and their place taken by a Provisional National Council. The Károlyi régime continued until March 21, 1919, when its place was taken by a Soviet Government, which proclaimed the dictatorship of the proletariat. An opposition Government was, however, soon set up at Arad and Szeged, which with the assistance of the Rumanian army swept away the Soviet Government, and on August 7, 1919, a National Government was again in the Capital. Elections were held on the basis of universal suffrage in January and February 1920, and the new Parliament considered the period of the revolutions of 1918 and 1919 as de jure a blank space of time, and resolved that the old monarchical constitution should be continued. Hungary was thus considered a monarchy with a vacant throne, the functions of the monarch being exercised by a Regent. It has been decided that the dynastic question shall be solved at such time as the people are freed from external pressure.

Regent.—Nicholas Horthy de Nagybánya. (Elected March 1, 1920.)

The Legislature consists of two houses; the character of the Upper House was represented by a Bill passed on November 11, 1926. According to this the House consists of 6 groups—(1) elected representatives of the former hereditary members, about 38; (2) members elected by the County Councils and municipalities, about 50 members; (3) heads of the various religious communities, about 31 members; (4) high dignitaries—such as judges, the commander-in-chief of the army, the chairman of the National Bank; (5) representatives of scientific institutions, the Chambers of Commerce, about 40 members; and (6) life members appointed by the head of the State.

The Lower House consists of 245 members. At the elections held on December 20, 1926, the following parties were elected:—Party of National Unity (Bethlen Party), 171; Christian Social Union, 35; Socialists, 14; other parties, 25; total 245.

The Ministry originally formed on June 17, 1922, was reorganised on September 5, 1928 as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Count Stephen Bethlen.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Louis Walko.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Béla Scitovszky.

Minister of Public Economy.—Dr. John Bud.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Alexander Wekerle.

Minister of Agriculture.—John Mayer.

Minister of Commerce.—Maximilian Herrmann.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Dr. Count Kuno Klebelsberg.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Tibor Saitway (February 5, 1929).

Minister of National Defence.—Count Charles Csáky.

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Joseph Vass.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

In Hungary a distinction is observed between communes which are large or small, or may be townships with regular magistrates, and municipalities (counties or towns), which are regarded as communes of a higher order. In the communes the electoral right is possessed by every male inhabitant over twenty years of age who for two years has paid the State tax in the same commune. The representative body is composed half of members elected for six years, and half of persons who pay the highest taxes. The executive committee consists of members appointed, in the towns for six years, in the rural communes for three years, with officials appointed for life. The counties, and cities invested with similar rights, are independent municipalities. Each has its council constituted similarly to the representative body of the communes out of the members elected for six years and of those paying the highest taxes. All electors for the Parliament are qualified to vote. The executive is in the hands of the officials of the municipality, whose chiefs sit and vote with the council.

Area and Population.

The Treaty of Trianon, signed on June 4, 1920, and ratified by Hungary on November 13, 1920, mentions in general terms the boundaries of the new State with Austria, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania. The exact boundaries with Yugoslavia and Rumania are to be determined by a mixed commission. As a result of negotiations with Austria and of the consequent plebiscite, Hungary has obtained Sopron (Oedenburg) in Western Hungary.

The population of Hungary according to the census of December 31, 1920, is 7,980,143, and its area 35,875 square miles. (These figures are exclusive of the area of 36 square miles with a population of 7,000, obtained after the census.) Of the total population, 3,870,904 were males and 4,109,239 females.

The following is the division of the total population according to language as estimated on December 31, 1927: Hungarian (Magyar), 7,652,579 (89·8 per cent.); German, 581,516 (6·8 per cent.); Slovak, 148,123 (1·7 per cent.); Rumanian, 25,201 (0·3 per cent.); Ruthenian, 1,533; Croatian, 38,464 (0·5 per cent.); Serbian, 16,883 (0·2 per cent.); others, 61,426.

Estimated population on December 31, 1927, 8,525,725.

Religion.

Religious toleration is one of the fundamental principles of the Hungarian State. There is perfect equality among all legally recognised religions, which include the Roman and Greek Catholic, the Evangelical (Augsburg and Helvetian), the Unitarian, the Greek Oriental, the Gregorian-Armenian, the Baptist (since 1905), the Jewish, and the Mohammedan (since 1916). Each has the independent administration of its own affairs.

In 1927, the population according to religion was estimated as follows: Roman Catholics, 5,485,056 (64·3 per cent.); Greek Catholics, 198,569 (2·3 per cent.); Helvetian Evangelicals, 1,771,122 (20·8 per cent.); Augsburg Evangelicals, 525,515 (6·2 per cent.); Greek-Orientals, 52,965 (0·6 per cent.); Unitarians, 6,299 (0·1 per cent.); Jews, 476,860 (5·6 per cent.); others, 9,339.

Education.

Public education in Hungary comprises the following grades:—(1) Infant schools; (2) elementary schools; (3) industrial and commercial apprentice schools; (4) primary (city) schools; (5) training colleges for teachers; (6) middle or secondary schools; (7) special schools; (8) universities and colleges.

In 1920, 15·2 per cent. of the population over 6 years of age was illiterate (33·3 per cent. in 1910 on the territory of pre-war Hungary).

School attendance is compulsory for children of six to twelve years at day schools, and then for three years in continuation schools. There were in the school year 1926-27 altogether 985 infants' schools and permanent foster-homes with 1,372 female teachers and 108,477 infants, and 3 training colleges for female teachers of infant schools.

In Hungary there were in the school-year 1926-27, 6,541 elementary schools with 688,768 pupils and 17,012 teachers. There were also 4,457 general and 1,230 agricultural continuation schools (or courses). There were 450 apprentice schools, 414 for industrial and 36 for commercial apprentices. The number of industrial apprentices was 71,706 and of commercial apprentices 4,251. There were 20 training colleges for elementary schools for males and 26 for females, with 567 teachers and 5,936 students. The number of primary schools was for boys 174, for girls 237, for both sexes 6, with 83,792 pupils and 4,199 teachers. The number of training colleges for primary schools was 6 (2 State and 4 denominational).

In the middle schools the curriculum extends over eight years. They are maintained by the State, by the larger communes, or (in the case of the denominational schools) by ecclesiastical foundations, with sometimes a subvention from the State. There were in 1926-1927, 27 gymnasia, 71 realgymnasia, 22 modern schools, and 32 girls' secondary schools. Total number of teachers, 2,994, pupils, 61,017 (49,179 boys and 11,838 girls).

Of the special schools, 43 are agricultural, 40 industrial and 49 commercial, with 28 others. Of the commercial schools, 33 were for boys and 16 for girls; total number of pupils, 10,558. The other special schools had 8,980 pupils.

Hungary has four universities and (since 1919) an independent Faculty of Economics at Budapest (43 professors, 1,084 students in 1926-27), all maintained by the State. In 1926-27 the University of Budapest had 371 professors and 5,393 students; the University of Szeged, 107 professors and 1,135 students; the University of Pécs 71 professors and 1,005 students, and of Debrecen 63 professors and 952 students—the last two having been founded in 1912. Total number of students at the Universities, 1926-27, 9,569. There are also 17 theological colleges, viz., 13 Roman Catholic, 3 Protestant, and 1 Jewish, with a total of 104 professors and 674 students; and 3 law schools with 32 professors and 1,048 students; and the veterinary school with 32 professors and 261 students. The technical high school (polytechnicum) in Budapest has 101 professors and 1,803 students (1926-27); the high school of mining and forestry of Sopron 26 professors and 161 students; and 3 agricultural colleges have 35 professors and 682 students.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court in Budapest is the highest instance in all civil and criminal matters. As courts of first instance, there are county courts (törvényszékek) with collegiate judgeships; district courts (járásbíróságok) with single judges; and jury courts, (sajtóbíróságok) for press offences, besides an army special court.

Pauperism.

In Hungary poor relief is in the main left to communal administration. In the smaller communes orphans and the indigent are cared for by official guardians and overseers, while in the larger there are poor-houses, the funds being mostly derived from fines and taxes. The number of asylums for paupers and orphans is about 300. The Church and charitable societies also render assistance, and several millions of crowns are annually bestowed in legacies and gifts towards benevolent purposes.

The public debt of Hungary in 1926-27, was given at 1,473,522,319 pengös, of which 995.5 million pengös were pre-war debt.

Defence.

According to the Treaty of Trianon, Hungary is authorised to maintain an army of 35,000 officers, non-commissioned officers and men. The Treaty laid down that conscription was to be abolished, and consequently recruiting on a voluntary basis has been substituted. All recruits have to undertake to serve in the Army for a minimum period of 12 consecutive years, at least 6 of which are to be with the colours. Officers now serving will continue to do so until they attain the age of 40 years at least. Officers newly appointed must undertake to serve on the active list for a minimum of 20 consecutive years. No reserves or measures for mobilisation are permitted.

Hungary is divided into the following seven military districts:—Budapest, Székesfehérvár, Szombathely, Pécs, Szeged, Debrecen, and Miskolc. To each of these districts is allotted a mixed brigade each composed of 1 brigade staff, 1 cavalry squadron, 2 infantry regiments, 1 trench mortar company, 1 field artillery group, 1 cyclist battalion. In addition to the 7 mixed brigades there are the following troops: 4 hussar regiments, 1 field artillery group, and 3 pioneer battalions. Strength in November, 1928, 1,478 officers and 33,230 men.

Hungary has a force of 12,000 gendarmerie and of 12,000 police, as well as 5,750 customs guards, and 1,500 river guards. The members of this force are under the obligation to serve for a minimum of 6 consecutive years. The authorised armament is as follows:—Gendarmerie: 1 rifle or 1 carbine per man; Police: 1 sword or revolver per man (automatic pistols for 5 per cent. of the establishment, i.e. 600); Customs Guards: 1 rifle per man.

A force of 3,000 finance guards is also maintained. These are armed with revolvers.

Hungary has no navy or air force, but only four patrol vessels for police duty on the Danube.

The budget expenditure on the army in 1926-27 was 111,000,000 pengős.

Production and Industry.

The cultivation of the soil is the chief industry of Hungary. The soil is noted for its fertility and the variety of its products. The area and production of crops in Hungary in 1925-26 and 1926-27 was as follows:—

Crop	1925-26		1926-27
	Area	Yield	Area	Yield
	Acres	Quintals	Acres	Quintals

Estimated yield for 1928: wheat 25,048,702, rye 8,262,510, barley 6,068,317, oats 3,443,659, maize 11,004,989, potatoes 12,867,641, sugar beet 11,002,097 metric tons.

In Hungary there were, in 1928, 917,974 horses, 1,811,647 cattle, 1,566,451 sheep, and 2,661,539 pigs.

The total area under forest in Hungary (1926) was 2,696,072 acres.

The production of coal in Hungary was in 1900, 6,575,000 tons; in 1910, 9,036,000 tons; in 1924, 7,169,057 tons; in 1925, 5,742,293 tons; in 1926, 6,156,987 tons; and in 1927, 6,532,296 tons. The best quality coal is found in the Mecsek Mountain, in the district of Pécs. Bituminous coal is found at Ajk. Hungary has a considerable number of brown-coal and lignite mines, and her bauxite deposits may be counted among the largest in the world.

Hungary retains important fishery preserves in the Danube and Theiss rivers and in lake Balaton. The latter, situated in the west, is the largest lake in central Europe, being 50 miles long and from 2 to 7 miles broad. Its waters contain plentiful supplies of perch, carp, pike, sheatfish, shad and other fish. The north shore of Lake Balaton is an important wine-producing district. The best known Hungarian wines come from the hilly country, "Tokaj," in the northeast section of Hungary.

The industries of Hungary are based on agriculture. They include milling, distilling, the manufacture of sugar (1,832,000 metric quintals of raw sugar in 1927), hemp and flax, and also iron and steel works (299,812 metric tons of pig-iron and 471,680 metric tons of steel in 1927. In 1927 there were in Hungary 3,479 factories, employing on an average 229,636 workmen, with an output valued at 2,748 million pengös.

Internal Communications.

In 1926 there were 2,282 miles of state roads, 9,282 miles of municipal roads and 5,320 miles of inferior roads, total, 16,884 miles of road.

There are two railway systems in Hungary, the M. Á. V. (Royal Hungarian State Railways), which is owned and operated by the Government, and the Danube-Save-Adriatic Railway Co., a private corporation. The former is by far the more important, owning about 81.9 per cent. of the country's total mileage. The length of railways in Hungary on December 31, 1927, was 8,677 kilometres, or 5,388 miles, of which 3,056 kilometres, or 1,897 miles, are owned by the State. Of the total 995 kilometres or 618 miles are double track. There are three air lines over which 2,613 flights were made in 1927 with 4,133 passengers.

Number of Hungarian post-offices (not including collecting places and railway post) (1927), 2,288. On December 31, 1927, the length of telegraph lines was 5,656 miles; of telegraph wires, 51,143 miles; of telephone lines, 11,894 miles; and of wire, 273,390 miles. The postal and telegraphic services are in the hands of the Government.

The total number of telegrams sent in 1927 was 3,695,300 (3,618,300 in 1926), and of telephone calls in 1927 for long distance, 3,809,687 (3,912,400 in 1926).

Currency and Banking.

By a law of November 4, 1925, a new monetary unit, the 'pengö' (= 12,500 paper crowns), subdivided into 100 fillér, was instituted, and came into use on December 27, 1926. Up to January 31, 1927, new pengö coins were issued to the value of 24,752,105 pengös. The pengö contains 0.263158 grammes of gold.

The amount of the bank notes in circulation, issued by the National Bank of Hungary, was 437,444,155 pengös on October 23, 1928.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

IRAQ (MESOPOTAMIA).

IRAQ was freed from the Turks during the Great War. It was recognised as an independent State, to be placed under a Mandatory Power, and the mandate was allotted to Great Britain. On December 14, 1927, a treaty was signed between Great Britain and Iraq, by which the former undertook to recognise the latter as an independent State. This treaty has not yet been ratified.

Reigning King.

Feisal (Hon. G.O.M.G.), b. 1887, third son of Hussein ibn Ali (Grand Sherif and Emir of Mecca, 1908-1916; King of the Hejaz November, 1916; and Caliph March 7, 1924; abdicated October 3, 1929) by the Sherifa Abdiya, daughter of his father's uncle, Abdulla V., Grand Sherif and Emir of Mecca, 1858-1877; Emir in Damascus October 1, 1917; proclaimed King of Syria March 20, 1920; abdicated July 28, 1920; elected and proclaimed King of Iraq August 23, 1921. Married, 1906, the Sherifa Huzayma, daughter of his father's brother, the Sherif Nazir.

Children of the King.—(1) Emir Ghazi, Crown Prince, b. March 21, 1912; (2) Princess Asa; (3) Princess Rajia; (4) Princess Rafia.

Government.—In 1920 a Council of State was formed, as a provisional measure, to conduct the administration of the country. On August 23, 1921, the High Commissioner proclaimed the Emir Faisal King of Iraq, by election of the people, as the result of a plebiscite in which 96 per cent. of the inhabitants of the country voted in his favour.

The Cabinet, formed in January, 1928, is as follows :—

Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs: Abdul Mohsen Es Saadun, K.C.M.G.

Minister of Interior: Abdul Aziz Qassab.

Minister of Defence: General Nuri Pasha Said, C.M.G.

Minister of Finance: Yusef Ghanima.

Minister of Justice: Daud Beg Haidari.

Minister of Works: Mohsen Shalash.

Minister of Education: Tawfik Sweidi.

Minister of Awqaf: Sheikh Ahmed Daud.

Minister of Irrigation and Agriculture: Sulman Barrak.

On October 11, 1922, the British Government entered into treaty relations with the Government of Iraq. The treaty was to remain in force for 20 years, but under a protocol of April 30, 1923, it was agreed that the treaty should terminate upon Iraq becoming a member of the League of Nations, and in any case not later than four years from the ratification of peace with Turkey (i.e. in 1928 at the latest). The British Government undertook to secure a speedy delimitation of the frontiers of Iraq. The frontier between Iraq and Turkey was finally fixed in 1926 in accordance with a decision of the League of Nations taken in Dec. 1925. To give effect to that decision, a new treaty was made between Gt. Britain and Iraq on Jan. 13, 1926, whereby the Treaty of 1922 remains in force for 25 years from Dec. 1925, or until Iraq shall be admitted as a member of the League of Nations. To secure the admission of Iraq to the League, the British Government will use its good offices. In all important matters affecting the international and financial obligations and interests of the British Government, the King of Iraq agrees to be guided by the advice of the British High Commissioner. The Organic Law passed by the Constituent Assembly in June, 1924, provides for a limited monarchy and a responsible government. The legislative body consists of a Senate of 20 nominated 'elder statesmen,' and the Lower House of 88 elected deputies.

In March, 1924, the elective Constituent Assembly met for the purpose of ratifying the Anglo-Iraq treaty, passing the Organic Law and the Electoral Law for the election of a subsequent parliament. It completed these duties early in August, and was then dissolved. The first Parliament under the Constitution was opened by King Faisal on July 16, 1925.

The country is now divided into the following Liwas: Mosul, Arbil, Kirkuk, Sulaimani, Diyala, Baghdad, Dulaim, Kut, Karbala, Hillah, Diwaniyah, Nasiriyah, 'Amarah, Basrah. Each Liwa is administered by a Mutasarrif, and is sub-divided into Qadhas (under Qaimmaqams) and Nahiyahs (under Mudirs).

Area and Population.—The country has an area of 143,250 square miles (the former Turkish vilayets respectively of Baghdad, 54,540 square miles, Basrah, 53,580 square miles, and Mosul, 35,130 square miles) and a population, according to the census of 1920, of 2,849,282. The following are the detailed figures of the census results :—

Division	Sunni	Shi'ah	Jewish	Christian	Other Religions	Total

Grand Total . . .	1,146,685	1,494,015	87,488	78,792	42,302	2,849,282

Education.—The medium of instruction in the schools has been changed from Turkish to Arabic in the Arabic-speaking provinces, and to Kurdish in Kurdish-speaking areas; Turkish remains in a few Turcoman towns (Tuzkhumatli, Kirkuk, Kifri). In 1927 there were 24,170 pupils (boys and girls) in the 249 government primary and elementary schools, with 857 teachers. There were in 1927 two secondary schools at Baghdad and Mosul with 847 pupils, and seven intermediate schools at other places with 211 pupils. There are two technical schools, a law school, an engineering school, a military college and a theological college for both sects. There are one men's training college for primary teachers with 307 students and one for secondary teachers, two women's training centres and one night secondary school. There are 80 evening classes for illiterates (male and female) at various centres in the country. In April, 1922, the King laid the foundation stone of the future Al ul Bait University, and the first block was opened on March 15, 1926. The education budget for the year 1927-28 amounted to 27,86,053 rupees.

Justice.—Civil Courts are established throughout the country as follows:—A Court of Cassation at Baghdad with a British President and 5 Iraq Judges; 16 Courts of First Instance; 12 Courts of First Instance with limited jurisdiction; 23 Peace Courts. In addition Shar'a Courts are established at every place where there is a Civil Court of First Instance or a Peace Court.

Wherever a Civil Court is established there is also a Criminal Court, every judge having either first or second class magisterial powers. Certain administrative officials of outlying places where no courts have been formed have also magisterial powers.

The prison population at the end of 1927 was 3,001, compared with 2,619 at the end of 1926.

Finance.—Civil receipts and expenditure:—

Defence.—Besides British Imperial Forces, which passed on October 1, 1922 under the control of the Air Ministry, local forces consist of the Iraq Army, and a Levy Force under British officers, financed by the Imperial Exchequer. The establishment of the Iraqi Army at the close of 1927 was as follows:—3 cavalry regiments and 1 cavalry depôt; 2 field batteries and 3 pack batteries and 1 artillery school; 7 infantry battalions, 3 infantry depôts; 3 transport companies; the Iraq Army medical corps; remounts and veterinary department; ordnance department; military police corps; wireless section; Iraq army training centre and Iraq royal military college; small arms school, signal school and the King's bodyguard.

Production.—Iraq is a land of great potentialities. The soil of the country is rich, but there are vast areas which can only be cultivated if irrigated by canals or pumps. The Irrigation Department operates several canal systems, exercising varying degrees of control in water distribution, whilst other canals are in the hands of tribal groups and individuals. The number of pumps at the end of 1928 was roughly 1,400, with a total horsepower of perhaps 40,000, all in the hands of private individuals or tribal groups. The use of pumps is growing. The total area actually irrigated by them in a single year is at present perhaps 800,000 acres, but reliable figures are not available. It is usual to irrigate half only of each holding. The problem of economic cultivation with pump irrigation is closely connected with the question of cheap oil.

The oil resources of the area known as the Transferred Territories near the Persian frontier, 30 miles south of Khanaqin, are being developed by the Khanaqin Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. Three wells have now been drilled to the oil-bearing strata, and are on production being connected with the pipeline which supplies the refinery at Alwand (Khanaqin) some 30 miles away. Oil for consumption in Iraq is refined at the Alwand Refinery and distributed and marketed by the Khanaqin Oil Company in all parts of Iraq at cheap prices controlled by an agreement between the company and the Government. The oil resources of the remainder of the Mosul and Baghdad vilayets are being developed by the Turkish Petroleum Company under its Concession of March 1925. Six different structures, chiefly in the Kifri and Kirkuk districts, are being tested, and oil has already been struck in three wells near Kirkuk. The prospects of at least one large field being proved are very hopeful.

The British Cotton Growing Association is encouraging cotton cultivation by offering a secure market to cultivators, and the Department of Agriculture co-operates by undertaking scientific experiments and seed culture. In 1926, deliveries to the ginnery were 3,500 bales, compared with 2,540 in 1925. The slump in cotton prices in 1926 resulted in a smaller crop of 1,800 bales in 1927. The estimated crop for 1928 is 4,000 bales. The chief winter crops are wheat and barley. The 1926 crop yielded a surplus for export of 1,389 tons, valued at 206,108 rupees, of wheat, and 127,642 tons, valued at 8,723,281 rupees, of barley. The date crop is important, and the chief producing area is the tidally irrigated reverain belt of the Shat-el-Abab. The 1926 crop yielded a surplus for export of 79,262 tons, valued at 16,791,887 rupees.

Wool is also an important export. The amount exported in 1926 was 6,051 tons, valued at 6,550,214 rupees.

Commerce.—Imports and exports for four years were as follows:—

	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28
	Rupees	Rupees	Rupees	Rupees
Imports . . . . .	9,11,02,021	9,91,22,376	9,74,59,155	10,34,55,242
Exports . . . . .	4,18,69,649	5,02,93,783	4,60,80,229	6,15,40,505

Customs gross revenue in 1927-28, 2,29,29,835 rupees; in 1926-27, 2,17,22,328 rupees. Transit trade 1927-28, 5,88,11,882 rupees; 1926-27, 5,71,53,477 rupees.

The export of barley was in 1927, 170,953 tons, and in 1926, 89,785 tons; of wheat, 1927, 10,595 tons, 1926, 897 tons; of wool, 1927, 6,525 tons, 1926, 5,202 tons; and of dates, 1927, 152,099 tons, 1926, 78,948 tons.

The total trade between Iraq and United Kingdom, according to the Board of Trade Returns, was as follows for four years:—

	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£
Imports from Iraq . . .	1,653,873	852,267	1,698,678	1,748,921
Exports to Iraq . . .	4,371,081	2,829,955	3,679,814	2,681,102

Communications.—The Iraqi railway system now consists of a metre gauge line from the Port of Basra, which is the Port of Iraq situated on the Shatt-el-Arab at the head of the Persian Gulf, to Baghdad, a distance of 354 miles. During 1927, 740 vessels of gross tonnage 8,943,892 entered the port of Basra, compared with 661 vessels of gross tonnage 3,654,953 in 1926. There are further a metre gauge line, connected with the Basra line by a wagon ferry across the River Tigris at Baghdad, from Baghdad to Khanaquin (109 miles) which is an important town near the Iraqi-Persian Frontier; a branch metre gauge line from the Baghdad-Khanaquin line to Kirkuk (109 miles), which is to be extended to Mosul; a standard gauge (4 ft. 8½ in.) line from Baghdad to Baiji (186 miles) along the right bank of the Tigris towards Mosul. From Baiji to Mosul is 120 miles by road. The main Basra-Baghdad line passes the ancient cities of Ur of the Chaldees, Babylon and Kish, and special railway facilities exist to enable travellers to visit these cities. Goods are carried direct from Basra Port to Khanaquin on the Iraqi-Persian Frontier, whence they are transported by road to the markets of Persia. The total route mileage open on March 31, 1928 was 752 miles. There were also 182½ miles of siding, making a total of 934½ miles. Railway earnings for the year 1927-28 were 93,02,330 rupees, and expenses 85,46,803 rupees.

Since the War nearly five thousand miles of roads, chiefly earthen, have been opened for the passage of all classes of traffic.

There were 90 Post and Telegraph Offices in 1928. Mail communication is maintained in Iraq over a distance of 7,595 miles. Of this distance 285 miles are by air, 1,478 miles by railway, 4,022 miles by mechanical transport, 720 miles by river, 1,062 miles by pack animals and runner service, and 28 miles by tram.

After December 31, 1926, the Cairo-Baghdad fortnightly Air Mail Service was taken over by Imperial Airways, Limited, and extended to Basrah. In the middle of April, 1927, it was increased to a weekly service in both directions.

The weekly Overland Mail Service, Baghdad-Haifa, was extended for conveyance of packets and parcels, in addition to the existing Letter Service. The transit to Europe is 8 days by air and 10 by overland. In 1927, 1,485 parcels were dispatched and 3,132 received by this service.

During 1927, the number of paid postal articles dispatched was 5,500,000; the total number received was 5,425,000. Heavy parcels received totalled 6,137, while 1,460 parcels were dispatched. Money orders, 37,750, of an aggregate value of 19 lakhs of rupees, received and 57,823, of an aggregate of 31.6 lakhs of rupees, dispatched.

On December 31, 1927, the line and wire mileage of the Telegraph System in the country was 3,669 and 14,694 miles respectively. The number of Post and Telegraph Offices open for paid public traffic was 68, excluding 60 Railway Telegraph Offices which also accept this class of traffic. The total number of telegrams of all classes transmitted during 1927 was 276,414, as compared with 263,927 in 1926. Inland telegrams numbered 213,748 (202,057 in 1926), and paid foreign telegrams 52,328 (53,428 in 1926). On December 31, 1927, there were 11 Departmental Telephone Exchanges, with 903 connexions (including 103 internal and external extensions) and 36 non-exchange systems with 173 telephone connexions. An up-to-date Strowger Automatic Telephone System was brought into use at Basrah with effect from 17th June, 1923. In 1927, the number of wireless messages sent was 10,338, and the number received 9,791.

Currency.—The rupee currency now in use will shortly be displaced by a new national Iraqi currency and note issue.

The standard unit of the new currency will be the gold dinar, equivalent in value to the half of £1 sterling. The issue will be made by a Currency Board established by Act of the Iraqi Parliament. To prevent any over-issue of the new notes and their consequent depreciation they will be issued only in exchange for rupees withdrawn from circulation, and with the money so withdrawn the necessary purchases of sterling will be made.

(REGNO D'ITALIA.)

Reigning King.

Vittorio Emanuele III., born November 11, 1869, the only son of King Umberto I. of Italy and of Queen Margherita; succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, July 29, 1900; married October 24, 1896, to Elena, born January 8, 1873, daughter of Nicholas, King of Montenegro; offspring, Princess Jolanda, born June 1, 1901, married on April 9, 1923, to Count Calvi di Bergolo; has one daughter, born in 1924 and one son born in 1927; Princess Mafalda, born November 19, 1902, married to Prince Philip of Hesse; has two sons, born in 1926 and in 1927 respectively; Prince Umberto Nicola Tommaso Giovanni Maria, Prince of Piedmont and Heir Apparent, born Sept. 15, 1904; Princess Giovanna, born November 18, 1907; Princess Maria, born December 26, 1914.

Uncle of the King.

Prince Tomaso Alberto Vittorio, of Savoy, Duke of Genoa, born February 6, 1854.

Cousins of the King.

Prince Emanuele Filiberto, of Savoy, Duke of Aosta, born January 13, 1868, married, June 25, 1895, to Princess Elena, d'Orleans, daughter of the late Comte de Paris; offspring, Prince Amedeo Umberto, Duke of Apulia, born October 21, 1898, married November 5, 1927, to Anna Princess of France, daughter of the Duke of Guise; and Prince Aimone, Duke of Spoleto, born March 9, 1900; Prince Vittorio Emanuele, of Savoy-Aosta, Count of Turin, born November 24, 1870; Prince Luigi Amedeo, of Savoy-Aosta, Duke of the Abruzzi, born January 20, 1873—children of the late Prince Amedeo of Savoy, Duke of Aosta, from his union with Maria Vittoria, Princess of Pozzo della Cisterna, who died November 8, 1876.

Most genealogists trace the origin of the reigning house to a German Count Berthold, who, in the eleventh century, established himself on the western slope of the Alps, between Mont Blanc and Lake Leman. In the end of the eleventh century the Count of Savoy acquired the countries of Turin and Susa. Count Amadeus, in 1383, founded a law of primogeniture which led to the immediate acquisition of the territory of Nice. In 1416 the Counts of Savoy adopted the title of Duke; in 1418 they acquired the Principality of Piedmont; and in 1718 they obtained the island of Sicily, with the title of King. Sicily had to be exchanged, in 1720, for the isle of Sardinia, to which henceforth the royal dignity remained attached. The Genoese territory was added at the peace of 1815. The direct male line of the House of Savoy died out with King Carlo Felice in 1831, and the crown fell to Prince Carlo Alberto, of the house of Savoy-Carignano, a branch founded by Tommaso Francesco, born in 1596, younger son of Duke Carlo Emanuele I. of Savoy. King Carlo Alberto abdicated the throne March 23, 1849, in favour of his son, the late King Vittorio Emanuele II., who, by the Peace of Zürich, November 10, 1859, obtained Lombardy, with the exception of Mantua and a part of the surrounding territory. On March 11, 1860, annexation to Sardinia was voted by plébiscites in Parma, Modena, the Romagna, and Tuscany; on October 21, Sicily and Naples (including Benevento and Pontecorvo, part of the Papal States), and on November 4, the Marches and Umbria. The first Italian Parliament assembled in February 1861, and declared (March 17, 1861) Vittorio Emanuele King of Italy. The remaining part of the province of Mantua and Venetia were added in 1866. Finally, the remaining part of the Papal States (province of Rome), having been taken possession of by an Italian army (September 20, 1870), was annexed to the Kingdom by plébiscite on October 2; and after the Great War, large portions of Austria.

The civil list has been settled (1919) at 11,250,000 lire; by a law of 1925 an allowance of 2,000,000 lire was settled on the Prince of Piedmont, Heir Apparent; Duke of Aosta, receives an allowance of 1,000,000 lire; Duke of Apulia an allowance of 400,000 lire; and Prince Tomaso, Duke of Genoa, an allowance of 1,000,000 lire.

The greater part of the private domains of the reigning family has been given up to the State.

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Italy is an expansion of the 'Statuto fondamentale del Regno,' granted on March 4, 1848, by King Charles Albert to his Sardinian subjects. According to this charter, the executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers; while the legislative authority rests conjointly in the King and Parliament, the latter consisting of two Chambers—an upper one, the Senate, and a lower one, called the 'Camera de' Deputati.' The Senate is composed of the princes of the royal house who are twenty-one years of age (with the right to vote when twenty-five years of age), and of an unlimited number of members, above forty years old, who are nominated by the King for life; a condition of the nomination being that the person should either fill a high office, or have acquired fame in science, literature, or any other pursuit tending to the benefit of the nation, or, finally, should pay taxes to the annual amount of 3,000 lire, or 120*l*. On January 1, 1928, there were 347 senators and 11 members of the royal family. By the law of May 17, 1928, the whole electoral system has been radically changed. Franchise is granted to men of 21 years of age, and also to men aged 18 years, if married or widowers with sons, who are paying a syndicate rate, or taxes to the amount of 100 lire, or are receiving a salary or pension from any public institution. Criminals and certain others are excluded. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 400 members elected for 5 years. To be eligible it is necessary to have completed 25 years of age and to fulfil the conditions required for active electorate. The whole country is a single constituency. The National Syndicate Confederations are entitled to propose a number of candidates twice as great as the number of deputies to be elected. Juridical persons and Associations of national character are also entitled to propose a certain number of candidates. Out of these lists of candidates the Great Fascist Council selects 400 names to be included in the roll which will be proposed to the electors. If the proposed roll is not approved by the electors, fresh election must be held at least one month later, but this time by the majority system and according to the principle of proportional representation, customary before the change in the electoral system.

Each Deputy has an annual allowance of 15,000 lire.

The duration of a Parliament is five years, and it must meet annually ; but the King has the power to dissolve the lower House at any time, being bound only to order new elections, and convoke a new meeting within four months. The ministers have the right to attend the debates of both the upper and the lower House ; but they have no vote unless they are members.

The executive power is exercised, under the King, by a Cabinet. The present Cabinet is as follows :—

Head of the Government, Prime Minister, Secretary of State and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Minister of the Interior, Minister of War, Minister of Marine, Minister of Aeronautics, Minister for the Colonies, and Minister of Corporations.—Signor Benito Mussolini.

Minister of Justice.—Signor Alfredo Rocco.

Minister of Finance.—Senator Antonio Mosconi.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Signor Giuseppe Belluzzo.

Minister of Public Works.—Signor Giovanni Giurati.

Minister of National Economy.—Signor Alessandro Martelli.

Minister of Communications.—Conte di Cortellazzo.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

After the census of 1921, several small communes were annexed to the older communes ; on August 20, 1928, there were 7,915 communes. At the head of the communal organisation is a Podestà in all the communes with the exception of Rome, which has a Governor, and the city of Naples, which has an extraordinary Royal Commissioner. The Podestà is nominated for five years by royal decree. In communes which are the capitals of provinces and have more than 20,000 inhabitants, he may be assisted by one or two deputies (Vice-Podestà). Side by side with the Podestà, the Prefect of the province may nominate, also for five years, a Municipal Council drawn from persons designated by the local syndical associations. In communes which are the capitals of provinces or with a population of more than 20,000, the nomination of such a Council is obligatory. The Council has only advisory functions ; its advice may be sought on the budget, the imposition of taxes, etc.

As a result of the Treaty of St. Germain there has been a considerable rearrangement of the Italo-Austrian frontier, and Italy has obtained large tracts of what were formerly Austrian lands.

In 1927, the number of Italian departments was increased by 16, the new territory acquired since the war being included. The following is a complete and revised list with area and population as at the census of 1921 :—

By the Treaty with Yugoslavia, of January 27, 1924, it was agreed to hand over Fiume to Italy.

An Italo-Hungarian Convention providing for the formation of a Free Zone at Fiume for the benefit of Hungary was signed in Rome on July 26, 1927.

Religion.

The Roman Catholic Church is, nominally, the ruling State religion of Italy; but the power of the Church and clergy is subordinated to the civil government, and there is freedom of worship to the adherents of all recognised religions. The census returns of 1911 (the latest available) were as follows:—

Profession	Total	Per cent.
Roman Catholics . . . . .	32,983,664 <sup>1</sup>	95.13
Evangelical Protestants . . . . .	123,253	0.36
Jews . . . . .	34,324	0.11

Not known . . . . .	653,404	1.88

Of the Protestants, 22,500 belonged to the Waldensian Church of Piedmont, about 10,000 to the other Evangelical Italian Churches, and 30,000 to foreign Protestant bodies.

Italy is divided into 13 apostolical provinces, comprising 272 episcopal jurisdictions, viz., 1 patriarchate (Venice), 49 archbishoprics, 6 cardinal bishoprics, and 216 bishoprics, 11 abbeys, and a number of prelates without dioceses. Every archbishop or bishop is appointed by the Pope, on the advice of a committee of Cardinals; but the royal exequatur is necessary for his installation. On December 31, 1923, the number of parishes was 22,139. According to the census, 1921, the secular clergy numbered 55,633: the regulars (monks, lay-brothers, nuns, &c.), 51,997; sacristans, &c., 7,093; persons employed at the Pontifical and Episcopal Courts, &c., 774.<sup>1</sup> There were in 1921, 474 Evangelical pastors and ministers of other religions.

The suppression of the religious corporations began for the old provinces in 1855, and was continued for the whole of the country by a law of July 7, 1866, and completed by the law of June 19, 1873, which extended the measure to the city and province of Rome. Of the monastic edifices some were occupied by the State, others assigned to communes or provinces. The corporations of Lombardy were privileged by the treaty of Zürich, and their lands and houses were left to the disposal of their individual members. The administration of the revenue from the proceeds of land destined for charity or instruction now belongs to the communes; that from monastic parish church property in Rome, to the parish churches; that from property of foreign religious orders in Rome to the Holy See; while the remainder is administered by two institutes which pay the pensions and other dues, and provide for beneficent work and for worship in Rome; and for worship in the rest of Italy.

Education.

According to laws passed in 1923, elementary or primary instruction is given in 3 grades: Preparatory (3 years), Lower (3 years), and Higher (2 years). In the Elementary grade, all classes above the fifth are classified as Special Classes of Professional Training.

The Secondary schools are divided into 2 grades. In the first grade are the Scuole complementari, the Ginnasio, the Preparatory Course of the Technical Institute and the Preparatory Course for Teachers.

In the second grade are comprised the Licei, the Higher Courses of the Technical Institute, the Higher Courses of the Teachers' Institute, the Scientific Liceo and the Liceo for women.

Higher instruction is given in the Royal Universities and Higher Institutes, and also in the Free Universities and Free Higher Institutes.

There were also nine higher institutes for commercial education (Turin, Genoa, Milan, Venice, Trieste, Rome, Bari, Catania, and Naples), with 5,062 students in 1925-26; six higher schools of agriculture (Milan, Bologna, Florence, Perugia, Pisa, and Portici) with 862 students in 1926-27; eight engineering colleges (Turin, Milan, Padua, Bologna, Pisa, Rome, Naples, and Palermo) with 6,329 students; the higher naval colleges at Genoa with 259 students; the school of social science in Florence, with 156 students; the school for Oriental languages in Naples, with 105 students; 8 veterinary colleges (Turin, Milan, Parma, Bologna, Perugia, Pisa, Naples and Messina), with 881 students; 6 women's training colleges (Turin, Milan, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Messina), with 1,230 students; the school of architecture in Rome, with 187 students; the school of industrial chemistry in Bologna, with 153 students; the free institute of economic and commercial sciences in Palermo, with 147 students; and the higher normal school in Pisa with 25 students.

Justice and Crime.

Italy has 1 Court of Cassation, in Rome, and is divided for the administration of justice into 16 appeal court districts (with 5 detached sections), subdivided into 125 tribunal districts, and these again into mandamenti, each with its own magistracy (Pretura), 1,083 in all. For civil business, besides the magistracy above mentioned, Conciliatori have jurisdiction in petty plaints.

By a law of November, 1926, a special tribunal was instituted with jurisdiction in offences (delitti) against the security of the State.

In 1927 (January 1) there were 53,611 male and 3,903 female prisoners; and 2,550 males and 978 females were placed in reformatories. At that date there were 176 central and arrondissement prisons, 66 penal establishments, 80 reformatories. There were, besides, 821 cantonal prisons.

Pauperism.

In Italy legal charity, in the sense of a right in the poor to be supported by the parish or commune, or of an obligation on the commune to relieve the poor, does not exist. Public charity in general is exercised through the permanent charitable foundations, called 'Istituzioni pubbliche di assistenza e di beneficenza' (Opere pie), regulated by the laws of July 17, 1890, July 18, 1904, and February 4, 1923. The general results of an inquiry in 1900 were:—Leaving out of account institutions intended for lending, or for the encouragement of saving (that is, monti di pietà, monti frumentari, casse di prestanze agrarie), there were 27,078 opere pie, with a gross capital of about 2,205,000,000 lire. Their net income amounted to 52,559,000 lire. Added to this net income were casual legacies, contributions from private benefactors, subsidies from communes (for hospitals), &c., all of which receipts are spent annually, and thus the sum at the disposal of the opere pie in 1900 (last available data) amounted to 120,765,000 lire. Between 1901 and 1917 the capital of all the benevolent institutions was increased by 385 million lire.

Defence.

I. FRONTIER.

The extent of the land frontier of Italy is as follows:—French frontier 303 miles; Swiss 450; Austrian 261; Yugoslav 152; frontier of San Marino 24; in all (exclusive of San Marino) 1,166 miles. The coast line of the peninsula measures 2,472 miles; of Sicily, 693; of Sardinia, 830; of Elba and the small islands, 973; the total length of coast is thus 4,968 miles.

II. ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is compulsory and universal. The total period is 19 years, beginning at the age of twenty. The young men of the year are divided into 3 categories; the first being posted to the permanent army; the second also to the permanent army but with 'unlimited leave'; and the third, that is those exempted from active service, to the territorial militia. The second category men form what is called the 'complementary force.'

The term of service in the ranks of the permanent army is 18 months for all arms. After passing through the ranks, the men are placed on 'unlimited' leave, i.e., they are transferred to the reserve, in which they remain until they have completed a total of 8 years' service. From the reserve the soldier passes to the mobile militia, the term of service in which is 4 years. After completing his time in the mobile militia he is transferred to the territorial militia, in which he remains 7 years; thus finishing his military service at the age of 39.

The second category recruits are regarded as belonging to the permanent army for the first 8 years of their service. During this period they receive from 2 to 6 months' training, which may be spread over several years. They then pass to the mobile militia, and afterwards to the territorial militia, the periods of service in each being the same as in the case of the first category soldiers. The men allotted to the third category, who are posted at once to the territorial militia, receive 30 days' training.

In Italy each regiment receives recruits from all parts of the country, and the troops change their stations by brigades every four years. On mobilisation regiments would be filled up by reservists from the districts in which they are quartered at the time. Reliefs are so arranged that at least half the reservists shall have previously served in the unit which they would join on mobilization.

The metropolitan army is organized into 4 armies, 11 Territorial Army Corps, the military command of Sicily and the military command of Sardinia. The army corps comprise 29 divisions. The metropolitan army includes—the General Staff and Commands of the larger units, the Royal Carabinieri, Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery, Engineers, Aerial Corps, the Military Districts, Invalid and Veteran Corps, Mechanical Transport, Railway Transport, Medical Corps, Supply Corps, Administrative Services, Veterinary Corps, the Military Schools, Institutes and various Technical establishments, the Army and Navy Supreme Tribunal and the Military Penal Establishments.

Besides the above-mentioned units, the Volunteer Militia for National Security was formed by decree of August 4, 1924. It is organised in 15 areas and 141 legions. Its members are required to fulfil the normal obligations of service in the active army. The establishment of the metropolitan army in 1927 was: officers 17,684, other ranks 283,200, inclusive of Carabinieri, and was organised as follows:—

	Army Corps	Divisions	Brigades	Legions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Groups	Batteries	Special Units

The Carabinieri are a force of military police. They are recruited by selection from the army, and remain in the force for 3 years. They then serve in the reserve of the Carabinieri for 4 years, after which they are transferred to the territorial militia for the remainder of their service, and are reckoned as a part of the army. In 1927 the Carabinieri numbered 60,000.

The garrison of Libya consists of 3 infantry battalions, 3 companies artillery, and armoured car units and services of the metropolitan army; 2 legions of volunteer militia. The native army consists of 17 battalions, 4 companies artillery, 3 pack batteries, 11 cavalry squadrons, 2 camel squadrons and 4 Saharian brigades.

The garrison of Erythrea consists of 5 native battalions, 3 mountain batteries, 2 artillery companies, 1 squadron and 1 engineer company with auxiliary troops.

In Italian Somaliland there is a native corps of 6 infantry battalions, 1 camel company and 1 artillery company, with Italian officers, and a body of military police.

III. AIR FORCE.

By Royal Decree of August 1925, the Italian Royal Air Force is constituted as a separate force under a Ministry of Aviation. Detachments of the Royal Air Force doing duty with the Army and Navy are for the time under the control of these services. The expenditure for 1928-29 was estimated at 700,000,000 lire. The number of aeroplanes in possession of the Air Force was 1,800. It is proposed to increase this number to 4,500, of which 1,500 will be with the active force, 1,500 in second line, and 1,500 in third line. The strength of the personnel was 25,000 all ranks. The Royal Air Force is organized in 3 reconnaissance regiments of 20 squadrons and 2 mixed regiments of seaplanes, with 21 squadrons, of which 7 are in the colonies. There is, in addition, an independent air force at the disposal of the ministry consisting of 8 regiments of 55 squadrons and 1 regiment of dirigibles.

IV. NAVY.

The Treaty of Washington makes Italy the equal of France in capital ship tonnage, and establishes a replacement tonnage at 175,000 tons (177,800 metric), but the existing ships have a displacement of only about 104,780 metric tons. The current building programme, which is really for replacements, includes 4 cruisers of 10,000 tons, and 6 of 5,300 tons; 20 destroyers, and 15 submarines. Italy may begin to build capital ships, if she should so desire, at any time from 1927.

After the War the list of light cruisers was expanded by the accession of five enemy vessels. Two 10,000 ton cruisers were completed in 1928, and four more are building on an order. New destroyers and submarines are steadily being placed in commission to replace worn-out tonnage.

The naval expenditure for 1928-29 is estimated at 1,151,782,030 lire, as compared with 1,218,970,630 lire in 1927-28.

The naval administration is under the Minister of Marine, with an assistant secretary. The Ministry of Marine embraces various directorates, covering personnel, military and scientific services, naval and mechanical establishments, accountant officers (known as Commissariato) and civil personnel. Advisory councils of the Ministry are the Committee of Admirals, the Superior Marine Council, and the Committee of Ship Design. The Chief of the Staff has charge of all that concerns preparation for war and employment of naval units. The merchant marine is under the Minister of Communications. For purposes of local naval administration the coastline of the peninsula is subdivided into zones (Dipartimenti Marittimi) under command of admirals (Spezia, Naples, and Taranto). The most important ports from a strategical standpoint (Maddalena, Castellamare di Stabia, Messina, Venice) are naval commands under flag officers. Other ports (Genoa, Leghorn, Brindisi, Pola and Zara) are under senior naval officers.

The five cruisers last named are ex-enemy vessels. There are 4 modern flotilla leaders, of over 2,200 tons, and a speed from 34 to 37 knots. Eight of the cruisers, besides other smaller vessels, are equipped as mine-layers and carry large supplies.

The large flotillas of destroyers are composed of 30 to 38 knot vessels, very effective in character, and there are flotillas of quite modern torpedo-boats. Considerable additions are being made. The flotilla leaders and destroyers include 3 ex-German and 5 ex-Austrian ships.

The personnel consists of over 1,200 officers and 44,000 men, including 15,000 volunteers.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

The systems of cultivation in Italy may be reduced to three:—1. The system of peasant proprietorship (coltivazione per economia o a mano propria); 2. That of partnership (colonia parziaria); 3. That of rent (affitto). Peasant proprietorship is most common in Piedmont and Liguria, but is found in many other parts of Italy. The system of partnership or colonia parziaria, more especially in the form of mezzadria, consists in a form of partnership between the proprietor and the cultivator. This system is general in Tuscany, the Marches, and Umbria. Large farms (la grande coltura) exist in the neighbourhood of Vercelli, Pavia, Milan, Cremona, Chioggia, Ferrara, Grosseto, Rome, Caserta, and in Apulia, the Basilicata, Calabria, and at Girgenti and Trapani in Sicily. In Italy generally the land is much subdivided.

The area of Italy comprises 76,633,803 acres. Of this area 33,276,000 acres (43 per cent.) are devoted to seed lands; 16,996,250 acres (21.9 per cent.) to meadows and permanent pastures; 3,731,750 acres (4.8 per cent.) to horticulture; 13,958,000 acres (18 per cent.) to forests; 3,127,500 acres (4 per cent.) are productive non-cultivated lands, and 6,406,500 acres (8.3 per cent.) unproductive land. The total agrarian land is therefore 73.7 per cent. of the whole.

Number of proprietors in Italy, 1921:—Proprietors of lands, 1,113,106; of buildings, 725,184; of lands and buildings, 2,081,409; total, 3,919,699. Proprietors of lands and buildings (3,919,699) per 100 of population, 10; proprietors of lands (3,194,515) per square mile, 27.

In 1926, Italy had 1,000,000 horses, 952,000 asses, 503,000 mules, 7,100,000 cattle, 2,750,000 pigs, 11,000,000 sheep, and 3,000,000 goats.

II. FORESTRY.

The total forest area was 5,585,400 hectares (13,801,523 acres) in 1926. The forest area belonging to the State on November 30, 1927, was 229,427 hectares (565,906 acres).

III. MINES AND MINERALS.

The Italian mining industry is most developed in Sicily (Caltanissetta), in Tuscany (Arezzo, Florence, and Grosseto), in Sardinia (Cagliari, Sassari, and Iglesias), in Lombardy (particularly near Bergamo and Brescia), and in Piedmont.

Production in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lbs., or 1.016 metric tons = 1,000 English tons) of metallic ores and other minerals in 1927:—

The quarries of Italy employed in 1927, 67,284 persons, the output of building and decorative stone being valued at 613,808,622 lire.

IV. MANUFACTURES.

The Italian industrial census of October 15, 1927, showed that there were 731,447 industrial establishments in the country, having 3,939,960 employees.

The cotton industry is the largest and most important. Silk culture, while flourishing most extensively in Lombardy, Piedmont and Venetia, is carried on all over Italy. Production of cocoons in thousand quintals:— 1923, 426; 1924, 494; 1925, 406; 1926, 413; 1927, 507. The Italian production of rayon rose from 10,000,000 pounds in 1923 to 18,500,000 in 1924, and 30,000,000 in 1925.

The manufacture of sugar is growing in importance. Sugar output (in metric tons) in 1904–5, 74,831; 1913–14, 269,946; 1924–25, 382,207; 1925–26, 142,377; 1926–27, 280,907. The manufacture of cheese is also an important industry. The production in 1925 was estimated at 2,500,000 quintals.

Commerce.

Navigation and Shipping

On December 31, 1927, the mercantile marine consisted of 3,000 sailing vessels, of 186,171 gross tons (of which 294 of 25,059 gross tons were provided also with motors); 1,317 steamships of 2,937,783 gross tons; and 107 motor vessels of 315,512 gross tons.

In 1927 the vessels entered and cleared at Italian ports were as follows:—

Railway history in Italy began in 1839, with a short line between Naples and Portici (5 miles). Length of railways (December 31, 1927), 13,365 miles, of which 10,303 miles were State railways. Receipts from State railways in 1926-27, 4,914,075,000 lire; expenditure, 4,518,014,000 lire.

The Government proposes to electrify nearly 4,000 miles of State railways.

The total length of first-class national roads in Italy is estimated to be 12,420 miles, that of the provincial roads 24,840 miles, and the secondary and communal roads 55,890 miles. In addition to these there are 2,173 miles of ex-military roads. There are at present in course of construction 4,036 miles of new roads, of which 3,105 are situated in Southern Italy.

II. AVIATION.

In 1927 there were five commercial air liners in operation; the number of passengers carried was 12,182; freight, 146.7 metric tons; postal matter, 6.8 metric tons; miles flown, 807,690. The following were the principal connections effected: Rome-Venice-Vienna, Genoa-Rome-Naples-Palermo, Turin-Venice-Trieste, Brindisi-Athens-Constantinople, Tirana-Scutari-Gorizia-Valona (on the Albanian system).

III. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

In the year 1927 (June 30) there were 10,751 post offices. In the postal correspondence (1926-27), 2,005,417,000 pieces were dealt with at ordinary rates, and 103,350,000 insured and registered pieces.

On June 30, 1927, the telegraph lines had a length of 40,769 miles, and the wires 316,182 miles. There were 9,825 telegraph offices, of which 7,822 were State offices and 2,003 railway offices. In 1926-27, 24,916,662 private telegrams were sent inland; and 2,584,121 private international telegrams.

The telephone service in 1926-27 (June 30) had 180,287 subscribers. There were 757 urban systems, and also 2,720 inter-urban systems. Total number of conversations in the year, 22,488,530 (excluding international conversations).

FOREIGN DEPENDENCIES.

Colony of Eritrea.

The dominion of Italy on the coast of the Red Sea extends from Cape Kasar (18° 2' N.) to Cape Dumeirah on the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb (12° 30' N.). The length of coast is about 670 miles. The total area is 45,754 square miles, and the whole population is estimated at 393,000, exclusive of 4,681 Europeans, of whom 4,283 are Italian (exclusive of the military forces) and 398 of other nationalities. Massawah has (1923) 12,275 inhabitants, of whom 127 are European, mainly Italian. The seat of the Government is Asmara, a modern town 7,765 feet above the sea-level, with 14,711 inhabitants (2,500 European). The religions of the native population are the Christian (Coptic rite) and the Mohammedan. There are some Roman Catholics and a few Pagans. Tigry and Tigré, two languages originating from the ancient Ghehz, and other languages are spoken in the plateau, and Arabic in the lowlands.

The Italian possessions on the Red Sea are constituted as the Colony of Eritrea, with the management of its own finances and an autonomous administration in 7 commissariats, as follows:—

Commissariat	Area in square miles	Total Native Population (Census 1921)	Capital
Hamasein . . . . .	1,165	60,284	Asmara
Massawah . . . . .	5,109	47,910	Massawah
Assab . . . . .	5,523	3,926	Assab
Acchelé Guzai . . . . .	3,505	62,169	Adi Caieh
Serae . . . . .	3,317	69,311	Adi Ugri
Cheren . . . . .	8,836	73,737	Cheren
Barca, Gasc and Setit . . . . .	18,299	85,506	Agordat
	45,754	402,793

Military force (1927): 200 commissioned and non-commissioned officers and about 5,000 native troops, exclusive of the police force of the colony.

In the Italian dependencies the central government is represented by a civil governor, who is nominated by the King and is under the direction of the Minister for the Colonies.

Governor.—Corrado Zoli (1928).

For the financial year 1928-29 the revenue and expenditure of the Colony of Eritrea are estimated at: Colonial revenue, 42,482,300 lire; expenditure, civil administration, 25,497,050 lire; military, 16,985,250 lire.

For climatic and agricultural purposes the country must be divided into two zones, the lowlands along the sea coasts and the plains, where the climate is tropical and the rains fall in winter; and the uplands, where the climate is cool, and sometimes cold, and the rains fall in summer. Both in the lowlands and the uplands the annual rain is sufficient for the successful raising of the crops. Irrigation works are being carried on in the lower zone in order to facilitate intensive production by Italian farmers. Pasture is abundant, and the pastoral population is partly nomadic. Pearl-fishing is carried on at Massawah and the Dahlak archipelago to the value of 712,170 lire for pearls and 2,668,460 lire for mother-of-pearl, and 2,042,783 lire for trocus (1927). A very promising trade is being carried out in palm nuts. There are gold mines worked successfully in several localities of Hamasian.

At Massawah the imports by sea, the exports, and the tonnage entered were as follows:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports . Lire	106,204,811	146,129,077	203,453,475	171,780,645	201,360,446
Exports . "	40,304,769	87,901,857	119,462,517	97,852,451	80,198,371
Tonnage entd. Tons	458,941	493,695	520,846	574,663	628,104

Through the land frontier the imports in 1927 amounted to 58,413,898 lire, and the exports to 36,635,267 lire.

There are 75 miles of railway from Massawah to Asmara, and 101 miles from Asmara to Mai Adarte; and now the line from Cheren has nearly reached Agordat (62 miles). There are monthly sailings between Massawah and Genoa and Massawah and Trieste, and weekly sailings for Egypt, and frequent sailings for the Far East. There are 14 post-offices. There is a telegraph line of 416 miles in length with 11 public offices. There are 1,023 miles of telephone lines with 8 public offices. Wireless telegraph stations have been opened at Massawah, Assab, and Asmara. They communicate with the radiotelegraphic system of Italian Somaliland and also with Italy (St. Paolo of Rome). There is thus thorough wireless communication between Italy and Italian Somaliland, via Massawah.

The legal currency consists of Italian coins and Maria Theresa dollars. The Italian mint in 1918 issued a new silver coin, the Tallero d'Italia, the weight of which is 28.0668 grammes.

Italian Somaliland.

The Colony of Italian Somaliland has an area of about 190,000 sq. miles and a population of about 1,200,000 (1,000 Italians). It extends along the east coast of Africa from British Somaliland to Dik's Head in Kenya Colony. The inland boundaries are determined under the Treaty of May 6, 1908, between Italy and Abyssinia, by a line (only partially demarcated) from the confluence of the Ganale with the Dawa, thence to Bender Ziada (45th parallel) on the Gulf of Aden following an irregular line which runs at a mean distance of 180 miles from the coast through Jet, Ato, El Gorum, Bur Lemis, Bur Gumburn, Bur Burdubo, and Bur Galambaladi to Bender Ziada. As a result of the Treaty of 1915 and the Colonial rearrangements consequent on the war, Britain has ceded Italy territories on the right bank of the Juba with the port of Kismayu (Chisimaio). This district is incorporated in Somalia and forms one of its provinces. It has an area of 35,000 sq. miles and an estimated population of 100,000. [See map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1925.]

Italian Somaliland comprises (I.) The territories of Northern Somalia, viz.—(1) The territory of the Mijertins, from Bender Ziade, the most northerly point belonging to Italy on the Gulf of Aden, to Cape Gabà on the Indian Ocean (8° 13' N. lat.); (2) the territory of the Nogal, from Cape Gabà to Cape Garad (6° 47' N. lat.), formerly occupied by the Mad Mullah; (3) the territory of Obbia, from Cape Garad to the northern boundary of the colony of Benadir, determined by a line which ends at the sea near the wells of El Gabobe (about 4° 30' N. lat.). (II.) Southern Somalia, formerly called 'Benadir,' which extends from 4° 30' N. lat. to Ras Chiamboni (Dik's Head). Mogadiscio (population 25,000), capital of the Colony, with its territory, has been placed under the direct dependence of the Governor.

The principal occupations of the people are cattle-rearing and agriculture. In Southern Somaliland the whole country near the banks of the Webi Shebele and the Juba is inhabited and cultivated by the natives, and in the district of Merca-Genale and in that of Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi there are Italian plantations with a cultivated area of some 70,000 acres. In Northern Somaliland agriculture is almost unknown; the Mijertins rear camels and sheep. Exports (1927) were 25,300,950 lire; imports, 156,246,673 lire. Imports are cottons, sugar, rice, tea, coffee, iron, machinery, timber; exports, sesame oil, gum, hides, butter, cotton and cotton-seed oil, resin, kapok and ivory. In 1928 exports to U.K. amounted to 26,855l. and imports from U.K. 25,418l. Length of roads 1,500 miles; steamship service on the Juba River from Kismayu to Bardera. In 1927, 363 ships and 361 sailing vessels entered and cleared the ports of the colony. Military force (1927), 200 (Italian) officers and 10,000 (coloured) men. A detachment of the Flying Corps has recently been added.

Governor.—De Guido Corni (1928).

The budget of Italian Somaliland for the year 1928-29 is as follows: Revenue proper of the colony, 21,240,000 lire; State contribution, 55,015,250 lire; total, 76,255,250 lire. Civil expenditure, 42,077,150 lire; military, 30,579,100 lire; extraordinary expenditure, 3,599,000 lire; total, 76,255,250 lire.

Twenty-nine wireless telegraph stations are working in the Colony. The wireless station at Afgoi communicates directly with Italy.

There are in the Colony 6 principal post offices (Mogadiscio, Merca, Brava, Khismayu, Baidoa, and Mahaddei), and 24 local post offices. A railway runs from Mogadiscio to Afgoi Adalei Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi (70·23 miles).

The currency is the Italian lira (silver coins and currency notes issued by the Banca d'Italia).

Tripolitania and Cyrenaica.

(LIBIA ITALIANA.)

Governor (with Headquarters in Tripolitania).—Marshall Pietro Badoglio. (Appointed December, 1928).

Vice-Governor (and Lieutenant-Governor of Cyrenaica).—Col. Domenico Siciliani. (Appointed December, 1928).

Italian Libya lies along the north coast of Africa between Tunis on the west and Egypt on the east, in longitude from about 9° to 25° east. The extreme northerly point of Libya is at about the parallel of latitude 33° north. The territory in effective occupation was greatly extended southwards early in 1928; and by the occupation and linking up of the oases of Gialo, Augila, Marada, Zella and Socna, and the linking of Gialo to Giarabub, the temporary southern frontier was pushed to, or south of the 29th parallel. According to an arrangement with France (September 12, 1919) as a result of the Treaty of 1915, the western frontier extends in a curve from west of Ghadames to south of Tummo including Ghat. On the Egyptian frontier Italy has obtained Jaraboob from Britain.

Tripoli fell under Turkish domination in the sixteenth century, and though, in 1714, the Arab population secured some measure of independence, the country was in 1835 proclaimed a Turkish vilayet. In September, 1911, a quarrel broke out between Turkey and Italy, and the latter occupied Tripoli and established an army there. On November 5, 1911, a decree was issued annexing Tripoli, and on February 23, 1912, the Italian Chamber passed the Bill which ratified the decree of annexation. The war, nevertheless, continued until October 18, 1912, when the Treaty of Ouchy was signed, by which the sovereignty of Italy in Tripoli was established. This has been recognised by the Great Powers.

For administrative and military purposes the country is divided into two districts, Tripolitania and Cyrenaica, with their respective capitals at Tripoli and Benghazi.

TRIPOLITANIA.

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is estimated at about 900,000 square kilometres. According to a census taken on December 1, 1921, there were about 550,000 natives. This census gave the European population of Tripolitania as 20,716 (18,093 Italians). It is estimated that of the total population, 203,000 are Arabs, 135,000 Berbers, 172,000 Arab-Berbers, and about 40,000 Jews. Of the Mussulman population the negroes of various races form about 35 per cent. Arabic is more generally spoken than written, and both Italian and Arabic are the official languages. The principal towns of Tripolitania are on the coast: Tripoli with about 60,000 inhabitants, Misurata with 14,000, and Homs with 5,000; other important centres are at Azizia, Zuara, and Zavia on the west coast, Sirte on the east coast, and Garián, Jefren, Giado, and Nalut on the highland. Inland are the caravan halting places, Ghadames, Sinaen, Mizda, Murzák, and Ghat.

Justice.—In both districts justice, in so far as personal status or family or succession matters are concerned, is administered by Mahommedan or rabbinic tribunals for native Mahommedans or Jews according to their own religious law, and by regional tribunals according to Italian law in civil and commercial matters, whether the parties concerned be Italians, strangers or natives, except for special concessions made by the Colonial Judiciary to native mentality. Criminal cases are tried by the regional tribunals with the assistance of two assessors, chosen from the citizens of the best class, who with the President (a professional magistrate) form the Judicial College. One of the assessors must be a Mussulman or a Jew, according to the religion of the accused, but the judges of the metropolitan citizens are all Italians. More serious penal cases are tried by the Court of Assize, consisting of the President of the Court of Appeal with four assessors, two of whom must be Mahommedans or Jews, according to the religion of the accused. Appeals in both the districts, whether in civil or in criminal cases, are heard by the Court of Appeal for Libia, which was instituted in December, 1912, with its seat at Tripoli. There is a final appeal to the Supreme Court of Cassation at Rome. Disputes as to titles to land (which have to be inscribed in the Land Registry) are tried in the first instance by the Land Registry Office, from which there is an appeal to the Regional Tribunal composed of a judge and four assessors, and finally to the Court of Appeal of Libia.

Finance.—For the financial year 1928–29 the revenue and expenditure were estimated at: Revenue proper of the colony, 73,300,000 lire; State contribution, 150,419,250 lire; total, 223,719,250 lire; civil expenditure, 56,163,000 lire; military expenditure, 167,556,250 lire.

Defence.—The military force in Tripolitania consists of a corps of Colonial troops numbering 560 officers, 620 non-commissioned officers, and 18,500 men (13,500 natives and 5,000 Italians). There is an aviation station near Tripoli, also a naval command, with its station at Tripoli and a higher naval officer at its head. To this are attached some light vessels and tugs, stationed in the harbour.

Production and Industry.—Tripolitania has three zones from the coast inland—the Mediterranean, the sub-desert and the desert. The first, which covers an area of about 17,231 square miles, is the only one properly suited for agriculture, and may be further subdivided into (1) the oases along the coast, the richest in N. Africa, in which thrive the date-palm, the olive, the orange, and all Mediterranean plants; (2) the steppe district, suitable for cereals (barley and wheat) and pasture. This district is the one where Italian colonisation has chiefly spread; it has olive, almond and mulberry trees and ricinus plants; (3) the dunes, which are being gradually afforested with acacia, robinia, poplar and pine; (4) the Jebel (the mountain district, Tarhuna, Garian, Fessato), in which thrive the olive, the fig, the vine and other fruit trees, and which on the East slopes down to the sea with the fertile hills of Msellata. The sub-desert zone produces the alpha plant, from which cellulose is made. The desert zone contains some fertile oases, such as those of Ghadamas, Ghat and Fezzan, which produce olives, alpha, henna, palms, oranges, grapes and almonds.

Sponge-fishing is of great importance. The two fishing seasons in Libya are from November to February, and from March to October, the latter being the more important. During the season of 1927, the sponges collected totalled 40,250 kilos, valued at 3,513,300 lire. In 1928, there were 6 fisheries working, the number of tunnies caught was 3,285 weighing 150,000 kilos compared with 13 fisheries, 8,352 tunnies weighing 734,000 kilos in 1927. Among the other industries the most flourishing is that of tobacco and tobacco manufactures, which in the year 1927-28 will provide the Colonial Budget with a net profit of about 22,540,000 lire. The exports into Cyrenaica and Italy, of the products of the tobacco manufacture, reached in 1927 the sum of 1,830,627 lire. The Mellaha salt-pits yielded 18,000 tons of the best salt in 1926, nearly the whole of it being exported. Among the other products are matting, carpets, leather articles, fabrics embroidered with gold and silver, and other articles of value of a local character.

Commerce.—There is a considerable caravan trade between Tripoli and Central Sudan. An important article of trade is ostrich feathers, which are brought overland from Central Africa, and exported to Paris and London from Tripoli to the value of 40,000*l.* to 50,000*l.* annually.

The trade of Tripolitania was: Imports, 1926, 211,217,533 lire; 1927, 246,056,377 lire; exports, 1926, 45,246,772 lire; 1927, 24,259,201 lire. In 1928 the exports to the United Kingdom were 21,852*l.* and the imports 60,922*l.*

Communications.—The principal means of communication inland are the caravans which follow long-frequented routes. Tripoli (town) is connected by telegraph cable with Malta, and by land lines with Bengardane (Tunis). In 1912 an Italian cable was laid between Syracuse and Tripoli.

Total length of railways, 138 miles. The lines in Tripolitania are: a line 73 miles long, along the coast, from Tripoli to Zuara; one 13 miles long, from Tripoli to Tagiura; and one 52 miles long, from Tripoli to Azizia, Henscir, and El Abiat. There are 1,007 miles of carriage road.

There are fortnightly steamship sailings from Tripoli to Naples. From Tripoli to Syracuse and vice versa there are two steamship sailings every week. Malta is always touched. From Tripoli along the coast there are weekly steamship sailings.

In Tripolitania, during the year ending June 30, 1927, 354,000 registered letters were received and 302,202 despatched; 27,628 insured letters received and 25,259 despatched; 68,046 parcels received and 35,010 despatched. Deposits in savings bank, 8,875,153 lire; number of telegrams despatched, 193,447; number received, 171,115.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia, the Banco di Sicilia, the Banco di Napoli, the Banco di Roma, the Cassa di Risparmio, the Cassa di Piccolo Prestito and other banks carry on financial operations. The official currency is the Italian, but English pounds and francs are also used in commercial transactions.

There is a British Consul at Tripoli and a Vice-Consul at Homs.

CYRENAICA.

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is estimated at about 75,340 square miles, and with the hinterland (zone of Cufra) 285,640 square miles. According to a census taken on December 1, 1921, there were about 225,000 natives. This census gave the European population of Cyrenaica as 9,714 (9,402 Italians). The principal town is Benghazi with 30,056 inhabitants in April, 1927, exclusive of garrison. (Italians and other Europeans, 7,194, native Mohammedans 19,865, Jews 2,997).

The oasis of Jarabub, on the eastern border of Cyrenaica, was ceded by Egypt to Italy, and Italian troops occupied it on February 7, 1926. On the other hand, the frontier in the neighbourhood of Sollum on the sea was rectified in favour of Egypt.

Justice.—For details as to the Administration of Justice, see above under Tripolitania.

Finance.—For the financial year 1928-29 the revenue and expenditure of Cyrenaica were estimated at: Revenue proper of the colony, 46,400,000 lire; State contribution, 159,096,250 lire; total, 205,496,250 lire; civil expenditure, 59,237,000 lire; military expenditure, 146,259,250 lire.

Defence.—The military force in Cyrenaica consists (1927) of 600 officers and 18,000 men (11,000 natives and 7,000 Italians).

Production and Industry.—Pasturage is abundant and cattle could be bred on a vast scale. An impulse will be given to agriculture by the establishment of large numbers of Colonists from North Italy. This process of established large nuclei at various points has already begun, notably at Gnarscia', Soluk, Tocra, el-Abiar and Barce. Big concessions of territory have also been granted to single individuals upon a kind of hire-purchase basis near Sidi Maius, es Sfeia and Barce. Bananas are grown at Derna, and experimental planting of wine grapes at Gnarscia, under Government supervision, has given promising results. Barley is the chief food of the people. In 1926 the production of barley amounted to 466,000 quintals, grain 44,000 quintals, and dates 2,300 quintals. In 1927, 23 vessels were engaged in sponge fishing, and the yield (52,604 quintals) was valued at 5,000,000 lire. There is one tunny fishery near Benghazi ; catch in 1927 was 3,276 tons. There are phosphate deposits near er-Regima, and the development of the valuable salt pans of Benghazi is being advanced slowly.

Commerce.—The trade of Cyrenaica was (1927) : Imports, 178,238,195 lire ; exports, 14,908,800 lire. The principal imports are cotton goods and sugar ; exports (1927), sponges (6,329,565 lire) and barley (2,889,460 lire) ; wool and goats' hair are also exported, as well as tunney fish and cattle.

Communications.—Good carriage roads join the coastal centres, and run from there inland, linking up with the old caravan routes which lead through the oases to Darfur, Wadai, and Borker. A steamer calls every week at Benghazi from Syracuse. In 1912 an Italian cable was laid between Syracuse and Benghazi. A railway line 67 miles long runs from Benghazi to el-Abiar and on to Barce, and one 35 miles long from Benghazi to Solach. In 1926, 1,021 vessels of 565,000 tons entered, and 1,010 vessels of 555,734 tons cleared the ports.

In Cyrenaica the telegraph lines have a length of about 164 miles (1926). In 1926 there were 7 telegraph stations. There is a cable from Benghazi to Syracuse. There were in 1926, 17 wireless stations, 5 being open to international service, while 12 were military stations. In 1926, 30,000 messages were sent. There were in 1926, 12 telephone exchanges. During the year ending June 30, 1927, 141,608 registered letters were received and 115,749 letters despatched ; 10,854 insured letters received and 8,993 despatched ; 68,121 parcels received and 7,241 despatched. Number of telegrams despatched, 374,871 ; number received, 317,555. Deposits in savings bank, 7,267,737 lire.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia and the Banco di Roma carry on financial operations. In 1925 the Cassa di Risparmio della Cyrenaica opened at Benghazi and Derna, and now has branches at Barce, Cirene, Derna and Tobruk.

There is a British Consul at Benghazi.

ÆGEAN ISLANDS.

Italy occupied the Aegean Islands in 1912, during the Tripoli War. By the Treaty of Lausanne, which came into force on August 6, 1924, Turkey ceded them, with the island of Castellorosso, to Italy in full sovereignty. The military regime in the islands lasted from the occupation, May 4, 1912, to August 7, 1920. The civil regime was then established, Governors being appointed. The Governor, who is subject to the Foreign Office in Rome, is head of the administration ; his authority is represented in the smaller islands by the Regent of the Government of Cos and five delegates in the islands of Lero, Calymno, Symi, Scarpanto and Castellorosso. The municipalities of the cities of Rhodes and Cos debate autonomously the matters within their province. The municipal councils of these two cities are appointed by the Governor. The other towns and villages are administered by sindaci and demogerondi elected by the people according to ancient customs.

Governor.—Mario Lago.

Area and Population.—The following are the Italian islands in the Aegean with their areas and population in 1927 :—

Island	Area in sq. miles	Population 1927	Island	Area in sq. miles	Population 1927
Rhodes . . .	540	45,000	Piscopei . . .	24	1,158
Cos . . .	115	16,169	Calchos . . .	10	1,800
Patmos . . .	12	2,500	Symi . . .	22	7,000
Lipso . . .	6	500	Stampalia . . .	36	1,865
Calimno . . .	37	20,000	Scarpanto . . .	109	11,000
Lero . . .	24	4,000	Caso . . .	23	1,760
Nisyros . . .	15	3,158	Castelrosso . . .	3	2,742

The chief towns are : Rhodes (capital) with more than 20,000 inhabitants ; Calimno, 18,000 ; Cos, 10,000 ; Symi, 7,000.

Justice.—The special judiciary of the Aegean Islands includes (1) the Department of Judicial Services, under which are all the judicial offices of the possession ; (2) the Tribunal of Second Instance (appeal) ; (3) the Assize Court ; (4) a Civil and Penal Tribunal of First Instance at Rhodes, with jurisdiction over the islands of Calchos, Symi, Piscopei, Scarpanto, Caso and Castelrosso ; (5) a Civil and Penal Tribunal of First Instance at Cos, with jurisdiction over all the other islands. The magistrates are metropolitans. Special Ecclesiastical and Mixed Tribunals which exert authority in matters of personal status also operate for the Orthodox, Moslems, and Jews, and Mixed Tribunals of Appeal. These special tribunals apply the provisions of Byzantine, Koranic and Talmudic law.

Education.—There are Government schools for boys and girls, both elementary and secondary, and practical agricultural school, commercial school of first and second degree, and a normal school ; and private schools, both elementary and secondary, for the various communities.

Defence.—The Aegean Islands are garrisoned by an infantry regiment of two battalions, one stationed at Rhodes and the other at Cos. These battalions send detachments to the smaller islands. The Royal Navy has a station at Rhodes, to which are attached the units scattered over the Aegean and the naval base of Porto Lago. The police and passport service is in the hands of the Carabinieri (one company). The Customs services are carried out by the Finance Guard (one company).

Agriculture, Commerce and Navigation.—The agriculture of the islands of Rhodes and Cos is highly developed. These islands are famous for the cultivation of the very famous table grapes, other white and black grapes. Olives, tobacco and vegetables are also cultivated. The market to which the greater part of the exports is directed is Egypt, which is connected with Rhodes by very speedy steamship lines. The transit and inter-island commerce gives rise to a brisk harbour movement of sailing vessels and small steamers, which serve the neighbouring islands. This traffic is heightened by the peculiar geographical situation of Rhodes. The countries which import manufactures and food-stuffs are principally Italy, Egypt and Turkey.

Concession of Tientsin.—The Italian concession of Tientsin, under the agreement with China of June 7, 1902, lies on the left bank of the Hai-Ho and has an area of about half a square kilometre with a population of 5,148 (Chinese, 4,675 ; Italians, 60 ; other Europeans, 418) in 1925. Revenue 1924, 89,908 dollars and 129,783 taels ; expenditure, 87,194 dollars and 44,395 taels

JAPAN.

(NIPPON.)

Reigning Sovereign.

THE Japanese claim that their empire was founded by the first Emperor Jimmu Tennō, 660 B.C., and that the dynasty founded by him still reigns. It was revived in the year 1868 (the first year of the Meiji), when the now ruling (de jure) sovereign overthrew, after a short war, the power of the Shōgun (the de facto sovereign), who had held the ruling power in successive families, since the twelfth century; and in 1871 the feudal system (Hōken Seiji) was entirely suppressed. The Emperor bears title of Tennō; but the appellation by which he is called in relation to external affairs is 'Kōtei,' a word of Chinese origin. Only foreigners make use of the poetical title 'Mikado.'

Emperor of Japan.—Hirohito, born at Tōkyō, April 29, 1901; succeeded his father, Yoshihito, December 25, 1926; married, January 26, 1924, to Princess Nagako, born March 6, 1903, daughter of H. I. H. Prince Kuninomiya (died January 27, 1929). Offspring:—Imperial Princess.—I., Princess Shigeko (Jernnomiya), born December 6, 1925. II., Princess Sachiko (Hisanomiya), born September 10, 1927; died March 8, 1928.

Empress Dowager.—Princess Sadako, born June 25, 1884; daughter of Prince Kujō; married, May 10, 1900, to late Emperor.

Brothers of the Emperor.—I., Prince Yasuhito (Chichibunomiya), born June 25, 1902; married, September 28, 1928, to Setsu-Ko Matsudaira. II., Prince Nobuhito (Takamatsunomiya), born January 3, 1905. III., Prince Takahito (Suminomiya), born December 2, 1915.

By the Imperial House Law of February 11, 1889, the succession to the throne has been definitely fixed upon the male descendants. In case of failure of direct descendants, the throne devolves upon the nearest Prince and his descendants. The civil list is fixed at 4,500,000 yen.

Constitution and Government.

By the Constitution of February 11, 1889, the Emperor combines in himself the rights of sovereignty, and exercises the whole of the executive powers with the advice and assistance of the Cabinet Ministers, who are responsible to him, and are appointed by himself. There is also a Privy Council, who are consulted by the Emperor on important matters of State. The Emperor can declare war, make peace, and conclude treaties, and he exercises the legislative power with the consent of the Imperial Diet. It is his prerogative to give sanction to laws, to convoke the Imperial Diet, to open, close, and prorogue it, and to dissolve the House of Representatives. The Imperial Diet consists of two Houses, a House of Peers and a House of Representatives. Every law requires the consent of the Imperial Diet. Both Houses may respectively initiate projects of law, can make representations to the Government as to laws or upon any other subject, and may present addresses to the Emperor.

The House of Peers (407 members) is composed of (1) male members of the Imperial family of full age (17 in number); (2) princes and marquises of the age of 30 and upwards (15 princes and 30 marquises); (3) counts, viscounts, and barons of the age of 30 and upwards, who have been elected by the members of their respective orders, to the total number of 18 counts, 66 viscounts and 66 barons; (4) persons above the age of 30 years, who have been nominated members by the Emperor for meritorious services to the State or for erudition, not to exceed 125 in number, the term of membership being, in principle, for life; (5) 4 members of the Imperial Academy of Sciences above the age of 30 years, who have been elected by the members of that body; (6) 1 or 2 persons above the age of 30 years, who have been elected in Hokkaido and each Fu and Ken from among and by respectively 100 or 200 male inhabitants thereof, paying therein the highest amount of direct national taxes on land, trade or industry, to the total number of 66. The term of membership under (3), (5) and (6) is seven years.

Until May 1925 the suffrage for the House of Representatives was restricted by qualification arising from payment of taxes. But in May 1925 general manhood suffrage was enacted to come into force at the first general election. According to the new law, the members of the House shall number 466 (at present, 464), a fixed number being returned from each electoral district for a term of 4 years.

The proportion of the total number of members to the population of Japan proper is 1 to 128, 200. In principle, all the male Japanese subjects above the age of 25 years are electors and those above the age of 30 years eligible. Heads of the families of peers and persons in the army and navy can neither elect nor be elected; holders of certain specified offices in the Government are ineligible; and no Government officials except the seimukan (political) class are, while in office, permitted to be members of the House. Such persons as have not lived continuously for not less than a year within the same city, town or village, shall not be registered as electors. Voting is by secret single ballot.

The President and Vice-President of the House of Peers are nominated by the Emperor from among the members, and President and Vice-President of the House of Representatives are nominated by the Emperor from among three candidates, elected by the House. The Presidents of both Houses receive an annual salary of 7,500 yen; Vice-Presidents, 4,500 yen; elected and nominated members of the House of Peers and members of the House of Representatives, 3,000 yen, besides travelling expenses. The Imperial Diet, which must meet annually, has control over the finances.

After the elections held on February 20, 1928, the following parties were returned to the 54th Diet:—Seiyūkai (Conservative Ministerialists), 221; Minseitō (Liberal Opposition), 214; Independents, 16; Labour 8; Jitsugyō Dōshikai (Business Men's Party), 4; Kakushin (the former Shinsei Club), 3; total 466.

The Cabinet (appointed in April 1927 and re-constituted in 1928) consists of the following members:—

Prime Minister.—Baron Giichi Tanaka.

Home Affairs.—Keisuke Mochizuki.

Foreign Affairs.—Baron Giichi Tanaka (Acting).

Finance.—Chuzo Mitsuichi.

War.—General Yoshinori Shirakawa.

Marine.—Admiral Keisuke Okada.

Minister of Justice.—Yoshimichi Hara.

Education.—Kazuo Shoda.

Agriculture and Forestry.—Teiji Yamamoto.

Commerce and Industry.—Tokugoro Nakahashi.

Local Government.

For local administration Japan (except Hokkaidō or Yezo; Chōsen, formerly Korea; Karafuto or Japanese Sakhalin; and Taiwan or Formosa) is divided into prefectures ('Fu' and 'Ken'). The prefectures are subdivided into municipalities ('Shi'), towns ('Chō') and villages ('Son'). Okinawa Prefecture and some islands have, however, special organisations. Municipality, town, and village are the units of local government. These administrative divisions form at the same time local corporations of the same names. In each prefecture there are a governor ('Chiji'), a prefectural assembly ('Fukwai' or 'Ken-kwai'), and a prefectural council ('Fu-Sanjikwai' or 'Kensanjikwai'), of which the governor is president; in each municipality a mayor, a municipal assembly, and a municipal council, of which the mayor is the president; and in each town or village a chief magistrate and a town or village assembly. Prefectural assemblies give decisions upon certain matters prescribed by the Law (chiefly upon financial affairs); and municipal, town and village assemblies, upon public affairs in general. The prefectural council gives decisions upon matters delegated by the prefectural assemblies and upon matters of pressing necessity when the assembly is not in actual session.

Citizenship in a municipality, town, or village, is recognised, in principle, for every male person above the age of 25 years who has resided for two years continuously within the municipality, town or village, with similar exceptions to those in the case of the suffrage for the House of Representatives. Every citizen is qualified to elect and be elected for the municipal, town, or village assembly of his own city, town or village, and also for the prefectural assembly of the prefecture to which his city, town, or village belongs.

Hokkaidō has a governor and a special organisation. Chōsen has a Governor-General. The peninsula is administered in 13 Do or provinces, these being sub-divided into 329 Tuand Yun or districts. Taiwan (Formosa) also has a governor-general, who is invested with very extensive powers. The island is divided into 5 provinces (Shū), each of which has a governor. Karafuto is divided into 7 local divisions (Shichō).

Area and Population.

The Empire consists of the five principal islands of Honshū (mainland), Kiushū, Shikoku, Hokkaidō (Yezo), and Taiwan (Formosa); besides the Chishima (Kuriles), Sado, Oki, Awaji, Iki, Tsushima, Riukiu (Luchu Islands), Ogasawarajima (Bonin Islands), Bōkotō (Pescadores) islands, the peninsula Chosen (Korea), and the southern half of the island of Karafuto (Sakhalin). Total area is shown as follows:—

Administratively there exists a division into 47 prefectures. There is also a division into 633 rural districts, 102 cities, 1,590 towns, and 10,226 villages (1927).

Taiwan (Formosa) and Bōkotō (the Pescadores) were ceded by China in accordance with the treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895, and Japanese Karafuto was ceded by Russia by the Treaty of Portsmouth, N.H., in 1905.

By the same Treaty of Peace the Russian Government ceded to Japan the lease of Port Arthur, Ta-lien, and adjacent territory and waters, and also the railway between Chan-Chun and Port Arthur, and the coal mines worked in connection therewith. In March, 1915, the Chinese Government agreed to extend the lease of the territory on Liaotung Peninsula, including Port Arthur and Dalny, to 99 years. The Chino-Japanese Treaty of December 22, 1905, provided for the interests of China and Japan with respect to Manchuria. By a treaty between Japan and Korea on Aug. 23, 1910, the Korean Territory was annexed to the Empire of Japan.

By an agreement signed May 25, 1915, Japan obtained from China exclusive mining rights in Eastern Mongolia, and the right to settle in the province, and in Shantung the transference of all mining and railway privileges hitherto enjoyed by the Germans; also the extension of the lease of Port Arthur to 99 years, and a joint control over certain industrial works in which they have a large financial interest, besides other privileges. (For full details, see Introduction to THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916.)

The population of Japan (with legal domicile in the interior) on December 31 of the years shown :—

Year	Male	Female	Total	Annual Increase per 1,000
1914	27,862,825	26,779,621	54,142,441	14.61
1924	30,860,032	30,221,948	61,081,954	13.67

<sup>1</sup> On April 1, 1927, the area of Yokohama City was increased by the incorporation of nine of the surrounding towns and villages, and the population at that date was increased to 518,902.

Religion.

There is absolute religious freedom. The chief forms of religion are—(1) Shintoism, with 13 sects; (2) Buddhism, with 12 sects (56 denominations). There is no State religion, and no State support. In 1926 Shinto shrines numbered 49,522 (besides 63,188 minor shrines), and the priests, 14,715; Buddhist temples, 71,317 (besides 35,059 minor temples) in 1924; high priests and priestesses, 54,619. There were, besides, 2,356 licensed preachers and 1,505 churches and preaching stations of the Roman Catholic, Greek, Catholic, and Protestant Churches. Since 1891 the Roman Catholics have had an episcopate of one archbishop and three suffragan bishops. There are shrines dedicated to the eminent ancestors of the Imperial House, and to meritorious subjects; these are independent of any religious sect, and some of them are supported by State or local authorities.

Education.

Elementary education is compulsory. The following are the educational statistics for 1924-25 :—

Japan has 5 Imperial universities, and 27 other institutions of university rank.

Particulars of the Imperial universities are given as follows :—

University	Location	Established	1924-25
			Teachers	Students
Tokyo Imperial University . .	Tokyo . .	1877	590	6,423
Kyoto Imperial University . .	Kyoto . .	1897	333	3,420
Tohoku Imperial University . .	Sendai . .	1907	202	923
Kyushu Imperial University . .	Fukuoka . .	1910	162	338
Hokkaido Imperial University . .	Sapporo . .	1918	208	1,770

The remaining 27 institutions had 2,104 teachers and 29,318 students.

In 1924-25 there were 3,404 libraries in Japan, with 7,038,228 volumes (6,687,655 Japanese and Chinese, and 350,573 European). In 1926, 20,213 original books and translations, and 7,591 periodicals, monthly, weekly, and daily, were published.

Justice and Crime.

A system of justice founded on modern jurisprudence has been established. Judges are irremovable, except by way of criminal or disciplinary punishment. There are four classes of courts in Japan; namely, subdistrict courts, district courts, courts of appeal, and court of cassation. In the court of cassation five judges preside; in the courts of appeal and in the district courts three judges; in each case one of them being the chief judge. In the subdistrict courts a single judge presides. A court which deals with disputes respecting administrative affairs is under the direct supervision of the Emperor.

The following are the criminal statistics for four years :—In 1921, 123,900 criminals were condemned; in 1922, 115,488; in 1923, 127,157; in 1924, 149,971.

In 1925 there were 55 prisons, 1,232 detached prisons and houses of correction. Number of prisoners of all kinds, convicted and accused, and those in houses of correction at the close of 1925 :—Men, 42,211; women, 924; total, 43,135.

Pauperism.

In 1899 new legislation settled that the minimum amount of prefectural funds for the relief of sufferers from extreme calamity shall be 500,000 yen; that funds below that limit are to be made up by the Treasury; and that when the amount of relief exceeds 5 per cent. of the funds at the beginning of the fiscal year, one-third of the amount thus granted is to be supplied from the Treasury.

The relief statistics for 3 years show expenditure as follows (in yen) :—

Year	Food	Clothing	Providing with work	Shelter and Temporary lodgings	Total (including miscellaneous)
1923-24	1,495,601	40,723	80,709	438,877	2,266,806
1924-25	110,738	9,809	526,151	186,189	1,898,819
1925-26	140,987	26,585	70,908	81,436	835,521

In 1925 the Government relieved 8,577 persons to the amount of 401,045 yen). At the end of 1925, 679 foundlings were being maintained, and the expense in that year was 102,701 yen. There are, besides, several workhouses established by local corporations and private persons. The number of hospitals in 1926 was 1,837 (12 state, 80 public and 1,745 private).

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is universal and compulsory. Liability commences at the age of 17 and extends to the age of 40, but actual service begins at 20. All those physically capable of bearing arms are divided into two classes, the 'fit,' and the 'absolutely fit.' The numbers necessary for the first line (or active army), called Gen-eki, are taken solely from the 'absolutely fit.' Service in the ranks is for 2 years in all arms; then for 5 years and 4 months in the reserve (Yōbi). Reservists are usually called out once during their reserve service, for 3 weeks. Having completed 7 years and 4 months in the first line, including its reserve, the men are transferred to the second line, called Kōbi. Service in the Kōbi is for 10 years, with usually one period of training of 3 weeks. At the end of their Kōbi service the men are in the 38th year of their age, and they are passed into the Kokumin, which is the territorial or home defence army. In this they serve for 2 years and 8 months, to complete their total service of 20 years.

The reserve for making good the waste of war, or supplementary reserve, is called Hōjū. It is composed of the balance of the 'absolutely fit' recruits not required for the first line, and of as many of those classed as 'fit' as may be required to make up a certain fixed number. They all serve in the Hōjū for 12 years and 4 months, during which a part of them is called out for training. After completion of this they are passed to the Kokumin until 40 years of age to complete their army service.

The Kokumin is divided into two 'bans.' The first ban comprises all the men who have passed, as shown above, through the first line and landwehr, or through the supplementary reserve and landwehr, and who therefore have only 2 years and 8 months to spend in the Kokumin. The second ban consists of Jōbi, Kōbi, Hōjū, and those of which do not serve for the first ban. It includes (1) those who though 'fit' are not required for the Hōjū; (2) those who for various reasons have been exempted from military service; and (3) the young men between 17 and 20 years of age who have not been called up. None of these classes receive any military training, but they can be drawn on in case of national emergency.

The partially trained men who have been passed into the Kōbi from the Hōjū are not included in the fighting units of the Second Line. They supply the large number of men required for the transport service on mobilisation, and for the expansion of other departmental corps.

The standing army of Japan consists of 17 divisions, including the guard, 4 independent cavalry brigades, 2 independent regiments of mountain guns, and 8 regiments of heavy field artillery.

Two infantry regiments form a brigade, and two brigades (12 battalions) a division. The divisional artillery consists of a regiment of field or mountain artillery (6 batteries of 4 guns). A regiment of cavalry of 2 squadrons, and a battalion of engineers, and also a battalion of transport service, complete the division. Four infantry, and 4 artillery, ammunition columns, 6 field hospitals, 4 supply columns, and 1 remount dépôt accompany each division in the field. The war strength of a division is reckoned at 18,700 officers and men, 4,800 horses, 36 guns, and 1,674 vehicles.

The peace establishment of the active army in 1928 was 15,540 officers and 198,800 other ranks, organised as follows:—

—	Divns.	Brigades	Regts.	Indepnt. Battns.
Infantry . . . . .	17	34	68	—
Cavalry . . . . .	—	5	25	—
Artillery—
Field . . . . .	—	—	17	—

Engineers . . . . .	—	—	4	17
Air Force . . . . .	—	—	8	—
Transport . . . . .	—	—	—	15

The air personnel for the army numbered in 1927, 5,325, organised in 8 flying regiments and a balloon corps.

The Kōbi comprises 228 battalions, 57 squadrons, 114 field batteries, 12 battalions of garrison artillery, and 19 battalions of engineers, and would on mobilisation form independent divisions.

The Japanese Islands are divided into military districts, corresponding to the divisions of the army, and the district is the unit of administration as well as of territorial command. Each division is supplied with recruits from its own district, except the Guards, whose infantry recruits are selected from the whole country; the other arms of the Guard division are recruited from each district of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 13th and 14th divisions. Abroad there are 9,000 men in Manchuria, and 800 in North China.

The Emperor is the head and supreme commander of the army, and also of the navy. He nominates the War Minister (always a general officer of high rank), the Chief of the General Staff, the Director of Military Schools, and the Members of the Military Council.

The arm of the Japanese infantry is the improved rifle; calibre, 6.5 mm. (.256") machine guns and light machine guns, infantry cannons and infantry howitzers, a Mauser with an altered chamber. The cavalry are armed with a carbine of similar construction, and also with heavy and light machine guns. The field gun is a q.-f. shielded Krupp of 7.5 cm. calibre, which fires a shrapnel of 14.3 lb. The mountain artillery has a gun of the same calibre firing a lighter shell. There are a certain number of field howitzer batteries, armed with 4.6" and 5.9" howitzers, firing shells of about 44 lb. and 80 lb. respectively. A 4" gun for heavy field batteries is being introduced.

The military budget for 1928-29 amounted to 176,082,000 yen.

II. NAVY.

The administration of the Navy is in the charge of the Minister of Marine, under whose control is also the Naval Technical Department for Naval Construction, while the Chief of the General Staff is directly responsible to the Emperor for Operation, Mobilization, and Intelligence.

The coast of Japan is divided into three maritime districts having their headquarters at Yokosuka, Kure, and Sasebo.

The Japanese Fleet is markedly affected by the Washington Agreement, though Japan remains the third great naval power of the world. Her replacement tonnage was fixed by the Treaty at 315,000 tons in capital ships, which is superior to the strength allowed to France and Italy. The obsolete vessels have been scrapped. The other ships are in process of being modernized, it is said at a cost of 5,000,000. There will be no further scrapping until 1934. Recent programmes have been concerned mainly with the building of cruisers, destroyers and submarines for the purpose of replacing obsolete ships. Particulars are given below.

The principal state dockyards are at Kure and Yokosuka, where capital ships have been built, and there is a dockyard also at Sasebo, where lighter vessels are constructed. The earthquake of September 1, 1923, almost destroyed the dockyard of Yokosuka, which was the Japanese Portsmouth, but no ship of the active fleet was damaged seriously, and considerable sums have since been devoted to the reconstruction of the yard. The Kawasaki private shipbuilding yard at Kobe and the Mitsubishi establishment at Nagasaki are well equipped with modern plant, and there are lesser building yards at Maizuru, Uraga and elsewhere, as well as the government armour and armament factory at Kure. Japan has made herself practically independent of Europe for the building and arming and equipment of her warships. There are four naval flying corps (possessing about 200 various machines), and constructing factories at each of the dockyards.

A statement of the Japanese fleet follows :—

Of the total steamships entered in 1926, 2,049 vessels of 9,963,245 tons were British ; 725 of 3,960,342 tons American ; 236 of 996,108 tons German ; 152 of 200,492 tons Norwegian ; 209 of 960,851 tons Dutch ; 26 of 34,667 tons Chinese ; 107 of 599,250 tons French ; and 12,435 of 31,873,523 tons were Japanese.

In December, 1928, the merchant navy (without Formosa) consisted of 3,290 steamers of European style, of 3,767,047 tons ; and 14,208 sailing vessels of Japanese style, of 871,088 koku. The Japanese Government subsidises shipping companies for foreign trade, and now Japanese vessels run on four great routes to Europe, North America, South America, and Australia. There are also lines plying between Japanese ports and Korea, Northern China, and nine ports on the Yangtse-Kiang.

Internal Communications.

The first railway in Japan was built in 1872, between Tokyo and Yokohama, a distance of 18 miles. By 1880 there were 73 miles of railway in operation ; by 1900, 3,638 miles ; by 1910, 5,354 miles ; by October, 1923, 9,974 miles. The following table gives the railway statistics (including, except revenue and expenditure, Formosa) for 1926-27 :—

	State Railways	Railways owned by Private Companies	Total
Length in miles . . . . .	8,006	3,386	11,342
Gross income, yen . . . . .	467,809,954	64,935,182	532,745,136

Passengers, number . . . . .	735,706,451	269,921,424	1,005,627,875

The railway mileage in 1926-27, was 11,342, of which about 9,871 were main lines. The working revenue in 1926-27 was 484,083,000 yen, and the working expenses 270,839,000 yen.

It has been decided to make the standard gauge 4.85 feet. The work is expected to be completed in 1943, and the cost estimated at 1,408,000,000 yen. Japan has been conceded by China the right to build five railway lines in Manchuria and Mongolia. A railway tunnel under the MojiShimonoseki Straits was commenced in 1920 and is expected to be completed in 1928. The tunnel will connect the island of Kiushu with Honshu. The whole length of the tunnel will be 7 miles, of which one mile will be completely under the sea. Comprehensive plans have been made for the electrification of the Japanese Government railways. The first section to be electrified will be the Tokaido line, 408 miles, from Tokyo to Kobe.

There are (1926-27) 1,145 miles of electric tramway in Japan.

The following are postal and telegraphic statistics for four fiscal years :—

The total amount of notes in circulation on September 30, 1923, was 1,428,220,000 yen, of which 1,275,615,000 yen were notes of the Bank of Japan; 93,656,000 yen were notes of the Bank of Chōsen; 46,862,000 yen notes of the Bank of Taiwan. On June 30, 1923, the gold stock of Japan was 1,261,000,000 yen, of which 178,000,000 yen were held by the Government and 1,083,000,000 yen by the Bank of Japan.

The modern banking system dates from 1872. The principal banks of Japan are the Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan), the Yokohama Specie Bank, the Hypothec Bank, the Industrial Bank of Japan, the Hokkaidō Colonisation Bank, the Bank of Taiwan, Bank of Chōsen. There are also (1926) 27 agricultural and industrial banks, 1,475 ordinary banks, and 131 savings banks. The condition of the banks (ordinary, saving and special) for three years (December 31st) was as follows.

Year	Paid-up Capital	Reserve Fund	Deposits	Net Earnings	Rate of Dividend
	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen	Per cent.
1924 . . .	1,995,048,000	872,619,000	10,324,816,000	351,119,000	9.02

1926 . . .	1,927,732,000	987,396,000	11,322,308,000	—	—

The depositors in the Post Office Savings Bank on March 31, 1928, numbered 34,581,222, and their deposits amounted to 1,570,792,945 yen.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The present monetary law came into force from October, 1897, by which gold standard was adopted. The unit of value is 0.75 gramme of pure gold, and is called the yen = 2s. 0½d., which, however, is not coined. The pieces coined are as follows:—Gold coins (20, 10, and 5 yen pieces), silver coins (50, 20, and 10 sen pieces), nickel coin (10 and 5 sen pieces), and bronze coins (1 sen and 5 rin pieces). The sen is the hundredth part of a yen, and the rin is the tenth part of a sen. The gold coins are .900 fine, and the silver coins .800 fine. The gold coins formerly issued (20, 10, 5, 2, and 1 yen pieces) are used at double their face value. The one-yen silver coin formerly issued is withdrawn. The old copper 2, 1 and ½ sen pieces, are used as formerly.

The Kin	= 160 momme	. . .	= 1.323 lb. avoirdupois
" Kwan	= 1,000 "	. . .	= 8.267 lbs. "
" Sun	. . .	. . .	= 1.193 inch. "
" Shaku	(10 sun)	. . .	= 11.930 inches.
" Ken	= 6 shaku	. . .	= 5.965 feet.

The Chō	= 60 ken	= $\frac{1}{18}$ mile, 5'4229 chains.
„ Ri	= 36 chō	= 2'44 miles.
„ Ri sq.		= 5'9552 sq. miles.
„ Tsubo		= 3'9538 sq. yds.
„ Chō , land measure		= 2'45 acres.
„ Koku , liquid		= 39'6804 gallons.

„ To , liquid = $\frac{1}{10}$ koku		= 3'9680 gallons.
„ „ dry		= 1'9851 peck.

The metric system was made obligatory by a law passed in March, 1921, but has not yet been enforced. The following rates are recognised :—

metre = 3'3 shaku.

gramme = 0'266667 momme ( $\frac{1}{18}$  momme).

KOREA (CHŌSEN).

Government.—By a treaty concluded between Japan and Korea on August 22, 1910, the Korean territory was formally annexed to the Empire of Japan. The Emperor was deprived of all political power, and the title of the country was changed back to 'Chōsen,' from Tai Han, which had been adopted in 1897, and the office of Japanese Governor-General established. By an Imperial Rescript of 1919, Korea is to be treated as in all respects an integral part of Japan, Koreans to be on the same footing as Japanese. Members of the Korean Imperial House and the late Korean Cabinet have had Japanese patents of nobility conferred upon them.

Governor-General.—His Excellency General Hanzō Yamanashi (December, 1927).

Area and Population.—The area is 85,231 square miles. Population at the end of 1926, 19,103,900. The vast majority of the foreign residents are Chinese, numbering 45,291 at the end of 1926. The latest returns (1926) give the number of British subjects as 228, Americans 756, French 76, and Germans 43. At the end of 1926 the population of the largest cities and towns was as follows:—Keijo-fu (Seoul), the capital, 306,363 (81,559 Japanese), Fusan-fu (Pusan), 106,323 (40,803 Japanese), Heijo-fu (Pyongyang), 114,371 (23,545 Japanese), Taikyu-fu (Tai-Ku), 77,263 (23,513 Japanese), Chemulpo 53,741 (11,651 Japanese).

The language of the people is intermediate between Mongolo-Tartar and Japanese, with a large admixture of Chinese words, and an alphabetical system of writing is used. Official correspondence, except with Korean provincial officials, is conducted in Japanese. The written language of the people is a mixture of Chinese characters and native script.

Religion and Education.—The knowledge of Chinese classics and of Confucian doctrine, formerly considered essential to the education of the upper classes, has given way under Japanese and foreign influence to a more practical system of instruction, but the worship of ancestors is still observed with as much punctiliousness as in China. In the country there are numerous Buddhist monasteries, which, however, are looked upon with scant respect. There is a large number of Christian converts. French missionaries were working in the country from 1784 and struggled for a century in the face of official persecution. The ban on Christianity was raised in 1882 and the first Protestant missionaries came to Korea in 1884. In 1927 there were 707 foreign missionaries working in Korea and a membership of 219,000 converts (communicants) was claimed. The missions early established numerous hospitals and schools throughout the country.

Since annexation the Japanese authorities have provided schools in all parts of the country, but it is recognized that much is required to be done, as less than 20 per cent. of the Koreans are literate. Plans are now being drawn up to establish an elementary school in every myen or village, but lack of funds hinders the speedy attainment of this ideal. Technical schools are being gradually introduced.

In 1926 there were for the education mainly of Japanese 456 elementary schools with 55,853 pupils, 11 middle schools with 4,840 pupils, 1 medical school, a law university, a normal school, a higher technical school, and a higher commercial school, 22 girls' high schools with 6,332 pupils, and various kindergarten and private schools. For the education of Koreans there were 1,311 common schools with 391,058 pupils, 74 private common schools with 16,592 pupils, 24 higher common schools (9 private) with 9,903 pupils, 13 (9 private) higher common schools for girls, with 2,501 pupils; besides various industrial schools. There is a University at Seoul with 467 students (March 31, 1927), of whom 149 were Koreans and 318 Japanese.

In Seoul there are three daily Korean newspapers, and 2 Japanese, besides others published at Chemulpo and in other parts of the country. There is a Government-owned daily newspaper in English, published at Seoul.

Finance.—The finances of Korea form a special account in the Budget of Japan. The estimated revenue for two years is shown as follows:—

Revenue.		1927-28	1928-29	Expenditure.		1927-28	1928-29
		Yen	Yen			Yen	Yen
Ordinary ...	...	165,773,875	179,844,000	Ordinary ...	...	150,879,909	161,873,000
Extraordinary ...	...	43,934,537	42,580,000	Extraordinary ...	...	60,030,202	60,801,000
Total ...	...	209,708,412	222,424,000	Total ..	...	210,910,111	222,674,000

The total debt on March 31, 1927, was 16,877,430 yen.

Production.—Korea is almost entirely an agricultural country; the cultivated area at end of 1926 was 11,276,115 acres. The chief crops are rice, barley, wheat, beans, and grain of all kinds, besides tobacco and cotton. The rice crops for 5 years were (in bushels):—1922, 75,271,056; 1924, 65,572,033; 1925, 73,279,275; 1926, 76,503,535; 1927, 84,998,445; in 1926, 35,410,630 bushels of barley were produced; 21,757,685 bushels of soya beans, 157,498,981 lbs. of Upland American cotton and 57,149,756 lbs. of native cotton. Whale fishing is carried on on the coast. In 1926, 36,176,105 pounds of apples, 24,942,456 pounds of pears were produced. Silkworm rearing is also carried on and in 1926 there were produced 1,585,400 bushels of cocoons; in 1927, 1,818,583 bushels. Live-stock is raised as a by-product of agriculture. The cattle are well known for their size and quality. In 1927, there were 1,594,894 cattle, 56,054 horses, 1,220,679 pigs, 10,309 donkeys and 24,918 goats. The fishing industry is developing; value of catch in 1926, 53,742,867 yen.

Gold mining is carried on; the value of the 1926 output was 7,485,811 yen. There are 10 foreign-owned gold mines in active operation. Copper, iron, and coal are abundant in Korea; the development of these resources has been impeded by defective means of communication, but is making steady progress. The output of pig iron in 1926 was valued at 5,958,940 yen; iron ore at 2,120,148 yen; and coal 4,992,699 yen. An anthracite coal mine in the north of Korea is in operation. Graphite and mica also are found in considerable quantities. The total value of mineral products in 1926 was 24,130,350 yen. The government has the monopoly of ginseng, salt and tobacco, the latter yielding 22,049,535 lbs. in 1926. At end of 1926 there were 4,293 factories with a capital of 319,171,485 yen, and 83,450 employees, while the value of the output was 365,849,317 yen.

Commerce.—The open ports are Seoul, Chemulpo, Fusan, Gensan, Chinnampo, Mokpo, Kunsan, Seishin, Ping-Yang (inland city), Wiju, Yong Am-Po (1908), Yuki, Joshin and Shin-wi-ju.

Trade (merchandise only) at the open ports:—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen
Imports	309,593,336	340,011,781	372,169,783	383,417,007	413,991,000
Exports	323,039,094	341,630,533	362,954,800	358,924,702	365,978,000

Imports.—The imports in 1927 included cotton goods, 28,574,308 yen; machinery, 9,420,388 yen; silk goods, 9,292,932 yen; timber, 10,640,117 yen; kerosene oil, 5,898,442 yen; grass cloth, 5,500,595 yen; sugar, 7,735,816 yen; paper, 7,287,981 yen; and coal, 10,732,851 yen. The principal exports were rice, 191,574,674 yen; beans, peas and pulse, 22,941,389 yen; hides, 2,444,994 yen; cattle, 3,420,822 yen; silk, 25,865,851 yen; cocoons, 4,889,895 yen; and gold ore, 1,451,383 yen. Of the total imports in 1927, the value of 269,473,827 yen was from Japan; of the exports, the value of 838,175,745 yen was to Japan. From Great Britain and the United States of America respectively, direct imports amounted to 4,980,210 yen and 8,208,418 yen; but there is also considerable indirect trade via Japan.

Imports from United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) were 101,070*l.* in 1926, 95,510*l.* in 1927, and 152,373*l.* in 1928; exports to United Kingdom were 674*l.*, 607*l.*, and 2,454*l.* in the three years respectively.

Shipping and Communications.—The shipping entered at the open ports in 1927 had a tonnage of 6,421,752, and those that cleared a tonnage of 6,070,494.

Transport in the interior is by rail, road (motor-car, oxen, pack-horses, etc.), and river. The railways are being rapidly extended and the roads are being gradually improved. At the end of March 1927 there were 10,318 miles of completed roads. Length of railways, 1928 (public and private), about 2,000 miles; number of passengers carried (1927) 18,457,000.

Number of post offices 670. There were 21,503 miles of telegraph line open (March 1927), and the lines connect with the Japanese and the Chinese systems. The telephone has been introduced at Seoul, Chemulpo, and several other towns; length of lines 3,279 miles (June 30, 1927). During the fiscal year ending March 1927 there were 27,586 telephone subscribers. 5,379,804 telegrams were sent in 1926-27.

In 1926-27, 180,266,705 ordinary mails were collected and 197,931,948 delivered, 2,135,270 parcels were collected and 2,985,038 delivered.

Currency and Banking.—Regulations for banking were framed in 1906. In 1926 there were 18 banks, semi-Government and ordinary, with 56,525,000 yen paid-up capital, with total deposits at December 31, 1926, amounting to 4,202,313,000 yen.

A central bank, the Bank of Chōsen, was established in August, 1909, and in November it took the place of the First Bank of Japan (Dai-Ichi-Ginko) as the Government Treasury. Notes of this bank are permitted to circulate unrestrictedly within the jurisdiction of the Government-General of Chōsen and are exchangeable with gold coin and convertible notes issued by the Bank of Japan. The Bank of Chosen has a paid-up capital of 25 million yen, the deposits amounting to 117,258,000 yen (Dec. 31, 1926). Notes issued at Dec. 31, 1926, 110,936,000 yen. Against their issue must be provided a reserve of the same amount, consisting of gold coin, gold and silver bullion, and convertible notes of the Bank of Japan; silver bullion, however, must not exceed one-fourth of the total reserve. The postal savings banks had 1,795,858 depositors with a total amount 22,466,175 yen at March 31, 1927.

The coinage consists of gold pieces of 5-, 10-, and 20-yen, silver of 10-, 20-, and 50-sen, nickel of 5 sen, and bronze of 1-sen. The gold coins, however, are not in general use, the ordinary medium of commerce being the notes of the Bank of Japan or of the Bank of Chōsen which are issued in the following denominations, viz.: 100 yen, 20 yen, 10 yen, 5 yen, and 1 yen. The old nickel coin has been wholly withdrawn from circulation, and the cash currency is now rarely seen, and then only in remote parts of the country. Under certain regulations, bills of exchange and cheques may pass into the currency. In the more important commercial towns there are authorised 'note associations' of merchants for the transaction of business relating to bills.

British Consul-General at Seoul.—Oswald White.

Vice-Consul.—D. W. Kermode.

FORMOSA (TAIWAN).

The Island of Formosa, or Taiwan, was ceded to Japan by China by the treaty which was ratified on May 8, 1895, and Japan took formal possession on June 2 of the same year. Japanese civil government in the island began on March 31, 1896.

Governor-General.—Takeji Kawamura.

The Island has an area of 13,889 square miles, with a population (1926) of 4,241,759 (2,176,656 males and 2,065,103 females). Census population Oct. 1, 1925, 3,994,236 (2,055,133 males and 1,939,103 females). There were 195,769 Japanese, and 35,505 foreigners in the Island in 1926. The chief towns are Taihoku (195,555 inhabitants in 1925 Census), Tainan, Kūrun, and Taichu.

Many improvements have been effected by the Japanese administration. A colonising scheme was commenced in 1909, whereby Japanese were settled in Taiwan. There are four villages containing (1916), 652 families consisting of 3,268 persons. An educational system has been established for Japanese and natives. In 1926-27 there were for the instruction of the Japanese 132 primary schools, with 780 teachers and 25,895 pupils. For the instruction of the natives there were 539 schools, with 5,154 teachers and 216,011 pupils. There are also normal schools, a medical school, an industrial school, and a school for teaching the Japanese language to natives, and native languages to Japanese. The University of Formosa was opened in April, 1928.

The receipts of the Japanese administration are from inland taxes, customs, public undertakings, and also subsidies from Japan ranging from 5 to 9 million yen annually. The expenditure is chiefly for internal administration and the working of public undertakings.

The agricultural products of Formosa are rice, tea, sugar, sweet potatoes, ramie, jute, turmeric; while camphor is worked in the forests under a Government monopoly. The production of camphor was in 1923-24, 13,216,296 kin; in 1924-25, 5,958,121 kin; in 1925-26, 5,599,630 kin. Production of rice in 1927, 17,198,887 koku; 1928, 13,600,000 koku. Production of raw sugar in 1926-27, 6,710,184 piculs (396,000 tons); in 1927-28, 9,527,693 piculs (562,600 tons); 1928-29, 12,169,875 piculs (811,312 tons). There are active fisheries: value of catch in 1926, 10,225,692 yen. The number of animals (December 31, 1926) was:—horses, 224; goats, 89,139; cattle, 92,244; pigs, 1,542,829; buffaloes, 288,995. The industries comprise flour-milling, sugar, tobacco; oil, spirits, iron-work, glass, bricks, soap, and many other manufactures. Mining is making steady progress: gold (417,346 yen); silver (17,389 yen); copper (261,968 yen); and coal (13,298,913 yen) being the principal minerals in 1926; the output of coal in 1926 was 1,794,511 tons. The total value of minerals in 1926 was 16,763,256 yen. There are 44 new style and 136 old style sugar mills in Taiwan.

The commerce of Formosa is largely with Japan; imports in 1927, 65,840,396 yen from foreign countries; 121,107,991 yen from Japan; total imports, 186,948,387 yen; exports, 44,697,707 yen to foreign countries; 202,078,577 yen to Japan; total exports, 246,676,284 yen. In 1926 the imports from Japan amounted to 121,404,784 yen; exports to Japan 202,109,583 yen. Imports from other foreign countries, 62,007,666 yen; exports to other foreign countries, 49,315,487 yen. The chief exports in 1927 were tea, 11,652,124 yen; sugar, 98,981,421 yen; camphor and camphor oil 4,923,996 yen; coal, 7,658,302 yen. The chief imports in 1927 were rice, 16,039,385 yen; cotton and silk goods, 15,254,559 yen; fertilisers, 25,650,308 yen; wood and planks, 6,736,842 yen.

Roads have been and are being constructed throughout the Island. There were, in 1927, 936 miles of railway open (610 miles belonged to the Government and 326 miles to private companies). In 1926 there were 171 post offices, through which passed 57,598,069 packets and 684,004 parcels. The telegraph service has 160 offices; length of line 736 miles; of wire, 2,941 miles; messages (1926), 2,800,647. Telephone line, 1,895 miles; calls, 49,981,511.

The post office savings bank had 475,868 depositors with 9,145,104 yen to their credit (1926-27).

The coinage current in the Island is that of Japan.

Bōkotō, or the Pescadores, consist of about 12 islands, with a total area of about 50 square miles.

Japanese Sakhalin (or Karafuto) consists of that portion of Sakhalin which lies to the south of the parallel of 50° north latitude. It has an area of about 13,934 sq. miles, and, in 1925 (census), the population was 203,504 (122,202 males, 81,302 females). Residential population on December 31, 1926, 203,573. The most important industry of the island is the herring fishery, but large areas are fit for agriculture and pasturage, and Japanese settlers have been provided with seed and domestic animals. There is a vast forest area of larch and fir trees. The minerals found are coal and alluvial gold; coal raised in 1926, 275,819 tons.

The revenue for the year ending March 31, 1929, is estimated at 27,340,000 yen, and expenditure the same.

The leased Territory of Kwantung, the southern part of the Liaotung Peninsula, has an area of about 538 sq. miles, and a population (December 31, 1926) of 1,095,903, of whom 866,506 are Chinese and 227,301 Japanese (exclusive of army and navy). The Territory is under a Japanese governor-general, the seat of administration being at Dairen (or Tairend, formerly called Dalny). At the end of 1926 there were 52 elementary schools with 23,121 pupils, 8 secondary schools with 3,228 pupils, and 7 girls' schools with 3,109 pupils, for the instruction of the Japanese, and 130 schools with 24,545 pupils for the instruction of the natives; also an American Presbyterian Mission with a church and a hospital.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for 1927-28 balance at 17,915,203 yen.

The chief agricultural products of the Territory are maize, millet, beans, wheat, buckwheat, rice, tobacco, hemp, and various vegetables. There is an active fishing industry, the value of the catch in 1925 (3,177,025 kwan) being 2,608,834 yen, as compared with 3,888,481 kwans in 1926, valued at 3,204,724 yen. The chief manufactured product is salt, which is abundant in the Territory. Since July 1, 1907, the Territory forms a Customs district under the Chinese Imperial Customs, Dairen being the Customs port, with out-stations at Kinchow, Pulantien, Pitzewo, and Port Arthur. The port is free, goods being subject to duty only on crossing the frontier of the leased territory. The trade is mostly with Japan and China. Imports (1926), 133,134,415 haikwan taels (tael, in 1926, averaged 3s. 1½d.); exports, 189,539,672 haikwan taels, of which 65,582,448 hk. tls. was imported from Japan, and 86,821,934 hk. tls. exported to that country. Dairen has a fine harbour, ice-free all the year, and protected by a breakwater 1,000 yards long. The harbour is provided with sheds and warehouses, under the control of the South Manchuria Railway Company. The railway connects Port Arthur and Dairen with Mukden, Kharbin, and the Eastern Chinese Railway System, 8,290,085 passengers and 16,535,194 tons of goods were carried during 1926. In 1926 its total length was 690 miles.

Gold and silver coin and the notes of the Yokohama specie bank are current.

Pacific Islands.—Under the Treaty of Versailles Japan was appointed mandatory to the former German possessions north of the Equator. These include:—(1) The Marianne (or Ladrone) Islands.—By treaty of February 12, 1899, these islands, with the exception of Guam (the largest of the Marianne Islands) ceded to the United States in 1898, passed on October 1, 1899, from Spanish to German possession for payment of 840,000*l.* Sipan is the seat of Government. The Japanese population of the islands numbered at the end of the year of 1926 8,395, and the natives 48,994. The northern group is actively volcanic and uninhabited.

(2) The Caroline Islands.—The Carolines consist of about 500 coral islets, Ponapé having 8,238 inhabitants, Yap 7,418, and Parao 7,153. The population is mainly of Malay origin, with some Chinese and Japanese. The chief export is copra. For administrative purposes the islands were divided into two groups: (a) the Eastern Carolines, with Truk and Ponapé as the centres of administration. There are in Truk 384 Japanese, 13 Foreigners, and 15,124 natives; in Ponapé there are 377 Japanese, 15 Foreigners, and 7,846 natives. (b) The Western Carolines, with Palau and Yap as administrative centres. There are in Palau 1,376 Japanese, 5,763 natives, and 14 Foreigners. In Yap there are 171 Japanese, 7,230 natives, and 17 Foreigners.

(3) Marshall Islands.—The Marshall Islands, consisting of two chains or rows of lagoon islands (several uninhabited), known respectively as Ratak (with thirteen islands) and Ralik (with eleven islands), first came under German rule in 1885. The population consists of 260 Japanese, 11 Foreigners, and 9,390 natives. The chief island and administrative centre is Jaluit; Protestant (American) and Catholic missions are at work. There are plantations of coco-palm (1,705 hectares). The chief export is copra.

Justice is administered in 3 district courts and in a court of appeal. The islands contain 5 primary and 19 secondary schools. Besides coco-palm, the principal products are sugar-cane (island of Saipan) and cotton (islands of Rota and Tinian). In 1926, there were in the islands 2,628 cattle, 1,674 goats, and 10,660 pigs.

The budget estimates for the Pacific Islands for 1927 were 4,500,000 yen.

LATVIA.

(LATVIJAS REPUBLIKA.)

LATVIA, along the southern part of the Baltic littoral, is inhabited chiefly by Letts. As early as the 13th century the Letts fought against the German (battle of Durbe, 1260), but in the long run the Germans carried the day, and the state created by the Teutonic Order under the form of a Federal Republic (consisting of Estonia, Latgale, Livonia, and Courland) lasted until 1560. Eventually, Estonia passed under the rule of Sweden, Latgale and Livonia under that of Lithuania-Poland, while Piltene and Oesel became Danish. Courland alone retained her independence under the form of a vassal duchy of Lithuania-Poland. In 1621 Livonia was annexed by Sweden, and in 1710 by Russia. In 1772, after the first partition of Poland, Latgale was assigned to Russia, and in 1795 Courland joined Russia. From this time onwards, Latvia was under Russian rule.

In 1917 Lettish public opinion expressed itself in favour of the separate existence of Latvia, and announced its view officially in the Russian Constituent Assembly in January 1918. An organization for establishing the independence of the country was formed, and on November 18, 1918, it proclaimed in Riga the sovereign Free State of Latvia, which was recognised as an independent State by most of the Powers, and was admitted to the League of Nations on September 22, 1921.

Constitution and Government.—The Latvian Constitution which was passed by the Constituent Assembly on February 15, 1922, declares that Latvia is an independent democratic Republic and that the sovereign power of the State is vested in the Latvian people. The Saeima (Parliament) consists of 100 representatives elected for 3 years by universal, equal, direct, and secret vote on the basis of proportional representation, by citizens of both sexes over 20 years of age. Its powers expire on the day on which the new Saeima assembles. The Saeima elects the President of the State by absolute majority, and he holds office for 3 years. No person can hold this office for more than 6 consecutive years. The President must be over 40 years of age. He is the Chief of the armed forces of the State, and, for the period of war, appoints a commander-in-chief. War can only be declared after a vote of the Saeima. The President chooses the Prime Minister, who forms the Cabinet; and the Cabinet is responsible to the Saeima. The President may propose the dissolution of the Saeima, which proposal shall then be followed by a vote of the people. If this proposal is accepted by the people, the Saeima is dissolved and new elections are proclaimed; if not, the President of the State is to be considered as having resigned and the Saeima elects a new President. All citizens are equal before the Law. The Judges are independent and irrevocable. The State Control is an independent collegial institution elected by the Saeima for a definite period.

The elections to the Saeima, held in October, 1925, produced the following balance of parties: Right, 7; Alliance of the Farmer parties, 16; Centre, 22; Social Democrats, 30; Nation Minorities (Germans, Russians, Jews, Poles), 19; Communists, 6; total, 100.

The Ministries are those of Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, National Welfare, Education, Agriculture, Justice, Communications, and State Control.

President of the State.—Gustav Jemgals (elected April 8, 1927).

Prime Minister.—P. Juraševskis (appointed January 23, 1928).

Area and Population.—Latvia consists of the former Russian Province of Courland (about 10,435 square mile-), four southern districts (Riga, Wenden, Wolmar, Walk) of the former Russian province of Livonia (about 8,715 square miles) and three western districts (Dvinsk, Reshitza, Lutsin) of the former Russian province of Vitebsk (about 5,292 square miles), making a total of about 24,440 square miles or, including inland lakes, about 25,000 square miles. The total length of the frontier line of Latvia is 1,040 statute miles, with a coast line of 338 statute miles. For administrative purposes Latvia is divided into: Vidzeme (Livonia), Kurzeme (Courland), Zemgale, and Latgale.

The chief town is Riga (the capital). population (1928) 389,997; population of other principal towns according to 1925 Census, Liepāja (Libau) 60,762; Daugavpils (Dvinsk), 40,640; Jelgava (Mitau), 28,321; Ventspils (Windau), Rzekne (Rositten), Valmiera, Cēsis.

The census taken in 1928 showed a population of 1,883,189 in Latvia. Of the population according to the census of 1925, 1,779,593 were Latvian citizens, and 65,212 foreigners. Of the Latvian citizens 75·61 per cent. were Letts, 12·32 per cent. Russians, 4·48 per cent. Jews, 3·39 per cent. Germans, 2·52 per cent. Poles, 0·90 per cent. Lithuanians, 0·38 per cent. Estonians, and 0·40 per cent. other nationalities.

The birth-rate during 1927 was 22·10, and the death-rate 15·37 per 1,000.

Religion and Education.—The majority of the population in Latvia is Protestant (58 per cent.), but in Latgale and one district of Courland there are also many Roman Catholics (23 per cent.), while in Riga, Ventspils and south-east of Livonia there are about 75,000 Greek Orthodox Letts.

During the year 1927-28 there were 1,904 elementary schools in Latvia, with 157,206 pupils and 7,542 teachers. Most of these schools were supported by the State or municipal institutions, only 110 being supported by private persons or societies. The State or municipal institutions also supported 82 of the secondary schools in the country, the remaining 56 being supported by private persons or societies. In these 138 secondary schools 2,558 teachers taught 23,436 pupils.

Each national minority has the right to its own schools (elementary and secondary) with its own language of instruction. The State contributes to the maintenance of these schools according to the percentage of inhabitants of the respective national minorities. In 1927-28, instruction was given in elementary schools in the following languages (figures in brackets refer to secondary schools):—Lettish in 1,394 (74) schools, with 113,169 (15,029) pupils and 5,056 (1,363) teachers; national minorities in 510 (55) schools, with 44,037 (7,517) pupils, and 2,486 (957) teachers.

Formerly the University of Dorpat served the whole of the Baltic provinces of Russia, and as Dorpat became an Estonian institution, the Riga Polytechnic was in 1919 raised to be the Latvian University. The number of students is (1927-28) 7,561, and of professors, 320. There are also 165 technical schools with 12,745 pupils; a Musical Academy with 385 students and 41 teachers; and an Academy of Arts with 282 students.

Finance.—Budget estimates for five years are shown as follows:—

	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29
	Lats	Lats	Lats	Lats	Lats
Revenue . . .	217,538,000	160,949,256	169,927,276	159,096,756	164,110,000
Expenditure .	198,172,000	160,949,256	169,7-9,372	159,096,756	164,110,000

The National Debt of Latvia on April 1, 1928, was as follows:—To United States of America, 5,615,000 dollars; to Great Britain, 2,150,000. The internal debt amounted to 524,902 Lats.

Defence.—The standing army numbers 2000 officers and 18,000 men, organized in four divisions. Service is compulsory, beginning at the age of 20, and lasting to the age of 50. Service with the colours has been reduced, according to the law of May 16, 1928, to 12 months in the case of the infantry and 15 months for other arms.

Latvia maintains a coast defence squadron, comprising at present a gun-boat, 2 mine-sweepers, and 2 submarines; 4 destroyers, and 2 more submarines are projected.

Production and Industry.—Latvia is mainly an agricultural country, but an increasing number of people are passing from agricultural to industrial life. In 1927 the principal crops were rye, 640,750 acres, 258,800 metric tons; barley, 463,250 acres, 130,080 metric tons; oats, 763,000 acres, 177,160 metric tons; potatoes, 213,750 acres, 717,350 metric tons; flax, 158,060 acres, 18,570 metric tons (16,640 metric tons linseed). The main export articles of Latvia are (1927) timber, 80,110,000 lats; flax, 26,500,000 lats; butter, 41,267,000 lats. Before the war the Latvian flax crop averaged about 35,000 tons per annum. Latvian timber lands, State and private (4,410,000 acres), produced in 1924-25 91 million cubic feet of timber, (with firewood, 142 million cubic feet). On December 31, 1927, there were 2,853 industrial enterprises in Latvia, employing 53,010 hands. Most of workers are employed in metallurgical (27·2 per cent.), chemical (13·6 per cent.), textile (13 per cent.), mineral working (12·8 per cent.), and woodworking (12·3 per cent.) industries.

Live-stock in 1927: horses, 369,300; cattle, 966,000; sheep, 1,275,000; pigs, 534,600.

Latvia does not possess much mineral wealth.

Commerce and Communications.—Latvia has about 340 miles of sea-coast; its 3 principal harbours are Riga, Liepaja, and Ventspils. Three Russian main lines converge on Latvian ports, viz. the Riga-Tsaritsin line, the Ventspils-Moscow line, and the Liepaja-Romni line.

Trade for four years:—

Year	Imports		Exports
	Kilos	Lats	Kilos	Lats
1924	924,885,580	255,004,500	743,829,977	169,047,116
1925	965,484,785	280,557,489	571,896,811	179,561,794
1926	974,712,982	260,314,396	517,877,269	188,503,537
1927	1,066,305,136	249,987,549	1,024,665,360	221,245,682

The commerce for two years was distributed as follows (in thousands of lats):—

	1926		1927
	Imports	Exports	Imports	Exports
Raw materials and semi-manu- factured articles . . . .	59,470	101,981	63,164	128,194

Total . . . . .	260,314	183,504	249,988	221,246

In 1927 the imports (value in thousand lats) came from Germany, 101,512; United Kingdom, 26,492; Czechoslovakia, 18,400; Denmark, 16,709; Soviet Russia, 18,319; Poland, 14,545; Lithuania, 7,324. Exports to United Kingdom, 75,310; Belgium, 23,974; Germany, 58,460.

In 1927 the principal imports of the United Kingdom from Latvia (according to the Board of Trade Returns) were: sawn timber, 1,897,808; pit props, 372,558; flax 985,695. The principal exports to Latvia were coal, 38,224; herrings, 429,211; cotton goods, 173,776.

Total trade between Latvia and the United Kingdom for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns):—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Latvia into United Kingdom	6,374,805	5,278,553	5,000,468	6,001,127	5,755,556
Exports to Latvia from United Kingdom	2,206,955	1,631,776	1,147,778	1,150,565	1,292,050

In January 1928, 75 steamboats of 57,043 net tons, 34 sailing vessels of 3,214 net tons, and 10 auxiliary sailing vessels of 1,788 net tons, making a total of 119 vessels with 62,045 gross tons, or 51,115 net tons, were sailing under the Latvian flag. There were also 5 ice-breakers.

In 1927, 4,041 vessels of 1,761,345 tons entered and 4,047 of 1,759,718 tons cleared the ports of Latvia.

To facilitate the transit of goods to and from Russia, the Latvian main lines converging on the ports of Riga and Ventspils have been altered to the Russian gauge, while for Western traffic (Riga-Ostend-Paris line) and internal communications the normal and narrow gauges are used. Of the total length of Latvian railways—1,676 miles on January 1, 1928—936 miles were of Russian gauge and 274 miles of the normal gauge. Gross receipts of Latvian railways in 1927 were 39,765,000 Lats. and expenditure 34,857,000 Lats.; 11,121,000 passengers were carried and 4,115,932 tons of freight handled. There were also 533 miles of macadamised high roads. The navigable inland waterways (1,829 miles) carried about 1,268,758 tons of goods.

In 1927 there were 633 post offices in the country; length of telegraph line, 1,784 miles; length of telephone lines, 11,274 miles.

Banking and Currency.—The legal tender in Latvia is the Lat, equal to one gold franc, and representing 2903226 grammes of fine gold. Notes of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 Lats are in circulation, also copper and nickel coins of 1, 2, 5 santims, and 10, 20, 50 santims respectively. The issue of notes in Latvia is strictly limited to the amount of cover, and notes can be encashed in gold.

On August 1, 1928, there were 20 joint-stock Banks, 34 mutual credit societies and 12 communal credit institutions in Latvia, with an aggregate capital of 40,040,000 Lats, and assets totalling 202,539,000 Lats. The Bank of Latvia (Latvijas Banka) which commenced operations on November 1, 1922, had on October 10, 1928, notes in circulation amounting to 44,703,000 lats.; deposits, 11,971,000 lats.; and total assets 258,310,000 lats.

The metric system has been established by law, but the old Russian system of weights and measures were used until January, 1, 1924.

LIBERIA.

Constitution and Government.—The Liberian Republic had its origin in the efforts of several colonisation societies of Europe and America to make permanent provision for freed American slaves. In 1822 a settlement was formed on the west coast of Africa near the spot where Monrovia now stands. On July 26, 1847, the State was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia. The new State was first recognised by France and Great Britain, and ultimately by other Powers. The Constitution of the Republic is on the model of that of the United States, with trifling exceptions. The executive is vested in a President and a Council of 7 Ministers, and the legislative power in a parliament of two houses, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The President and the House of Representatives are elected for four years, and the Senate for six years. The President must be at least thirty-five years of age, and have unencumbered real estate to the value of 2,500 dollars, or 500*l*. Electors must be of negro blood, and owners of land. The natives of the country are not excluded from the franchise, but, except in the centres of civilisation, they take no part in political life. The official language of the Government is English.

President of Liberia.—Hon. Charles D. B. King (1928–32).

Vice-President.—Hon. Allen N. Fancy (1928–32).

Liberia is one of the original members of the League of Nations.

Area and Population.—Liberia has about 350 miles of coast line, extending from the British colony of Sierra Leone, on the west, to the French colony of the Ivory Coast on the east, and it stretches inland to a distance, in some places, of about 200 miles. The boundaries were determined by the Anglo-Liberian agreement of 1885 and the Franco-Liberian agreements of 1892 and 1907–10. Early in 1911 an agreement was concluded between the British and Liberian Governments transferring the territory of Kanre-Lahun to Sierra Leone in exchange for a strip of undeveloped territory of about the same area on the south side of Morro River, which now becomes the boundary.

The total area is about 43,000 square miles. The total population is estimated at 2,000,000 to 2,500,000, all of the African race. Since the organisation of the frontier force the Government has obtained complete control of Northern Liberia and of the Kroo countries in Southern Liberia. The indigenous natives belong in the main to six principal stocks: (1) the Mandingos (Muhammadan), (2) the Gissi; (3) the Gola, (4) the Kpweesi, (5) the Kru negroes and their allies, and (6) the Greboes. The Kru tribes are mostly Pagan. The number of American Liberians is estimated at about 20,000. About 60,000 of the coast negroes may be considered civilised. There is a British negro colony of about 500, and there are about 400 Europeans. The coast region is divided into counties, Bassa, Sino, Maryland, and Grand Cape Mount, each under a Government superintendent, and Montserrado, subdivided into 2 districts, each under a superintendent. Monrovia, the capital, has, including Krutown, an estimated population of 10,000, and is administered as a Federal District by a Municipal Board appointed by the President. It is one of the 15 ports of entry along the 350 miles of coast, the others being Liberian Jene (river port), Saywolu (river port), Robertsport (Cape Mount), Marshall (Junk), Grand Bassa, River Cess, Greenville (Sinoe), Nana Kru, Sasstown, Grand Cess, Harper (Cape Palmas), Kablaki (river port), Half Cavalla, and Webbo (river port). Other towns are Robertsport, Royesville, Marshall, Arthington, Careysburg, Millsburg, Whiteplains Bopora (native), Rocktown (native), Philadelphia, Cuttington, Upper Buchanan and Edina.

Religion and Education.—The Americo-Liberians are all Protestant (Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, or Methodist). There are several American missions at work and one French Roman Catholic. The Government educational system is supplemented by mission schools, instruction being given both to American and to native negroes. The Government has 22 schools with 700 pupils, and the missions 67 schools with 3,200 pupils. The Methodist Episcopalians have a college at Monrovia, as also have the African Methodist Episcopalians; the Protestant Episcopalians a college at Cape Palmas. The Government has a college with (1927) 9 professors and 143 students. A criminal code was enacted in 1900; the customs laws were codified in 1907.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (in American dollars) :—

	1921-22	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26
Revenue .	Dollars 507,955	Dollars 493,889	Dollars 499,728	Dollars 943,208	Dollars 962,570
Expenditure .	487,543	381,258	681,000	943,208	939,978

The customs duties for 1922-23 were 372,097 dollars; for 1923-24, 380,078 dollars; for 1924-25, 431,879 dollars; for 1925-26, 518,504 dollars.

In 1912 an international loan of 1,700,000 dollars was raised, secured by the Customs revenue, rubber tax, and tax on native labourers shipped from Liberia. British financial interests preponderate in the loan. It is further provided that for the security of the revenue a frontier police force sufficient for the maintenance of peace in Liberia shall be established, and that the United States shall designate trained military officers to organise the force. In 1924-25, 120,000 dollars were spent on the force.

Defence.—For defence every citizen from 16 to 50 years of age capable of bearing arms is liable to serve. The organised militia, volunteers, and police number about 5,000.

Production, Commerce.—The agricultural, mining, and industrial development of Liberia has scarcely begun. There are forests unworked; but the working of one para rubber plantation has begun, and rubber is being produced. In 1926 (August) there were six plantations of 10,000 acres each which were laid out with rubber trees from the nursery at Mount Barclay station in Johnsonville. The soil is productive, but cultivation is neglected; cocoa and cotton are produced in small quantities only, and indigenous coffee is the staple product. Piassava fibre, prepared from the raphia palm, palm oil and palm kernels, kola nuts, chillies, beni seed, coffee, annatto seed and rice are also produced. Beeswax is collected, and gum copal is found but is not collected. Tortoiseshell, improperly prepared, is sold in small quantities. In the forests there are rubber vines and trees of 22 species. Iron is worked by the natives. Gold in small quantities, tin, copper, zinc, monazite, corundum, lead, bitumen or lignite, and diamonds have been at different times found in the interior, but not as yet in payable form or abundance.

The trade for five years was as follows (in dollars) :—

—	1921	1922	1923	1924	1925
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Imports . . .	1,231,701	1,501,515	1,361,700	1,433,185	2,115,021
Exports . . .	819,594	1,045,382	1,166,735	1,416,896	1,911,059

The chief imports are rice, Manchester goods, gin, tobacco, building timber, galvanised roofing iron, ready-made clothing, and dried and preserved fish. The chief exports in 1927 were rubber, 175 tons; palm oil, 556,250 gallons; palm kernels, 8,900 tons; piassava fibre, 6,200 tons; coffee, 1,196 tons; ivory, 8,626 lbs.; ginger, and camwood. The trade in 1926 was chiefly with Germany, 753,143 dollars; United Kingdom, 323,466 dollars; Holland, 201,426 dollars; and the United States, 268,717 dollars.

According to Board of Trade returns, the value of the trade between the United Kingdom and Liberia was as follows in five years:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into U.K. from Liberia	61,187	111,807	84,078	61,080	63,666
Exports of U.K. produce to Liberia.	143,242	155,939	173,960	186,313	211,299

In 1925, 904 ships of 2,062,852 tons entered and cleared the ports of the Republic.

Communications.—There are no railways, and no vehicular means of transport in the country except motors and ox-carts. There are several motor roads. One from Monrovia to White Plains, a distance of 24 miles, is completed. Another is in course of construction from Monrovia to Sanoquellah, which will be 300 miles in length. At present 130 miles of this road have been completed for light motor traffic. The Brewerville-Belle Yalla road has been completed to a distance of 40 miles, and a road extending from Cape Palmas into the interior has been completed to a distance of 40 miles. The river St. Paul is navigable for 25 miles from the sea northwards (including creeks, for 38 miles), and various Liberians maintain steam launches thereon. The Liberian Government has a revenue cutter. There is a telephone line connecting Monrovia with Marshall and Grand Bassa. There is direct cable communication with Europe and New York. Of the two wireless stations at Monrovia only one is in operation.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The money chiefly used is British gold and silver, but there is a Liberian coinage in silver and copper. Official Accounts are kept generally in American dollars and cents, but commercial accounts are generally in English currency. The Liberian coins are as follows:—Silver, 50-, 25-, and 10-cent pieces; copper, 2- and 1-cent pieces.

Weights and measures are the same as Great Britain and the United States.

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd., has a branch at Monrovia, and agencies at other ports of the Republic.

LIECHTENSTEIN.

THE Principality of Liechtenstein, lying between the Austrian Land of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of St. Gallen and Graubünden, is a sovereign State consisting of the two counties of Schellenberg and Vaduz (formerly immediate fiefs of the Roman Empire). The former in 1699 and the latter in 1712 came into the possession of the house of Liechtenstein and, by diploma of January 23, 1719, granted by the Emperor Karl VI., the two lordships were constituted as the Principality of Liechtenstein. After the break-up of the Empire in 1806 the Principality was incorporated in the Rhine Confederation; from 1815 to 1866 it formed part of the German Confederation, since the break-up of which it has joined no similar union.

The Reigning Prince is Francis I., born August 28, 1853; succeeded his brother, February 11, 1929. The reigning family originated in the twelfth century, and traces its descent through free barons who in 1608 became princes of Liechtenstein. The monarchy is hereditary in the male line. The constitution, adopted in October 1921, provides for a Diet of 15 members elected for four years by direct vote on the basis of universal suffrage and proportional representation. The capital and seat of Government is Vaduz (pop. 1,405). The principality has a High Court. Since February 1921, Liechtenstein has had the Swiss currency, and since January, 1924, it has been included in the Swiss Customs Union; the posts and telegraphs are administered by Switzerland.

Area, 65 square miles; population, of German origin and nearly all Catholic, 1912, 10,716 (5,266 males and 5,450 females). The revenue for 1926 was 685,651 francs and the expenditure 552,555 francs. The inhabitants of Liechtenstein since 1867 have not been liable to military service. The Principality has no army (since 1868). The population is in great part agricultural, the chief products of the country being corn, wine, fruit, wood, and marble. The industries are cotton weaving and cotton spinning, leather goods, and pottery. The rearing of cattle, for which the fine Alpine pastures are well suited, is highly developed.

LITHUANIA.

(LIETUVA.)

LITHUANIA became a Grand Duchy in the early part of the thirteenth century. In 1386 the Grand Duke Jogaila embraced Christianity and married the Polish Queen Hedvig, thus becoming King of Poland. During the reign of Vytautas (Vitold) the Great (1392-1430) Lithuania reached the zenith of her power and prosperity, her frontiers extending from the Baltic to the Black Sea. After the death of Vytautas the Great, Polish influence gradually increased in Lithuania, and in 1569 the Lithuanians were forced to unite with the Poles at Lublin, the Lithuanians retaining their own treasury, laws, courts of justice, and army. Both countries elected the same king and had a common Seim (parliament).

At the end of the eighteenth century Lithuania shared the fate of Poland. Greater Lithuania fell under Russian rule, and Lithuania Minor was annexed by Prussia.

In 1917 a Lithuanian Conference of 200 representatives at Vilna elected a Lithuanian State Council (Taryba) and demanded the complete independence of Lithuania. The independence of the Lithuanian State was proclaimed on February 16, 1918.

On December 20, 1922, Lithuania received de jure recognition by the Great Powers. Russia had already accorded that recognition in the Treaty of Peace of July 12, 1920.

Constitution and Government.—The constitution adopted by the Constituent Assembly on August 1, 1922, and amended on May 15, 1928, declares that the State of Lithuania is an independent Democratic Republic. The Diet (or Seimas) is the exponent of the sovereign power of Lithuania, and makes laws, ratifies treaties with other States, approves the State budget and superintends the execution of the laws. The Executive Power is placed in the hands of the President of the Republic and of the Cabinet of Ministers. The President of the Republic is elected by the people for seven years, and he appoints the Minister-President (Premier), and all other Ministers, as recommended by the Premier. The President also appoints the higher military and civil officials of the State. In case of the absence or illness of the President, his place is to be taken by the Premier. All the acts of the President must be countersigned by the Premier or the proper Minister. The Cabinet of Ministers is responsible to the Diet and resigns on an expression of a lack of confidence by the latter. The Members of the Diet on entering the Cabinet of Ministers do not cease to be Members of the Diet.

All the citizens of Lithuania, without distinction of sex, nationality or religion, are equal before the law; there are no classes or titles. All citizens are also guaranteed inviolability of person, homes, and correspondence, and freedom of religion, conscience, press, speech, strikes, assembly and organisation.

The Diet of Lithuania is elected every five years by universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage according to the proportional system, the electoral unit being one representative to 50,000 inhabitants. The last parliament, elected in 1926, was dissolved in 1927.

On December 17, 1926, a coup d'état was carried out by army officers, after which the following appointments were made:—

President of Lithuania.—Antanas Smetona.

Prime Minister.—Augustinas Valdemaras.

For administrative purposes the territory of Lithuania is divided into 20 districts, of about 100,000 inhabitants each. The districts are divided into communities, with about 15 communities to each district. National minorities (Jews, Germans, and Poles) enjoy cultural autonomy.

Area and Population.—The Lithuanian Government claims that Lithuania consists of: (1) the whole of the former Russian Province of Kaunas (Kovno); (2) the Province of Vilnius (Vilna), minus the districts of Disna and Vileika; (3) a part of the Province of Gardinas (Grodno), north of the Niemen River and the narrow hinterland of the city of Gardinas (Grodno) in the south; (4) the Province of Suwalki minus the southern parts of the districts of Suwalki and Augustovo; (5), part of the Province of Courland between the old German frontier and the Holy Aa (Sventoji) River by the Baltic Sea.

The eastern frontier of these territories is defined in the Treaty of Peace between Lithuania and Russia, signed July 12, 1920, at Moscow, and runs as follows: Beginning at the Dvina River westward from Druja (estate of Safronovo), along the Drujka River, along the eastern shore of Lake Driviaty, southward through Koziany, Postavy, by the eastern shore of Lake Narocz, along the Narocz River; then it cuts in half the Molodecno railway junction, runs by Volozino, along the Beresina River, and further to the west along the Niemen to the Svislocz River; further on it circles the city of Gardinas at a radius of 15 to 20 versts to the south.

The northern frontier (with Latvia) almost coincides with the old boundary between the Provinces of Courland and Kaunas. A special arbitration convention was adopted by the Lithuanian and Lettish Governments on September 28, 1920, at Riga, according to which the British representative acted as arbiter in finally fixing the details of this frontier and determining the corrections to be made.

In the south (in the region of the Province of Suwalki) the frontier with Poland has not yet been conclusively agreed upon by Lithuania and Poland. Both Lithuania and Poland lay claim to Vilna, but though the Great Powers (on March 15, 1923) recognized the de facto boundary between the two countries as de jure, and though the League of Nations has endeavoured to bring about a solution of this problem, so far (March, 1929) no agreement has been reached.

This territory had, according to the statistics of 1914, an area of 82,000 sq. kilometres (31,652 square miles) and 4,800,800 inhabitants, viz.: the whole of the former Province of Kaunas, 39,900 sq. kilometres, and 1,857,100 inhabitants; 5 districts of the former Province of Vilnius, 29,800 sq. kilometres, and 2,075,700 inhabitants; 5 districts of the former Province of Suwalki, 9,800 sq. kilometres, and 718,000 inhabitants; also parts of the former Provinces of Courland and Gardinas, 2,500 sq. kilometres, and 150,000 inhabitants.

The Memel territory (area 2,447 sq. kilometres, population 145,000), which by the Treaty of Versailles was detached from Germany and placed under the control of the conference of ambassadors, was handed over to Lithuania on February 16, 1923, subject to certain conditions intended to regulate the use of the port by both Lithuania and Poland.

The population of Lithuania on January 1, 1928, was given as 2,286,368.

The Lithuanians claim that the capital of Lithuania is Vilnius (Vilna), with a population of 214,600 in 1914. Other large towns are: Kaunas (Kovno), temporary seat of the Government, 95,771; Gardinas (Grodno), 61,600; Klaipeda (Memel), 36,454; Suvalkai (Suvalki), 31,600; Siauliai (Shavli), 22,111; and Panevėžys (Poneviej), 19,884. Of these cities, Vilna, Grodno and Suvalki are in possession of Poland.

Religion.—In the three districts of Vilna, Kovno, and Suvalki, according to the census of 1923, Roman Catholics formed 85 per cent., Jews 7·7 per cent., Protestants and Calvinists 4 per cent., Greek Orthodox 2·7 per cent. In the Memel Territory Protestants form 90 per cent., Roman Catholics 5 per cent. In April, 1926, the Vatican decided to declare Lithuania a Church Province, with an Archbishop and four bishops.

Education.—In 1928 there were 2,401 primary schools with 3,466 teachers and 124,578 pupils, and 159 secondary schools with 23,112 pupils. There are 9 teachers' training colleges with 1,319 pupils. The University of Kovno which was opened on February 16, 1922, has (1928), 258 professors and teachers and 3,580 students. There are two academies of music, one art school and one academy of agriculture.

Finance.—The budget for 5 years is shown as follows:—

	1925	1926	1927	1928 <sup>1</sup>	1929 <sup>1</sup>
	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas
Revenue . . .	258,625,300	250,400,394	223,722,762	263,220,000	259,966,200

By the Treaty of Peace of Moscow, Russia took over, in place of an indemnity for the damage done by the Russian Army, the whole of the old Russian debt devolving on Lithuania; in addition, it was agreed to hand over to Lithuania 3,000,000 roubles in gold and to concede to Lithuania 100,000 hectares of forests.

On December 31, 1927, the foreign debt of Lithuania was: to the United States, 6,207,132 dollars; to Lithuanians in the United States, 1,846,350 dollars, United Kingdom, 150,000. Total external and internal debt on December 31, 1927, 88,971,993 litas.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory, beginning at the age of 21. Service in the active army is for 2 years. The establishment of the active army in 1928 was 1,850 officers and 22,000 men, organised in 3 divisions.

Production.—Lithuania is an agricultural country, and preponderantly rural in character; the resources of the country consist of timber and agricultural produce. Of the total area, 49·0 per cent. is arable land, 26·0 per cent. meadow and pasture land, 17 per cent. forests, and 8 per cent. unproductive lands. In 1928 in the territory administered by the Lithuanian Government, 5,200,000 hectares (about 13,000,000 acres), there was produced (in metric tons) rye, 483,500; wheat, 198,000; barley, 160,300; oats, 401,900; potatoes, 1,220,000; peas, 64,400; flax fibre, 35,000; flax-seed, 34,960.

In 1928 the country possessed 611,400 horses, 1,199,300 cattle, 1,467,800 sheep, and 1,060,400 pigs. Poultry-farming is considerably developed, particularly geese-rearing. Bee-keeping is also an important occupation.

Forests cover 1,956,000 acres. 62 per cent. of the forests consist of needle-bearing trees, mostly pines, and the remainder of leaf-bearing trees. In 1927, 80,500 tons of peat were produced.

Commerce.—Trade for five years:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas
Exports . . . . .	266,583,600	242,714,800	253,299,000	245,929,300	256,881,200
Imports . . . . .	206,533,800	252,702,800	240,760,800	265,694,000	291,091,400

In 1927 imports of textiles amounted in value to 45,561,600 litas, of food products (sugar, salt, herrings) to 48,952,200 litas, agricultural machinery 3,615,900 litas. Exports of timber in the same period were 20,864,500 litas, foodstuffs (corn, flour, eggs, meat, dairy products) 42,735,900 litas, flax and linseed 85,047,400 litas.

Of the imports in 1927, 17,924,700 litas came from Great Britain, 141,216,900 litas from Germany, 13,875,000 litas from Czechoslovakia. Of the exports in 1927, 61,075,800 litas went to Great Britain, 126,761,300 litas to Germany, and 21,851,400 litas to Latvia.

The chief articles of export are corn, cattle, hams, poultry, eggs, butter, timber, flax, linseed, hides, and wool. The imports are chiefly manufactured articles, fertilisers and agricultural machinery.

Total trade between Lithuania and Great Britain for five years (according to Board of Trade returns):—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Lithuania into Great Britain . . . . .	735,545	475,230	637,381	339,956	361,000
Exports to Lithuania from Great Britain . . . . .	315,057	296,957	150,578	234,865	352,107

A commercial treaty between Great Britain and Lithuania was signed on May 6, 1922.

Internal Communications—On December 31, 1927, the total length of railways was 1,543 kilometers (958 miles), of which 1,113 kilometers (687 miles) were broad gauge lines.

There are about 41,000 kilometers (25,461 miles) of roads in the country, while of the waterways those navigable for steamboats extend to 536 kilometers (364 miles); for rafts to 2,000 kilometers (1,242 miles); total, 2,586 kilometers (1606 miles). The river Niemen is navigable for about 270 days in the year; good for floating, 1,977 km.

Banking and Currency.—By a law promulgated on August 16, 1922, a national currency, based on the gold standard, with the Litas as unit, was introduced to replace the Ost mark, Ost rouble, and German mark hitherto in circulation but now withdrawn. The Litas contains 0.150462 grammes of pure gold, and is equivalent to a tenth of the American gold dollar. In this connection the Bank of Lithuania (Lietuvos Bankas) was established in August 1922, on joint-stock principles, 50 per cent. of the shares being held by the State and the balance being available for private subscription. The Bank's capital-stock is 12,000,000 litas. Foreigners may own one-third of the capital-stock. The Bank enjoys during twenty years the sole right of issuing bank-notes. Although under the law the bank-note issue calls for a gold cover of one-third, yet in practice the Government has decided that the actual security must represent 100 per cent. in the form either of gold or stable currencies backed by gold. On July 31, 1928, the bank-notes in circulation amounted to 85,560,000 litas. There are now eight private banks in Lithuania with a total capital of 80,285,423 litas.

The weights and measures are of the metric system.

LUXEMBURG.

Reigning Grand Duchess.—Charlotte born January 23, 1896, was the daughter of William Grand Duke of Luxembourg, Duke of Nassau (died February 25, 1912) and of Marie Anne, Princess of Braganza, born July 13, 1861, succeeded on the abdication of her sister Marie-Adelaide, on January 9, 1919; married to Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma on November 6, 1919.
Offspring :—Prince Jean, born January 5, 1921, Princess Elisabeth, born

December 22, 1922, Princess Marie-Adelaide, born May 21, 1924, Princess Marie-Gabrielle, born August 2, 1925, and Prince Charles, born August 7, 1927. Sisters of the Grand Duchess:—Princess Marie-Adelaide, born June 14, 1894, died January 24, 1924; Princess Hilda, born February 15, 1897; Princess Antoinette, born October 7, 1899; Princess Elisabeth, born March 7, 1901; Princess Sophie, born February 14, 1902.

The early history of Luxemburg may be divided into four periods, viz., from 963 to 1443, when the country was part of the Holy Roman Empire; from 1443 to 1506, the Burgundian period; from 1506 to 1714, the Spanish period; and from 1714 to 1795, the Austrian period. From 1795 to 1815 the Duchy was French. The Congress of Vienna made the Duchy into a Grand Duchy, and from 1815 to 1866 the Grand Duchy was included in the dissolved Germanic Confederation. By the Treaty of London, May 11, 1867, it was declared neutral territory, and its integrity and independence were guaranteed.

On September 28, 1919, a Referendum was taken in Luxemburg to decide on the political and economic future of the country. Those entitled to vote were men and women of 21 (voters on the register, 127,775; actual voters, 90,984). The voting resulted as follows:—for the reigning Grand Duchess, 66,811; for the continuance of the Nassau-Braganza dynasty under another Grand Duchess, 1,286; for another dynasty, 889; for a Republic, 16,885; for an economic union with France, 60,133; for an economic union with Belgium, 22,242. But France refused in favour of Belgium to consider the possibility of an economic union, and negotiations to this end between Belgium and Luxemburg were concluded on December 22, 1921, when the Chamber of the Grand Duchy passed a Bill for the economic union between Belgium and Luxemburg. The Agreement, which is for 50 years, provides for the disappearance of the customs barrier between the two countries and the use of Belgian currency in the Grand Duchy. It came into force on May 1, 1922.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution now in force was proclaimed on October 17, 1868; in 1919 some important changes were introduced into it, viz. the Constituent Assembly decided that the sovereign power resided in the Nation (Article 32); that all secret treaties were abolished (Article 37); that the deputies are to be elected on the basis of universal suffrage, pure and simple, by scrutiny of lists, according to the rules of proportional representation and in conformity with the principle of the smallest electoral quotient (Article 52).

The country is divided into four electoral districts: the South, North, Centre, and East. In order to qualify as an elector it is necessary to be a citizen (male or female) of Luxemburg and to have completed 21 years of age; to be eligible for election it is necessary to have completed 25 years of age and to fulfil the conditions required for active electorate. The electors may be called upon to record their votes by means of a referendum or plebiscite in all cases and under the conditions to be determined by law (Article 52). The Members of the Chamber of Deputies are elected for 6 years; half are renewed every 3 years (Article 56); they receive a salary which may not surpass 4,000 francs per annum; they are also entitled to receive a travelling allowance (Article 75).

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 52 members. The state of the parties (1928) is as follows:—Catholics, 24; Radicals, 8; Labour Party, 12; Independents, 8.

The head of the State takes part in the legislative power, exercises the executive power, and has a certain part in the judicial power. The Constitution leaves to the sovereign the right to organise the Government, which consists of a Minister of State, who is President of the Government, and of at least three Directors-General. The Cabinet, appointed July, 1926, is composed as follows:—

Minister of State and President of Government.—M. Bech.

Director-General of Justice and Home Affairs.—M. Dumont.

Director-General of Public Works, Trade and Industry.—M. Clemang.

Director-General of Finance and Social Welfare.—M. Dupong.

Besides the Government there is a Council of State. It deliberates on proposed laws and bills, on amendments that might be proposed; it also gives administrative decisions and expresses its opinion regarding any other question referred to it by the Grand Duke or by the Law. The Council of State is composed of 15 members chosen for life by the sovereign, who also chooses a president among them each year.

Area and Population.—Luxemburg has an area of 999 square miles, and a population (December 1927) of 285,524 (147,597 males and 137,927 females). Of these 237,191 were citizens and 48,333 foreigners. The population is Catholic, save (1927) 3,995 Protestants, 1,771 Jews, and 162 belonging to other sects. The chief town, Luxemburg, has 52,440 (1927) inhabitants. Other towns are Esch a Alz, the centre of the mining district, 27,143 inhabitants; Differdange, 16,242 inhabitants; Dudelange, 12,968 inhabitants; Rumelange, 5,275 inhabitants; and Diekirch, 3,958 inhabitants.

Education.—Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 13. In 1927 the primary schools had 946 teachers (465 women); there are 30 higher elementary schools, 3 classical schools, 2 commercial and industrial colleges, 2 girls' colleges, 4 technical schools, 2 teachers' training colleges (male and female), a mining school, a college of agriculture, and an academy of music.

Finance.—Estimated revenue and expenditure (including extraordinary) for six years (in francs):—

The debt on December 31, 1927, amounted to 432,649,255 francs.

The armed forces of the State number 250 men; and the police 180 men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is carried on by about 90,000 of the population (about 36 per cent.); 394,000 acres were under cultivation in 1926. The principal crops are oats and potatoes.

According to the latest census (December 1, 1925), the country possesses 18,328 horses, 100,925 head of cattle, 120,928 pigs, 9,993 sheep, and 10,563 goats.

The mining and metallurgical industries are the most important. The following table shows production and value for four years:—

MEXICO.

(REPÚBLICA MEXICANA.)

Constitution and Government.

MEXICO was annexed to the Spanish Crown by conquest in 1521, and for three centuries continued to be governed by Spain. In all 62 Spanish Viceroyalties ruled the Courts, from Antonio de Mendoza (1535-1550) to Juan O'Donojú (1821-1822). After three quarters of a century marked by stormy events (see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1928, p. 1099) the country settled down in 1876 to a long and quiet regime under the presidency of General Porfirio Díaz (died July 2, 1915), who ruled the country with the exception of four years (1880-4, General Manuel Gonzalez) until May 25, 1911, when he presented his resignation to Congress. Another period marked by coups d'état and civil war followed until 1920, when General Adolfo de la Huerta was elected Provisional President in May, and in September, 1920, the presidential elections returned General Alvaro Obregon. He was succeeded by President Calles (1924-28).

Provisional President.—Señor Emilio Portes Gil. (Elected by Senate and Chamber, September 25, in place of president-elect Obregon, who was assassinated; inaugurated November 30, 1928, to serve until February 5, 1930.)

A new Constitution, amending the Constitution of 1857, was promulgated on February 5, 1917. By its terms Mexico is declared a federative republic, divided into States, each of which has a right to manage its own local affairs, while the whole are bound together in the usual federal system. The powers of the National Government are divided into three branches, the legislative, executive, and judicial. The legislative power is vested in a Congress consisting of a House of Representatives and a Senate. Representatives, who must be at least 25 years of age, are elected for two years by universal suffrage at the rate of one member for 60,000 inhabitants. The Senate consists of fifty-eight members, two for each State, of at least thirty years of age, who are returned in the same manner as the deputies. The members of both Houses receive salaries of 6,000 dollars a year. Congress sits from September 1 to December 31. During the recess there is a Permanent Committee consisting of fourteen Senators and fifteen Representatives appointed by the respective Houses. The President is elected by direct popular vote in a general election, and holds office for four years. By a law of November, 1926, he may be elected for a second, but not consecutive term. Failing the President, Congress acts as an electoral college for the election of a successor.

According to the law of April 13, 1917, the administration is carried on, under the direction of the President and a Council, by seven Secretaries of State (Foreign Affairs, Interior, Finance and Public Credit, War and Marine, Communications and Public Works, Industry and Commerce, and Labour and Agriculture), and four Departments of State (Judicial, Educational, Statistics, and Public Health).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Mexico is divided into twenty-eight States, one Federal District, and two Territories. Each separate State has its own internal constitution, government, and laws; but inter-State customs duties are not permitted, though State taxes are levied. Each State has its governor, legislature, and judicial officers popularly elected under rules similar to those of the Federation. The Governors of the Federal District and the Territories are appointed by the President. All the States of the Mexican Union have their own special codes based, more or less, on those of the Federal District; but at the same time they must publish and enforce laws issued by the Federal Government.

Area and Population.

Mexico is situated between the parallels of 14°31' and 32°43' North, and 86°48' and 117°8' West, and comprises, according to Mexican estimates, 757,907 square miles, though English geographers compute it as 767,198 square miles, and German authorities as 767,290 square miles.

The population of the census of 1921 is shown in the following table. The capitals of the States and districts are in brackets.

Estimated population in 1927, 14,899,905.

Of the population in 1921, 7,003,785 were male and 7,330,995 were female, 4,179,449 were Indian, 8,504,561 of mixed race, 1,404,718 pure white, 144,094 of unknown racial origin, and 101,958 foreigners. There were 93,341 physical and mental defectives in 1921.

Of the foreign-born residents 26,675 were from Spain, 21,740 from the United States, 17,473 from Guatemala, 14,813 from China, 3,347 from Germany, and 3,229 from Great Britain.

The chief cities, 1921, are:—Mexico (capital), 906,063; Puebla, 95,535; Guadalajara, 143,376; San Luis Potosí, 57,353; Leon, 53,639; Monterrey, 88,458; Pachuca, 40,802; Zacatecas, 15,462; Guanajuato, 19,408; Mérida, 79,225; Querétaro, 30,073; Morelia, 31,143; Oaxaca, 27,792; Orizaba, 39,563; Aguascalientes, 48,041; Saltillo, 40,451; Durango, 39,091; Chihuahua, 37,078; Vera Cruz, 54,225; Toluca, 34,265; Celaya, 24,035.

Religion, Education, and Justice.

The prevailing religion is the Roman Catholic, but according to the new Constitution of 1917 the Church is separated from the State, and there is toleration of all other religions. No ecclesiastical body can acquire landed property. There are 7 archbishops and 23 bishops. In 1926 all foreign priests were expelled, and the property of the Church was declared to belong to the State. In 1921, there were 13,921,226 Roman Catholics; 73,951 Protestants; 22,718 of other faiths; 208,886 of unknown faith.

Education is free and compulsory, and, according to the Constitution of 1917, secular. In the Federal District and in the Territories education is controlled by the National Government; elsewhere the State authorities regulate education. The census of 1921 showed a percentage of illiteracy of 62.29 per 1,000. The Federal capital is the seat of the National University of Mexico, re-organised in 1910 (6,186 students in 1925). Another University, the National University of the South-east, was established at Mérida (Yucatan) in 1922. The University of Guadalajara (first founded in 1792, closed 1860) was reopened on October 12, 1925. Total number of students in all the universities on July 31, 1928, 9,879. Schools of all grades supported by the Federal Government, in 1927, had 252,988 boys and 161,276 girls; State and municipal schools had 402,616 boys and 348,525 girls. Private schools, 17,928. Total enrolment, 1,188,333. Ranches, mills, mines and other concerns maintained 1,704 schools in 1928, for employees and their children; this is obligatory under the constitution; enrolment totalled 70,901. There are also 65 normal schools, 20 law schools, 31 medical schools, 12 engineering schools, and 107 technical schools, with 78,403 students and 7,247 teachers. Expenditure on education by Federal, State and local authorities in 1925, 43,250,000 pesos.

The judicial power, which is entirely independent of the executive, consists of various Courts the magistrates of which are appointed by Congress. They include the Supreme Court, with 11 judges, nine Circuit Courts, with 3 judges, and District Courts, with 44 judges. Since 1923 judges have been appointed for life. The Federal District has a Higher Court of Justice composed of 14 magistrates; 10 civil, 8 penal and 8 correctional judges. In Tlalpam and Xochimilco there are Judges of First Instance with mixed jurisdiction, and Tacubaya has one civil judge and one penal. Popular juries are part of the judicial system. In the Territories there is a Judge of First Instance and a magistrate with authority of Second Instance, appointed like the others.

Federal Finance.

The ordinary receipts and expenditure for four years :—

	1926	1927 <sup>1</sup>	1928 <sup>1</sup>	1929 <sup>1</sup>
Revenue	gold pesos 332,000,000	gold pesos 308,000,000	gold pesos 290,000,000	gold pesos 288,428,600

The International Committee of Bankers estimates that on January 1, 1928, the funded debt (in default since 1914 and allowing for payments of 75,000,000 pesos between 1923 and 1927), stood at 1,091,485,429 pesos of which the Republic owed 872,913,327 and the National Railways, guaranteed by the Government, owed 268,435,903 pesos. These figures include capital and interest in arrears. The floating debt was 161,500,500 pesos. In addition there are Agrarian bonds outstanding of 220,000,000 pesos and damage claims by foreigners of 270,000,000 pesos, making a total of close to 2,000 million pesos. The service of the debt during the year 1929 will absorb 29,800,000 gold pesos or 13 per cent. of the estimated revenue. This does not completely cover the interest payments, estimated at 31,000,000 pesos and makes no provision for repayment of capital obligations.

Defence.

Every citizen is compelled to serve in the active army or in the National Guard. Supreme command is vested in the President, who exercises it through the Secretary for War. The active army which, on July 1, 1925, was restricted by Congress to 50,000 men, with a reserve of 833,000, consists of 50 battalions of infantry, 30 regiments of cavalry, 2 regiments of military police, 2 marine corps, 4 regiments of artillery and 3 detached companies. Its strength in 1927 was 17,232 officers and 54,813 other ranks. Military education is provided at a military college and in officers' training schools, and is compulsory in the colleges. The air force consists of 3 squadrons with 2 aerodromes.

The Navy, which is little more than a police force, consists of a coast defence vessel Anahuac of 3,162 tons, purchased from Brazil in 1924, and the gunboats Bravo and Agua Prieta. There is also an armed transport Progreso and some smaller vessels.

Production and Industry.

Mexico is well suited for agriculture. In the tropical regions, in the mountain valleys, and on the great central plateau are millions of acres of virgin soil and millions more which have been barely skimmed by the antiquated methods of agriculture in vogue.

Cultivated lands, 30,027,500 acres; pastoral lands, 120,444,200 acres; forest lands, 43,933,200 acres. Up to December 31, 1927, public and confiscated lands, amounting to 10,680,000 acres, had been distributed to 500,000 families in accordance with the agrarian laws. Principal products in 1927 were maize (2,061,719 metric tons), sugar (189,927 tons), sugar cane (4,640,439 tons), henequen (132,802 tons), wheat (313,497 tons), coffee (33,125 tons), beans (194,682 tons), tobacco (9,187 tons), alfalfa (1,620,490 tons in 1926). There were 236 tobacco factories in the Republic. The cotton production, 1927, was 33,823,251 kilos.

Timber lands are estimated to extend over 25,000,000 acres and to contain pine, spruce, cedar, mahogany, logwood, and rosewood.

Live-stock in 1926: Cattle, 5,584,892; horses, 1,035,782; mules, 686,213; donkeys, 850,041; sheep, 2,697,688; goats, 5,423,959; and pigs, 2,902,949.

The chief Mexican oil-fields may be grouped in five districts:—(1) the Ehano district, about 40 miles west of Tampico (largely the property of the Mexican Petroleum Company); (2) the Panuco district, including the Topila region; (3) the Huastica district, south of Tampico, in which the famous 'Castano,' 'Cerro Azul,' and 'Potrero del Llano' wells occur; (4) the Tuxpam district, including the Furbero region, south-west of Tuxpam; and (5) the Tehuantepec-Tabasco district, in the neighbourhood of Minititlan. The fields actually in exploration occupy a surface of 62,175 acres.

Petroleum was produced as follows: In 1925, 115,514,700 barrels; in 1926, 90,420,973 barrels; in 1927, 64,119,884 barrels; in 1928, 50,150,641 barrels. Of the 1928 output, 33,262,066 barrels were exported, against 48,421,034 barrels in 1927. This includes 5,000,000 barrels of Venezuelan oil imported and refined. There is a total of 2,005 storage tanks with a total capacity of 83,806,356 barrels. Mexico has the two largest petroleum refineries in the world, with capacities of 113,220 and 140,000 barrels respectively.

Mining is the principal industry in Mexico. It is carried on in 24 of the 31 States and Territories, nearly all the mines yielding silver either alone or in combination with other ores. The following table shows the quantities of mineral products for three years:—

Metals	1925	1926	1927
	Kilos	Kilos	Kilos
Gold . . . . .	24,541	24,083	22,586

Amorphous graphite . . . . .	5,830,226	4,484,548	6,510,000

Coal is produced only in the State of Coahuila (800,000 tons in 1926). Opals are mined in Querétaro.

In 1927 the 143 cotton textile factories had 30,790 looms, 832,193 spindles, consumed 84,229 bales of cotton and employed 41,214 workers. Woollen factories, in 1927, numbered 29, with capital of 10,874,224 pesos and 5,685 employees.

Shipping and Communications.

The most important ports are Vera Cruz and Tampico, both on the Gulf of Mexico. In 1927 there entered at all the ports, 4,822 vessels of 8,869,159 tons, and cleared 4,828 vessels of 8,875,771 tons.

In 1909 the main railway lines of Mexico were united in one corporation—The National Railways of Mexico—which own (1927) 14,410 miles, of which 14,186 were in operation. There are also 4,676 miles of private line.

On December 31, 1920, the Federal telegraph and telephone lines had a length of 25,015 miles of line and 55,304 miles of wire. There were other lines belonging to individual States and private persons totalling 17,010 miles of line and 20,706 miles of wire. Since July 1, 1923, Mexico City has had telephone connections with London and the Continent. There were in 1927 513 telegraph offices, 145 combined telegraph and telephone offices, and 24 wireless stations. Number of telegraph messages in 1927, 5,588,213. There is a State mail, express, and passenger airplane service between Mexico City and Tampico and Tuxpan, as well as over other routes.

There are about 2,696 post-offices. Total receipts, 1927, were 12,674,044 pesos; expenditures, 11,017,106 pesos.

A new wireless station has been established on the Island of Lobos, off the coast of Tampico, largely for the purpose of affording the various petroleum companies facilities for communicating with vessels while at sea. A trans-oceanic radio station has also been erected at Chapultepec Park, Mexico City.

Banking and Credit.

On January 1, 1928, the banks of the Republic had total capital and reserves of 301,446,799 pesos, deposits of 182,182,851 pesos, and cash on hand of 73,805,949.

On September 1, 1925, the National Bank of Mexico was established with an authorised capital of 100,000,000 gold pesos, of which 63,000,000 pesos was paid up by October 31, 1927. The Government holds 51 per cent. of the capital stock. Under Article 28 of the Constitution it has the sole right to issue notes. It now has 25 branches scattered over the country. On July 30, 1928, current deposits were 34,262,403 pesos and time deposits, 2,238,985 pesos; bills in circulation were 2,273,815 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a decree of April 29, 1925, the monetary unit is the gold peso or dollar, the legal value of which has been fixed at .75 gramme of pure gold. At par it equals 24.58*d.* or 50 cents. (U.S.). There are 20-peso (called astecas), 10-peso, 5-peso, 2.50-peso, and 2-peso gold coins, .900 fine. In 1919 American gold coin was decreed to be legal tender at the fixed rate of 1 dollar for 2 Mexican gold pesos. The silver coins are in denominations of 1-peso, 50 and 20 centavos, with a fineness of .720, except the 2-peso, which is .900 fine. Silver coins are legal tender up to 20 pesos. The bronze coins are in denominations of 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 centavos. There are 5-centavo nickel coins. From 1905 to 1925 the amount coined in Mexico was 666,223,446 pesos, including 383,441,966 pesos gold and 273,534,693 pesos silver. To reduce the surplus stock of silver coins which entailed a discount ranging up to 12.5 per cent. on silver, the Government during 1927 and 1928 called in and melted down 2,730,533 silver pesos; in all 5,000,000 pesos will be demonetized in order to bring the silver currency to par.

The weights and measures of the metric system were introduced in 1884 and their use is enjoined by law of June 19, 1895, though the old Spanish measures are still in use. The old weights and measures were:—

Weight.	1 libra = 0.46 kilogramme = 1.014 lb. avoirdupois.
	1 arroba = 25 libras = 25.357 lb. avoirdupois.
For gold and silver.	1 marco = $\frac{1}{2}$ libra = 4,608 granos.
	1 ochava = $\frac{1}{6}$ tomines.
	1 tomin = 12 granos.
	20 granos = 1 French gramme.
Length.	1 vara = 0.837 metre = 2 ft. 8 $\frac{1}{16}$ English in.
	1 legua comun = 6,666 $\frac{2}{3}$ varas.

MONACO.

Prince Louis II, born July 12, 1870, succeeded his father, Prince Albert, June 26, 1922.

Monaco is a small Principality on the Mediterranean, surrounded since 1860 by the French Department of Alpes Maritimes except on the side towards the sea. From 968 it belonged to the house of Grimaldi. In 1715 it passed into the female line, Louise Hippolyte, daughter of Antony I., heiress of Monaco, marrying Jacques de Goyon Matignon, Count of Thoiry, who took the name and arms of Grimaldi. Antony I died in 1731, Louise Hippolyte reigning only ten months and dying in 1732. She was succeeded by her husband under the name of Jacques I., who also succeeded Antony I. as Duc de Valentinois, and was in his turn succeeded by his son Honorius III. This Prince was dispossessed by the French Revolution in 1792, and died in 1795. In 1814 the Principality was re-established, but placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the Treaty of Vienna (1815).

In 1848 Mentone and Rocca-bruna revolted, and declared themselves free towns; in 1861 Charles III. ceded his rights over them to France, and the Principality thus became geographically an enclave of France, when the Sardinian garrison was withdrawn and the Protectorate came to an end.

On January 7, 1911, a Constitution was promulgated, which provides for a National Council elected by universal suffrage and scrutin de liste. The Government is carried out under the authority of the Prince by a Ministry assisted by a Council of State. The legislative power is exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which consists of 21 members elected for four years. The territory of the Principality is divided into three communes, administered by municipal bodies, in the election of which women are entitled to take part.

In 1819 the Government adopted a code founded upon the French codes and a Court of First Instance, as well as a Juge de Paix's Court. The Principality issues its own separate postage-stamps, and has its own flag.

The small harbour, absolutely sheltered, has an area of 42 acres, depth at entrance 90 feet, and alongside the quay 24 feet at least. The Customs duties are the same as in France.

The area is eight square miles. Population (census January 9, 1928), 24,927. Towns: Monaco, 2,085; La Condamine, 11,787; Monte Carlo, 11,055.

There has been since 1887 a Roman Catholic bishop. A semi-military police force has taken the place of the 'guard of honour' and troops formerly maintained. The value of the commerce of the Principality is not stated. The revenue is mainly derived from the gaming tables. The annual grant for the concession was 80,000*l.* in 1917; 90,000*l.* in 1927, and in 1937 it will be 100,000*l.*

MOROCCO.

(MOGHREB-EL-AKSA, i.e. The Farthest West).

Reigning Sultan.

Sidi Mohammed, third son of Moulay Youssef (reigned 1912-1927), was proclaimed Sultan on November 18, 1927, on the death of his father.

The introduction of Islam into Morocco about the end of the 7th century was followed by an exceedingly confused period, to the latter part of which belongs the great Arab influx of the 11th century known as the Hilalian invasion. This period witnessed the rise and fall of various Arab and Berber dynasties, notably the Idrissids, under whom Fez was founded or refounded early in the 9th century, and the Almoravids, the first of whom, Youssef Ben Tashfin, founded Marrakesh in 1062, and later extended his power over the north of Morocco and into Spain. His dynasty was followed by the Almohads (12th and 13th centuries), and the Merinids (13th to 16th centuries), whose decline led up to the establishment of the Sherifian dynasties, the Saadians (16th and 17th centuries) and the Alaouis. The latter claim descent from Ali, the son-in-law of the Prophet, through the Filali Sherifs of Taflelt. The present Sultan is the 18th of this dynasty.

Government.

The Empire of Morocco is in principle an absolute monarchy, in which the Sultan exercises supreme civil and religious authority; the latter in his capacity of Emir-el-Muminin or Commander of the Faithful. The majority of his subjects are Sunni Moslems of the Malekite school, the teachings of which formerly constituted the common law of Morocco. The country is now, however, divided into three Zones, in each of which a different system of government prevails as the outcome of the Protectorate Treaty concluded between France and the Sultan at Fez on March 30, 1912, the subsequent Convention between France and Spain of November 27, 1912, and the Convention between Great Britain, France and Spain of December 18, 1928 (modified July 17, 1928), providing for a special Statute in the Tangier Zone for twelve years.

The Sultan resides in the French Zone, usually at Rabat, but occasionally in one of the other traditional capitals, Fez, Marrakesh, and Meknes. His government, known as the Makhzen, consists of the Grand Vizier, the Vizier of Justice, the Vizier of 'Habous' or Pious Foundations, the Grand Vizier's Delegate for Public Instruction and the Presidents of the Sherifian High Court and the Religious Court of Appeal. All effective authority is exercised by the Protecting Power, which is represented by a Resident General. The latter is Minister of Foreign Affairs to the Sultan and head of an elaborate French administration which has its headquarters at Rabat and which is divided into departments for Finance, Economic Affairs, Public Instruction, etc. The French have created a large body of modern law in the form of Imperial Edicts or 'Dahirs' issued by the Sultan but promulgated and made executory by the Resident General, and decrees of minor importance, all of which similarly require French approval. Local administration is in the hands of native Pashas or Caids and French Controllers. The French civil administration has been made independent of military authority in the coastal regions and the Oudjda district adjoining Algeria. In other districts it is still subordinate to military authority. In the less settled districts in the south-east of the Zone the French control is less direct than elsewhere, and considerable authority is vested in the 'Grand Caids' or tribal overlords.

In the Spanish Zone the Sultan's powers are entirely delegated to a Khalifa, whom he chooses from a list of two candidates presented by the Spanish Government, and whose administration is controlled by a Spanish High Commissioner resident at Tetuan. Spanish authority in the Zone was consolidated by successful military operations terminating in the spring of 1927. Spain also has treaty rights in a narrow coastal strip at Ifni as well as in an area extending south from the river Dra and some distance inland from the coast about Cape Juby. She has never established herself effectively in the Ifni enclave. The connection of the area south of the Dra with the rest of Morocco is tenuous and it merges into the Spanish Rio de Oro further south.

The 1923 Tangier Statute came into force on June 1, 1925, but did not receive the adhesion of all the Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras of April 7, 1906. It was modified by a Protocol signed at Paris on July 25, 1928, to which Italy, one of the previously non-adhering powers, was a party. The Zone is permanently neutralised and demilitarised. The régime is one of autonomy, and legislative power is vested in an international Assembly of 27 members, but the parties to the Statute agreed on certain regulations and fiscal enactments which were not to be modified for two years, as well as on a special code of law. A Committee of Control, composed of the Consuls of the Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras, is invested with a right of veto and certain other powers. The administration of the Zone is entrusted to an administrator, with assistant administrators for finance, health, etc., and justice. These officials are French, British, Spanish, and Italian respectively for the first six years. The Sultan is represented by a Mendoub, who is ex-officio President of the Assembly and who deals more particularly with native affairs.

French Resident General.—Monsieur Lucien Saint (appointed January 2, 1929).

Spanish High Commissioner.—General Conde de Jordana.

Khalifa for Spanish Zone.—Sidi Muley Hassan Ben el Mehedi.

Mendoub of Tangier.—Si Mehemed Et-Tazi.

Administrator of Tangier Zone.—Monsieur Paul Alberge.

Area and Population.

The French Zone comprises the whole of Morocco (except the Ifni enclave and the Cape Juby area) from the Atlantic to the Algerian frontier, and from the confines of the Sahara to the boundary of the Spanish Zone as agreed to in 1912. The Franco-Spanish boundary has not been fully delimited. It follows a generally eastern direction from a point on the Atlantic about 16 miles south of Larache to the river Moulouya, which completes the boundary to the Mediterranean. The Spanish Zone comprises the area between this line and the sea, with the exception of the small territory around Tangier which is included in the international zone. The southern and eastern boundaries of Morocco being largely indeterminate, no exact estimate can be made of the total area, but it may be estimated as follows:—

French Zone	approximately	200,000 square miles.
Spanish Zone	"	18,800 " "
Tangier Zone	"	225 " "
Total . . .		218,525

The native population consists mainly of Islamised Berbers and Arabs dating from the great invasions of the Middle Ages. These elements have to some extent intermixed with each other and with negro stocks. There is a large native Jewish population, mostly in the towns. Since 1912 the European element has greatly increased, especially owing to the influx of French into the towns of the French Zone and of a fair number of agricultural settlers, also mostly French. A census of the French Zone taken in March, 1926, puts the population at 4,016,882 native Moslems, 107,552 native Jews and 104,712 foreigners; total 4,229,146. That of the Spanish Zone may be put at something under 1,000,000, and that of the Tangier Zone at about 80,000.

The following table shows the estimated population of the principal towns, based in the case of the French Zone on the revised results of the 1926 census of the population:—

—	Europeans	Moslems	Jews	Total
French Zone:—
Casablanca . . .	34,984	2,134	19,490	106,608
Fez . . .	3,559	70,060	7,553	81,172
Kenitra . . .	3,901	5,553	477	9,931
Marrakesh . . .	3,652	132,893	12,718	149,263
Mazagan . . .	1,638	14,141	3,885	19,159
Meknes . . .	4,923	18,682	6,325	29,980
Mogador . . .	835	9,886	7,730	18,401
Oudjda . . .	8,780	9,751	1,445	19,976
Onezzan . . .	594	10,952	1,364	12,910
Rabat . . .	13,916	20,452	8,676	38,044
Saffi . . .	1,395	21,347	4,172	26,914
Salé . . .	1,069	18,090	1,806	20,965
Taza . . .	2,284	7,217	105	9,606
Spanish Zone:—
Alcazar . . .	1,500	10,000	1,250	12,750
Arzila . . .	1,000	1,600	500	3,100
Iarache . . .	6,000	7,500	2,000	15,500
Tetuan . . .	6,500	13,000	4,500	24,000
Tangier . . .	10,000	35,000	15,000	60,000

There are important British colonies at Casablanca (about 700), and Tangier (650). Spaniards form an important element in the European population of the coast towns.

The principal languages are Moorish, Arabic, and numerous Berber dialects. The use of French for official and business purposes is very widespread.

Education.

The bulk of the native population is illiterate. There are numerous Koranic schools imparting a very elementary education, and a number of higher schools attached to mosques. The most notable is the Kairooeen University at Fez, which is highly reputed in the Islamic world. In the French Zone education on European lines is given in the French schools, and schools provided by the Protectorate for Moslem natives. There were in 1926 for Europeans 98 French primary schools, 20 private schools, 3 technical schools and 8 secondary schools, besides an industrial and commercial school at Casablanca and an Institut de Hautes Études Marocaines at Rabat; for Moslems 72 primary schools, 5 schools for sons of notables, 2 colleges at Rabat and Fez and 13 technical schools. Sections for training teachers were added to the boys' and girls high schools at Rabat in 1928. The Italian Government maintains schools at Rabat and Casablanca. Jewish education has made great progress since 1912 under the joint auspices of the Protectorate and the Alliance Israélite. There were in 1926, 32 Franco-Jewish schools and one school for domestic economy. Research work is done at the Institut Scientifique Chérifien at Rabat.

There are State schools in the chief towns of the Spanish Zone, also certain Hispano-Arabic schools for education of natives. The Alliance Israélite has schools in Tetuan and Larache, and extensive premises for a native school of Arts and Industries are being erected in Tetuan.

In the Tangier Zone the education of native Moslems is mainly confined to the elementary Koranic schools. The Government of the French Protectorate and the Spanish Government, however, maintain several primary and elementary schools for natives, and there are French technical schools for boys and girls. There are several primary and secondary schools for Jews maintained by the Jewish community but connected with the Alliance Israélite. The French Protectorate and Spanish Governments also maintain a number of primary and secondary schools for European boys and girls, to some of which natives are admitted, and there is an Italian school with primary and secondary classes for Europeans as well as natives.

Justice.

French Zone.—Native justice is administered by religious courts and in a large range of criminal and civil cases by the Pashas and Caid. Under the Protectorate two Courts of Appeal corresponding to these jurisdictions have been set up at Rabat. French Courts modelled on those in France were created in 1913, and deal with cases brought by or against French and other foreigners, except cases against British and United States citizens, who retain capitulatory rights and are justiciable in their own Consular courts. The French Courts are the Court of Appeal at Rabat, Courts of First Instance at Rabat, Casablanca, Oudjda, Marrakesh and Fez, and twelve tribunaux de paix. They administer specially drawn-up codes, which inter alia provide for the application of the national law in matters affecting the personal status of foreigners. Rabbinical Courts deal with matters affecting the personal status of Jews.

Spanish Zone.—Native and Jewish justice is similar to that in the French Zone, except that all criminal cases are tried in the Spanish Courts. These consist of Audiencia, or Supreme Court, Court of First Instance, and Tribunaux de Paix. As in the French Zone, British subjects and American citizens are justiciable in their own Consular Courts. Dutch subjects also retain capitulatory rights in the Spanish Zone.

Tangier Zone.—Native justice is administered as in the French Zone, the Mendoub having a jurisdiction similar to that of Pashas and Caids. The Statute provides for a Mixed Tribunal which deals with all cases involving foreigners, except the subjects of the U.S.A. which have not adhered to the Convention and still claim capitulatory rights.

The following are the chief items of estimated income for 1928 in francs:—Direct taxes, 170,521,000; indirect taxes, 338,209,000; monopolies, 62,628,000. The main items of estimated expenditure are:—Public debt and Civil List (now including bulk of contribution to French military budget), 161,822,057; Residency General, 59,454,550; Justice and General Administration, 82,103,815; Financial Services, 59,476,209; Economic Services, 182,479,255; Social Services, 65,206,379. There are two special budgets of expenditure chargeable to loans and connected operations (Frs. 220,069,800 in 1928), and expenditure chargeable to reserve and 'specially affected resources,' including the 'Taxe Spéciale' provided for in the Act of Algierais (Frs. 109,566,950 in 1928).

The Moroccan debt consists of French loans (1904, 1910, 1914, 1918, and 1920). The 1904 loan amounted to 62,500,000 francs and bears interest at 5 per cent. The 1910 loan was for 101,124,000 francs and also bore interest at 5 per cent. The 1914 loan, guaranteed by the French Government, was for 170,250,000 francs. By a law dated March 25, 1916, the 1914 loan was increased to 242,000,000 francs. The first issue of 70,250,000 in July, 1914, was at 4 per cent., and the second issue 171,750,000 in March, 1918, was at 5 per cent. By the law of August 19, 1920, a further loan, also guaranteed by the Government, was authorised for 744,140,000 francs. Of this amount 300 million francs had been issued by 1923, after which no further issue was made. Provision was made in 1928 for the issue, not yet effected, of a new loan of 819,822,000 francs in which is to be merged the balance of the 1920 loan not already earmarked for expenditure. The finance of the French Zone has been facilitated by the accumulation of a considerable reserve fund, the ordinary budget having yielded large surpluses in recent years.

The budget of the Spanish Zone for 1928 balanced at 55,913,441 pesetas by the help of a subvention from the Spanish Treasury.

The principal revenue of the Tangier Zone is from Customs and Consumption duties. The net revenue for 1927 amounted to 22,763,505 francs and the expenditure to 17,163,484. The Budget for 1929 provides for a revenue of 23,971,500 francs and an expenditure of 23,969,538. A reserve fund of some 4 million francs has been maintained. This it is proposed to apply gradually to new public works.

Defence.

The Sherifian army as such no longer exists, except for the Black Guard or Sultan's bodyguard. The military forces in the French Zone are made up of drafts (consisting largely of African troops) from the French Metropolitan and Colonial armies, a portion of the Foreign Legion and native levies of various kinds. Following on the termination of the Riff war a Presidential decree of October 3, 1926, placed the army under the control of the Resident General for all purposes except actual operations, and directed that the regular land forces should be organised in three divisions and two mixed brigades. The French budget for 1929 provided for 2,793 officers and 67,366 men to be employed in Morocco. Military expenditure in 1929, 811,104,860 francs, including 26,350,000 francs from the Protectorate. The composition of the Spanish forces in the Spanish Zone is in the main similar to that of the French. The Tangier Zone is demilitarised. The 1923 Statute as revised in 1923 provides for a native gendarmerie not exceeding 400 men, to be reduced after 12 months to 250, under a Spanish officer. Pending the organization of this force the protection of the Zone is assured by two native tabors maintained by the French and Spanish authorities under officers of those nationalities. The total strength of this force is at present 500 men.

Production and Industry.

French Zone.—Agriculture is by far the most important industry. The total agricultural area is estimated at about 23,800,000 acres, not including forests. Forest land is estimated at about 3,700,000 acres, of which one-third lies within the agricultural area. The principal crops are cereals, especially wheat and barley; beans, chickpeas, fenugreek and other legumens; canary-seed; cumin and coriander; linseed; olives; vines and other fruits, especially almonds. The approximate yield of the principal crops (in metric quintals of 220 pounds) in 1926-27 was as follows:—barley, 7,452,959; wheat, 6,408,811; beans, 179,254; oats, 192,175; maize, 1,232,641; chickpeas, 128,646; linseed, 99,453.—Endeavours are being made to stimulate the production of other crops, e.g. cotton. Market-gardening for export has become important in the neighbourhood of Casablanca. The almost universal wild palmetto is put to various uses, including the manufacture of crin végétal. The trees grown include cork, cedar, arar, argan, oak, and various conifers. In 1926-27 there were 4,390,883 olive trees, 229,884 orange and lemon trees, 294,547 palm trees (dates), 1,105,637 almond trees, and 4,091,329 fig and other trees. The argan forests inland from Mogador produce a fruit rich in oil. Tizra wood is exported for tanning purposes. Gums are produced in considerable quantities. Stock-raising is an increasing industry. The estimate of the animals in the Zone in 1926 was:—cattle (bovine), 1,932,840; sheep, 9,248,462; goats, 3,037,731; pigs, 59,811; horses, 190,251; asses, 562,835; camels, 117,917.

The bulk of the land is held by natives, who cling to primitive methods. There are now, however, a fair number of European settlers. The number of exploitations was estimated in 1927 at 2,198, of which 2,000, representing an area of 1,500,000 acres, were in French hands. Work was started in 1927 on a considerable programme of irrigation works, which is to include barrages in the rivers Beth, Moulouya, Mellah, Nefis, Oum-er-Rebia, Derna, Tessaout and El-Akhdar.

The principal mineral exploited is phosphate, the output of which (under a State monopoly) has grown rapidly from 8,232 tons in 1921 to 885,720 tons in 1926, 1,183,469 tons in 1927 and 1,337,100 tons in 1928. The tenor is very high (76 per cent.). Lead ore and manganese are produced in exportable quantities principally in Eastern Morocco. Prospecting for other minerals including gold, silver, iron, tin, copper, antimony, zinc and petroleum is active in many parts of the zone but the output has hitherto been small.

The coasts abound in fish. The chief fishing centres are near Casablanca and at Fedhala, which possesses an important preserving industry.

Pending the realisation of the great scheme for providing a central supply of electrical energy for practically the whole zone by harnessing the water power of the Oum-Er-Rebia, a large power station has been erected at Casablanca and local supplies exist in various other towns.

A great number of miscellaneous industries designed partly to supply local requirements of goods previously imported have grown up in recent years. Among them are flour mills, breweries, soap and candle factories, cement factories, etc., etc. The total number of European industrial establishments in 1926 was estimated at 600, employing 11,000 persons.

Spanish Zone.—Agriculture is potentially important, but is carried on by natives in primitive fashion. European colonisation is at present almost entirely confined to the towns, but is spreading from the new Rifian township of Villa Sanjarjo into the fertile Guis valley, which was once Abdel Kerim's headquarters. Iron ore is mined and exported from the Melilla district. The Jebala and Ghomara areas are reputed to be rich in mineral wealth, but the disturbed state of the country has in the past prevented any systematic exploitation. Fishing, largely tunny, is an important industry. No other considerable industries exist.

Tangier Zone.—The agricultural output, consisting principally of wheat, barley and chickpea, is insufficient for the needs of the population. The most important single industry is the manufacture by a Régie of cigarettes for the whole of Morocco. This employs 700 persons. There are also important fisheries and preserving factories and a certain amount of market gardening for local requirements.

Spanish Zone.—The principal imports are wines, textiles, tea, sugar, candles. Supplies for military purposes form a large proportion of the total. The principal exports are eggs, live-stock, iron ore and agricultural products. Imports in 1926 totalled 94 million pesetas; of this amount Spain provided 52 million pesetas; France 14 millions, United Kingdom 7 millions, and U.S.A. 5 millions. Exports totalled 17 million pesetas, of which Spain took 16 millions.

Tangier Zone.—Imports and exports for five years:—

Shipping and Communications.

Shipping entered (in foreign trade) in the ports of French Zone and Tangier in 1927:—

Nationality	Number of vessels			Tonnage
	Casablanca	Other ports in French Zone	Tangier	Casablanca	Other ports in French Zone	Tangier
French . . . .	615	200	264	1,145,540	160,880	442,718

Totals . . . .	1,323	390	1,615	2,163,543	257,545	1,557,188

Casablanca possesses a fully equipped port, Kenitra a smaller up-river one. Modern ports are under construction at Rabat and Tangier. Fedhala can accommodate vessels up to 4,000 tons which supply important oil storage stations. Mazagan and Mogador have lighter ports and another is under construction at Saffi.

The ports in the Spanish Zone are relatively unimportant, the bulk of the trade being done through Tangier, Ceuta and French Zone ports.

Normal gauge (1'44) railways connect:—Fez-Petitjean (112 km.); Petitjean-Arbaoua (88 km.); Petitjean-Rabat (123 km.); Rabat-Casablanca (89 km.); Casablanca-Marrakesh (250 km.), with a branch from Ber Reshid to Kourigha for phosphates. The first two form part of the Tangier-Fez railway, which was completed and opened to traffic in July 1927, and the total length of which is 310 km. Narrow-gauge (60 cm.) railways connect:—Oudjda-Taza-Fez (401 km.); Guercif-Ksabi (247 km.); Bir Tantom-Ahermouman (40 km.); Kenitra-Ouezzan (157 km.); Rabat-Khemisset (94 km.); Ain Defali-Fes El Bali (65 km.); El Tleta-Meshra El Hader (54 km.); Casablanca-Caid Tounsi-Mazagan (238 km.).

The existing railways in the Spanish Zone are Ceuta-Tetuan (41 km.); Nador-Tistutin (36 km.); and Larache-Alcazar (40 km.), besides the portion of the Tangier-Fez railway which crosses the zone.

On January 1, 1927, there were completed 1,779 miles of first-class roads and 669 miles of second-class. The Spanish Zone has about 350 miles of good roads suitable for traffic. The roads in the Tangier Zone have been considerably improved since the coming into force of the Statute. There are now about 65 miles of urban and rural roads.

There is a daily aeroplane service between Toulouse and Casablanca via Tangier and Rabat, and a weekly service between Casablanca and Dakar. There is also a daily service between Seville and Larache.

A Sherifian postal service under French management exists in the French and Tangier zones. European mails are conveyed by steamer services from Marseilles and Bordeaux, overland through Spain, and by daily steamers between Algieras and Tangier and increasingly by air from Toulouse. The Sherifian service in 1926 received 26,483,300 letters, 2,866,400 registered letters, 584,950 parcels and 9,697,000 printed papers; and despatched 32,657,500 letters, 1,924,900 registered letters, 51,978 parcels and 4,291,500 printed papers. The Spanish authorities maintain the ordinary postal service in the Spanish Zone. Spain retains a post-office in Tangier, and Great Britain maintains the only foreign postal service still existing in Morocco as a whole, with offices at Rabat, Casablanca, Mazagan, Saffi, Mogador, Marrakesh, Fez, Tetuan, Larache, Arzila and head office at Tangier.

The total length of telegraph lines open to the public in the French Zone on December 31, 1926, was about 1,470 miles. In 1926, 1,114,832 telegrams were received and 1,006,028 despatched, exclusive of 224,486 received and 149,997 despatched free of charge (official, etc.). All important centres in the Spanish Zone are connected by land lines. Communication between Morocco and Europe is maintained by cables between Casablanca and Brest, Tangier-Oran-Marseilles, Tangier-Gibraltar, Tangier-Cadiz, Larache-Cadiz via Algeciras. The French Protectorate administration maintains wireless stations at various places in the French Zone and also at Tangier.

Telephone systems exist in all the principal towns of the French Zone and there is a complete inter-urban connection. In 1923 there were in the Zone 4,764 subscribers and 4,185,189 messages sent. Urban services exist in the principal towns of the Spanish Zone and at Tangier. Ceuta is now connected with the European system.

Currency, Weights, and Measures.

Since the withdrawal of the Hassani currency in 1920 the franc has been the sole currency in the French Zone. Measures were taken later to protect the note-issue of the Moroccan State Bank from the competition of Algerian and French notes, and steps were taken at the end of 1924 to make those measures really effective. The Moroccan franc (State Bank notes of all denominations from frs. 5 upwards) was in 1928 placed on the same gold basis as the French franc. It is also proposed to mint silver coins of frs. 10 and frs. 20 for use in the hinterland, where paper money is still not very popular. The metric system of weights and measures became in 1923 the sole legal system.

Spanish currency circulates in the Spanish Zone together with the old Hassani silver currency. The latter has undergone many vicissitudes since it was the legal currency (concurrently under the Act of Algeciras of 1906 with Spanish money) for the whole of Morocco. It is now relatively stable at an exchange of Pesetas Hassani 50 to the £ stg.

Moroccan francs and Spanish money are legal tender in the Tangier Zone. The Peseta Hassani continues to circulate freely.

The principal native measures still in current use are:—

Weight.—1 Kantar = 100 Rotls. 1 Rotl = 16 ookeyas. The Rotl varies widely round about 2 lbs. Capacity.—The mudd, which varies by locality. Length.—1 Kama = 50 inches. 1 Dra = 20 inches. 1 Kala = 22 inches.

Diplomatic and Consular Representatives of Great Britain in Morocco.

Under the Tangier Convention of December 18, 1923, the diplomatic agencies maintained by the signatory Powers were suppressed.

Consul-General at Tangier.—Hugh Gurney, C.M.G., M.V.O.

Consul-General at Rabat.—Sir Andrew Ryan, K.B.E., C.M.G.

Consul at Tangier.—William Linskill Bond.

There are also Consuls at Casablanca and Tetuan (Vice-Consul with local rank of Consul); and Vice-Consuls at Mazagan, Safi, Mogador, Marrakesh, Fez and Larache.

NEPÁL.

An independent Kingdom in the Himálayas, between 26° 25' and 30° 17' N. lat., and between 80° 6' and 88° 14' of E. long.; its greatest length 500 miles; its greatest breadth about 150; bounded on the north by Tibet, on the east by Sikkim, on the south and west by British India.

The sovereign is His Majesty Mahárájadhírāja Tribhubana Bir Bikram Jung Bahádúr Shah Bahádúr Shumshere Jung, who was born on June 30, 1906, and succeeded his father on December 11, 1911. The Prince-Royal and Heir-apparent was born on June 11, 1920. The government of Nepál is a military oligarchy. All power is in the hands of the Prime Minister, to whom it was permanently delegated by the Mahárájadhírāja Surendra Bikram Shah under pressure of the Bharadárs or nobles of the State in 1867. The present Prime Minister is General His Highness Projwal Nepál Tárádhishk Mahárájá Sir Chandrá Shumshere Jung, Bahádúr Rána, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., D.C.L., who was appointed on June 26, 1901. He holds the rank of General in the British army. The office of Prime Minister is always held by a member of his family, the succession being determined by special rules.

The Gurkhas, a Rájpút race originally from Udaipur in Rajputana, who had settled in the province of Gurkha in Nepál, overran the whole country during the latter half of the eighteenth century, and have maintained their supremacy ever since. A commercial treaty between India and Nepál was signed in 1792, and a British Resident was sent to reside at Kátmándu, but was recalled two years later. A frontier outrage, in 1814, compelled the Indian Government to declare war; and a British force advanced to within three marches of the capital. Peace was concluded and the Treaty of Sagauli signed in December 1815. Since then the relations of the British with Nepál have been friendly. In 1854 hostilities broke out between the Nepalese and Tibetans, and in 1856 a Treaty was concluded between the Nepalese and Tibetan Governments by which the Tibetans bound themselves to pay an annual sum of Rs.10,000 to Nepal, to encourage trade between the two countries, and to receive a Representative of Nepál at Lhasa. Besides, trade agents are maintained at Gyantse, Kuti, Kerrong, and other trade marts in Tibet.

In accordance with the treaty of Sagauli, which amongst other things provides that accredited ministers of each shall reside at the Court of the other, a British Envoy, with a small escort of Indian sepoy, lives at the capital; but he does not interfere in the internal affairs of the State.

A fresh treaty was signed on December 21, 1923. By it all previous treaties, agreements and engagements since and including the Treaty of Sagauli were confirmed, and the British and Nepalese Governments acknowledged one another's independence, internal and external.

Area and Population.—Area about 54,000 square miles ; population estimated at about 5,600,000. The estimated gross revenue is 15,000,000 rupees. The races of Nepál, besides the dominant Gurkhas, include earlier inhabitants of Tartar origin, such as Magars, Gurungs, and Bhotias. The Newars, who came from Southern India, live in the valley or adjacent to it.

Capital, Kátmádu, 75 miles from the Indian frontier ; population about 80,000, and of the surrounding valley 300,000.

Religion.—Hinduism of an early type is the religion of the Gurkhas, and is gradually but steadily overlaying the Buddhism of the primitive inhabitants.

Defence.—The Army consist of about 45,000 men, mainly infantry, of whom about 20,000 are regulars. The armament comprises about 15,000 magazine '303 rifles, 25,000 Martini-Henry rifles, 110 machine or Lewis guns, 30 modern, 12 fairly modern and about 240 old-fashioned guns.

Trade.—The principal articles of export are cattle, hides and skins, opium and other drugs, gums, resins and dyes, jute, wheat, pulse, rice and other grains, clarified butter, oil seeds, spices, tobacco, timber, saltpetre. The chief imports are cattle, sheep and goats, salt, spices, sugar, tobacco, drugs and dyes, petroleum, leather, brass, iron and copper wares, raw cotton, twist and yarn, silk, cotton and woollen piece goods. Nepál possesses very valuable forests in the southern part of the country.

Slavery was entirely abolished in the country by the Maharaja in 1924-6.

A telephone connects the capital with Birganj near the southern frontier. In February, 1927, the first railway into Nepál (metre gauge), from Raxaul on the Bengal & North-Western Railway to Amlekhganj, a distance of 25 miles, was opened. A ropeway was opened at about the same time for the carriage of goods over the last 14 miles of the road from Raxaul into the Kathmandu valley. A topographical survey of the country by Indian personnel of the Government of India was completed in 1927.

The silver mohar is valued at 6 annas and 8 pies of British Indian currency. Copper pice, of which 50 go to a silver mohar, are also coined. The Indian rupee passes current throughout Nepál.

NETHERLANDS (THE).

(KONINKRIJK DER NEDERLANDEN.)

Reigning Sovereign.

Wilhelmina Helena Pauline Maria, born August 31, 1880, daughter of the late King Willem III., and of his second wife, Princess Emma, born August 2, 1858, daughter of Prince George Victor of Waldeck; succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, November 23, 1890; came of age August 31, 1898, and was crowned September 6 of that year; married to Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, February 7, 1901. Offspring: Princess Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, born April 30, 1909.

The royal family of the Netherlands, known as the House of Orange, descends from a German Count Walram, who lived in the eleventh century. Through the marriage of Count Engelbrecht, of the branch of Otto, Count of Nassau, with Jane of Polanen, in 1404, the family acquired the barony of Breda, and thereby became settled in the Netherlands. The alliance with another heiress, only sister of the childless Prince of Orange and Count of Châlons, brought to the house a rich province in the south of France; and a third matrimonial union, that of Prince Willem III. of Orange with a daughter of King James II., led to the transfer of the crown of Great Britain to that prince. Previous to this period, the members of the family had acquired great influence in the United Provinces of the Netherlands under the name of 'stadhouders,' or governors. The dignity was formally declared to be hereditary in 1747, in Willem IV.; but his successor, Willem V., had to fly to England, in 1795, at the invasion of the French republican army. The family did not return till November, 1813, when the United Provinces were freed from French domination. After various diplomatic negotiations, the Belgian provinces, subject before the French revolution to the House of Austria, were ordered by the Congress of Vienna to be joined to the Northern Netherlands, and the whole to be erected into a kingdom, with the son of the last stadhouder, Willem V., as hereditary sovereign. In consequence, the latter was proclaimed King of the Netherlands at the Hague on the 16th of March, 1815, and recognised as sovereign by all the Powers of Europe. The union thus established between the northern and southern Netherlands was dissolved by the Belgian revolution of 1830, and their political relations were not readjusted until the signing of the treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which constituted Belgium an independent kingdom. King Willem I. abdicated in 1840, bequeathing the crown to his son Willem II., who, after a reign of nine years, left it to his heir, Willem III. This king reigned 41 years, and died in 1890; in default of male heirs, he was succeeded by his only daughter Wilhelmina.

The Sovereign has a civil list of 1,200,000 guilders. There is also a large revenue from domains, and in addition an allowance of 100,000 guilders for the maintenance of the royal palaces. The family of Orange is, besides, in the possession of a very large private fortune, acquired in greater part by King Willem I. in the prosecution of vast enterprises tending to raise the commerce of the Netherlands.

Government and Constitution.

I. CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The first Constitution of the Netherlands after its reconstruction as a Sovereign State was promulgated in 1814, and was revised in 1815 (after the addition of the Belgian provinces, and the assumption by the Sovereign of the title of King); in 1840 (after the secession of the Belgian provinces); in 1848, 1884, 1887, 1917, and 1922. According to this charter the Netherlands form a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture: in default of male heirs, the female line ascends the throne. In default of a legal heir, the successor to the throne is designated by the Sovereign and a joint meeting of both the Houses of Parliament (each containing twice the usual number of members), and by this assembly alone if the case occurs after the Sovereign's death. The age of majority of the Sovereign is 18 years. During his minority the royal power is vested in a Regent—designated by law—and in some cases in the State Council.

The executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, while the whole legislative authority rests conjointly in the Sovereign and Parliament, the latter—called the States-General—consisting of two Chambers. The Upper or First Chamber is composed of 50 members, elected by the Provincial States. Members of the First Chamber not residing in the Hague, where the Parliament meets, are allowed 10 guilders (16s. 8d.) a day during the Session of the States-General. The Second Chamber of the States-General numbers 100 deputies, who are elected directly. Members are allowed 5,000 florins (420*l.*) annually, with travelling expenses. Members of the States-General must be Dutch subjects, men or women, and recognised as such.

First chamber (elected 1926): 16 Catholics, 7 Anti-Revolutionists, 7 Protestant Party, 6 Liberty Union, 3 Democrats and 11 Social Democrats.

Second chamber (elected 1925): Catholics, 81; Social Democrats, 24; Anti-Revolutionists, 13; Christian Historicals, 11; Liberty Union, 9; Democrats, 7; other parties, 5.

The electoral reform act, passed December 12, 1917, provides for universal suffrage and proportional representation. The Members of the Second Chamber are, according to the Electoral Reform Act, directly elected by citizens of both sexes who are Dutch subjects not under 25 years. Criminals, lunatics, and certain others are excluded; for certain crimes and misdemeanours there may be temporary exclusion. The electoral body numbered May 15 1928, 8,735,238 voters, i.e. 98·3 per cent. of the number of citizens of 25 years and older.

The members of the Second Chamber are elected for 4 years, and retire in a body, whereas the First Chamber is elected for 6 years, and every 3 years one half retire by rotation. The Sovereign has the power to dissolve both Chambers of Parliament, or one of them, being bound only to order new elections within 40 days, and to convoke the new meeting within two months.

The Government and the Second Chamber only may introduce new bills; the functions of the Upper Chamber being restricted to approving or rejecting them without the power of inserting amendments. The meetings of both Chambers are public, though each of them, by the decision of the majority, may form itself into a private committee. The ministers may attend at the meetings of both Chambers, but they have only a deliberative vote unless they are members. Alterations in the Constitution can be made only by a bill declaring that there is reason for introducing those alterations, followed by a dissolution of the Chambers and a second confirmation by the new States-General by two-thirds of the votes. Unless it is expressly declared, the laws concern only the realm in Europe, and not the Colonies. The executive authority, belonging to the Sovereign, is exercised by a responsible Council of Ministers. The names of the members of the Ministry are:—

1. President of the Council of Ministers, Minister of Finance.—Jonkheer Dr. D. J. de Geer; appointed March 8, 1926.

2. The Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Jonkheer Dr. F. Beelaerts van Blokland; appointed March 30, 1927.

3. The Minister of the Interior and of Agriculture.—Dr. J. B. Kan; appointed March 8, 1926.

4. The Minister of Justice.—Dr. J. Donner; appointed March 8, 1926.

5. The Minister of the Colonies.—Dr. J. C. Koningsberger; appointed March 8, 1926.

6. The Minister of Defence.—J. M. J. H. Lambooy; appointed Sept. 1, 1928.

7. The Minister of Public Works (Waterstaat).—Dr. H. van der Veete; appointed March 8, 1926.

8. The Minister of Labour, Commerce, and Industry.—Dr. J. R. Slotemaker de Bruïne; appointed March 8, 1926.

9. The Minister of Instruction, Science, and Arts.—Dr. M. A. M. Waszink; appointed March 8, 1926.

Each of the above Ministers has an annual salary of 16,000 guilders, or 1,333*l.* The Minister of Foreign Affairs enjoys besides 10,000 guilders for representation.

There is a State Council—'Raad van State'—of 14 members, appointed by the Sovereign, of which the Sovereign is president, and which is consulted on all legislative and a great number of executive matters.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The territory is divided into 11 provinces and 1,079 communes (January 1, 1928). Each province has its own representative body, 'the Provincial States.' The members are elected for 4 years, directly from among the Dutch inhabitants of the province who are 25 years of age. Except that they must be inhabitants of the province, the electors are the same as for the Second Chamber. The members retire in a body and are subject to re-election. The number of members varies according to the population of the province, from 82 for Holland (South) to 35 for Drente. The Provincial States are entitled to make ordinances concerning the welfare of the province, and to raise taxes according to legal precepts. All provincial ordinances must be approved by the Crown. The Provincial States exercise a right of control over the municipalities. They also elect the members of the First Chamber of the States-General. They meet twice a year, as a rule in public. A permanent commission composed of 6 (in Drente 4) of their members, called the 'Deputed States,' is charged with the executive power in the province and the daily administration of its affairs. This committee has also to see the common law executed in the province. Both the Deputed as well as the Provincial States are presided over by a Commissioner of the Sovereign, who in the former assembly has a deciding vote, but in the latter named only a deliberative vote. He is the chief magistrate in the province. The Commissioner and the members of the Deputed States receive an allowance.

Each of the communes forms a Corporation with its own interests and rights, subject to the general law. In each commune is a Council, elected for four years directly, by the same voters as for the Provincial States, provided they inhabit the commune. All the Dutch inhabitants 23 years of age are eligible, the number of members varying from 7 to 45, according to the population. The Council has a right of making and enforcing bye-laws concerning the communal welfare. The Council may raise taxes according to rules prescribed by common law; besides, each commune receives from the State Treasury an allowance proportioned to the total number of its inhabitants and to the share which its non-contributing inhabitants have failed to pay towards local taxes. All bye-laws may be vetoed by the Sovereign. The Municipal Budget and the resolutions to alienate municipal property require the approbation of the Deputed States of the province. The Council meets in public as often as may be necessary, and is presided over by a Mayor, appointed by the Sovereign for 6 years. The executive power is vested in a college formed by the Mayor and 2-6 Aldermen (wethouders), elected by and from the Council; this college is also charged with the execution of the public law. The Municipal Police is under the authority of the Mayor; as a State functionary the Mayor supervises the actions of the Council; he may suspend their resolutions for 30 days, but is bound to inform the Deputed States of the province.

Religion.

Entire liberty of conscience is granted to the members of all religious confessions. The royal family and a great part of the inhabitants belong to the Reformed Church. The State Budget (1929) contains allowances for the different churches: for Protestant Churches, about 1,703,000 guilders; for Roman Catholics, about 696,000; for Jansenists, about 17,000; and for Jews, about 18,000.

The number of adherents of the different Churches in the various provinces, according to the census of 1920 was: Dutch Reformed Church, 2,826,633; Other Protestants, 832,164; Catholics, 2,444,583; Jansenists, 10,461; Jews, 115,223; and other creeds or those of none, 635,240; unknown, 1,010.

The government of the Reformed Church is Presbyterian. At the end of 1927 the Dutch Reformed, Walloon, English Presbyterian, and Scotch Churches had 1 Synod, 10 provincial districts, 44 classes, and 1,348 parishes. Their clergy numbered about 1,648. The Roman Catholic Church had one archbishop (of Utrecht), 4 bishops, and 1,306 parishes. The Old Catholics had 1 archbishop, 2 bishops, and 27 parishes. The Jews had 146 communities.

Education.

Public instruction (primary) is given in all places where needed, religious convictions being respected. Instruction was made obligatory by the Act of 1900; the school age is from 7-13.

In 1806, and more expressly in 1848, secular instruction was separated from religious or sectarian instruction. The law on the point of the year 1879 is still in force. By a modification of the Act of 1887 public instruction is diminished and a greater share in education is left to private instruction, if approved as efficient by the State, in which case it is paid for out of public funds. The cost of public primary instruction is borne jointly by the State and the communes, the State contributing to the salaries of the teachers and being responsible for 25 per cent. of the costs of founding or purchasing schools.

The Secondary Education Act dates from the year 1863, but it has repeatedly been modified since. Superior instruction is given in the larger communities in public or private schools. Private schools may be endowed by the State, private professional schools also by the province and the community. The Higher Education Act dates from the year 1876, but it has repeatedly been modified since. Higher education is given at Universities, in high schools, and grammar schools, either public or private. Private institutions may be endowed by the State. Tuition in Kindergartens has not been regulated by law.

The following table is taken from the Government returns for 1925-26:

Institutions	Number	Teaching Staff	Pupils or Students
			Total	Female
Universities (public) <sup>1</sup>	4	408	6,755	1,896

Besides the schools named in the table, there is a great number of special schools, mostly technical. Since 1908 there is also a Government school to train functionaries of the colonial service for superior posts.

In 1925 the State spent on education 116,527,000 guilders; the provinces, 245,000 guilders; the Communes, 46,713,000 guilders.

Of the conscripts called out in 1927, 0.24 per cent. could neither read nor write, the percentage being highest in Zealand, 0.99. Of the persons married in 1918, 0.22 per cent. of the males and 0.41 per cent. of the females could not sign the marriage certificate. Of the convicts in 1911, 4 per cent. could neither read nor write. Of the total number of children from 7 to 13 years (school age) on January 1, 1922, 4.29 per cent. received no elementary instruction.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by the High Court of the Netherlands (Court of Cassation), by 5 courts of justice (Courts of Appeal), by 21 district tribunals, and by 101 cantonal courts; trial by jury is unknown in Holland. The Cantonal Court, which deals with minor offences, is formed by a single judge; the more serious cases are tried by the district tribunals, formed as a rule by 3 judges (in some cases one judge is sufficient); the courts are constituted of 3 and the High Court of 5 judges. All Judges are appointed for life by the Sovereign (the Judges of the High Court from a list prepared by the Second Chamber). They can be removed only by a decision of the High Court.

Juvenile courts have recently been called into existence. The juvenile court is formed by a single judge specially appointed to try children's civil cases, at the same time charged with the administration of justice for criminal actions committed by young persons who are not yet 18 years old, unless imprisonment of more than a year ought to be inflicted, in which case the judge of the juvenile court acts as judge-examiner.

The number of persons convicted was:—

Year	By the Cantonal Courts		By the District Tribunals
	Male	Female	Male	Female
1924	180,792	15,481	15,598	1,866
1925	192,572	24,171	16,442	1,869
1926	172,504	19,162	15,908	1,909
1927	168,971	18,984	16,688	2,035

The number of inmates in the 26 prisons during the years 1925, 1926, and 1927 was respectively, 7,720, 7,126, and 6,618 males, and 323, 304, and 314 females; in the 22 houses of detention, 16,296, 15,756, and 15,158 males, and 815, 752 and 694 females. There are also 5 State-work establishments; the numbers of inmates of these establishments were respectively in the years 1925, 1926, and 1927, 2,868, 2,915, and 2,872 males, and 30, 33, and 29 females.

In 1901 an Act was passed reforming State reformatories for the education of juvenile criminals and establishing disciplinary schools for juvenile criminals and for children admitted by request of parents or guardians (correction paternelle). The number of inmates during the years 1925, 1926, and 1927 in the State reformatories was: 896, 773, and 855 boys, and 93, 101, and 121 girls; in the disciplinary schools: 465, 407, and 441 boys, and 85, 104, and 89 girls.

There are both State and municipal police. The State police consists of field-constables and cavalry. The former are spread over the country, the latter guard the frontiers (eastern and southern). The cavalry police (maréchaussée) numbers about 24 officers and 1,098 men. There are about 1,339 field-constables—appointed and paid by the Government—divided into numerous brigades. Besides each commune has its own field-constables or police force.

Pauperism and Social Insurance.

The statistics of the poor relief in the Netherlands have been reorganised and do not yet cover all forms of relief. The following data for the year 1926 relate exclusively to what may be called normal poor relief (not including relief of any kind to the unemployed).

Kind of relief	Number of Persons	Net cost. (guilders)

On September 19, 1916, a Government scheme for unemployment insurance was set up in Holland.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure in five years were in thousands of guilders:—

<sup>2</sup> Estimates.

<sup>3</sup> In this table, besides the figures of the General Budget, there are given only the figures of the loan fund and the road fund and not those of the other separate funds and State enterprises, because the revenue of the loan fund and the road fund consists for the most part of taxes.

Budget estimates for the years 1928 and 1929 were as follows:—

Branches of Expenditure	1928	1929	Source of Revenue (Taxes only)	1928	1929
	1,000 Guilders	1,000 Guilders		1,000 Guilders	1,000 Guilders

The amount of the taxes per head of the population was, in 1928, 71.13 guilders.

The expenditure of the 'Department for the Colonies' entered in the budget estimates only refers to the central administration. There is a separate budget for the great colonial possessions in the East Indies, voted as such by the States-General. The financial estimates for the year 1929 are distributed between the colonies and the mother country in the following proportions:—

Proportions:—		Guilders	Guilders
Expenditure in the colonies	645,574,792	Revenues in the mother country	14,694,600
Home Government expenditure	183,438,959	Revenues in the colonies	759,810,633
Total expenditure	827,013,751	Total revenue	774,514,233

In the Budget for 1929 the national debt is given as follows in thousands of guilders :—

Funded Debt <sup>2</sup> —
2½	per cent. debt, January 1, 1929								536,842

Defence.

I. FRONTIER.

The Netherlands are bordered on the south by Belgium, on the east by Germany. On the former side the country is quite level, on the latter more hilly; the land frontier is open all round. The frontiers are defended by few fortresses. The scheme of defence adopted in 1874 contemplated the concentration of the defensive forces in a restricted area, known as the 'Holland Fortress.' This comprises the provinces of North and South Holland, with parts of Zeeland and Utrecht. Two-thirds of the area is surrounded by the sea. On the land side, to the East and South, are lines of more or less permanent works, which can be rendered very difficult of attack by inundations. There are also strong works on the coast, notably the Helder group, barring access to the Zuiderzee, and the Hollandsch Diep and Volkerak position, while the entrances to the Amsterdam and Rotterdam ship canals are defended by powerful forts. The citadel of the whole is Amsterdam, which is well fortified. Here also inundations would almost preclude a successful attack. The coast defences are in good order and are to be further strengthened, but the defences on the land side, except the position of Amsterdam, have of late years been neglected. Moreover, the control of the inundations is not entirely in military hands.

Apart from the Holland Fortress are the works on the Western Schelde. These have hitherto been unimportant, but a plan has been adopted to augment them by entirely new works at Flushing.

II. ARMY.

According to an Act of 1922, service in the army is partly voluntary and partly compulsory; the voluntary enlistments bear a small proportion to the compulsory. Every Dutch citizen and, in certain circumstances, every other resident in the Netherlands, is liable to personal service in the army (or navy) from the age of 19 up to 40. The maximum strength of the annual contingent is fixed at 19,500 (including 1,000 for the sea service). The strength of the army on April 1, 1928, was 8,651 officers and 364,142 men. Military budget for 1929, 58,102,198 florins.

The first training lasts for: (a) 5½ months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps, with the exception of those under (b) and (c); (b) 9 months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps who after enlistment are being trained as subalterns; (c) 12 months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps who after enlistment are being trained as officers, for infirm men, for conscripts of the air service, and for men of the mounted artillery troops; (d) 15 months at the longest for the cavalry; (e) 8 months at the longest for the navy. The time for further training is at the lowest 40 days for all conscripts, with the exception of infirm men and air-service men, who are exempted.

The army is organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regiments	Battalions	Companies	Cyclist Companies	Batteries	Squadrons
Infantry . . . . .	4	8	25	—	96	5	—	—
Cavalry . . . . .	—	—	2	—	—	—	—	10

Air Force . . . . .	—	—	—	—	2	—	—	—
Medical service . . . . .	—	—	—	—	4	—	—	—

The Dutch garrison of the East Indies is organised in 2 divisions with a strength in November, 1923, of 1,241 officers and 34,637 other ranks.

The Netherlands infantry is armed with the Mannlicher magazine rifle, model 95. Cavalry and engineers carry the Mannlicher carbine. The field artillery, including the horse batteries, is armed with a shielded Q.F. Krupp gun of 7.5 cm.

III. NAVY.

The Navy is maintained for a double purpose—viz. the protection of the Dutch waters and coast, and the defence of the East Indian possessions. These latter contribute to the maintenance of that division of it known as the Indian Marine. The majority of the vessels recently added to the Navy are intended mainly for the defence of the Dutch East Indies.

Following is a list of the principal ships of the Dutch Navy.

Name	Displacement, Tons	Armour water line	Max. Armour on runs	Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-power	Normal Speed Knots	Laid down

There are also 3 armoured gunboats; 4 sloops; 3 destroyers of 510 tons, and 8 of 1,497 tons; 8 seagoing torpedo boats; 26 submarines; 2 submarine depôt ships and 12 mine layers. Five more destroyers, 3 submarines and some other small craft are under construction. The Zeven Provinciën and the cruisers Java and Sumatra are assigned to the East Indies Fleet, as are the destroyers, 4 older torpedo-boats, 13 of the submarines, and many of the other vessels mentioned.

The naval budget for 1929 is 40,544,970 florins.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

The surface of the Netherlands was divided in 1927 as follows (in hectares: 1 hectare = 2.47 acres):—Uncultivated land: heath, 415,886; water and morass, 129,055; dykes and roads, 63,434; untaxed land, 78,519; building land, houses, &c., 60,955. Total, 747,849. Cultivated land: arable land, 890,687; pasture, 1,272,743; gardens and orchards, 105,677; forest, 250,286. Total, 2,519,393.

Large estates prevail in the provinces of Zealand, South Holland, Groningen, and North Holland; small estates in North Brabant, Guelders, Limburg, and Overijssel.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, were as follows:—

Products.	1925	1926	1927	Products.	1925	1926	1927
	Acres	Acres	Acres		Acres	Acres	Acres
Winter wheat . . .	125,540	123,878	143,512	Beans . . .	19,896	19,444	15,502

Peas . . .				Onions . . .	8,240	9,492	8,183

The yield of the more important products for 3 years was as follows:—

Crop	Produce			Crop	Produce
	1925	1926	1927		1925	1926	1927
	Quarters	Quarters	Quarters		Tons	Tons	Tons

Rye . . .	2,016,501	1,677,956	1,658,897

According to the live-stock census of May-June, 1921, Holland possessed 363,668 horses, 2,062,771 cattle, 668,211 sheep, and 1,519,245 pigs.

II. MINING AND MANUFACTURES.

A few coal-mines are found in the province of Limburg; some of them belong to the State. The quantity of coal extracted in 1927 was 9,323,012 metric tons, compared with 8,649,861 metric tons in 1926 and 6,848,567 in 1925. In 1927 the private mines produced 3,491,902 tons, and the State mines, 5,831,110 tons. There is one salt mine at Boekelo, output 1927, 40,596 tons.

There are no official returns of all the manufacturing industries. According to the last reports there were, in 1927: 295 distilleries, 9 sugar refineries, 12 beet-sugar factories, 12 salt works, 190 breweries, and 3,152 tobacco factories.

III. FISHERIES.

In 1927, 5,169 vessels of all kinds were engaged in the fisheries. The produce of the herring fishery in the North Sea was valued at 11,275,237 guilders in 1927; the weight of the catch of herrings was 67,070 tons. The quantity of oysters produced in 1927 amounted to 1,562,870 kilos.

Commerce.

The following are the returns of the imports (exclusive of gold and silver coins and bullion) for home consumption and the export of home produce for six years (in thousands of guilders):—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
1923	2,009,226	1,803,221	1926	2,441,908	1,740,174

Internal Communications.

I. CANALS AND RAILWAYS.

The total extent of canals is about 2,000 miles; of roads about 3,000 miles.

In 1927 the total length of the principal tramway lines was 1,909 miles; 331,120,000 passengers were carried, and 2,762,189,000 kilogrammes of goods. Their revenue amounted to 45,156,000 guilders.

In 1927 the 2 principal railways had a length of 2,284 miles. The breadth of the railway gauge is 1.50 metres, or 4 ft. 11 in. In 1927 52,286,000 passengers were carried on the railways. The total revenue was 158,830,000 guilders. All railway companies are private; there is a State railway company, only so named because the road is owned by the State. A project is on foot for bringing the railway companies under one control.

II. POST AND TELEGRAPHS.

The postal traffic was as follows in 2 years:—

—	Letters	Post Cards	Newspapers and Printed Matter	Parcels	Letters with Money Orders 1926
Internal .	179,457,000	84,683,118	404,795,000	5,908,577	322,743

1927
Internal .	182,748,000	92,937,338	432,756,000	6,591,872	270,228
Foreign .	75,664,000	16,432,461	45,886,000	1,757,685	227,448

The receipts of the Post Office in 1927 were 51,779,000 guilders, the expenditure in 1927, 45,780,000 guilders.

There are several private telegraph lines, but most of the lines are owned by the State. The length of State lines on Jan. 1, 1928, was 1,401 miles, the length of wires on Jan. 1, 1928, 25,588 miles. The number of State offices was, on Jan. 1, 1928, 1,879. The number of paid messages by State and private lines in 1927 was 8,112,800. The receipts of the State amounted in the same year to 7,762,000 guilders, and the ordinary expenses in 1927 to 10,509,000 guilders.

In 1921 the interurban and international telephone system had 2,512 miles of line and on December 31, 1927, 195,920 miles of wire, and is administered by the State; 17,087,226 interurban and 1,793,140 international conversations were held in 1927. The receipts were in the same year for interurban and international intercourse 20,031,000 guilders, and the total expenses 18,869,000 guilders.

III. AIR TRAFFIC.

There is a regular civil aeroplane service subsidised by the Government between Amsterdam and London, Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris, Amsterdam and Hamburg, Amsterdam and Basel, and between Rotterdam and Malmö. In 1926, 8 tons of postal matter, 255.1 tons of goods and 5,616 passengers were carried; in 1927, resp. 32 tons, 383.2 tons and 8,954 passengers.

Banking and Credit.

The money in general circulation is chiefly silver. Before 1875 the Netherlands had the silver standard; but a bill which passed the States General in the session of 1875 allowed an unrestricted coinage of ten-guilder pieces in gold, whereas the coinage of silver was suspended for an unlimited time.

Value of money minted during the following years (in thousands of guilders):—

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper and Nickel	For the East and West India Colonies	Total value	Total number of pieces
1881-1900	8,564	13,710	1,810	10,834	34,418	452,342,090
1901-1920	95,123	108,370	4,362	58,152	265,907	1,370,652,000
1921-1926	45,000	85,770	1,081	15,162	97,013	367,420,000
1927	10,000	450	165	—	10,515	22,000,000

The Bank of the Netherlands is a private institution, but it is the only one which has the right of issuing bank-notes. This right, granted in 1863 for 25 years, was prolonged in 1888 for 15 years, and prolonged again for the same term in 1903, with some alterations in the conditions; e.g. all the paper money is to be issued by the Bank. In 1918 the Charter was once more prolonged for a further 15 years. The Bank does the same business as other banks, only with more guarantees. Two-fifths of the paper money in circulation must be covered. It has agencies in all places of importance.

1928	809,531,000	1,754,650,855	435,249	26,113

The capital amounts to 20,000,000 guilders, the reserve fund on March 31, 1928 to 7,157,903 guilders. The Bank keeps the State-Treasury and the cash of the State Postal Savings-Bank and of other institutions. The Bank receives  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the capital; the remainder, with deduction of some reserves, is divided between the State and the Bank in proportion of 3 : 1.

There are many savings-banks, all private. Besides these there is a State postal savings-bank, established in 1881. The following table gives some particulars:—

Year	Number of Savings Banks	Amount deposited (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Amount withdrawn (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Total Deposits at end of year (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Number of Depositors at end of year	Amount per inhabitant. Gldrs.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The standard coin is the 10-florin piece weighing 6·720 grammes, '900 fine, and thus containing 6·048 grammes of fine gold. The unit of the silver coinage is the gulden or florin, weighing 10 grammes, '945 fine and containing 9·45 grammes of fine silver.

Gold is legal tender, and the silver coins issued before 1875.

The principal coins are :—

The gulden, guilder or florin of 100 cents = 1s. 8d. ; or 12 g. = £1.

The rijksdaalder = 2½ guilders.

The gold-pieces are of ten guilders and of five guilders ; silver, of 10, 25, 50, 100 and 250 cents ; bronze, ½ cent, 1 cent and 2½ cents ; nickel, 5 cents.

Treasury notes of 2½ florins are also in circulation.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The metric system of weights and measures, and, with trifling changes, the metric denominations are adopted in the Netherlands.

Colonies.

The colonial possessions of the Netherlands, situated in the East Indies and the West Indies, embrace an area of about 788,000 English square miles. The total population, according to the last returns was 51,881,862, or nearly seven times as large as that of the mother-country.

DUTCH EAST INDIES.

The Dutch possessions in Asia, forming the territory of Netherlands India (Nederlandsch Indie), are situated between 6° N. and 11° S. latitude, and between 95° and 141° E. longitude.

In 1602 the Dutch created their East India Company. This Company conquered successively the Dutch East Indies, and ruled them during nearly two centuries. After the dissolution of the Company in 1798 the Dutch possessions were governed by the mother-country.

Government and Constitution.

Politically, the territory, which is under the sovereignty of the Netherlands, is divided into (1) Lands under direct government; (2) Subject native States.

With regard to administration, the Dutch possessions in the East are divided into provinces, governments, residencies, divisions, regencies, districts, and dezzas (villages).

The system of administration has been reformed by introducing Provinces and Governments, each of them including a number of the former residencies; the province has its own provincial council, presided over by the Governor.

So far the province of West-Java (which includes the four former residencies—Bantam, Batavia, Preanger, and Cheribon) has been organised on these lines, and the Government of the Moluccoes has been formed.

Apart from the above mentioned province of West-Java, the territory of Java and Madoera is divided into four Governments: Middle-Java, East-Java, Djokjakarta, and Soerakarta, each governed by a Governor assisted by several Residents, Assistant-Residents, and a number of subordinate officials.

The Governor and his assistants exercise almost absolute control over the Government in their charge; not, however, directly, but by means of a vast hierarchy of native officials.

The residencies, divisions, &c., on the other islands are administered by functionaries with the titles of 'Resident,' 'Assistant-Resident,' 'Contrôleur,' &c.

The superior administration and executive authority of Dutch East India rest in the hands of a Governor-General. He is assisted by a Council of five members of an advisory character. The members of the Council, however, have no share in the executive. The Governor-General and the members of the Council are nominated by the Queen. In 1917 a 'Volksraad' was installed to discuss the budget, and to advise the Government on matters of general importance as a first step towards the development of self-government in the colony. Some of the members are appointed by the Government, some are elected by the local councils, and the Chairman is appointed by the Crown. It includes Europeans, natives and foreign Orientals (Chinese, Arabs). By the Netherlands India Constitution of 1925, the Dutch East Indies are granted a measure of self-government in internal affairs under supervision of the Home Government, the legislative powers being shared between the Volksraad and the Governor-General.

Governor-General.—Jhr. Dr. A. C. D. de Graeff, appointed March 26, 1926.

The population of Java and Madura on December 31, 1927, was 37,384,343, with 18,359,281 males and 19,025,062 females; 174,036 were Europeans, 36,705,673 natives, and 504,634 other Orientals, chiefly Chinese and Arabs (463,507 Chinese and 34,545 Arabs). On December 31, 1926, 18,123,490 were males and 18,779,237 were females; 169,208 were Europeans, 36,235,637 natives, and 497,877 other Orientals, chiefly Chinese and Arabs.

The whole population of the colony is legally divided into Europeans, Natives and foreign Orientals. The former generally live under the same laws as the inhabitants of the mother-country, while in the government of the latter the Indian customs and institutions are considered. The Governor-General, however, is, in agreement with the Council, authorised to make individual exceptions to this rule.

Religion.

Entire liberty is granted to all religious denominations. The Reformed Church counted, in 1927, 40 ministers and 26 assistants, the Roman Catholic 37 curates and 186 priests, not salaried out of the public funds. In 1927, about 430 missionaries of various societies were at work.

The bulk of the natives are Mohammedans; there are also some millions of converted Christians and Animists, and a small number of Buddhists.

Education.

There are public (Government) primary schools, where instruction is given through the medium of the Dutch language, for (1) Europeans and persons assimilated with them (a 7 years' course); (2) Chinese ('Dutch-Chinese schools,' with a 7 years' course); (3)

Natives ('Dutch-Native schools,' with a 7 years' course); and (4) link-schools (with a 5 years' course). Public schools where instruction is given through the medium of a native tongue are (1) the 'second class' schools (with a 3, 4, or 5 years' course); and (2) village schools (with a 3 years' course of extremely elementary instruction). Besides, there are schools with an extended primary instruction (in the Dutch language) with a 3 years' course (Mulo-schools) open to all, without distinction of race. Side by side with the public schools, there are various private schools.

For secondary education there are public secondary schools with 5 and 3 year courses in connection with the primary schools, and also with 3 year courses in connection with the extended primary school. In addition to the Government institutions there are 6 private secondary schools for girls with a 3 years' course and 1 with a 5 years' course. Higher education is given at the Technical High School at Bandoeng, erected in 1920. Furthermore, a High School for Law opened in 1924, and a Medical High School, erected in 1927, both at Batavia.

The following table shows the number of schools, the school attendance, the teaching staff, and the expenditure on education in 1928:—

Furthermore, there were in 1928 the following training schools:—Four public schools for training in engineering, architecture, electrical engineering, and mining (4 years' course), fifteen similar schools for natives (3 three years' course and 12 two years' course), with 99 teachers and 2,087 pupils and one trading school (5 years' course), with 18 teachers and 259 pupils; two private trade schools, with 16 teachers and 279 pupils; one 2 years' and one 3 years' public commercial school; one 1 year's navigation course with 10 pupils; two training schools for physicians, with 53 teachers and 434 pupils; a training school for native jurists (3 years' course) with 5 teachers and 20 pupils; a training school for civil-service officers, a training school for police officers, 5 training schools for native officials, with 24 teachers and 289 pupils; 5 training schools for European teachers with 317 pupils, and 19 private schools with 589 pupils.

For native teachers there are the following schools with instruction in the Dutch language: 8 (1 for girls) public training schools (4 years' course), and two higher training schools (3 years' course) with 821 pupils (96 girls); with instruction in the native tongue: 20 (5 for girls) normal schools (4 years' course), 1,281 pupils, 307 being girls, 186 normal classes (2 years' course) for native teachers for Village-schools. Besides, there are 3 private training schools with the Dutch language (5 years' course, 309 pupils), and 11 with a native tongue (4 years' course, 709 pupils).

For Chinese teachers there is a school with instruction in the Dutch language (123 pupils).

For kindergarten teachers (Fröbel) there are 3 training schools (4 years' course, 1 public and two private).

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice for Europeans is entrusted to European judges, while for natives their own chiefs have a large share in the trial of cases. There is a High Court of Justice at Batavia—courts of justice at Batavia, Samarang, Soerabaya, Padang, Medan and Makassar—Resident courts and police courts for Europeans; native courts, magistrate courts, police courts, Regent courts, district courts, and courts of priests for natives.

Defence.

The Dutch forces in the East Indies constitute a colonial army which is entirely separate from the home army. The colonial army in 1927 comprised 6 regiments of field infantry, 2 battalions of light infantry, 13 garrison battalions and 2 garrison companies, and the light infantry corps at Atchin. There were further 3 dépôt battalions of infantry, 7 machine-gun companies, 1 company of cyclist-soldiers, 6 squadrons, 1 dépôt squadron of cavalry, 6 field batteries, 6 mountain batteries, 2 motor batteries, 1 fortress and coast-company of artillery, 2 dépôt batteries of artillery, 2 field companies of sappers and miners, 1 motor-car company, 1 technical company and 1 dépôt company of engineering troops; and a flying corps with 31 officers and 59 aeroplanes. In 1918 compulsory service was introduced in the militia for Europeans between 19 and 32 years of age, and in the landstorm between the ages of 33 and 45. On December 31, 1927, there were 12,962 militia-men.

In most battalions there are 3 companies composed either of Europeans or of Natives; the greater part of the officers, and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers, are Europeans. The artillery has European and Native gunners and Native drivers. The Europeans (except the militia) and Natives are recruited by volunteers. The strength of the colonial army in 1927 was 1,148 officers, 35,120 volunteers, of whom 6,564 were Europeans and 28,536 natives. Besides the Army there are different armed troops, viz.: (1) The Legion of the Native Prince Mangkoe Negara, consisting of infantry, numbering about 960 men. In case of war this Legion would be placed at the disposal of the Government. (2) The Barisan, being a native infantry of Madoera, consisting of 3 battalions, numbering 1,652 men, designed to maintain peace in the island and to participate in campaigns in case of war.

The expenditure for defence (army and navy) estimated for 1929 amounts to about 104,009,276 guilders.

The Netherland Navy in the East Indies numbers 342 officers and 1,745 European and 2,071 native non-commissioned officers and sailors and 224 militia, and consists of 33 men-of-war, including 13 submarines, 7 minelayers 4 destroyers and 2 surveying vessels. There is, besides, a flying corps with 30 hydroplanes, and the Colonial Navy, consisting of 18 smaller ships of no naval value, with 176 Europeans and 832 natives, employed for civil service duties.

Production and Industry.

Scattered all over the isle of Java are many agricultural estates chiefly owned by agricultural companies, Europeans and Chinese. Yet the greater part of the soil of Java belongs to and is cultivated by the natives.

The harvested area under various 'native' cultures in Java and Madura were in 1927 as follows, in acres :—Irrigated rice, 7,551,527 ; non-irrigated rice, 1,203,061 ; maize, 4,777,191 ; cassava, 2,088,089 ; sweet potatoes, 470,297 ; groundnuts, 521,144 ; soya beans, 468,703 ; other pulses, 540,985 ; tobacco (native), 411,713 ; other secondary crops, 1,625,092 ; total, 19,607,802.

In 1927, the harvested areas of 'other secondary crops' were potatoes, 59,636 acres ; native sugar-cane, 37,403 acres ; indigo, 10,084 acres ; and capsicum, 161,242 acres. Separate from this area native tea was planted on 75,444 acres.

The total area in use for agriculture in Netherlands-India in 1927 was 6,863,798 acres, of which 63,057 acres were Government-estates, 920,624 acres were private lands, and 185,545 acres lands hired from native princes in Java and Madura, 5,183,994 acres lands hired on long-lease from self-governing communities or the Government in the Outer Provinces, 560,577 acres lands hired on short-lease from natives. Of the total only 2,639,280 acres were planted.

Consular Representatives.

British Consul-General at Batavia.—J. Crosby.

There are also consular officers at Samarang, Sourabaya, Makasser, Medan, Balikpapan, and Padang.

DUTCH WEST INDIES.

The Dutch possessions in the West Indies are (a) Surinam, or Dutch Guiana, and (b) the colony Curaçao.

Surinam or Dutch Guiana.

Dutch Guiana or Surinam is situated on the north coast of S. America between 2 and 6° N. latitude, and 53° 50' and 58° 20' E. longitude, and bounded on the north by the Atlantic Ocean, on the east by the river Marowijne, which separates it from French Guiana, on the west by the river Corantyn, which separates it from British Guiana, and on the south by inaccessible forests and savannas to the Tumuc-Humac Mountains.

At the peace of Breda, in 1667, between England and the United Netherlands, Surinam was assured to the Netherlands in exchange for the colony of New Netherlands in North America, and this was confirmed by the treaty of Westminster of February, 1674. Since then Surinam has been twice in the power of England, 1799 till 1802, when it was restored at the peace of Amiens, and in 1804 to 1816, when it was returned according to the Convention of London of August 13, 1814, confirmed at the peace of Paris of November 20, 1815, with the other Dutch colonies, except Berbice, Demerara, Essequibo, and the Cape of Good Hope.

The administration and executive authority is in the hands of a governor assisted by an advisory council consisting of the governor as president, a vice-president and three members, all nominated by the Queen. The Colonial States form the representative body of the colony. The members (13) are chosen for 6 years.

Governor.—Dr. A. A. L. Rutgers. Appointed April 1, 1928.

Dutch Guiana is divided into six districts.

Area, 54,291 English square miles; population (December 31, 1927) 145,763 inclusive of the negroes and Indians living in the forests. Capital, Paramaribo, 45,791 inhabitants.

The communication between several districts of the colony is carried on by vessels and small steamers. A Colonial steamship service extends to British Guiana.

Curacao.

The colony of Curacao consists of two groups of islands about 500 miles apart. One group is made up of the first three islands in the following list; the other of the last three:—

	Square Miles	Population Dec. 31, 1927
Curacao . . . . .	210	41,014
Bonaire . . . . .	95	5,166
Aruba . . . . .	69	10,508
St. Martin <sup>1</sup> . . . . .	17	2,274
St. Eustatius . . . . .	7	1,023
Saba . . . . .	5	1,494
	403	61,479

Governor.—K. L. A. Fruytier. Appointed October 27, 1928.

The Governor is assisted by a Council composed of a vice-president and three members, nominated by the Sovereign. There is also a Colonial Council consisting of thirteen members nominated by the Sovereign. The city of Willemstad (population 19,061), on Curacao, is the seat of government. The different islands, except Curacao, are under officials called 'Gezaghebbers,' nominated by the Governor. In 1927 there were 54,200 Roman Catholics, 6,351 Protestants, 569 Jews. Schools in 1927 numbered 41 with 9,064 pupils. In 1927, 1,849 births were registered, 516 marriages and 1,057 deaths.

The revenue is derived from import, export, and excise duties, taxes on income, on land, and some other taxes. In the Budget for 1929 the revenue is estimated at 5,464,500 guilders, and the expenditure at 5,263,689 guilders.

The garrison of the Isle of Curaçao consisted at the end of 1927 of 4 officers and 59 men.

The imports of Curaçao and the other islands in 1927 were valued at 142,238,750 guilders; the exports of Curaçao and the other islands at 134,583,894 guilders. The chief products are maize, beans, pulse, cattle, salt, and phosphate of lime. The chief industry is oil-refining.

There entered the ports of the different islands in 1927, 8,645 vessels of 25,148,479 tons net.

Vice-Consul at Curaçao.—D. O. Powell.

NICARAGUA.

(REPÚBLICA DE NICARAGUA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua came into operation on April 5th, 1913. It vests the legislative power in a Congress of two houses consisting of 43 deputies, elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, and 24 Senators elected for 6 years. The Executive power is with a President appointed for 4 years.

President.—General Don José Moncado (elected November 4, 1928 assumed office January 1, 1929).

The President exercises his functions through a council of responsible ministers, composed of the heads of the departments.

The Republic is divided into 13 departments and 2 comarcas, each of which is under a political head, who has supervision of finance, instruction and other matters, and is also military commandant. The Mosquito Reserve now forms a department named Bluefields.

The judicial power is vested in a supreme Court of Justice, three chambers of second instance, and judges of inferior tribunals.

By an agreement reached in 1911 between the Government and the British bondholders, modified and extended in 1917 and 1920, the Collector-General of Customs, two of the High Commissioners and the director of the National Bank are Americans. Customs receipts and certain other revenues are collected by them and applied to the payment of the external debt, the balance being turned over to the Government.

On February 18, 1916, the Bryan-Chamorro treaty between Nicaragua and the United States was signed, under which the United States in return for 3 million dollars acquired the option for a canal route through Nicaragua and also a naval base in the Bay of Fonseca on the Pacific coast and Corn Island on the Atlantic coast. It was ratified by Nicaragua on April 7, 1916, and by the United States on June 24, 1926.

Area and Population.

Area estimated at 51,660 English square miles, with a coastline of about 300 miles on the Atlantic and 200 miles on the Pacific. The population according to the census of 1920, was 638,119. At least 75 per cent. of the inhabitants live in the western half of the country. The two halves of the Republic differ greatly in many respects and there is little communication between them, the journey by trail and river being so slow and difficult that passengers usually go by way of Costa Rica, while the small amounts of merchandise shipped from one side to the other are sent mainly by way of Panama.

The people of the western half of the Republic are principally of mixed Spanish and Indian extraction, though there are a considerable number of pure Spanish descent and many Indians. The population of the eastern half is composed mainly of Mosquito and Zambo Indians and Negroes from Jamaica and other islands of the Caribbean, with some Americans and a comparatively small number of Nicaraguans from the western part of the Republic.

There are within the Republic 105 municipalities of which 28 have from 2,000 to 30,000 inhabitants. The capital of the Republic and seat of government is the town of Managua, situated on the southern border of the lake of the same name, with (1926) 32,536 inhabitants. Leon, formerly the capital, has a population of 23,565; Granada, 18,066; Matagalpa, 10,271; Masaya, 12,763; Jinotega, 6,990; Chinandega, 10,307; Rivas, 4,081; Esteli, 4,583; Matapa, 4,561; Somoto, 6,182; Boaco, 4,342; Jinotepe, 6,317; Diriamba, 6,151; Bluefields, 4,706. Other towns are Corinto, 2,307; and San Juan del Sur on the Pacific.

Religion and Education.

The prevailing form of religion is Roman Catholic. In 1914 the Republic constituted one archbishopric and ecclesiastical province (Nicaragua). The Seat of the Archbishop is Managua. There are three bishoprics, Leon, Granada and Matagalpa.

There are 402 state elementary schools, with 788 teachers and an average attendance of 18,144 pupils, and 3 secondary schools, with 37 teachers and 260 pupils, 5 professional schools with 219 students, 3 normal schools with 35 teachers and 2,500 students. There exist, besides, 76 private elementary schools with 5,557 pupils. The number of illiterate persons, of all ages, is 461,951. Secondary education is neither obligatory nor free, the secondary schools being carried on not by the state, but by private individuals. Nicaragua has three universities, in the cities of Managua, León, and Granada.

A national Industrial, Commercial, and Scientific Museum has been established at Managua.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for 5 years (4.86 cordobas = £1; 1 cordoba = 1 U.S. dollar) :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . .	431,540	455,084	896,752	914,327	1,001,152
Expenditure .	327,160	327,160	891,921	914,026	1,011,905

Total public debt on March 31, 1928, was estimated at 23,526,067 cordobas, divided into: Bonds of 1909 outstanding, 3,296,567 cordobas; guaranteed customs bonds of 1918, 2,372,000 cordobas; bonds of 1904 due in 1929, 30,000 cordobas; claims arising out of the revolution, 17,778,808 cordobas; short term loan, 48,692 cordobas. The cost of 1926-27 revolution is estimated officially (March, 1928), at 20,039,651 cordobas.

Defence.

The army was disbanded on May 10, 1927. With few exceptions, all arms, etc., have been delivered into the custody of the National Guard of 400 which is being trained by U.S. marine officers. It is proposed eventually to bring it up to 4,000 men. Period of enlistment, 3 years. A force of 2,000 U.S. marines was retained in Nicaragua to keep order during the Presidential elections of November, 1928. The force will be materially reduced in 1929.

Production and Industry.

The agricultural, timber and mining industries are the principal sources of national wealth. The area of cultivation in Nicaragua has extended in recent years and would probably extend still further but for the scarcity of labour. The banana, grown on 41,000 acres, is the principal agricultural product of the eastern part of the Republic. Coconuts are also of some importance, and a few plantains, oranges, and pineapples, and some yucca are raised. Rice is grown to a small extent, and some wheat in the hilly Nueva Segovia district, while tobacco is cultivated round Masaya. The products of the western half are much more varied, the most important being coffee, sugar cane, cacao, corn, and beans. The annual average coffee crop, from 104,000 acres, is estimated at 36,000,000 lbs. Exports (in quintals) were, 1927, 222,937; 1926, 384,166; 1925, 235,265. With the exception of bananas, plantains, and yucca or cassava, the greater part of the food supply of the eastern section is imported from the United States. The western half of the country produces much of its own food.

The forests contain mahogany and cedar, which are largely exported (16,555,464 board feet of mahogany, valued at 1,337,002 dollars, exported in 1927), three varieties of rose-woods, guayacan (lignum vitae), dye-woods, gums, and medicinal plants. Wild rubber is abundant in the virgin forests on the Atlantic water-shed, but there are very few rubber plantations owing to the labour shortage.

There are several gold mines, worked by American and British companies, one having also silver. Operations are at present considerably curtailed and three mines only are in active operation, against some 55 mines in 1918. Copper and precious stones are also found.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Nicaragua was as follows in 5 years :—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . .	1,495,562	1,812,118	2,135,040	2,273,258	2,100,461
Exports . .	2,269,199	2,676,960	2,543,123	2,471,917	1,857,185

The customs receipts in 1927 were 500,994£.; in 1926, 478,415£.

In 1927 the value of the principal imports (in dollars) was :—Cotton goods, 2,327,500; iron and steel, 638,540; chemicals, drugs, and medicines, 435,691; flour, 519,851. The principal countries of import in 1927 were (values in dollars) :—United States, 6,777,574 (66 per cent.); Great Britain, 1,169,632 (11 per cent.); and Germany, 687,812 (6 per cent.).

In 1927 the value of the principal exports (in dollars) was :—Coffee, 4,081,604; bananas, 1,442,382; sugar, 443,423; timber, 1,725,749; gold, 614,257; hides and skins, 161,480. The principal countries of export, in values exported (in dollars), were: United States, 5,016,086; France, 1,182,882; Germany, 781,764; Holland, 527,863; and Great Britain, 623,069.

Total trade between Nicaragua and United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years :—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Nicaragua to U.K. .	99,905	119,660	58,919	153,998	97,376
Exports to Nicaragua from U.K. .	348,581	238,988	233,095	255,742	250,069

Shipping and Communications.

Western Nicaragua has two seaports, Corinto and San Juan del Sur, through which pass approximately 70 per cent. of the imports and exports of the Republic. The eastern ports are Bluefields, Cape Gracias a Dios, Puerto Cabezas, and San Juan del Norte (Greytown). In 1927, 812 vessels of 650,137 tons entered the ports of Nicaragua, and 814 vessels of 660,066 tons cleared.

Most of the roads of the country are mere tracks over which ox-carts alone can travel in the wet season, but highways are being constructed between the following places: Managua-Matagalpa-Jinotega, 104 miles; León-Matagalpa, 80 miles; Puerto Díaz-Juigalpa-La Libertad, 50 miles. A road from Managua to Diriamba, 35 miles, is completed and is in fairly good condition. There are 150 miles of motor roads and 200 miles of cart roads, but the east coast is practically shut off from the west coast.

The Pacific Railroad of Nicaragua, owned by the Government and the principal line in the republic, has a total length of 159 miles. The line runs from Corinto to León, Managua, Granada, and Diriamba. On August 1, 1924, the Government re-purchased the 51 per cent. of the stock of the national railways, which in 1913 it had handed over to two American banking firms. Negotiations for its sale to the International Railways of Central America are under way in 1929. In all there are five railroads with a total railway mileage, 1927, of 167.

There are 1,760 miles of telegraph wire, and 103 offices; also 744 miles of telephone wire and 53 telephone stations serving 986 instruments. There are 101 post offices, and good service between the chief towns of the western section, but service into the interior and to the east coast is irregular and inadequate.

The Tropical Radio Telegraph Company maintains a powerful station at Managua, and branch stations at Bluefields and Cabo Gracias. There are several private wireless stations.

Money and Banking.

Since 1912 the monetary unit has been the gold cordoba, equivalent to the American dollar, containing 1.672 gr. of gold nine-tenths fine, and divided into 100 equal parts. Banknotes based on the cordoba are issued by the National Bank of Nicaragua, which maintains deposits in New York equal to 60 per cent. of the circulation. Other gold coins provided for by law are 10, 5 and 2½ cordobas, but no gold coins have ever been struck. National banknotes, of which there were in 1926, 6,709,675 cordobas in circulation, form the great part of the currency; silver coins in circulation amounted to 314,961 cordobas. United States notes and silver also circulate.

The silver coins are the silver cordoba, containing 25 grammes of silver nine-tenths fine; the half and quarter cordoba; 10 cents, a coin containing 2½ grammes of silver eight-tenths fine; 5 cents, a coin three-quarters of copper and one of nickel; 1 cent, ninety-five parts of copper and 5 of zinc; ½ cent, in same proportion.

The National Bank of Nicaragua, incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine with a nominal capital of 300,000 dollars, was established in Managua in 1912; it is now owned by the Republic of Nicaragua. It has branches at Bluefields and Cape Gracias. Other banks are the Anglo-South American Bank, Ltd., and the Anglo-Central American Commercial Bank, Ltd.

Since January 7, 1893, the metric system of weights and measures has been in use.

NORWAY.

(NORGE.)

Reigning King.

Haakon VII. born August 3, 1872; the second son, Carl, of Frederik, King of Denmark, elected King of Norway by the Storting, November 18, 1905; accepted the crown through his grandfather, the late King Christian of Denmark, November 18, 1905; landed in Norway November 25, 1905; married, July 22, 1896, to Princess Maud, born November 26, 1869, the third daughter of the late Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland.

Son.—Prince Olaf, Crown Prince, born July 2, 1903, married on March 21, 1929, to Princess Märtha of Sweden.

According to the Constitution, Norway is a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in direct male line in the order of primogeniture. In default of male heirs the King may propose a successor to the Storting, but this assembly has the right to nominate another, if it does not agree with the proposal.

By Treaty of January 14, 1814, Norway was ceded to the King of Sweden by the King of Denmark, but the Norwegian people declared themselves independent and elected Prince Christian Frederick of Denmark as their King. The foreign Powers refused to recognise this election, and on August 14 a convention was made proclaiming the independence of Norway in union with Sweden. This was followed on November 4 by the election of Karl XIII. as King of Norway. Norway declared this union dissolved, June 7, 1905, and after some months' negotiation, a mutual agreement for the repeal of the union was signed, October 26, 1905. The throne of Norway was offered to a prince of the reigning house of Sweden, but declined, and, after a plébiscite, Prince Carl of Denmark was formally elected King. In November, 1907, a treaty guaranteeing the integrity of Norwegian territory was signed at Kristiania (Oslo) by the representatives of Norway, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Russia, and on January 8, 1908, received the unanimous approval of the Storting. The treaty was denounced January 8, 1924.

The following is a list of the Sovereigns of Norway since the year 1204, with the date of their accession.

The King has a civil list of 700,000 kroner, the Crown Prince 100,000 kroner.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Norway, called the Grundlov, bears date May 17, 1814, with several modifications passed at various times. It vests the legislative power of the realm in the Storting, the representative of the sovereign people. The royal veto may be exercised twice; but if the same bill pass three Stortings formed by separate and subsequent elections, it becomes the law of the land without the assent of the sovereign. The King has the command of the land and sea forces, and makes all appointments, but except in a few cases, is not allowed to nominate any but Norwegians to public offices under the crown.

The Storting assembles every year. The meetings take place suo jure, and not by any writ from the King or the executive. They begin on the first weekday after January 10 each year, and the Storting remains assembled as long as it may find it necessary. Every Norwegian subject of twenty-three years of age (provided that he resides and has resided for five years in the country) is entitled to elect, unless he is disqualified from a special cause. Women are, since 1913, entitled to vote under the same conditions as men. The mode of election is direct, and the method of election is proportional. Every third year the people choose their representatives, the total number being 150. The country is divided into districts, each electing from three to eight representatives. Representatives must not be less than thirty years of age, must have resided in Norway for ten years, and be voters in the district from which they are chosen. Former members of the Cabinet can be elected representatives of any district of the Kingdom without regard to their residence.

At the elections for the Storting held in November, 1927, the following parties were elected for the period 1928-1930: Labour Party 59, Conservatives and Moderate Liberals 31, Liberals 31, Communists 3, Agricultural Party 26.

The Storting, when assembled, divides itself into two sections, the 'Lagting' and the 'Odelsting.' The former is composed of one-fourth of the members of the Storting, and the other of the remaining three-fourths. The Ting nominates its own presidents. Questions relating to laws must be considered by each section separately. The inspection of public accounts and the revision of the Government, and impeachment before the Rigsret, belong exclusively to the Odelsting. All other matters are settled by both sections in common sitting. The Storting elects five delegates, whose duty it is to revise the public accounts. All new laws must first be laid before the Odelsting, from which they pass into the Lagting to be either accepted or rejected. If the Odelsting and Lagting do not agree, the two sections assemble in common sitting to deliberate, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters. The same majority is required for alterations of the Constitution. The Lagting and the ordinary members of the supreme court of justice (Höiesteret) form a High Court of the Realm (Rigsret) for the impeachment and trial of Ministers, members of the Höiesteret, and members of the Storting. Every member of the Storting has a salary of six thousand kroner per annum, besides travelling expenses.

The executive is represented by the King, who exercises his authority through a Cabinet called a Council of State (Statsraad), composed of a Prime Minister or Minister of State (Statsminister), and at least seven ministers (Statsraader). The ministers are entitled to be present in the Storting and to take part in the discussions, but without a vote. The following are the members of the Cabinet, appointed February 13, 1928.

Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs.—J. L. Mowinckel.

Minister for Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs.—S. M. Hasund.

Minister of Justice.—H. M. Evjenh.

Minister of Agriculture.—H. J. Aarstad.

Minister for Social Affairs.—T. Værland.

Minister for Finance.—P. Lund.

Minister for Defence.—T. Anderssen-Rysst.

Minister for Commerce and Industry.—L. Ofteidal.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The administrative division of the country is into twenty districts, each governed by a chief executive functionary (Fylkesmann), viz., the town of Kristiania and Bergen, and 18 Fylker (counties). There are 43 towns, 24 'Ladesteder' (ports), and 674 rural communes (Herreder), mostly parishes or sub-parishes (wards). The government of the Herred is vested in a body of representatives (from 12 to 48), and a council (Formannskap), elected by and from among the representatives, who are four times the number of the 'Formannskap.' The representatives elect conjointly every third year from among the 'Formannskap' a chairman and a deputy chairman. All the chairmen of the rural communes of a Fylke form with the Fylkesmann the Fylkesting (county diet), which meets yearly to settle the budget of the Fylke. The towns and the ports form 65 communes, also governed by a council (5 to 21), and representatives (four times the size of the council). The members of the local governing bodies are elected under the same conditions as those of the Storting. Since 1910 women are entitled to vote and to be elected, under the same conditions as men.

As from January 1, 1925, the name of the capital, Kristiania, was changed to Oslo.

Religion and Education.

The evangelical Lutheran religion is the national Church and the only one endowed by the State. Its clergy are nominated by the King. All religions (except Jesuits) are tolerated. Ecclesiastically Norway is divided into 7 Bispedømmer (bishoprics), 91 Prostier (provostships, or archdeaconries), 516 Prestegjeld (clerical districts). In 1920 there were 71,062 dissenters, including 2,612 Roman Catholics, 11,455 Methodists, 7,214 Baptists, 464 Mormons, 73 Quakers. The Roman Catholics are under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Oslo.

Education is compulsory, the school age being from six and a half in towns and seven in the country to fourteen. In 1925-26 (the latest date for which there are statistics) there were in the country 5,883 public elementary schools with 297,103 pupils, and in towns 3,364 classes with 99,024 pupils ; the amount expended on both being 78,739,000 kroner, of which 27,797,000 kroner were granted by the State, the rest being provided locally. The 12 normal schools (Teachers' Seminaries) had in 1926-27, 1,302 students, of whom 1,046 were from the country, 256 from the towns. There were 203 secondary schools—17 public, 98 communal, and 9 private entitled to give certificates and 79 private not having this right, with respectively 5,713, 17,756, 2,113, and 2,755 pupils in April, 1926. Most of the secondary schools are mixed. Norway has one University, viz. at Oslo (founded 1811), attended in 1927 by 3,562 students. There is a technical high school at Trondhjem, attended in 1926-27 by 606 students, one agricultural high school in Aas, with 118 students, and a Teachers' Training College at Lade. There are also several special schools, particularly continuation schools for young people between 15 and 18, and industrial, crafts, technical, and arts schools for both sexes.

There are 9 schools for defective children, deaf, blind, feeble-minded, and crippled, also 10 reformatory schools for neglected children. The number of children in reformatories in 1925 was 392 boys and 121 girls. There are, besides, 6 communal compulsory schools, established mainly for children neglecting the ordinary school (100 boys, 30 girls).

Norwegian is an independent language side by side with Danish and Swedish. As to the written language, there exist two idioms ('riksmaal' and 'landsmaal') and both may be officially used.

Justice and Crime.

For civil justice Norway is divided into 109 districts, each with an inferior court. There are 3 superior courts, having each one chief justice and two other justices, and one supreme court for the whole kingdom (Höiesteret), consisting of 1 president and 22 other justices. There is a court of mediation (Forliksraad) in each town and Herred (district), consisting of three men chosen by the representatives (see above under Local Government), before which, as a rule, civil cases must first be brought.

According to the law of criminal procedure of July 1, 1887, all criminal cases (not military, or coming under the Rigsret—the court for impeachments) shall be tried either by jury (Lagmandsret), or by the lower court. The Lagmandsret consists of three judges and 10 jurors. The Kingdom is divided into 4 jury districts (Lagdömmet), each having its chief judge. Each district is divided into circuits, in which courts are held at fixed times. The lower courts consists of the judge and 2 assistant judges (not professional) summoned for each case. The Lagmandsret takes cognisance of the more serious classes of offences, and is also a court of appeal. The lower courts are for the trial of other offences as courts of first instance.

There are three convict prisons; inmates, June 30, 1927, 468 males and 15 females. There are 128 local prisons, in which were detained, June 30, 1927, 683 males and 46 females.

Pauperism.

The relief of the poor is mostly provided for by local taxation by the Communes. The number of persons receiving relief amounted to 85,331 in 1925.

Defence.

The most important fortresses of Norway are Oscarsborg, Tönsberg, Kristiansand, Bergen, and Agdenes; the old fortresses, Karljohansvaern, Akershus in Oslo, Bergenhus in Bergen, Munkholmen near Trondhjem, and Vardöyhus, are of no importance.

ARMY.

The army of Norway is a national militia. Service is universal and compulsory, liability commencing at the age of 18, and continuing till the age of 55. The men are called out at 21, and for the first 12 years belong to the line. Men from 18 to 21 and from 45 to 55 belong to the landstorm, which can be called out in a national emergency, and from 33 to 43 to the landvaern. The initial training is carried out in recruits' schools; it lasts for 48 days in the infantry and garrison artillery, 62 in the mountain batteries, 72 in the engineers, 92 in the field artillery, and 102 in the cavalry. As soon as their courses are finished the men are passed to the units to which they will permanently belong, and with them go through a further training of 24 days. Subsequent training consists of 24 days in the second, third and seventh years of service. The strength of the permanent forces in 1928 were 1,143 officers and 3,182 other ranks; the numbers trained in that year were approximately 9,700.

The army is organised as follows :

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Batteries	Machine Gun Companies	Cyclist Companies	Companies	Flights
Infantry . . . . .	6	17	55	—	—	8	5	212	—
Cavalry . . . . .	—	3	—	16	—	3	—	—	—

The Norwegian infantry is armed with the Krag-Jørgensen rifle of 6·5 mm. The field artillery has Erhardt Q.F. guns of 7·5 cm.

The budget of the army for 1928-29 is 28,632,000 kroner.

NAVY.

The navy is administered under the Minister of Defence by a Commander-in-Chief. The principal vessels are :—

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	H.P.	Max. Speed
			Belt	Big Guns
1896	Harald Haarfagre . . . . .	3,900	7	8	2 8in.; 6 4·7in. . . . .	4,500	17
	Tordenskjold . . . . .
1899	Norge . . . . .	4,200	6	8	2 8in.; 6 6in. . . . .	5,200	17
	Eidsvold . . . . .

None of the above possesses any other than local value. The whole navy is designed for coast-defence duties.

There are also 1 large gunboat, 3 destroyers, 3 first-class torpedo boats and 23 others, 9 submarines and 3 mine-layers. There are now about 36 seaplanes and 20 other planes.

The navy numbers about 1,000 officers, warrant officers and men, on the permanent establishment, and 500 to 750 men conscripted annually. All seafaring men between the ages of 20 and 44 are enrolled on the lists of the active fleet, and are liable to the maritime conscription. The conscripts have to go through a training of at least 6 months.

The naval expenditure, 1928-29, amounts to 11,015,000 kroner.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Norway is a barren and mountainous country. The arable soil is found in comparatively narrow strips, gathered in deep and narrow valleys and around fjords and lakes. Large continuous tracts fit for cultivation do not exist. Of the total area, 72.6 per cent. is unproductive, 24.2 per cent. forest, and 3.2 per cent. under cultivation.

The acreage and products of the principal crops for 3 years were as follows:

Crops	Acreage			Produce (quarters)
	1925	1926	1927	1925	1926	1927
Wheat .	22,027	22,062	24,560	59,569	71,247	73,559

<sup>2</sup> Tons.

On June 20, 1927, the country possessed live-stock as follows:—Horses, 183,365; cattle, 1,209,450; sheep, 1,608,222; goats, 290,099; swine, 299,669.

II. FORESTRY.

The forests are one of the chief natural sources of wealth. The total area covered with forests is estimated at 28,956 square miles, of which 70 per cent. is under pine trees. The State forests occupy about 4,100 square miles. The value of unwrought or partly wrought timber exported from Norway in 1926 and 1927 was respectively 49,466,200 and 35,623,400 kroner, and of wood pulp and paper 225,764,016 kroner in 1926 and 189,506,000 kroner in 1927.

III. MINES AND MINERALS.

The pyrite is the most important mineral product for both its sulphur and copper content. Iron-ore deposits occur in many places, but there is a shortage of coal for smelting. The total value of mineral products in 1927 was 21,260,000 kroner. The chief mineral products are silver ore, 460,000 kroner in 1927; copper ore, 133,000 kroner; pyrites, 12,975,000 kroner; iron ore, 6,574,000 kroner. The most important metals produced in Norway are silver, electrolyte pig iron, ferro-alloys, aluminium and zinc. The value of these products in 1927 was: silver, 689,000 kroner; electrolyte pig iron, 1,049,000 kroner; ferro-alloys, 23,108,000 kroner; aluminium, 84,333,000 kroner; zinc, 3,028,000 kroner.

IV. FISHERIES.

Fish and fish-products comprised in 1927, 25.5 per cent. of Norway's total export values. The number of persons in 1926 engaged in cod fishery was 77,965; in summer-herring fishery, 30,564; and in mackerel fishery, 7,526.

The value of the sea fisheries (based on the prices paid at the fishing places) in kroner in 1926 was: Cod, 50,131,000; herring, 22,909,000; mackerel, 2,515,160; salmon and sea trout, 2,731,134; other fisheries, 15,655,000; lobsters, 1,003,449; total, 94,944,743.

Other fisheries are the whale, walrus, seal, and shark fisheries, which in 1926 produced a total of 82,975,000 kroner.

Whale-oil production: 339,000 barrels in 1922; 440,000 barrels in 1923; 378,000 barrels in 1924; 615,000 barrels in 1925; 656,000 barrels in 1926; 689,000 barrels in 1927.

V. MANUFACTURES.

Although some coal is produced in Svalbard, the chief source of energy in Norway is water power, of which the country possesses an enormous amount, which produces motive power for manufacturing industry. Norway's water power has been estimated at 12,290,000 horse-power, of which 1,521,397 horse-power are in use. The chief manufacturing use of this power has been for the production of pulp and paper and of electro-chemical and electro-metallurgical products, which are important Norwegian industries. The principal products of the electro-chemical and the electro-metallurgical industry are ammonium nitrate, calcium nitrate, sodium nitrate, calcium carbide, ferro-alloys, aluminium and zinc.

The numbers of establishments and workers, etc., in the principal industries in 1926 were as follows:—

Vessels entered from and cleared for foreign countries in 1927 at the following ports:—

The 'Norges Bank' is a joint-stock bank, of which, however, a considerable part is owned by the State. The bank is, besides, governed by laws enacted by the State, and its directors are elected by the Storting except the president and vice-president of the head office, who are nominated by the King.

It is the only bank in Norway that is authorised to issue bank notes for circulation. The balance-sheets of the bank for 1927 show the following figures:—Assets at the end of the year—bullion, 147,232,000 kroner; outstanding capital, 258,227,000 kroner, other assets, 87,073,000 kroner; total, 492,532,000 kroner. Liabilities—notes in circulation, 330,896,000 kroner (the issue of notes allowed was 397,232,000 kroner); deposits, 95,145,000 kroner; other liabilities, 66,491,000 kroner, net income 14,711,000 kroner; dividends payable for the year, 2,800,000 kroner, 8 per cent.

The 'Kongeriget Norges Hypothekbank' was established in 1852 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage. The capital of the bank is mostly furnished by the State, and amounted to 57,000,000 kroner in 1927. At the end of 1927 the total amount of bonds issued was 413,831,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 428,756,000 kroner.

The Norwegian 'Arbeiderbruk og Boligbank' was established in 1903 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage from labourers and small proprietors. The capital of the bank is furnished by the State, and amounted to 7,200,000 kroner in 1927. On June 30, 1927, the total amount of bonds issued was 30,794,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 31,538,000 kroner. This bank is in liquidation, its business is little by little being taken over by the 'Norske Stats Småbruk og Boligbank,' which was established in 1917. Its capital amounted to 18,000,000 kroner in 1927; on June 30, 1927, the total amount of bonds issued was 115,558,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 159,642,000 kroner.

Further, several private credit associations are authorised to meet the demand for loans on mortgage. In 1926, there were 5 such associations in operation. The total amount of bonds issued by these credit associations at the end of 1926 was 56,434,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans on mortgage was 54,302,000 kroner.

In the year 1922, Den Norske Stats Fisherbank (established by law 1919) started with the purpose of making loans to fishermen for fishing vessels and fishing outfits, etc. The capital of the bank is furnished by the State and amounted to 6,500,000 kroner in 1927. On June 30, 1927, the total amount of bonds issued was 11,000,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans was 8,469,000 kroner.

In the year 1926, the Norges Kommunalbank was established by law for the purpose of making loans to communities. The bank began its operations on September 1, 1927. The capital of the bank is 23,000,000 kroner furnished by the State. The total amount of bonds issued is 22,389,000 kroner.

At the end of 1927, there were 152 private joint-stock banks reported, of which, however, 16 were under administration by the State and 29 in liquidation. The severe deflation period of 1921–23 caused several joint-stock banks to suspend their payments. In 1923, therefore, a new law was passed whereby banks in difficulties could continue their operations under administration by the State. The total amount of capital and funds possessed by joint-stock banks was 264,900,000 kroner (capital 191,100,000, funds 73,800,000), of which 242,900,000 kroner belonged to banks in free operation. Deposits amounted to 1,765,000,000 kroner, of which 125,900,000 kroner were deposits on demand, and 1,639,100,000 kroner deposits on time; 940,900,000 kroner of the total amount of deposits were deposited at banks in free operation.

The number of savings-banks at the end of 1927 was 618, of which 9 smaller banks were under administration by the State and 6 in liquidation. The total amount of the funds of the savings-banks amounted to 180,025,000 kroner, and total deposits 2,423,000,000 kroner, of which 19,100,000 kroner were on demand, and 2,403,900,000 kroner on time. The number of depositors was 2,034,000.

As from January 1, 1925, all private joint-stock banks must be chartered by royal licence. Their operations are regulated, to a considerable extent, by the law, and controlled by the Ministry of Finance.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a treaty signed October 16, 1875, Norway adopted the same monetary system as Sweden and Denmark. The Norwegian krone, of 100 öre, is of the value of 1s. 1½d. at par, or about 18 kroner to the pound sterling. The gold 20-kroner piece weighs 8·960572 grammes, ·900 fine containing 8·0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krone weighs 7·5 grammes, ·800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver. The standard of value is gold. National Bank notes for 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 kroner are legal means of payment, and the Bank is ordinarily bound to exchange them for gold on presentation.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SPITSBERGEN, BEAR ISLAND, AND ADJACENT ISLANDS (SVALBARD).

An archipelago situated between 10° and 35° longitude east of Greenwich and between 74° and 81° latitude north. The distance from Norway to Bear Island is 240 miles, and to Spitsbergen (South Cape) 360 miles.

It is claimed that in all probability the archipelago was discovered by Norwegians in 1194 and re-discovered by the Dutch navigator Barents in 1596. The English explorer Henry Hudson visited Spitsbergen in 1607. In the 17th century a very lucrative whale-hunting was started and for some time there were Dutch, British, and Norwegian claims to sovereignty and quarrels about the hunting-places. But when in the 18th century the whale-hunting ended, the question of the sovereignty of Spitsbergen lost its actuality, and it was not until the beginning of this century that the question was again raised, owing to the discovery and exploitation of rich coalfields. It was settled by a Treaty, signed on February 9, 1920, at Paris, in which Norway's sovereignty over the Archipelago was recognised. On August 14, 1925, the Archipelago was officially taken possession of by Norway.

Total area about 25,000 square miles. The chief islands are West Spitsbergen or Mainland, North East Land (about half the former), Prince Charles Foreland, Edge Island, Barents Land, King Karl's Land, Hope Island, and Bear Island. The climate is essentially arctic, tempered by the Gulf Stream.

Coal is the principal product. There are six mining camps inhabited all the year round. The largest is Longyearbyen in Advent Bay with 529 inhabitants. In 1927, 313,000 tons of coal were exported.

PANAMA.

(REPÚBLICA DE PANAMÁ.)

Government.—Panama, formerly a department of the Republic of Colombia, asserted its independence on November 3, 1903, and the de facto Government was on November 13 recognised by the Government of the United States, and soon afterwards by the other Powers. In 1914 Colombia, in virtue of the Treaty of Bogota entered into with the United States, undertook to agree to recognise the independence of Panama. This Treaty was ratified by the United States and Colombia in 1921. On May 8, 1924, a Protocol was signed at Washington by the Panama and Colombian Plenipotentiaries by which diplomatic relations between the two countries were established.

The Constitution, adopted February 13, 1904, and amended in 1913 and again in 1923, provides for a Chamber of Deputies of 46 members elected for four years (one for every 15,000 inhabitants), which meets biennially on September 1, and for a President of the Republic, elected by direct vote for 4 years, and not eligible for the succeeding term.

President of the Republic.—Florencio Harmodio Arosemena. Assumed office, October 1, 1923.

There are three Vice-Presidents, and a Cabinet of five Ministers.

A treaty for the demarcation of the boundary line between Panama and Costa Rica was signed on behalf of the respective Governments in 1910, and ratified by the congresses of both countries. By this treaty the question of what is the true boundary line was submitted to the arbitration of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, who gave his decision in 1914. Panama, however, refused to accept the award. The United States Government insisted upon the acceptance of the White Award, with the result that in September, 1921, the disputed region was occupied by Costa Rica. Panama, however, has protested against the decision, and does not recognise the occupation, as a result of which diplomatic relations between the two countries were broken off in 1921. On October 1, 1923, at the initiation of the Chilian Government, diplomatic relations between the two countries were resumed. The boundary dispute will probably be settled directly by negotiation.

Area and Population.—Extreme length is about 480 miles; breadth between 37 and 110 miles; total area is 32,380 square miles; population according to the census of 1923 (excluding the Canal Zone), 442,522, including 52,069 whites, 85,970 Negroes, 33,425 Indians, 3,061 Orientals, and 267,961 Mestizos. The inhabitants are of a mixed race, comprising Spanish, Indian, and Negro elements, with a small number of temporary immigrants from the United States and European countries. There are approximately 40,000 British subjects in the Republic, chiefly from the West Indies. There are 7 provinces (since 1928) as follows (the capitals in brackets):—Bocas del Toro (Bocas del Toro), 22,239 inhabitants; Coclé (Penonomé), 42,219 inhabitants; Colón (Colón), 41,206 inhabitants; Chiriquí (David), 76,484 inhabitants; Los Santos (Las Tablas), 34,638 inhabitants; Panama (Panama), 114,604 inhabitants; and Veraguas (Santiago), 82,162 inhabitants. The capital, Panama, founded in 1518, on the Pacific coast, has (1920) 59,458 inhabitants, and Colón on the Atlantic coast (1920), 31,203 inhabitants. Smaller ports on the Pacific are Aguadulce, Pedregal, Montijo, Puerto Mutis, and Puerto Armuelles; on the Atlantic, Bocas del Toro, Portobello, and Mandinga. Some parts of the interior of Panama are unexplored.

Movement of population in 1925:—Marriages, 589; births, 12,013 (illegitimate, 8,617); deaths, 6,020.

Religion.—The religion of the country is Catholicism, but other denominations are represented and have a fair following. In the Canal Zone Protestantism chiefly prevails. There are 71 Catholic churches and 58 parishes, served by priests of various nationalities.

Education.—Elementary education is obligatory for all children from 7 to 15 years of age. The Government maintains 446 public schools throughout the nine provinces and 54,214 children (excluding children enrolled in the Canal Zone public schools) received free instruction in 1926 from 1,492 teachers. The co-educational system has been adopted in all the schools of the Republic. Panama has a University (Instituto Nacional), with 1,578 students, a normal school for girls (696 pupils), and a school of arts and crafts or trades for boys from 14 years of age. In addition there are about 71 private institutions. Many young men and women are being educated in Europe and the United States at the cost of the Panama Government. Panama city is the site of the Bolivarian University, founded June 22, 1926, as an expression of Pan-American solidarity and supported by contributions from Colombia, Ecuador, Panama, Peru, and others.

Justice.—The laws were codified and promulgated in 1917, with the exception of the Administrative Code which was brought into force in 1918. These codes—civil, penal, commercial, judicial, administrative, fiscal, and mining—are designed to meet modern conditions, and replace the old Colombian laws formerly in use. The death penalty has been abolished. The Supreme Court consists of 5 justices appointed for 10 years.

Finance.—All the revenue collected on importations into the Republic belongs to the Panama Government, but the United States reserve the right to import supplies of all descriptions required for canal construction and for the use of their employees free of all taxes.

A fiscal agent, detailed from the canal service, reorganised the budget system in 1920, and has since been retained to supervise it; expenditures and revenues are on a biennial basis.

The national revenue and expenditure for recent years were as follows for year ending June 30 (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  = 4.86 balboas or dollars):—

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	1,104,166	1,100,783	2,124,836 <sup>1</sup>	2,553,895	2,979,682

The revenue includes an annual subsidy of 250,000 dollars from the United States so long as the latter maintains and operates the canal.

The Republic in 1927 had 127,671 $\frac{1}{2}$  in United States banks, 195,616 $\frac{1}{2}$  in the National Bank, and 437,500 $\frac{1}{2}$  in the International Bank of Panama. The foreign debt, February, 1928, consists of bonds to the value of 10,245,500 U.S. dollars issued in the United States for railway and road construction, &c. The internal debt (1927) amounts to 556,036 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

The Republic has no army or navy to support. The National Police Force numbers 60 officers and 630 men.

Production.—The soil of Panama is of great fertility. Of the whole area about five-eighths are unoccupied, and of the remainder only a small part is properly cultivated. Immigration of European settlers is encouraged, but, owing to the nature of the climate, this is not recommended. The most important product is bananas; other products are cocoa, coconuts, and ivory nuts. Caoutchouc (about 130 tons annually) is collected by the Indians of the Cordillera, or is obtained from trees planted by Europeans near the coast. Coffee (about 500,000 bushes) is grown in the province of Chiriqui, near the Costa Rican frontier. In the province of Coclé (Atlantic coast) there is one large agricultural undertaking, begun in 1894 with German capital. Here about 75,000 cocoa trees, 50,000 coffee bushes, and 25,000 caoutchouc trees have been planted and are now beginning to yield returns. Other products of the soil of Panama are mahogany and other woods, copaiba, sarsaparilla and ipecacuanha. Sugar and tobacco growing are assuming importance. The country has great timber resources. Cattle rearing is carried on successfully, and hides form an important article of export.

Pearl fishing is carried on at the Pearl Islands in the Gulf of Panama. Turtle-shell is also exported to a considerable amount.

Panama is believed to have considerable mineral resources; an English company, with a concession covering 4,500 square miles, is prospecting for them.

Commerce, Shipping, Communications.—The imports and exports (excluding the Canal Zone) for 6 years are shown as follows (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  = 4.86 balboas or dollars):—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1922	2,120,280	518,225	1925	3,011,539	730,742
1923	2,040,494	497,860	1926	2,857,600	707,600
1924	2,533,129	618,930	1927	2,903,200	781,000

Of the total imports in 1927, 69 per cent. came from the United States (exclusive of canal materials) and 8.6 per cent. from Great Britain. The principal exports in 1927 were bananas (2,818,000 dollars), coconuts, cacao (314,000 dollars), coffee, balata, hides, mother of pearl, ivory nuts (171,000 dollars), gum, tortoise shell, and timber.

Total trade between Panama and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Panama to U.K. . . . .	71,545	64,209	119,398	60,831	69,838
Exports to Panama from U.K. . . . .	416,148	388,153	371,135	402,665	412,09

The Isthmus on both sides is in communication with European and American countries by several lines of steamers. All the maritime traffic (international commerce) for Colón and Panama now runs through the Canal Zone ports of Cristobal and Balboa; Bocas del Toro remains for the provincial trade. The port of Mandinga, about 80 miles from the city of Colón, has been opened since 1916.

The Panama Railroad, which connects Panama City on the Pacific with Colon on the Atlantic, is the principal railway in the country. It is 47.61 miles long and, with the exception of the termini at Panama and Colon, passes through Canal Zone territory. As there is no road across the Isthmus, and as most vessels unload their cargo at Cristobal (Colon), the greater portion of the merchandise destined for Panama City is brought by the Panama Railroad. In the Province of Chiriqui there is a narrow gauge railway, 32 miles long, connecting the port of Pechegal with David, the capital. There are several other small lines.

There are telegraph cables from Panama to North American and South American ports, and from Colón to the United States and Europe. Roads are being constructed throughout the country. There are 96 post-offices, 33 telegraph offices, and seven radio stations, six of which are operated by the Navy Department of the United States.

Money and Credit.—The monetary unit is the gold Balboa weighing 1.672 gramme .900 fine, to which the United States gold dollar is legally equivalent. Silver coins are the peso (of 25 grammes .900 fine), and the half, fifth, tenth and twentieth peso pieces and nickel coins of 2½ cents. There is no paper money other than United States notes. Two silver pesos of Panama currency are taken as equivalent to one U.S. gold dollar. Altogether four millions of silver pesos of the new currency have been coined and placed in circulation.

Part of the 10,000,000 dollars (canal money) paid by the United States has been applied to the establishment of a real estate loan bank, part to public improvements in the several provinces, and 6,000,000 dollars have been invested in the United States, particularly in New York real estate.

English weights and measures are in general use as well as those of the metric system.

The Panama Canal and the Canal Zone.

On November 18, 1903, a treaty between the United States and Panama was signed, providing facilities for the construction and maintenance of the inter-oceanic Canal. In this treaty, Panama granted in perpetuity the use of a zone (Canal Zone) five miles wide on each side of the Canal route, and within this zone the exclusive control for police, judicial, sanitary and other purposes. For subsidiary canals other territory was ceded and, for the defence of the Canal, the coastline of the zone and the islands in Panama Bay were also ceded. The cities of Panama and Colón remain under the authority of Panama, but complete jurisdiction was granted to the United States in both the cities and in their harbours in all that relates to sanitation and quarantine. In return for these grants the United States paid 10,000,000 dollars on the ratification of the treaty, and is paying 250,000 dollars yearly, beginning in 1913. The treaty was ratified on February 26, 1904, and in July, 1904, the agreement for the provisional delimitation of the boundaries of the United States territory on the Isthmus was signed.

Governor of Canal Zone.—Colonel H. Burgess. Appointed December 7, 1928.

The area of the Canal zone, including land and water, but not including the water area within the 8-mile limit from the Atlantic and Pacific ends, is 553.8 square miles. The area of Gatun Lake, when its surface is at its normal elevation of 85 feet above sea level, is 163.4 square miles.

The Canal has a summit elevation of 85 feet above the sea. It is 44.08 nautical miles in length from deep water in the Caribbean Sea to deep water in the Pacific Ocean. The distance from deep water to the shore line in Limon Bay is about 4 miles, and from the Pacific shore line to deep water is about 4½ miles; hence the length of the Canal from shore to shore is approximately 35½ miles. The channel ranges in width from 300 to 1,000 feet. The average bottom width of the channel in this project is 649 feet, and the minimum width is 300 feet. The Canal has a minimum depth of 41 feet. The average time of passage through the Canal is from 7 to 8 hours. The record passage is 4 hours 10 minutes. The maximum traffic capacity of the Canal is estimated at 48 ships of usual size in a day or about 17,000 in a year.

The Gatun dam along the crest is 8,400 feet long, including the spillway, or over 1½ miles, and ½ mile wide at its greatest width. The crest of the dam is at an elevation of 105 feet above sea level, or 20 feet above the normal level of Gatun Lake, and 100 feet wide. The width of the dam at the normal water level of the lake, i.e., 85 feet above sea level, is about 388 feet. The length of the cut through the Continental divide (Culebra, now Gaillard Cut), is 6.97 nautical miles. The minimum bottom width of the cut is 300 feet. The bottom is 40 feet above sea level, giving a normal depth of 45 feet.

The civil population of the Canal Zone on June 30, 1928, was 28,002, of whom 7,482 were Americans. Of this population, 2,094 American men, and 344 American women, and 4,497 men and 267 women of other nationalities (chiefly British West Indian negroes) were employed by The Panama Canal and Railroad. There are in the Canal Zone 2,492 American women and 2,569 American children, and 4,526 women and 9,100 children of other nationalities. No land in the Zone is privately owned and the Zone is, in effect, a Government owned reservation dedicated to the operation, maintenance and protection of the Canal and its appurtenances. However, building sites are obtained on license by steamship companies, fuel oil dealers, and others with legitimate business interests depending on the Canal, and agricultural lands are licensed in tracts not exceeding 50 hectares.

The appropriations for the construction, operation and maintenance of the Canal to June 30, 1928, totalled 495,417,628 dollars, and the revenues from tolls and other sources since it was opened to navigation have totalled 202,944,245 dollars. The current expenses of operation and maintenance, exclusive of depreciation and amortisations during the fiscal year 1927-28 were 7,965,843 dollars, and the gross revenue was 27,912,765 dollars.

The Canal was informally opened to commerce by the passage of the 9,000 ton steamer Ancon on August 15, 1914, with specially invited guests. The journey was made without mishap in ten hours. It was formally opened to commerce by proclamation of the President of the United States on July 12, 1920. The Canal has been in use since 1914, except for various short periods in 1915, and from September 18, 1915, to April 15, 1916, when the channel was entirely blocked. There has been no interruption since January 11, 1917.

Particulars of the traffic through the Canal for the last 6 years are given as follows:—

Fiscal year ending June 30	Northbound (Pacific to Atlantic)		Southbound (Atlantic to Pacific)		Total		Tolls levied (in dollars)

Of the total number of commercial transits of the Canal during the year ended June 30, 1928, 2,753 were American, 1,842 British, 313 Norwegian, 316 German, 188 Japanese, 127 French, 111 Swedish, 137 Dutch, 138 Panaman, 115 Italian, 53 Peruvian, 99 Colombian, 69 Danish, 46 Spanish, 29 Danzig, 32 Chilean, 13 Belgian, 53 Yugoslav, and 19 of 5 other nationalities. Total, 6,456.

The postal address of the Canal administration is The Panama Canal, Balboa Heights, Canal Zone.

(REPÚBLICA DEL PARAGUAY.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Paraguay gained its independence from Spanish rule in 1811, and after a short government by two consuls, the supreme power was seized, in 1815, by Dr. José Gaspar Rodríguez Francia, who exercised autocratic sway as dictator till his death, September 20, 1840. Subsequently, in 1844, a new Constitution was adopted providing for the election of a President. President Lopez, in 1864, began a dispute with the Government of Brazil, which resulted in the entry of a Brazilian army, united with forces of the Argentine Confederation and Uruguay, into the Republic, June, 1865. After a struggle of five years, in which Paraguay lost probably 500,000 men, Lopez was defeated and killed at the battle of Cerro Corá, March 1, 1870.

A new Constitution was proclaimed on November 25, 1870, whereby the legislative authority is vested in a Congress of two Houses, a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies, the executive being entrusted to a President, elected for the term of four years, with five ministers. There is also a Vice-President, who acts as President of the Senate. The Senate and Chamber of Deputies are elected directly by the people, the former in the ratio of one representative to 12,000 inhabitants, and the latter one to 6,000 inhabitants, though in the case of the sparsely populated divisions a greater ratio is permitted. The electoral law of November 30, 1916, provides for 20 Senators and 40 Deputies. The Senators and Deputies receive each 5,000 paper dollars per month.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Jose Patricio Guggiari. (Assumed office on August 15, 1928.)

The President exercises his functions through a cabinet of responsible ministers, five in number, presiding over the departments of the Interior; of Finance; of Justice, Worship and Public Instruction; of War and Marine; and of Foreign Affairs. The President receives a salary of 30,000 pesos per month, and each of the ministers 15,000 pesos. The total administrative expenses for the year 1928-29 are estimated at 1,170,798 pesos gold and 203,589,966 pesos paper.

The country is divided into 2 sections: the 'Oriental,' east of Paraguay river, and the 'Occidental,' west of the same river. The Oriental section is divided into 12 departments, subdivided into 104 'partidos'; the Occidental section (the Chaco) is divided into 3 'comandancias militares.'

The 12 departments are: Concepción, San Pedro, Caraguatay, Villarrica, Yhú, Caazapa, Encarnación, San Ignacio, Quiyindy, Villeta, Paraguari and Pilar. The capital, Asunción, forms a district subdivided into 'secciones policiales.' The civil authority is exercised by a jefe político in each of the former, who is subject to the control of Government delegados, or comisionados, 12 in number, among whom are included the military commanders of the five military zones.

Area and Population.

The approximate area of Paraguay proper or 'oriental section,' which is situated between the rivers Paraguay and Alto Paraná, is estimated at 159,834 square kilometres, or 61,647 square miles. An area officially stated to be 100,000 square miles in extent, lying between the rivers Paraguay and Pilcomayo, known as the Chaco, is claimed by Paraguay, whose rights, however, are disputed by Bolivia. Serious friction developed in December, 1928, following an affray between the frontier guards, and the two countries broke off diplomatic relations. In 1928 the total population was estimated at 828,969 (including the Chaco Indians, roughly estimated at 30,000), with a density of 5 per square mile. The population of Paraguay (oriental section) consists of people of Mestizo Indian, European (chiefly Spanish) and Negro blood, the Mestizo largely predominating. On December 31, 1927, the population of the capital, Asunción (founded 1537), was 103,750; other towns, as estimated in 1926, are Villarrica, 26,000; Concepción, 11,000; Encarnación, 7,500; San Pedro, 8,700; Luque, 13,000;

Carapeguà, 12,000; Paraguari, 10,000; Villa del Pilar, 6,000. These figures include the surrounding districts in each case, and are estimated.

Immigration from 1905 up to January, 1928, totals 14,246, including 1,876 Mennonite farmers from Canada. Most of the immigrants settle in the 27 state-aided colonies. Only 405 immigrants arrived in 1927; more than half were Germans. Very little land is now national property, most of it having been transferred to private ownership, much of it in very large tracts.

Religion, Education, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic Church is the established religion of the State, but the free exercise of other religions is permitted. Asuncion, Suffragan to Buenos Aires, is the only Paraguayan Episcopal See. Roman Catholic and other religious marriage ceremonies are allowed, but the civil ceremony alone gives validity to a marriage.

Education is free and nominally compulsory, but schools are not everywhere available. In 1927 there were 709 government primary schools with 95,365 pupils. The teachers numbered 2,129. Total expenditures for these schools in 1927 were 21,330,985 pesos paper. There were also 41 private schools, with 150 teachers and 4,714 pupils. There are National Colleges (i.e., high schools) at Asuncion, Villarrica, and Pilar. The aggregate number of students is 1,000 and of teachers 55. There is also a University which had in 1927, 404 students and 60 professors. There are also 7 normal schools with 534 students in 1927. The School of Commerce has 432 students and 20 professors. A national library, the national archives, and a natural history museum and botanic-zoological garden are under the care of the department of Public Instruction.

Justice is administered by a Supreme Court, two courts of appeal (one for civil causes and another for commercial and criminal causes), a court of jurymen, 10 judges of First Instance, and (at the capital) 3 police magistrates. The functions of magistrates are exercised in the provinces by upwards of 100 jueces de paz (all laymen), who are at the same time registrars of births, deaths, and marriages.

Finance.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for six years are given as follows (5 gold pesos = £1):—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1923-24	665,426	655,390	1926-27	1,220,558	1,220,550
1924-25	1,108,250	892,599	1927-28	1,087,255	1,029,292
1925-26	1,110,150	1,108,810	1928-29	1,089,137	1,082,451

On July 31, 1928, the external debt of Paraguay was 4,469,021 gold pesos (£893,804); the consolidated internal debt was 1,547,861 pesos gold and 19,431,267 pesos paper (£390,535); the floating debt was 487,015 pesos gold and 8,835,911 pesos paper (£184,219). By an agreement reached September, 1924, Paraguay has resumed payment of interest on her sterling debt (now £580,090), and of £4,315 annually in reduction of the principal.

Defence.

The small army of Paraguay is entrusted to a French military commission. Establishment (1928), 106 officers and 2,809 men, distributed at 5 centres. The permanent organisations comprise 4 regiments of infantry, 1 regiment of cavalry, and 2 batteries of artillery. In the event of war service is compulsory in the active army for 2 years between the ages of 18 and 20, between 20 and 29 in the reserve of active army; between 29 and 39 with national guard, and between 39 and 45 in the territorial guard. The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military zones.

The navy consists at present of a flotilla of 3 small converted merchant vessels, river craft armed with modern guns. The largest is about 200 tons gross register. The budget expenditure on national defence in 1926-27 amounted to 1,108,000 gold pesos.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Paraguay is productive and the climatic conditions favourable to the cultivation of many sub-tropical products. Much of the country is admirably suited to pastoral purposes. It is estimated that there are about 5,000,000 head of cattle in the country. There are three packing plants, which are encouraged by Government; hides, jerked beef, and other animal products are exported. Yerba maté, or strong-flavoured Paraguay tea, which is a natural product of the virgin forests as well as a plantation product, is one of the chief articles of export. Output, 1927, 8,891,088 kilos. Tobacco is also grown (8,807 tons in 1927). Paraguay produces quebracho extract; 51,376 tons in 1927. Fruit-growing, especially oranges, is general. The total area devoted to sugar cultivation (largely for the manufacture of spirit) is about 35,000 acres; sugar production in 1926, 2,250 metric tons; in 1927, 4,957 metric tons. There are 10 sugar factories in Paraguay, the most important of which is at Tebicuari. Some rice is grown—3,233 tons in 1927. Roots (chiefly mandioca, sweet potatoes, and ground-nuts), &c., are grown for local consumption, but agriculture is primitive. About 105,000 acres are planted to maize; crop in 1926-27, 8,100 tons. The cultivation of cotton is encouraged by the authorities. In 1926-27 the acreage under cotton was 18,000 acres; production, 1,839,818 kilos. Cotton-seed output in 1927, 3,679 tons.

Iron, manganese, copper, and other minerals are encountered in abundance. The Ibicui iron mines were worked as early as 1863. The Quiquió and Ibicui manganese mines contain ore deposits estimated at 60,000,000 tons. Copper has also been found at San Miguel and Quiquió.

Commerce.

The following is the value of the imports and exports (5 gold pesos = £1):—

	1928	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . . . .	1,714,242	3,188,882	3,530,559	2,441,056	2,595,553
Exports . . . . .	2,494,311	1,782,892	3,123,285	3,099,500	2,856,408

The chief exports in 1927 were hides (391,533), yerba (7,391 tons), oranges (123,280,000), mandarines (16,697,100), tobacco (4,478 tons), meat extract (782 tons), quebracho logs (6,594 metric tons), canned and preserved beef (2,739 tons), petit grain oil, the essential oil from the leaf of the bitter orange (81,372 kgs.), cotton (1,781 tons), cotton-seed (3,564 tons), and quebracho extract (46,975 tons). Of the imports in 1927, the most important were cotton textiles, valued at 1,716,546 gold pesos; flour, and wheat, valued at 400,601 and 678,622 gold pesos, respectively. Of the total exports in 1927, goods to the value of 12,079,548 gold pesos, or about 85 per cent. of the total, went to Argentina, whence the bulk was re-exported.

The trade between Paraguay and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for 5 years :—

Exports to Paraguay from U.K. .	153,043	194,983	135,340	112,482	141,327

Communications.

In 1927, 2,858 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 345,403 tons, entered at the port of Asuncion, and 3,020 with a tonnage of 360,970 cleared. These figures include sailing vessels. The principal company engaged in the river service on the Paraguay and the Alto Paraná is the Argentine Navigation Company, Ltd., the controlling interest in which is British.

There is a British-owned railway (the Paraguay Central Railway) from Asuncion to Encarnacion, on the Rio Alto Paraná. This railway has a total main-track length of 232 miles, with 26 miles of side-track. There is now through train service without break of bulk from Asuncion to Buenos Aires. El Ferrocarril del Norte, owned by a Paraguayan company, runs from Concepcion as far as Horqueta, a distance of 33 miles. This road is projected to run as far as Pedro Juan Caballero on the Brazilian border. The Azucarera Paraguaya, in the Department of Ibytymi, has 15 miles of its line open to the public. Total length of railways, 517 miles. The country roads are in general mere bullock tracks, and transport is difficult.

There is a line of telegraph at the side of the railway. The national telegraph (1,200 miles of line and 1,770 miles of wire) connects Asuncion with Corrientes and Posadas in the Argentine Republic, and thus with the outside world; there were 985 miles of telegraph line and 77 telegraph offices in 1923. Number of messages transmitted in 1927, 130,800. Wireless telegraph stations have been erected at Asuncion, Concepcion, and Paraguari. They are said to have a radius of 500 kilom. by day and 1,000 kilom. by night. Paraguay joined the postal union in 1881; in 1924 the number of post offices was 154. In 1927 the post office handled 12,384 sacks of foreign mail matter and 13,609 sacks of domestic mail matter. Total revenue of postal and telegraph service in 1927 was 3,143,245 pesos gold and 3,120 pesos paper.

Money and Credit.

The unit of value is the gold peso, which is based on the Argentine gold peso. Five gold pesos equal £1. Actually there is no gold or silver current, and the paper peso, which is roughly equivalent to one English penny, is the only circulating medium with the exception of nickel coins which, in the shape of one peso, two pesos and fifty cents pieces, form a small part of the currency. Business and governmental transactions are frequently stated in both gold and paper pesos. The total paper currency in circulation on December 31, 1927, was 198,029,738 pesos.

Reserves, retained by the Exchange Office or deposited in various banks, guaranteed the total paper in circulation to the extent of 44·83 per cent.

Since 1923, when finances were reorganized on the lines suggested by an American financial adviser, the State Bank's Exchange Office, with its separate capital of 1,000,000 gold pesos (Oficina de Cambios) has maintained the exchange at 18·75 Paraguayan paper pesos to the Argentine paper peso and 42·61 Paraguayan pesos to the Argentine gold peso.

The principal banks in Paraguay are the Bank of the Republic (authorized capital 4,690,000 pesos gold); a branch of the Bank of London and South America, Ltd.; the Banco Germanico de la America del Sud and the Banco Agrícola. The last mentioned is practically a department of the Government, charged with agricultural development. On June 30, 1928, the State banks reported capital and reserves of 2,509,471 gold pesos (£501,894); the private banks had capital and reserves of 2,146,624 gold pesos (£1,829,324).

Weights and Measures.

The metric system was officially adopted on January 1, 1901.

PERSIA.

(IRÂN.)

Reigning King (Shah).

On October 31, 1925, the Majlis, 'in the name of the national welfare,' proclaimed the deposition of the Shah, Sultan Ahmad, and the overthrow of the Kajar dynasty. On December 13 the Constituent Assembly elected Riza Khan Pahlevi Shah of Persia, and made the Crown of Darius hereditary in his family. On December 15 the new Shah took the oath to defend the Constitution, and on December 16 he was publicly proclaimed. On Feb. 25, 1926, he appointed his eldest son, Shahpur Mohammed Riza, Valiahd (Crown Prince) of Persia. Riza Shah was crowned on April 25, 1926.

Constitution and Government.

The form of government in Persia up to the year 1906 was, in its most important features, similar to that of Turkey. The Shah, within the limitations imposed by the Moslem religion, was an absolute ruler, but had to reckon with the power of the leading doctors of law (Mujtahid), who resided at Najaf and Kərbela in Mesopotamia. Unlike the Sultan of Turkey he had no religious standing. In 1905, the Persian people demanded representative institutions, and in January, 1906, the Shah gave his consent to the establishment of a National Assembly, or 'Majlis,' which sat from October, 1906, to June, 1908, and drew up a 'Constitution' which received the Shah's approval on December 30, 1906. Each term of the Majliss lasts 2 years. The 7th Majliss was opened by the Shah on October 6, 1928.

The government of the country is in the hands of the Cabinet, composed as follows (March 1929):—

- Prime Minister.*—Mehdi Quli Khan Hedayat (Mokhber es Saltaneh).
- Minister for Foreign Affairs.*—Mirza Fathullah Khan, Pakravan (acting).
- Minister of Interior.*—Mirza Hussein Khan Samiyi (Adib-es-Saltaneh).
- Minister of Finance.*—Prince Firouz Mirza Firouz (Nusret-ed-Dowleh).
- Minister of War.*—Jaafar Gholi Khan Assad.
- Minister of Justice.*—Mirza Ali Akbar Khan Davar.
- Minister of Public Works.*—General Habibullah Khan, Sheybani.
- Minister of Education.*—Yahya Khan Qaragazlou.
- Minister of Post and Telegraphs.*—Mirza Ghassem Khan Sur.

The country is divided into thirty-three provinces, which are governed by governors-general, who are directly responsible to the central Government. Governors-general and governors are generally called Hakim, but the former usually have the title of Wali. Each quarter of a town or parish, and every village, has a chief who is called Katkhuda. These officers are generally appointed by the governors, but sometimes elected by the citizens. The chiefs of nomad tribes are called Ilkhant, Ilbegi, Wali, Sirdar, Sheikh.

Towns generally have a municipality, the director of which is nominated by the Central Government.

Area and Population.

Persia, which has an area of about 628,000 square miles, lies between 25° and 40° north latitude and between 44° and 63°30' east longitude. A vast portion of this area is an absolute desert, and the population is everywhere so scanty as not to exceed, on the average, 14-15 inhabitants to the square mile.

The population is estimated at 9 millions, but all figures are largely conjectural. It is estimated that the country contains some three million nomads. Of these, 260 000 are Arabs, 720,000 Turks, 675,000 Kurds and Leks, 20,700 Baluchis and Gipsies, 234,000 Lurs. These figures, however, are merely round numbers, and estimates vary.

The principal cities of Persia are:—Teheran and district, with about 350,000 inhabitants; Tabriz, 180,000; Isfahan, 100,000; Meshed, 85,000; Resht, 80,000; Kerman, 40,000; Kermanshah, 40,000; Shiraz, 35,000; Yezd, 30,000; Barfurush, 30,000; Hamadan, 30,000; Kazvin, 30,000; Kum, 25,000; Sultanabad, 20,000; Kashan, 15,000; and Mohammerah, 10,000.

Religion.

Of the population about 7½ millions are Moslems of the Shi'a sect, and of that branch of it known as the Ithnā-'Ashariyya, who recognise twelve Imāms or spiritual successors of the Prophet Mahomet; 850,000 are of the Sunni sect; 10,000 are Parsis (Gabrs), 40,000 Jews, 50,000 Armenians, and 30,000 Nestorians; there are also many 'Bahais' and some Christians, whose number cannot, however, be estimated.

The Moslems of the sect called Shi'a differ to some extent in religious doctrine (especially in their rejection of the Sunna or traditional body of rules, as distinct from the actual text of the Koran), from the Moslems of the Turkish Empire, who are called Sunnī. The Persian priesthood (ulemā) is very powerful. Any person capable of reading the Koran and interpreting its laws may act as a priest (mullā). As soon as such a priest becomes known for his just interpretation of the divine law, and for his knowledge of the traditions and articles of faith, usually gained by many years of study at Najaf and Kerbela, he is called a mujtahid, or doctor of law. There are many mujtahids in Persia, sometimes several in one town; there are, however, only four or five whose decisions are accepted as final. The highest authority, the chief priest of all, is the leading mujtahid, who resides at Najaf or Kerbela, near Baghdad, and some consider him the vicegerent of the Prophet, the representative of the Imām. The Shah and the Government have no voice in the matter of appointing the mujtahids, but the Imām-i-Jama, chief of the great mosque (Masjid-i-Jama) of a city, are appointed by Government. Under the Imām-i-Jama are the pish namāz or khatib (leader of public prayers and reader of the Khutba, the Friday oration), the mu'azzin (crier for prayers), and sometimes the mutavali (guardian of the mosque); this latter, as well as the mu'azzin, need not necessarily be a priest. All mosques and shrines have some endowments (wakf), and out of the proceeds of these are provided the funds for the salaries of the priests attached to them. The shrines of some favourite saints are so richly endowed as to be able to keep an immense staff of priests, servants, and dependants.

The Gregorian National Armenians form two dioceses, each under a bishop, the one residing at Tabriz, and the other at Isfahan. There are also a few thousand Roman Catholic Armenians in Persia who have a bishop of their own rite at Isfahan, the bishop of the Latin rite residing at Urumia. There is a wide tolerance exercised towards Armenians and Nestorians, Jews, and Parsis in cities where Europeans reside.

Education.

In recent years Public Instruction has made rapid strides in advancement, and the old system of instruction, which was generally religious, has been practically entirely changed, and at present a good broad education can be obtained in general knowledge from native professors who have studied abroad, although, of course, the purely religious schools are still maintained in the Mosques, and the old 'Maktab'—street schools for the very young at which the mere rudiments of reading and writing are taught—still abound. In 1928 the Ministry of Public Instruction reports that there were 575 Official Schools for boys and girls with 50,304 pupils; 382 Private Schools for boys and girls with 41,810 pupils; 65 Foreign Schools for boys and girls with 6,586 pupils; 1,826 "Maktab" Schools for boys and girls with 36,073 pupils; 300 Religious Schools for boys and girls with 6,188 pupils.

The Government pays the whole budget of Government Schools and grants are paid to the public, private and foreign schools. Religious Schools are maintained from endowments. The total budget for the year 1928 was 17,422,730 Krans.

The Foreign Schools are maintained by funds from abroad supplied by The American Presbyterian Mission, The Church Missionary Society, The Alliance Française, The Alliance Israélite, and The French Roman Catholics' Mission, and there are also schools run by the German and Russian Governments; all the above have schools for boys and for girls.

15 Professors for Secondary Schools have been engaged from France. Two new schools have been opened in Teheran. Teachers are now being trained in the Central University for Secondary Schools. The course of study in the School of Medicine has been extended by one year, and two French Professors have been engaged for that school. The course of study in the School of Law and Political Science is now four years, and four European Professors are engaged here. Moreover, 110 students have been sent to Europe to complete their studies at government expense and 100 will go every year.

Justice.

The judicial system of Persia is modelled on that of France. There are justices of the peace in villages and small towns, higher courts in the larger towns, police magistrates in all important places, courts of appeal in Teheran, Tabriz, Shiraz, Hamadan, Ispahan and Meshed, and a court of cassation, or supreme court, in Teheran. The courts are supervised by the Ministry of Justice. New Civil, Criminal and Commercial codes based on French and Swiss codes have been introduced into the Courts of Justice.

There are in every town of Persia police magistrates, and in big towns tribunals which deal with cases coming within the sphere of public and criminal laws. There is a High Court of Appeal in Teheran which is similar to the Cour de Cassation in France.

Finance.

From the autumn of 1922 until August 4, 1927, the entire finances of the country were under the control and charge of the American Financial Mission headed by Dr. Millspaugh. The Majlis has passed a bill to engage a German in his place (Dr. Lindenblatt); a Swiss (Dr. Walder) has also been appointed Treasurer-General.

The most productive items of revenue in order of importance are Customs Receipts, Tea and Sugar monopoly, Anglo Persian Oil Co. Royalties, and Land and Road Tax. The incidence of taxation, which is mainly indirect, weighs most heavily on the labouring classes.

Approximate gross Customs receipts for three years were:—1925-26, £2,152,087; 1926-27, £1,883,202; and 1927-28, £1,835,205.

The following table shows the principal items of revenue and expenditure for the years 1925-26 and 1926-27 (£1 = 43·50 Krans in 1925-26; and 48·60 Krans in 1926-27):—

In December, 1927, the recognised foreign debts of Persia were :—

Loans	Original Amount	Outstanding
Imperial Bank of Persia . . . . . (£)	1,564,281 16 4	1,157,859 8 5
British Advances 1912-14 . . . . . (£)	490,000 0 0	490,000 0 0

The debt incurred to Great Britain during and immediately after the war, which has been placed at 2,000,000*l.*, has not yet been funded.

Defence.

The army consists of 40,000 men of all ranks, exclusive of the 'Amnieh' (Gendarmerie) for the surveillance of roads. The combined services (army and navy) cost some 2,000,000*l.* per annum. There are five divisions with centres at Teheran, Tabriz, Kermanshah, Shiraz and Meshed. There has not as yet been any mechanization except in the Central Division, which has 2 tanks, 4 armoured cars (Rolls Royce), 11 Citroën caterpillars, 48 touring cars and 36 lorries. The Air Force is not yet developed, only 5 machines being serviceable out of a total of 13.

The 'Nazmieh' (police) force consists of 3,700 men and 300 officers, with a yearly budget of some 200,000*l.* This force is spread out in 54 towns in the country. There is also a force of Municipal Guards utilised as guards for Legations and houses of officials.

Military service became compulsory by royal decree in November, 1926, but much opposition has been incurred and the law has not been strictly enforced.

The navy is quite unimportant. The three gun-boats of which it consists are normally used for Customs purposes. Steps are being taken, however, to increase it, and negotiations are being carried out with the Italian Government for the services of two Naval advisers.

Production and Industry.

Persia produces oil, wool, drugs, fruits, gums, rice, cotton, barley, wheat, &c.; great attention is being paid to the silk industry. Tobacco is now one of the principal products of the country; the present annual yield is estimated at 22,818,000 lbs., of which 11,023,000 lbs. are cigarette tobacco, and 8,818,000 lbs. pipe tobacco. The wool of Khurasan is famous. Persian carpets, of which there are many kinds, are all made by hand. The principal centres of the industry are Tabriz, Hamadan, Sultanabad, and Kerman.

The mineral deposits of Persia are considerable but undeveloped. They include iron, coal, copper, lead, manganese, marble, borax, nickel, and cobalt. Oil is being developed with much success. The turquoise mines of Nishapur are worked in a most primitive fashion but with profit, as also are the iron ochre and rock salt in the Persian Gulf.

The production of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, which holds a concession for the whole of the country except the five northern provinces, was: 1923-24, 3,714,216 tons; 1924-25, 4,333,933 tons; 1925-26, 4,556,157 tons; 1926-27, 5,107,081 tons.

Commerce.

The principal centres of commerce are Tabriz, Teheran, Hamadan, Meshed, and Isfahan; the principal ports, Bandar Abbas, Mohamerah, and Bushire on the Persian Gulf, and Astara, Enzeli, Meshed-i-sar, and Bandar Gaz on the Caspian.

According to the statistics published by the Minister of Finance the values of the imports and exports for six years were as follows:—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1922-23	11,057,161	13,108,836	1925-26	20,253,448	24,353,793

Banking and Credit.

The Shah in 1889 granted a concession to Baron Julius de Reuter for the formation of a State Bank of Persia, with head office at Teheran and branches in the chief cities. The bank was formed in the autumn of the same year, with the title 'The Imperial Bank of Persia,' and incorporated by Royal Charter, dated September 2, 1889. The bank has the exclusive right of issuing bank-notes—not exceeding 800,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ l. without the assent of the Persian Government. There is also established at Teheran the Russian 'Banque d'Escompte,' formerly 'Banque des Prêts de Perse.' This Bank, with all its Concessions, was in March, 1921, handed over to the Persian Government by the Soviet authorities, and is now 'The Bank of Iran,' and forms part of the Ministry of Finance. The Ottoman Bank has also established branches in Teheran, Hamadan, and Kermanshah. Latterly the Russians started a bank, under the auspices of the Soviet Government, which has branches in the northern provinces. A Government Pawnbroking Establishment was founded in January, 1927, and a 'National Bank' in September, 1928. In Northern Persia, Ruspers has branches in most of the more important towns. The principal activities are concerned with the financing of Russo-Persian trade. There is also the Bank-i-Pahlevi with branches in Resht and Meshed.

Communications.

Tonnage entered at Bushire, Lingah, Bandar Abbas, Mohammera, and several smaller ports was: in 1925-26, 7,835,204 tons, of which 7,460,379 tons were British and 114,502 German; at Caspian Sea ports in 1925-26, 473,126 tons, of which 44,399 tons (steam) were Russian and 758 tons (steam) Persian, and 18,937 tons (sail) Russian and 9,432 tons (sail) Persian. The total number of vessels entered and cleared at Persian ports in 1926 was 23,321 compared with 26,025 in 1925.

Taking Teheran, the Capital, as the centre, there are the following available road communications for trade, post and travellers:—To the West: (1) Teheran-Kazvin-Hamadan-Kermanshah-Khanikin-Karaitu. (2) Teheran-Kum-Sultanabad-Kermanshah (direct or via Hamadan) to Khanikin, where is the railhead for the railway to Baghdad, whence via Basrah to the East or by the desert route to Beirout for the West, the latter route being served by the Nairn Transport Company to Baghdad, and thence to Teheran by Trans-Persia Motor Services. Road No. 1 is metalled throughout; it is available for all forms of transport, but it becomes difficult for a few days at a time in winter owing to snow on the Aven and Assadabad passes. This is the most used route at present. Road No. 2 is a made road up to Sultanabad only, but it is passable for cars and Ford vans for its entire length. There is a subsidiary caravan road, used only in good seasons, connecting Hamadan with Teheran by way of Robat Kerim (nearly desert). Transit for travellers by route No. 1, by motor transport, to Baghdad usually takes 4 to 5 days in good weather. (3) Teheran-Kazvin-Zenjan-Tabriz-Julfa (Russian frontier), and Teheran-Kazvin-Zenjan-Tabriz-Julfa (Turkish frontier). The first named connects with the railway from Tabriz to Julfa, and thence to Erivan, Tiflis, etc. This railway has connection between Sofian and Sharafkhaneh on the Urumiah Lake. The second route leads to Trebizond. Both can be traversed by carriages or motors. There are subsidiary connections with this road: (a) Tabriz-Khoy-Urumiah and Julfa-Khoy; (b) Tabriz-Ardebil-Astara (both are carriageable); and (c) Tabriz-Hamadan direct. (4) Teheran-Kum-Sultanabad-Burujird-Khorremabad to Dizful, thence to Ahwaz and Mohammerah. This route, very long out of use owing to the troubles with the Lurs tribes, was re-opened in 1924. There is practically no traffic thereon at present owing to want of accommodation and fodder, but it may become the principal highway and artery for trade, as it will mean communication direct with a noted Persian sea-port. A road for motor transport has been constructed from Burujird to Ahwaz and Mohammerah. Burujird is connected with Hamadan by a good road, and Sultanabad with Isfahan and Hamadan, both vehicular.

To the North and East: (5) Teheran-Kazvin-Resht-Enzeli (metalled, suitable for nearly all sorts of transport, apt to become difficult in a severe winter due to high passes); (6) Teheran-Demavend-Barfarush, and thence to—Meshed i Sar on the one hand and Bandar Gez and Astarabad on the other, available for motor transport all the way to Barfarush; (7) Teheran-Sabzevar-Meshed, natural-made road, but available for all traffic. From Meshed there are the following routes:—(a) to Koutchan-Askhabad (vehicular); (b) to Douchak; (c) to Khakester; (d) to Koutchan-Deregez; (e) to Ghahghahe; (f) to Sarakhs (vehicular); (g) to Kariz-Torbat, thence to Herat (vehicular); (h) to Birjand-Sistan-Duzdab (railhead to Quetta, vehicular passable for motors); (i) to Birjand; (j) a road from Koutchan to Sabzevar (vehicular).

To the South: (8) Teheran-Kum-Kashan-Isfahan-Shiraz-Bushire, although at present somewhat difficult from Shiraz for a short distance, this road is available for mechanical transport in all its length. Isfahan has the following connections: (a) to Ahwaz direct caravan route only, to Ahwaz via Borasjun and Ganaveh passable for motors; (b) to Ahwaz via Burujird (see No. 4); (c) to Yezd-Kerman-Bander Abbas. Other existing roads are these connecting (a) Yezd with Torbat Haidari; (b) Bander Abbas with Lar; (c) Bander Abbas with Shiraz; (d) Mohammerah with Abadan (vehicular); (e) Mohammerah with Basrah; (f) Mohammerah with the oil fields (vehicular); and (g) Kerman with Duzdab passable for motors.

Total length of railways 231 miles, as follows:—Tabriz-Julfa, 85 miles; Sofian-Sharifkhareh, 30 miles; Mirjawa-Duzdap, 104 miles; Resht-Pir i Bazer, 7 miles; and Teheran-Shah Abdul Azim, 5 miles. A new railway line, 310 miles in length, was contracted for in July, 1928. It will run from Khormusa, on the Persian Gulf, through Ahwaz, Dizful, Burujird, Hamadan, Kazvin, Teheran, Firuzkuh and thence to the Caspian Sea.

Navigation on the Lake of Urumiah, from Sharafkhaneh to Danalou, is served by some five tugs and 15 barges for the transport of goods and passengers. There is a weekly service. On the River Karun likewise, from Mohammerah to Ahwaz (Nasseri), a fortnightly service both ways is run by the Mesopotamia Persia Corp., Ltd., and some native firms, run daily trips by motor boat, for passengers and merchandise. By changing into lighter draught boats at Nasseri both can be taken up to Shalili near Shushtar.

The telegraph system controlled by the Government attains a length of 7,964 miles with 13,829 miles of wire. In virtue of several conventions, dating from 1863, between the British and Persian Governments, the Indian Government constructed, and at present maintains and works with its own staffs; (a) The Indo-European Telegraph Department line from Teheran-Kum-Kashan-Isfahan-Shiraz to Bushire, and thence to Fao and also Karachi. This line is 669 miles in length with 2,292 miles of wire and 7 stations; and (b) the Central Persia Telegraphs from Teheran via Kashan-Yezd-Kerman-Bam to the Beluchistan frontier and thence to India with a mileage of 1,467 line and 4,183 wire and 10 stations.

Wireless has been installed at Teheran, Tabriz, Meshea, Kermanshah, and Shiraz, and wireless stations are being completed in Kerman and Ahwaz.

The telephone system throughout the greater part of Persia is leased to the "Société Anonyme des téléphones Persans." There are a number of small private companies as well.

During the year ending March 31, 1925, there were 194 post offices and 38 postal agencies with 918 employés.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Persia has a silver monetary standard. The monetary unit is the kran, a silver coin weighing only 24 nakhods (71 grains) or somewhat less. The proportion of pure silver was before the new coinage (commenced 1877) 92 to 95 per cent.; it was then fixed at 90, but occasionally coins with only 89½ have been turned out from the Mint. In 1874 a kran had the value of a franc, 25 being equal to 17. A gold standard is now under consideration by the Ministry of Finance.

The coins in circulation, with their values calculated at exchange 17. = 50 kran, are:—

Silver.	Nickel coins.
Three Sháhís . . . . . 72 d.	One Sháhí = $\frac{1}{16}$ Kran . . . . . 24 d.
Five Sháhís = $\frac{1}{4}$ Kran . . . . . 1·2 d.	Two Sháhís = $\frac{1}{8}$ Kran . . . . . 48 d.
Ten Sháhís = $\frac{1}{2}$ Kran . . . . . 2·40 d.
One Kran = 20 Sháhís . . . . . 4·80 d.
Two Kran . . . . . 9·60 d.
Five Kran . . . . . 2 s. 0·00 d.

Copper is out of circulation. In consequence of an excess of coinage by a former mint-master the copper money greatly depreciated in value since 1896 and was circulating at less than its price of copper, viz. 80 to 83 copper shahis (weighing about  $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) to one silver kran (4*d.*). The Government then decided to introduce a nickel coinage instead; great quantities of five and ten centime pieces, of same size and weight as those current in Belgium, and of the nominal value of  $\frac{1}{16}$  and  $\frac{1}{8}$  kran, were coined at Brussels and put into circulation in the autumn of 1900. Nickel coin has since then been minted at the Birmingham Mint.

Gold coins are:  $\frac{1}{2}$  Toman,  $\frac{1}{4}$  Toman, 1 Toman, and 2 Tomans, but they are not in circulation as current money. Gold pahlevis have been struck since 1927, in denominations of 5, 2 and 1. Each pahlevi contains 1·94 grammes of gold. A Toman in silver is the equivalent of 10 krans (now worth 4*s.*), but a gold Toman is now worth about 16 Krans (6*s.* 6*d.*).

Accounts are reckoned in dínârs, an imaginary coin, the ten-thousandth part of a toman of ten krans. A kran therefore = 1,000 dínârs; one sháhí = 50 dínârs.

The unit of weight is the miskâl (71·6 grains), subdivided into 24 nakhods (2·96 grains) of 4 gandum (·74 grain) each. Sixteen miskâls make a sír, and 40 sír = 1 batman (Tabriz). Most articles are bought and sold by a weight called batman or man. The mans most frequently in use are:—

Man-i-Tabriz = 8 Abbâsís . . . . .	= 640 Miskâls = 6·5464 lb.
Man-i-Noh Abbâsî = 9 Abbâsís . . . . .	= 720 " = 7·30 "
Man-i-Kohneh (the old man) . . . . .	= 1,000 " = 10·14 "
Man-i-Sháh = 2 Tabriz Mans . . . . .	= 1,280 " = 12·98 "
Man-i-Key = 4 Tabriz Mans . . . . .	= 2,560 " = 25·96 "
Man-i-Bandar Abbâsî . . . . .	= 840 " = 8·52 "
Man-i-Hâshemî = 16 Mans of . . . . .	720 " = 116·80 "
Corn, straw, coal, &c., are sold by Kharvâr = 100 Tabriz Mans = 654·64 " 3½ Kharvâr = 1963·92 lbs. = 1 short ton (very nearly).

By a decree of the Persian Council of Ministers in February, 1929, the metric system is to be introduced as from March 22, 1929.

The unit of measure is the zar or gaz; of this standard several are in use. The most common is the one of 40·95 inches; another, used in Azerbaijan, equals 44·09 inches. A farsakh theoretically = 6,000 zar of 40·95 inches = 3·87 miles. Some calculate the farsakh at 6,000 zar of 44·09 inches = 4·17 miles. It is about 3½ miles in South Persia and about 4 miles in the North.

The measure of surface is jerib = 1,000 to 1,066 square zar of 40·95 inches = 1,294 to 1,379 square yards.

PERU.

(REPUBLICA DEL PERÚ.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Peru, formerly the most important of the Spanish Viceroyalties in South America, issued its declaration of independence on July 28, 1821; but it was not till after a war, protracted till 1824, that the country gained its actual freedom from Spanish rule. According to the Constitution of January 18, 1920, the legislative power is vested in a Senate (35 members) and a House of Representatives (110 members), and renewed totally every five years. Both senators and deputies are elected by a direct vote. Congress meets annually on July 28, and sits for 90 to 120 days. It may be summoned as often as necessary, but no extraordinary session may last more than 45 days.

The executive power is entrusted to a President, elected for 5 years and re-eligible for election indefinitely (under a change in the constitution authorized in 1927). He receives 80,000 soles (nominally 3,000*l.*) a year and an amount for administration expenses fixed by Congress each year.

President.—Señor Augusto B. Leguía (1924–1929).

President Leguía seized the presidency by a coup-d'état July 4, 1919; this was legalized by Congress and he took the oath of office October 15, 1919, for the full term of 5 years. He was re-elected in 1924.

The President exercises his executive functions through a Cabinet of seven ministers, holding office at his pleasure. The ministers are those of the Interior, War, Marine, Foreign Affairs, Justice, with Worship and Instruction, Finance and Public Works. Each minister receives 16,800 soles (1,680*l.*) a year. None of the President's acts has any validity without the signature of a minister.

The 20 departments are divided into provinces (114 in all), and these are subdivided into districts (967 in 1927). Each department is administered by a Prefect, and each province by a Sub-Prefect. There are three regional legislatures in the country, one in the north, a second in the centre, and the third in the south. Deputies to these legislatures are chosen by the provinces. Municipal councillors are elected by direct vote, and foreigners are eligible.

By a decree issued by President Leguía in 1927, the Indians were freed from the peonage system which existed in some regions.

Area and Population.

There has been no enumeration of the population in recent years. The census returns of 1862 showed a total population of 2,487,916; that of 1876 put the number at 2,660,881, of whom about 13·8 per cent. were white, 1·9 per cent. negroes, 57·6 per cent. Indian, 24·8 per cent. mestizos (Cholos and Zambos), and 1·9 per cent. Asiatic, chiefly Chinese. An estimate in 1927 gives the population in that year as 6,147,000.

The population of the capital, Lima, according to the official census of December 17, 1920, was 176,467 and of Callao 52,843. The estimated population in 1925 of the principal cities was as follows: Lima city 220,000; Lima and suburbs 260,000; Callao 66,000; Arequipa 58,000; Cuzco 37,000;

Chiclayo 30,000; Ica 25,000; Trujillo 25,000; Chincha 20,000; Huancayo 20,000; Ayacucho 20,000; Iquitos 20,000; Huaráz 18,000; Piura 15,000.

The Republic (including Tacna) is divided into 20 departments and 3 provinces (Callao, Tumbes and Moquegua), the areas of which, according to estimates supplied by the Lima Geographical Society (1915), are given below with the population, according to the census returns of 1876 (the latest official one) and an official estimate for 1927. The chief towns are shown in brackets :—

There are, besides, many uncivilised Indians, but their numbers are unknown. The Peruvian Government encourages immigration of properly qualified persons. In the fiscal year 1927-28 the Government opened up 3,246,325 acres to settlers, mostly through colonization companies.

The long-standing dispute with Chile over the provinces of Tacna and Arica (see STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1928, page 1198) reached an amicable stage in July, 1928, when the two countries resumed diplomatic relations and made a fresh attempt to settle the question by direct and friendly negotiations. On February 21, 1929, it was announced that a settlement had been reached, Tacna going to Peru and Arica to Chile.

As to the boundary dispute with Bolivia an arrangement has been come to by direct negotiations between Bolivia and Peru. The frontier line between them was fixed from the mouth of the Heath to that of the Yaverija (1912), and finally demarcated by a joint commission. Those with Colombia and Ecuador (for the possession of over 100,000 square miles of land rich in rubber, timber, and probably gold lying about the head waters of the Amazon) were ultimately referred to the mediation of the United States, Argentina, and Brazil. A Treaty establishing the boundary between Peru and Colombia was ratified by the former in 1927, and by Colombia in 1928. A definite arrangement has been made with Brazil as to boundary, favourable, on the whole, to Peru, and this was finally demarcated in 1927 by a joint commission.

The region north of the Marañon from the Pongo de Manseriche is claimed by Ecuador and Colombia and Peru.

Religion.

By the terms of the new Constitution there exists absolute political and religious liberty, but the Roman Catholic religion is the religion of the State. There is a Roman Catholic archbishopric (Lima, dating from 1545), 9 bishoprics, 2 Apostolic Vicarages, and 2 Apostolic Prefectures. The ecclesiastical division of the country is (1927) into 106 vicarages, as well as rectories, parishes and sub-parishes. The churches and convents are the property of the State. In 1928, 27,780% was voted for public worship, and 5,131% for missions. Acts have been passed enabling non-Catholics to contract civil marriages.

Education—Justice.

Elementary education is compulsory for both sexes between the ages of 7 and 14, and is free. In 1927, there were in Peru 3,410 primary schools with 5,789 teachers and 293,141 pupils. Special schools for the Indians enrolled 1,780 in 1926. There are also 30 travelling schools. There are 30 secondary schools with 562 teachers and 5,675 pupils. There are (1927) 8 normal schools, with a registration of 1,873. Higher education is provided at the central university in Lima, called 'Universidad de San Marcos,' founded by Charles V. in 1551 and re-inaugurated under a new charter in 1928; it had in 1927, 1,687 students in five faculties and two institutes. There are also universities at Arequipa (founded in 1827), with (1927) 199 students, Cuzco with 140 students in 1927, and Trujillo (51 students in 1927); the Education Law of February 5, 1921, created the University of Technical Schools, which comprises advanced schools of engineering, agriculture, commerce, industrial arts, and a school of pedagogy. There are also State Colleges of Agriculture, Arts and Trades, and Engineering in Lima.

Justice is administered in the Supreme Court at Lima composed of 11 judges and 3 fiscals, and in Superior and Minor Courts at Lima and 11 other judicial districts. The judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by Congress from lists of names presented by the Government; those of the Superior Courts and of the Minor Courts are chosen by the Government from lists of names presented by the Supreme and Superior Courts, respectively.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (ended April 30) were as follows in Peruvian pounds:—

—	Lp.	Lp.	Lp.	Lp.	Lp.
Revenue*	9,603,383	10,268,476	10,800,149	10,702,980	12,583,636
Expenditure	11,455,050	14,428,726	15,585,707	11,867,091	12,583,636

In 1870 and 1872 Peru contracted two loans in England totalling 32,688,320*l*. In 1876 Peru was forced to suspend payments on its external debt, and in 1889 the debt, including arrears of interest, amounted to 55,209,133*l*. In January, 1890, by the signing of the Grace-Donoughmore contract, the Committee of Peruvian Bondholders assumed all responsibility for the foreign debt of Peru, and in return the Peruvian Government granted that organisation certain concessions (rights over guano deposits, mines, and lands) and the control of all State railways, for a period of 66 years. The Peruvian Corporation was then created by the Committee of Peruvian Bondholders to administer these concessions. In 1928 the Peruvian Corporation took over the railways in perpetuity in exchange for the relinquishment of certain concessions, including that of the guano deposits, and the payment of certain annuities.

In December, 1927, Peru borrowed 50,000,000 dollars in New York, largely for the establishment of a gold exchange fund to assist in stabilizing the currency. In October, 1928, she raised an additional 25,000,000 dollars in New York and on the Continent, and 2,000,000*l*. in London, to redeem various prior loans and for public works.

The total debt of Peru (June 30, 1928) amounted to Lp. 25,575,307, of which the consolidated internal debt amounted to Lp. 3,963,845, the floating and short term debt to Lp. 3,663,740, and the foreign debt to Lp. 17,947,722.

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service is compulsory and universal, though only a limited number of the annual quota of conscripts is called up for active duty with the colours, the remainder being formed into local battalions, who receive instruction one day in the week (Sundays). The term of service is 2 years in the active army, 5 years in the first reserve, 5 in the second reserve, and 20 years in the National Guard.

The country is divided into 5 military districts, each furnishing a complete division. The division is made up of 2 regiments of infantry of 2 battalions each, with 1 machine gun company; 1 topographical section, 1 medical section, 1 commissariat section, 1 or 2 regiments of cavalry (2 squadrons), 1 regiment of mountain artillery.

The army at present is organized as follows: of infantry there are 20 regiments, of artillery 5 regiments, 5 mounted infantry companies, 5 battalions of engineers, 1 aviation squadron, and an independent commissariat corps.

The peace establishment of the army in 1927 was 1,020 officers and 6,536 other ranks. Police and gendarmerie amount also to about 8,000 including civil guards and mounted police. The civil guard has been reorganised into 11 cavalry regiments, 1 infantry regiment of 4 battalions, 1 independent battalion and 1 machine gun battalion. Rifle instruction is also given in Peruvian schools. There is a military academy and war college at Chorillos, near Lima. Since May, 1927, the Peruvian army which for some years prior to 1924 was in the hands of a French Military Mission, has been entrusted to the technical direction of an ex-German general.

The infantry is armed with the 1912 Peruvian model of the Mauser rifle, cavalry with carbine of the same type and model, artillery with the Schneider-Canet gun and machine gun battalion with Fiat guns.

Aviation is controlled by a Director-General of Aviation.

Army appropriations in the 1926-27 budget, Lp. 1,440,981.

NAVY.

The Peruvian Navy, which since 1922 has been under the supervision of a United States Naval Mission, consists of the following units:—2 obsolete cruisers, Almirante Grau and Coronel Bolognesi, 3,200 tons, 24 knots speed, each with 2·6 inch and 12 lighter guns, built in 1906, and re-boilered and adapted for oil fuel in 1923–25; 4 submarines; 1 submarine tender, La Lima, 1 destroyer and a sailing training ship. In addition there are 2 river gun-boats on the Amazon. There is a naval school for cadets at La Punta, near Callao, and a submarine base on San Lorenzo Island, opposite Callao.

Agriculture and Industry.

The country may be divided into three zones: the coast strip, with an average width of 30 miles; the Sierra, or Uplands, lying between the coast range of mountains and the Andes proper; and the forest or wooded region, called the Montaña. In the arid coast region the government has brought under irrigation 62,400 acres during the last few years; a gigantic irrigation project now under construction in the Olmos desert near Pimentel in northern Peru, will bring 408,000 acres under irrigation during the next few years. Lp 2,292,762 has been spent by the Government in irrigation in the past decade, and Lp.10,000,000 will have been expended by 1934. The chief agricultural productions of Peru are sugar, cotton, coffee, wool, hides, and skins. The chief coffee-growing districts are those of Chanchamayo, Perené and Paucartambo in Central Peru, where the Peruvian Corporation has done much useful colonising work. The concession to the Corporation comprises about 2,750,000 acres. The sugar industry, the most important in the country, is carried on chiefly in the coast region. In 1927, the area under cultivation was 140,954 acres, and the production 374,852 tons. Cotton likewise is important and is fast overtaking sugar; production in 1927 reached 55,200 tons. Cocoa cultivation is extending, about 200,000 cocoa trees having been recently planted in the Perené region. Wheat growing on the plateaus of the Andes is encouraged. Total area under wheat in 1927–28, 275,575 acres; estimated production, 85,707 metric tons. Rice is extensively grown; the quality is excellent, but the quantity (28,145 tons in 1927) is insufficient to meet local wants. The gathering of wild rubber, once the most important industry in the Amazon region of Peru, where it was shipped from Iquitos, 2,000 miles down the Amazon to the Atlantic, has declined in importance with the competition of plantation rubber. But exports of balata from this region have taken its place. Exports in 1927, 4,514,869 pounds. Tobacco, wines and spirits, olives, ramie, and maize are also produced. In 1909 the Government created a tobacco monopoly for the manufacture, importation and sale of tobacco. Silk culture is being tried in the coast region. The most important coca growing district is in the province of Otuzco in the department of La Libertad, where there are several coca estates. Cocaine is manufactured in Lima, Otuzco, and several other towns. In addition there are in the country dyes, cinchona, and other medicinal plants. There is a large export of alpaca, sheep, and llama wool. Peru produces 15,000,000 lbs. of wool per year from about 12,000,000 sheep.

The guano deposits on Huanillos, Punta Lobos, and Pabellon de Pica, amounting to 40 or 50 thousand tons, which had been granted to the Peruvian Corporation, reverted to the Chilean Government on February 2, 1901; but those on the island of Lobos de Afuera, and at some places on the coast, remained in possession of the Corporation. Their output in 1927 was 12,460 English tons. In 1919 a new company was set up by the Government for the administration of the Government's guano deposits for domestic consumption. Output in 1927-28, 85,318 Spanish tons.

The following table shows the mineral production for two years :—

		Quantity	Value	Quantity	Value
			Lp.		Lp.
Copper . . . . .	Metric tons	43,842	3,582,600	47,805	3,647,524

<sup>1</sup> Preliminary.

Total mineral production, which is largely controlled by foreign interests, in 1927 was valued at 25,214,284 Peruvian pounds, an increase of 2,402,514 over that of 1926. Mine workers numbered 30,000. Two smelters, both American-owned, and 2 petroleum refineries, 1 American and 1 Italian, are the largest industrial plants in Peru.

Commerce.

The value of the trade of Peru in five years (including the Department of Loreto) has been as follows :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	Lp.	Lp.	Lp.	Lp.	Lp.
Imports . . . . .	14,132,307	18,020,418	18,272,979	19,560,034	19,364,198

Chile . . . . .	428,410	251,835	1,984,350	2,318,008

In 1927 the principal articles imported by the United Kingdom from Peru were (according to Board of Trade Returns): Sugar (unrefined), 1,941,672*z*.; cotton, 5,058,905*z*.; alpaca, 326,998*z*.; and the principal exports to Peru were: Cotton piece goods, 393,799*z*.; woollen piece goods, 153,047*z*.; and iron and steel manufactures, 340,162*z*.

Total trade between Peru and United Kingdom in thousands of pounds for 5 years (Board of Trade returns):—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Imports from Peru to United Kingdom	9,764	8,583	7,214	8,224	6,707
Exports to Peru from United Kingdom	2,734	2,381	2,350	2,088	1,955

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1927, 11,232 vessels of 15,973,920 tons entered, and 11,174 of 15,905,822 tons cleared the ports of the Republic. Since December, 1923, the coasting trade has been reserved for Peruvian-owned vessels with Peruvian crews.

Internal Communications.

In 1927 there were in the country 7,838 miles of road suitable for motor traffic, 5,675 miles under construction, and 6,661 miles planned, making a total of 20,174 miles. All roads are national. There are now two paved concrete highways between Lima and the port of Callao, and another under construction between Lima and Chosica.

In 1927 the total working length of the Peruvian railways was 2,725 miles, 1,486 miles being State railways now (1929) granted in perpetuity to the Peruvian Corporation. These include (1) the Peruvian Central (Oroya) Railway, from Callao and Lima to Huancayo, 259 miles; (2) the Southern Railway of Peru, from Mollendo to Puno, 326 miles with branches totalling 240 miles; (3) the Paita to Piura Railway, 60 miles; (4) the Pacasmayo to Chilite Railway, 82 miles; (5) the Pisco to Ica Railway, 46 miles. All these lines are standard gauge (4 ft. 8½ in.), with the exception of two small lines totalling 101 miles, which are 3 ft. gauge, and the North-Western Railway, Lima to Huacho and Sayan, 142 miles. American engineers are laying out a railroad from the coast across Peru to Yurimaguas on the Huellaga river, where it will connect with steamers which will ascend the Amazon and Huellaga rivers, a trans-continental route 200 miles south of the Equator.

By an agreement (March, 1921) between the Peruvian Government and the Marconi Company, the latter undertakes the administration of the posts, telegraphs, and wireless services for a period of 25 years from May 1, 1921. In 1927, the Company handled 42,375,036 pieces of correspondence. There were 341 telegraph stations in 1927. The length of State telegraph lines on July 1, 1928, was 10,254 miles. Number of telegraphic and wireless messages (1927), 3,153,283. The telephone system, 1926, included about 11,000 instruments. Three submarine telegraph cables connect Peru and Chile, and one connects Peru and the Republics to the north. In 1927 there existed 27 wireless stations in Peru, and 23 more are at present under construction. In 1928 an aerial postal and passenger service between different points in the Republic was introduced.

Money and Credit.

Peru's currency unit is the Peruvian pound or gold libra, which is of the same standard and weight as the British pound sterling. But the gold standard was suspended during the War and has not yet been resumed. Taking the par value of the Peruvian pound as equal to $4.86 (U.S.), the average exchange rate in recent years has been: 1914, 4.72; 1915, 4.23; 1916, 4.82; 1917, 4.99; 1918, 5.27; 1919, 4.92; 1920, 4.59; 1921, 3.60; 1922, 3.86; 1923, 4.11; 1924, 4.05; 1925, 4.02; 1926, 3.72; 1927, 3.73; 1928, 4.00.

Ten soles equal 1 Peruvian pound. Silver is legal tender up to 100 soles. Silver coins are the sol, and half-sol, 5/10ths fine. Copper coins are 2 and 1 cent.; and nickel coins 20, 10, and 5 cents. Peru has a paper currency issued by the Government of Lp. 5, Lp. 1 and 5 sol denomination. The amount of nickel and silver coins in circulation is approximately Lp. 1,900,000. The amount of gold reserves held on October 31, 1928, by the Reserve Bank and various private banks was Lp. 5,606,207, against a total note circulation of Lp. 5,999,683.

On October 10, 1921, a Bill was introduced into the Senate for the establishment of a Government bank, to be known as the Banco de Reserva del Perú. The Bill became law on March 9, 1922. The Reserve Bank is bound to hold not less than 50 per cent of gold cover for the amount of notes in circulation, the balance being provided by commercial paper bearing the endorsement of the principal Lima banks.

The Central Mortgage Bank of Peru was formed in 1928, with capital of Lp. 1,500,000, to extend credit to farmers at reasonable rates. One-third of the capital is held by the Government, one-third by the other banks, and the remaining third by the municipalities and the public.

On December 31, 1927, the paid-up capital of all banks amounted to Lp. 2,976,792, the reserves to Lp. 1,127,960.

Savings deposits on the same date amounted to Lp. 1,439,715.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system of weights and measures was established by law in 1869, and is coming into general use, except for the customs tariff. It came into force in Lima and Callao on September 1, 1916. Spanish measures are still in use.

POLAND.

(RZECZPOSPOLITA POLSKA.)

POLAND was an independent State until the end of the eighteenth century. The Poles are Slavonic in race and Roman Catholic in religion.

During the seventeenth century the position of Poland rapidly declined, and eventually, by the three partitions of 1772, 1793, and 1795, the Polish Commonwealth, as it was then called, was divided between Prussia, Russia and Austria.

In 1807, Napoleon formed a part of the Old Commonwealth into a semi-independent State under the title of the Duchy of Warsaw and endowed it with a very liberal constitution, but in 1815, at the Congress of Vienna, this was undone, and Poland was re-partitioned between Prussia, Austria and Russia, except the small district of Cracow, which was constituted an independent republic and remained such until 1835, when it was annexed by Austria, despite a guarantee of neutrality by Prussia, Austria and Russia.

At the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, only Austrian Poland enjoyed autonomous government. It was governed by the Galician Diet at Lwow (Lemberg), under the control of the Central Government in Vienna.

During the war Russian-Poland was invaded by the Germans and Austrians, and by the end of 1915 the whole country was occupied by the Austro-German forces.

On November 5, 1918, the German and Austrian Emperors, in a joint manifesto, proclaimed the independence of Poland, but neither the boundaries nor the constitution of the State were defined. Shortly afterwards a Provisional Council of State, consisting of 25 members, all Poles, was summoned in order to draft the constitution of the new State, but this body did not exist for long. In September, 1917, a new Supreme Authority, the Regency Council, consisting of three members, was appointed, and under their auspices a Ministry was formed and a new Council of State summoned. It was composed partly of elected and partly of appointed members, 110 in all. In October, 1918, this Council of State was dissolved by the Regency Council.

and the convocation proclaimed a Constituent Assembly to determine the constitution of the Polish State and take over the supreme authority.

On November 9, 1918, the Independence of Poland was solemnly proclaimed. On November 14, General Pilsudski returned to Poland, assumed Supreme Power and convoked the Constituent Assembly (Sejm Ustawodawczy), which confirmed him in his office. On June 28, 1919, the Treaty of Versailles recognised the Independence of Poland. The same Treaty determined the western frontier of Poland from the sea to Upper Silesia. The fixing of the Polish-German frontier took place after the plebiscite in Upper Silesia and the territory east of the Vistula, according to the resolution of the Council of Ambassadors of August 12, 1920, and October 20, 1921. A resolution of the Council of Ambassadors has also fixed the Polish-Czechoslovakian frontier. Poland's eastern frontiers were determined by the Treaty of Riga, of March 18, 1921; the Allied Powers have acknowledged those frontiers, as also the frontiers with Lithuania fixed by the resolution of the Council of Ambassadors of March 15, 1923.

President.—Ignace Moscicki, born on December 1, 1867, in Mierzanów, near Plock, elected third President of the Polish Republic on June 1, 1926.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of the Polish Republic adopted by the Sejm (Parliament) on March 17, 1921, contains the following fundamental principles: The franchise is universal for both sexes, the voting age being 21 for the Sejm and 30 for the Senate. There are two chambers, a Diet (Sejm) and a Senate, both elected by general suffrage on the system of proportional representation. The President (Prezydent Rzeczypospolitej) convenes, opens, prorogues and closes the Sejm. By an amendment to the Constitution introduced in July 1926, the President is empowered to dissolve the Sejm on the advice of the Cabinet, and to issue decrees with the force of law between the dissolution of one Parliament and the meeting of the next, the elections for which must be held within ninety days. It is the President's duty to convene the Sejm for an ordinary session each year before the month of November. By the revised Constitution of July 1926, the Budget can only be discussed in the Sejm from September to January, and if it is not passed by the latter date, the proposals of the Government come automatically into force. The President is the Supreme Commander of the army, except in time of war. He is elected for a term of seven years by the Diet and Senate united in a National Assembly. He can make treaties with foreign Powers. In the case of the President's death, his duties are to be assumed by the Speaker of the House. Any Polish citizen of 41 years of age may be elected President. The President is not responsible either politically or personally, and therefore all his acts must be countersigned by a Minister. Freedom of conscience is granted to all citizens; and all citizens are equal before the law. Every citizen also has the right of preserving his nationality and developing his mother tongue.

The law of July 28, 1922, divides Poland into 64 electoral districts, returning altogether 444 deputies for the Sejm, and 111 for the Senate. At the elections held on March 4 and 11, 1928, the following parties were returned:—Lower House: Catholic National, 37; Christian Democrats, 16; Peasant Party (Piast), 21; Government Block, 122; National Workers Party, 14; Workers Party (left fraction), 5; Radical Peasant Party, 69; Polish Socialists, 65; Communists, 7; National Minorities, 65; Socialist National Minorities, 19; Christian Democrats (Silesia), 3; Unclassified, 1.

Senate: Catholic National, 9; Christian Democrats, 5; Peasant Party

(Piast), 3; Government Block, 46; National Workers Party, 3; Peasant Radical Parties, 10; Polish Socialists, 10; National Minorities, 23; Socialist National Minorities, 1; Christian Democrat (Silesia) 1.

The Executive, called the Council of Ministers (Rada Ministrów), consisted (March, 1929) of the following departments:—

President of the Council of Ministers (Premier).—Casimir Bartel.

Minister of Military Affairs.—Joseph Pilsudski.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—August Zaleski.

Minister of Finance.—M. Grodynski.

Minister of Justice.—Stanislaw Car.

Minister of the Interior.—Slavoj Skladkowski.

Minister of Commerce and Industry.—Eugène Kwiatkowski.

Minister of Agriculture.—Charles Niczabytowski.

Minister of Agrarian Reforms.—Witold Staniewicz.

Minister of Communications.—Alphonso Kühn.

Minister of Labour and Social Affairs.—Dr. Jurkiewicz.

Minister of Public Works.—Andrew Moraczewski.

Minister of Education.—Cazimir Switalski.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Boguslaw Miedzinski.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Polish Constitution provides for the granting of a wide measure of autonomy to County Councils. The County of Silesia received a large measure of autonomy by the constitutional law of July 15, 1920. The Silesian Sejm (Diet), elected in November, 1922, consists of 48 deputies, 34 Polish and 14 German. The autonomous rights of the Counties of Lwów, Tarnopol and Stanisławów, were formulated in the law of September 26, 1922. A uniform system for all the remaining Counties of Poland is in course of elaboration.

By a law of July 31, 1924, the language rights of the Ruthenian, White Ruthenian and Lithuanian minorities were guaranteed.

Area and Population.

The territory of Poland comprises Congress Poland (i.e. Poland as delimited and handed over to Russia by the Congress of Vienna, 1815), Galicia, the former Prussian Poland, Upper Silesia, and a portion of the Wilno (Vilna) territory.

The Republic is divided into the City of Warsaw and 16 counties (województwo), subdivided into 277 districts (powiaty), and self-governing cities (miasta wydzielone). It comprises an area of 388,390 sq. kilometres (or 149,958 sq. miles), and a total population of 30,213,000 (January 1, 1928).

The Counties of the Polish Republic are divided into the following groups: (1) Central Counties, i.e. the ancient Congress Kingdom and the district of Białystok (capital town Warsaw; counties: Warsaw, Łódź, Kielce, Lublin, and Białystok); (2) Eastern Counties (Wołyń, Polesie, Nowogródek, and Wilno); these two groups of counties belonged to Russia; (3) Meridional Counties (Kraków, Lwów, Stanisławów, and Tarnopol), which belonged to Austria; (4) Western Counties (Poznań, Pomorze, and Silesia), which belonged to Germany, with the exception of Teschen Silesia (Śląsk Cieszyński), which is a part of the County of Silesia, and till 1918 belonged to Austria.

The first census was taken in Poland on September 30, 1921, and the following table shows the area and population of the counties:—

The density of population is 182 to the square mile. Ratio of males to females (1921) 100 to 107. Of the total population 25 per cent. is urban; in agriculture and forestry, 64.3 per cent.; in mining and industry, 14.3 per cent.; in trade and transportation, 9.5 per cent.; in public service and other occupations, 11.3 per cent.

Emigration in 1927, 147,614 including: to France, 16,211; to Germany, 68,779; to the United States, 9,397; to Argentina, 20,189; to Brazil, 3,376; to Canada, 22,031; to Palestine, 840. The Polish population in America is estimated to be 3,000,000.

Religion.

The great majority of the population profess the Roman Catholic faith, but there is no established church in Poland and all denominations enjoy equal rights, though Article 117 of the Constitution declares Roman Catholicism to be the dominant religion.

According to the Census of 1921 there were in Poland 17,365,350 (63.8 per cent.) Roman Catholics; 3,031,059 (11·2 per cent.) Greek Catholics; 2,846,855 (10·5 per cent.) Russian Orthodox; 2,845,364 (10·5 per cent.) Jews; 1,002,216 (3·7 per cent.) Protestants; and 85,873 (0·3 per cent.) others.

According to the Concordat between Poland and the Vatican, concluded in 1924, Poland is divided into 22 Dioceses, with 2 cardinals, 4 archbishops, 14 bishops, and 16 suffragan bishops. The Archbishop of Gnesen is the first ecclesiastic in Poland. The Greek Catholic Church has an Archbishopric in Lemberg and two Bishoprics, Przemyśl and Stanisławów. Since 1922 there is an Exarchate of the Russian Orthodox Church in Warsaw. The Armenian Catholic Church has an Archbishopric in Lwów.

The Roman Catholic Church has 5,965 churches and 8,373 priests; the Greek Catholic Church, 3,275 churches and 2,144 priests; the Greek Orthodox Church, 494 churches; the Armenian Church, 12 churches and 27 priests; the Protestants, 604 churches and 590 ministers.

Education.

All education is free, and elementary education is compulsory. The following statistics are for the Republic:—Elementary schools (1927–28), 26,642, with 70,585 teachers and 3,379,967 pupils. Secondary schools (1927–28), 796, with 14,808 teachers and 215,470 pupils. There were also 204 colleges for teachers with 1,931 teachers and 37,420 pupils, and 850 technical and professional schools.

The following table gives particulars as to the various Polish universities and high schools during the year 1925–26:—

Justice and Crime.

Each of the three component parts of Poland still has its separate judiciary organisations. The unification of the courts of justice is being worked out by the Codification Commission appointed in November, 1919.

The highest court in Poland, with 4 judges sitting, is the Supreme Court in Warsaw, divided into 4 chambers: 1. Civil; 2. Criminal (both for former Russian Poland); 3. Civil and Criminal for Galicia; and 4. Civil and Criminal for former Prussian Poland. The fourth Chamber was abolished in 1922, after the Administrative Supreme Court had been created. The Supreme Court has 54 judges and 21 public prosecutors.

Minor cases are tried before the District Courts (on the territory of the southern and the western counties) and the Justices of Peace (on the territory of the central and the eastern counties). More serious cases are dealt with by the County Courts which are courts of first instance, and also act as instances of appeal for cases tried before District Courts and Justices of the Peace. The second instance for more serious cases are Courts of Appeal. The Supreme Court is a Court of Cassation.

In 1928 there were eight circuits, each with a Court of Appeal (in Warsaw, Lublin, Wilno, Cracow, Lemberg, Posen, Katowice, and Thorn). In the eight Appeal Courts there were 179 judges and 35 public prosecutors, in the 51 County Courts there were 1,098 judges and 320 public prosecutors, and in the 677 Courts of Peace (District Courts) there were 1,393 judges.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

The Prussian Legislation for Assistance and Social Provision is in force only on the territory of the counties of Poznan and Pomorze and the Upper Silesian portion of the county of Silesia; in the counties of Poznań and Pomorze the different sections of Assistance and Social Provision have been regulated by Polish laws and decrees.

The Austrian law for Assistance and Social Provision has retained its force only in Teschen Silesia, whereas the Polish law on Assistance and Social Provision of August 16, 1922, remains in force on the whole territory of Poland.

There are numerous private charitable institutions, such as asylums for aged and infirm, crèches for children, workhouses, eating houses for poor, etc., all over the country. In the Grand Duchy of Posen, West Prussia, East Prussia and Upper Silesia every inhabitant in distress must be relieved by the commune in which he becomes destitute; the costs are defrayed from the funds of the commune to which he belongs. In Galicia the funds for the support of the poor are derived from endowments, voluntary contributions, etc.; if these funds are insufficient the commune to which the destitute belongs must make provision. In the Kingdom of Poland the care for the poor is left entirely to private charity; in cases of hospital treatment the commune to which the patient belonged was obliged to refund the costs.

Insurance in case of sickness has been widened and unified by the law of May 19, 1920. It extends the obligation of insurance to all persons belonging to the wage-earning classes and establishes a uniform organisation of Sickness-insurance Officers in every district.

On July 1, 1927, there were 291 insurance funds, with 2,562,680 obligatorily insured persons, 1,990 voluntarily insured, and 2,524,163 members of families obligatorily insured. The contributions amounted in 1926 to 191,735,000 zlotys; of that sum 95,267,000 zlotys were expended on medical assistance and 38,650,000 zlotys on the monetary grants. Insurance against accidents is not yet unified. The total number of insured persons amounted in 1926 to 2,600,000. In 1926, 65,000 pensions were paid, with a total of 13,000,000 zlotys. Unemployment insurance was unified by the law of July 18, 1924. On June 1, 1928, 17,989 manual and intellectual workers obtained unemployment benefit and 27,120 immediate assistance. On January 1, 1928, the law on unification of insurance of intellectual workers employed in private institutions, came into force. The law embraces about 2,000,000 persons.

The principal items of expenditure for 1929-30 are (in thousand zlotys) : Ministry of military affairs, 794,777 ; education, 401,222 ; debt service, 233,488 ; Health Insurance, 134,070.

The national indebtedness of Poland consists of internal and external debts. On July 31, 1928, the total internal debt amounted to 291,235,000 zlotys, and the external debt to 3,813,338,000 zlotys. The external debt comprised (in zlotys) : United States, 2,566,978,000 ; Great Britain, 292,713,000 ; France, 377,876,000 ; Italy, 207,971,000. At the same date obligations due to the execution of the Protocol of Insbruck amounted to 325,186,000 zlotys.

Defence.

Every able-bodied Polish subject is, according to the law of May 23, 1924, liable to serve in the army between the ages of 21 and 40. The duration of service is twenty years. Service in the active army is for two years. The men then pass to the reserve, in which they remain for 18 years. At the age of forty they join the territorial army, in which they remain for 10 years.

In times of peace the Chief Command of the armed forces is exercised by the President of the Republic through the Minister of Military Affairs. The permanent collaborator of the latter is, in conformity with the Law of August 6, 1926, the Inspector General of the armed forces, who in case of war takes over the Chief Command. General questions relating to preparations for the defence of the country are examined by the Committee of National Defence, which, in virtue of the Law of October 25, 1926, is presided over by the President of the Republic. Members of this Committee are, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Military Affairs, the Minister of the Interior, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Minister of Finances and the Inspector General of the armed force.

The country is divided into 10 General Military Districts : Warsaw, Lublin, Torun, Lodz, Cracow, Lemberg, Posen, Grodno, Brzesc, and Przemyśl. The strength of the army in 1928 was 17,905 officers and 263,405 other ranks organised as follows :—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regiments	Battalions	Groups	Squadrons	Companies	Batteries
Infantry . .	80	—	90	270	—	—	1,080	—

The air personnel consists of 6,510 officers and men, and comprises 6 aviation regiments, 1 naval aviation group, 1 balloon battalion, 1 meteorological company, 1 air service group. There are, in addition, police and customs forces amounting to 52,640 men. The mobilisable strength of the army is approximately 1,200,000 men.

There are the following fortresses in Poland: in the west, Thorn and Posen; in the south, Cracow and Przemyśl and armed camps; in the east, Brest Litowski, Grodno, Osowiec; in the interior, Warsaw, Modlin, Deblin.

Poland maintains on the Vistula 12 small gunboats, and two sea-going gunboats, Pilsudski and Haller, 500 tons, have been built in Finland. There are also 1 surveying vessel, 1 armed transport, 4 mine-sweepers, and 5 ex-German torpedo-boats for police service. Two destroyers and 3 submarines are under construction in French yards. The defence expenditure for 1927-28 amounted to 623,200,000 zlotys.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Poland is essentially an agricultural country. The following table shows the area and yield of the principal crops for two years:—

Crops.	Area (acres).		Yield (metric tons).
	1926	1927	1926	1927
Wheat . . . . .	2,718,087	2,812,627	1,381,816	1,678,800

Other important crops are hemp, hops and chicory.

On July 16, 1920, a law was passed by the Sejm limiting the size of the larger estates and of holdings situated in the neighbourhood of large towns. The maximum has been fixed at 60 hectares (about 150 acres) for estates situated in industrial districts, at 300 hectares (about 1,000 acres) for Posen, Podolia, Volhynia, &c., and at 180 hectares (about 450 acres) for the other parts of the Polish Republic. Since the beginning of parcellation, i.e. during the years 1919-27, about 2,567 properties with an area of 1,334,205 hectares (3,335,512 acres), were parcellated out.

The forest area of Poland is 8,943,762 hectares (22,323,630 acres), of which 2,833,406 hectares (7,058,515 acres) belong to the State, and 4,199,387 hectares (10,498,342 acres) to private owners.

On November 30, 1927, Poland possessed 4,126,936 horses, 8,601,796 cattle, 1,917,837 sheep, and 6,333,456 pigs.

Industry.—There are eight industrial centres in Poland, viz., Warsaw, Lodz, Cracow, Dabrowa, Katowice, Bialystock, Czestochowa and Drohobycz.

In the textile industry on July 1, 1928, there were 2,327,863 spindles and 37,719 looms in the manufacture of cotton, and 501,176 spindles and 2,193 looms in the manufacture of wool. Other important industries are paper manufactures of various kinds, chemicals, timber, iron and oil refining. This latter industry is of increasing importance. In 1927, there were 26 refineries employing on an average 4,974 workmen, and producing 618,295 tons of refined products, of which kerosene amounted to 203,508 tons, and lubricating oils, to 96,517 tons. There were in 1926-27, 71 sugar refineries in Poland, producing 517,000 tons of sugar, and in 1927-28, 72 refineries producing 537,000 tons.

Mining.—The following table shows the output of the more important minerals for three years (in metric tons):—

Product	1925	1926	1927
Bituminous coal.	29,081,327	35,747,348	38,084,086

Internal Communications.

Poland has 30,070 miles of road. Of navigable waterways Poland has 1,875 miles, of which 298 miles are accessible for vessels of over 400 tons. On December 31, 1926, there were 16,709 miles of railways open for traffic in the Republic. Of this total, 10,658 miles were main line, 4,587 miles branch line, and 1,464 miles sidings. Operating revenue was 1,385,972,000 zloty, and expenses 1,288,979,000 zloty. All the lines are property of the State.

At the end of 1927 there were in Poland 1,681 post offices, and 1,546 postal agencies, 4,032 telegraph stations, and 2,113 telephone exchanges with 210,255 instruments. The length of telegraph lines was 26,453 miles, of telephone lines 22,507 miles local, and 46,317 miles inter-urban. In 1927 the following postal deliveries were effected: 832,662,000 letters, 13,194,000 parcels, 156,846,000 newspapers, and 31,696,000 money orders. 35,335,000 telegrams were sent, and there were 615,859,000 telephone calls.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1927, 7,663 vessels with a tonnage of 4,443,000 net registered tons and a cargo of 1,524,000 tons entered the Polish ports Gdynia and Tczew, and also the port of Danzig which has a common customs—territory with Poland, and concentrates the greatest portion of the Polish oversea trade; and 7,655 vessels with a tonnage of 4,469,000 net registered tons and a cargo of 7,387,000 tons cleared from the above mentioned ports.

In 1928, 1,108 vessels with a tonnage of 985,000 net registered tons and a cargo of 190,000 tons entered, and 1,093 vessels with a tonnage of 974,000 net registered tons and a cargo of 1,727,000 tons cleared at the port of Gdynia; 6,198 vessels with a tonnage of 4,045,000 net registered tons entered, and 6,183 vessels with a tonnage of 4,027,000 net registered tons cleared at the port of Danzig.

On January 1, 1929, the Polish mercantile marine numbered 21 vessels with a tonnage of 47,000 gross tons, and the Danzig mercantile marine, 59 vessels with a tonnage of 133,000 gross tons.

Currency and Banking.

The Polish national currency is the zloty, subdivided into 100 grosz. This currency was put into circulation on May 1, 1924, being then equivalent to the gold franc. The monetary reform of October 13, 1927, changed the gold contents, defining 1 klg. fine gold = 5,924.44 zlotys. Gold coins, of the new coinage (October, 1927), are of 100, 50, and 25 zloty (called a dukat); silver coins of 5 and 2 zloty; nickel coins of 1 zloty, 50, 20 and 10 grosz; and bronze coins of 5, 2 and 1 grosz.

The Bank of Poland, created by Act of Parliament, opened its doors on April 28, 1924. The Bank is a joint stock company with a capital of 150,000,000 zlotys. The Bank enjoys for a period, to Dec. 31, 1944, the sole privilege of note issue. Bank notes in denominations of 10, 20, 50, 100 and 500 zlotys are in circulation. The notes issued by the Bank, and the deposits must be covered by 40 per cent. In case of a lower cover, the Bank has to pay a special tax, which rises in proportion as the cover falls. At present the Bank is obliged to redeem banknotes in gold coin or in foreign currencies convertible into gold, where the sum presented for exchange exceeds 20,000 zlotys. The Post Office Savings Bank on January 1, 1928, had 168,403 depositors with 58,452,770 zlotys to their credit. On the same date, 252 other Savings Banks had deposits totalling 173,931,000 zlotys.

The amount of money in circulation (December 31, 1928) was 1,539,407,000 zlotys, consisting of 1,295,349,000 zlotys in the Bank of Poland notes, 145,123,000 zlotys in metallic currency, and 98,935,000 zlotys in treasury notes. In accordance with the Act of October 13, 1927, the Treasury notes are totally withdrawn from circulation and are replaced by the Bank of Poland notes and metallic currency.

On December 31, 1926, there were 64 principal banks in Poland, with a capital of 144,764,000 zlotys, and deposits amounting to 449,690,000 zloty.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

PORTUGAL.

(REPUBLICA PORTUGUESA.)

PORTUGAL has been an independent State since the twelfth century; until 1910 it was a monarchy. The last King was Manoel II. of the house of Braganza-Coburg, born November 15, 1889, younger son of King Carlos I. and Queen Mary Amélie, daughter of Philippe Count of Paris. Manoel II. succeeded to the throne on the assassination of his father and elder brother, Prince Luiz Philip, February 1, 1908. On October 5, 1910, the republic was proclaimed, after a short revolution, and a provisional government established with Dr. Theophilo Braga as the Provisional President (October 5, 1910, to August 24, 1911). The first President of the Republic was Dr. Manoel de Arriaga (August 24, 1911, to May 27, 1915).

On August 20th, 1911, a new constitution was adopted. This provides that there shall be two Chambers. In the first, which is called the National Council, the members (164) shall be elected by direct suffrage for three years. The Second or Upper Chamber (71 members) shall be elected by all the Municipal Councils, and shall be renewable half at a time every three years. The President of the Republic is elected by both Chambers with a mandate for four years, but he cannot be re-elected. The President must be at least 35 years of age. He appoints Ministers, but these are responsible to Parliament. The President may not be present in the Chambers at debates. He is to receive a yearly salary of 4,000%, with 1,300% for allowances, or a total of 5,300% yearly. The Constitution may be revised every ten years.

The Powers formally recognised the Republic on September 11, 1911.

President of the Republic.—General Antonio Oscar de Fragoso Carmona. (Elected March 25, 1923).

State of Parties at the elections held on November 8, 1925 :—

Senate.—41 Democrats; 9 Nationalists; 20 others; total 70.

Deputies.—84 Democrats; 23 Nationalists; 53 others; total 160.

The Cabinet, which was formed on November 10, 1923, is as follows :—

Prime Minister and Minister of the Interior and Minister of Commerce and Communications.—José Vicente de Freitas.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Commander Manuel Carlos Quintão Meireles.

Minister of Marine.—Commander Masquita Guimarães.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Mario de Figueiredo.

Minister of War.—Colonel Ernesto de Moraes Sarmento.

Minister of Instruction.—Dr. Gustavo Ramos.

Grand total . . . . .	35,490	5,957,985	6,032,991	169.9

In 1920 the population consisted of 2,855,818 males and 3,177,173 females, or 111 females to every hundred males. Of the total population in 1920, 29,070 were foreigners. In 1927, the movement of the population was: births, 202,993 (104,192 males and 98,801 females); marriages, 41,688; deaths, 123,382 (62,626 males and 60,756 females); still-born, 8,419.

At a special census held in 1925, the population of Lisbon was 529,524 and that of Oporto 215,625. Other principal towns with their population in 1920 (census) were: Setúbal, 37,074; Braga, 21,970; Coimbra, 20,841; Évora, 16,148; Covilhã, 14,049; Faro, 12,925; Tavira, 11,043; Portalegre, 11,171; Aveiro, 10,357; Elvas, 11,747; Castelo Branco, 10,486; Beja, 10,521; Angra, do Heroísmo (Azores), 10,057.

The number of emigrants in 1926 was 39,837, of whom 29,948 went to Brazil, 170 to North America and 6,810 to European countries.

Religion.

There is freedom of worship in Portugal; the predominant faith is the Roman Catholic. Portugal, including the Azores and Madeira, is divided into three ecclesiastical provinces, with their sees severally at Lisbon, Braga and Evora. The Archbishop of Lisbon (Patriarch since 1716) has seven suffragans, of whom only two are on the European mainland; while the Archbishop of Braga (the oldest see in Portugal) has five, and the Archbishop of Evora two. The Azores, Madeira, and the Portuguese colonial possessions of West Africa, continental and insular, with five episcopal sees, constitute part of the ecclesiastical province of Lisbon. In East Africa there is also the province of Mozambique. In Asia there is a province of Goa with four suffragan sees (Macao included).

In 1900 the number of Protestants in Portugal was 4,491, and that of Jews 481.

Education.

According to the census of 1920, 54·7 per cent. of the Portuguese nation are still unable to read or write. Primary education is compulsory, and is rigorously enforced by a decree of the Provisional Government of March 29, 1911. In 1926-27 there were 7,174 public elementary schools with 318,437 pupils and 8,384 teachers, 33 secondary schools with 11,430 pupils and 935 teachers, and 5 primary normal schools with 793 pupils and 85 teachers. For higher education there are 3 Universities: at Lisbon (founded in 1858), Coimbra (founded 1290), and Oporto. In 1926-27 the number of students at the universities was: Lisbon, 1,958; Coimbra, 1,484; and Oporto, 1,019. The Technical School at Lisbon provides instruction in engineering, chemistry, &c. There are also special colleges for music and art (Lisbon and Oporto), commercial agricultural and veterinary schools, a military academy at Lisbon, and a naval school.

In 1927 there were 512 newspapers and periodicals published in Portugal—44 daily, 239 weekly and 197 monthly.

Justice and Crime.

The Republic is divided for judicial purposes into 194 comarcas; in every comarca there is a court of first instance. There are three courts of appeal (Tribunaes de Relação) at Lisbon, Coimbra, and Oporto, and a Supreme Court in Lisbon. There are also 7 municipal and 936 district courts.

Finance.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for five years are shown as follows (in escudos):—

	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29
Revenue . .	1,237,986,167	1,306,198,612	1,289,032,232	1,421,993,021	1,919,368,378

On July 1, 1927, the external debt of Portugal was as follows:—New external 3 per cent. converted debt of 1902, 29,485,200*l.*; 1886, Lisbon loan, 2,196,667*l.*; total external funded debt, 31,681,867*l.*; internal funded debt, 49,579,161*l.* consolidated, 1,080,785*l.* redeemable, total internal debt, 50,659,926*l.*; floating debt, 19,607,078*l.*

Defence.

Military service is compulsory for every citizen from 17 years of age to 45. The terms of service are 4 years in the Active Service, 16 years in the Active Reserve, 5 years in the Territorial Reserve and 3 years in the recruiting Reserve. The recruits are enlisted from March 1 to March 5.

Portugal and the adjacent islands are divided into 4 Military Regions: Porto, Coimbra, Tomar and Evora, and 3 Military Governments: Lisbon, Azores and Madeira, including 22 recruiting and reserve districts.

The total peace strength in 1928 was 4,320 officers and 23,427 other ranks.

The Republican Guard consists of 8 Infantry Battalions and 1 Cavalry Regiment, with a total of 255 officers and 9,228 other ranks.

The Fiscal Guard consists of 3 Battalions in the Continent and 4 Companies in the Islands, and its strength is 5,486 men.

The Portuguese Army is armed with rifles, Mauser-Vergueiro, 6·5 mm. and Lee-Enfield; Cavalry, Mannelicher, 6·5 mm. carbine; Artillery, 7·5 cm. Schneider-Canet gun, 7·5 cm. Krupps gun, 7 cm. Mountain Schneider-Canet gun, 11·4 cm. English howitzer, 15·2 cm. Vickers howitzer and 15 cm. Schneider-Canet du Bocage.

The navy of Portugal comprises:—4 cruisers, Vasco da Gama (ex-coast defence ironclad of 3,000 tons), Adamastor (1,757 tons); Republica and Carvalho Araújo (1,200 tons—ex-British sloops); a variety of gunboats (mainly employed in Colonial waters), a mine-layer, 4 transports, the surveying vessel, 5 de Outubro (1,365 tons), 5 destroyers, 5 torpedo boats, 4 submarines, 1 steamer for torpedo and mine service, a salvage vessel, and a sailing training ship. A naval flying service was established in September 1917.

The naval personnel is about 6,000.

Production and Industry.

According to an estimate of the Ministry of Agriculture the cultivated area of Portugal is 13,317,500 acres (59·6 per cent.); the uncultivated but productive area, 4,500,000 acres (20·4 per cent.); area suitable for cultivation but not cultivated, 3,502,350 acres (15·7 per cent.); area unfit for cultivation, 956,750 acres (4·3 per cent.). Of the whole area of continental Portugal 26·2 per cent. is annually cultivated under cereals, pulse, pasture, etc.; 3·5 per cent. is under vineyards; 3·9 per cent. under fruit trees; 17·3 per cent. under forest; 49·1 per cent. is waste.

In 1927 the wheat crop was estimated at 380,000 tons; maize, 300,000 tons; oats, 150,000 tons; barley, 65,000 tons; broad beans and French beans are also cultivated. Other products are rice and potatoes (160,000 metric tons in 1928). Wine (138,010,000 gallons in 1927) and olive oil (25,074,038 gallons in 1927) are also produced.

The live stock in Portugal in 1925 consisted of 30,078 horses, 236,300 asses, 88,410 mules, 767,904 cattle, 3,683,828 sheep, 1,557,743 goats, and 1,117,854 pigs.

The forests cover 17 per cent. of the total area of the country; pine extending to 1,909,663 acres; oak, 898,833 acres; cork, 817,081 acres; chestnut, 210,345 acres; Pyrenean oak, 169,150 acres: total, 4,005,072 acres. Cork is one of the principal sources of wealth; the production in 1926 was 67,735 tons.

Portugal possesses considerable mineral wealth, but for want of fuel and cheap transport, valuable mines remain unworked. The total mineral production in 1926, amounted to 453,484 metric tons. Coal deposits exist, but production is so unimportant that heavy imports are required. Tin, tungsten, copper pyrites, radium, arsenical pyrites, lead, zinc and manganese are among the minerals known to exist, but the extent of their deposits is unknown and production is light.

The fishing industry is of importance. In 1926 there were 52,518 men and boys employed, with 14,634 boats of 63,068 tons. In 1926, the value of the sardine catch was 13,020,594 escudos, and of tunny fish 4,000,827 escudos. The centre of the sardine industry is at Setubal, about 10 miles south of Lisbon.

The principal manufacturing industry is the production of textiles, which employs some 45,000 operatives—25,000 in cottons, and the remainder in woollens, silks and linen goods.

A characteristic industry of Portugal is the manufacture of azulejos or porcelain tiles. This was inherited from the Moors, and tiles are used extensively for interior and exterior decoration of public and private buildings. At Sacavem, near Lisbon, a large factory makes tiles and china-ware. In Peniche, an old fishing village on the coast north of Lisbon, there is a local pillow lace industry, and at Guimaraes famous embroidery is made.

Shipping, Navigation, and Internal Communications.

In 1927, 8,929 vessels of 24,703,103 tons entered, and 8,698 vessels of 24,644,376 tons cleared the ports of Portugal. Of those entering, 3,672 (2,904,325 tons) were Portuguese, 1,749 (8,599,220 tons) British, and 1,133 (5,035,084 tons) German. In 1927 the merchant marine of Portugal consisted of 827 steam vessels and 20,672 sailing vessels of 199,379,240 tons and 172,032,516 tons respectively.

Portugal has 824 miles of State-owned railway, 735 miles being normal gauge and 89 miles narrow gauge. According to an agreement dated March 11, 1927, the Companhia dos Caminhos de Ferro Portugueses, to which a number of private lines already belong, took over two sections of the State railways in return for an annual contribution of a fixed percentage of earnings. There are also six privately owned lines 1,177 miles in length, 882 miles normal and 295 miles narrow gauge. On January 1, 1926, total railway mileage was 2,001 miles. There are about 9,315 miles of road.

Banking, Money, Weights and Measures.

The Government financial institution is the Bank of Portugal. The cash on hand of the bank on January 23, 1929, was: gold, 8,577,180 escudos, nickel and copper, 796,000 escudos. The notes in circulation amounted to 1,927,618,000 escudos.

There are 22 other banks registered in the Republic with a capital of 169,929,444 escudos, and total deposits on December 31, 1925, of 871,482,625 escudos, and cash in hand, 342,297,803 escudos. The deposits in the Portuguese savings bank on December 31, 1925, amounted to 526,602,912 escudos, and those in the Post Office Savings Bank on the same date to 3,333,611 escudos.

The gold coinage of Portugal issued since 1854 amounts to the nominal value of 7,967,002 escudos, and the silver coinage to 37,934,523 escudos.

The Decree of the Provisional Government of May 22, 1911, established a new monetary system. The unit is the gold escudo, of 100 centavos, which is equivalent to the 1-milreis gold piece, and is worth normally about 4s. 5½d. (but the rate of exchange has fallen considerably); 1,000 escudos are called a conto. Gold coins are 2, 5, and 10-escudo pieces; silver coins are 1-escudo (0.835 fine) and 50, 20, and 10-centavos pieces; there are bronze and nickel coins of 4, 2, 1, and ½-centavo. The gold coins and the silver escudos are .900 fine; the other silver coins are .835 fine.

Owing to the disappearance of practically all gold and silver in Portugal, the currency is on a paper basis. New notes of 5, 10, and 50 centavos have been issued by the Bank of Portugal. Small coins of 1 and 4 centavos have been placed in circulation to relieve the scarcity of small change.

The metric system of weights and measures is the legal standard. The chief old measures still in use are:—

The Libra		= 1.012 lb. avoirdupois.
„ Almude	{ of Lisbon = 3.7 imperial gallons.
„ „	{ „ Oporto = 5.6 „ „
„ Alqueire	„ „ = 0.36 „ bushel.
„ Moio	„ „ = 2.78 „ quarters.

On August 15, 1914, partial autonomy was granted by the Home Government to all Portuguese colonies, giving each the right to establish its own code of laws for civil and financial Government.

The Cape Verde Islands consist of ten islands and four islets which are administered by a Governor, whose seat is at Praia, the capital. The islands are divided into two groups, named Barlavento (windward) and Sotavento (leeward). The former is constituted by the islands of S. Vicente,

S. Antão, S. Nicolau, Santa Luzia, Sal and Boa Vista, and the small islands named Branco and Raso. The latter is constituted by the islands of São Tiago, Maio, Fogo and Brava, and the small islands named Rei and Rombo. S. Vicente is a coaling station which supplies all navigation to South America. The total area is 3,928 square kilometres (1,475 square miles). The population according to the census of 1926, is 131,147 (59,031 males and 72,116 females), including Europeans and foreigners. There are 146 primary schools, one secondary school in the Island of São Vicente and one Institute in the São Nicolau Island. For judicial purposes the Islands are divided into three comarcas: São Tiago, Santo Antão and São Vicente. Military force is not less than 264 men (168 natives). The chief products are sisal, castor oil, coffee, mustard, brandy, oranges and hides. Other products are maize, manioc, beans, tobacco, cane sugar, sweet potatoes. Estimated public revenue in 1926-27, 17,504,815 escudos (16,504,815 ordinary, 1,000,000 extraordinary); expenditure, 17,111,699 escudos (12,431,699 ordinary, 4,680,000 extraordinary); imports in 1927, 60,012,910 escudos; exports, 5,082,420 escudos. Banking operations are realised by the Banco Nacional Ultramarino through their branch at Praia and their Agent in Mindelo.

Portuguese Guinea, on the coast of Senegambia, is bounded by the limits fixed by the convention of May 12, 1886, with France, and is entirely enclosed on the land side by French possessions. It includes the adjacent archipelago of Bijagor, with the island of Bolama, in which the capital of the same name is situated. It is divided for administrative purposes into 10 districts (9 Circunscrições Cíveis and 1 Concelho). Area is 22,000 square miles. Estimated population is 350,000. The chief commercial products are rubber, wax, oil, seeds, ivory, hides. Estimated public revenue and expenditure for 1928-29, 34,970,000 escudos. Military force 412 (377 natives). Imports in 1927, 34,322,414 escudos; exports, 34,309,015 escudos. The chief port is Bissau. Other ports: Bolama, Cacheu and Bubaque. There are 592 miles of telegraph lines and 1,740 miles of roads.

The islands of S. Thomé and Príncipe, which are about 125 miles off the coast of Africa, in the Gulf of Guinea, were discovered in 1471, and now constitute a province under a Governor. Area of the islands 320 square miles. According to the census of 1921 the population of the two islands was 59,055; 52,150 in S. Thomé and 6,905 in Príncipe, and the distribution was as follows: whites, 1,115; natives, 57,123, 817 others. The islands are hilly, the soil is volcanic, and the vegetation rich and various. The chief commercial products are cacao, coffee, rubber and cinchona. Area of cacao plantations, 125,000 acres; production in 1927, 16,767 metric tons; production of coffee in 1927, 307 metric tons. Revenue, 1926-27, 10,573,347 escudos; expenditure, 10,573,347 escudos. Military force consists of 145 men (135 natives). Imports at S. Thomé and Príncipe (1927), 36,271,746 escudos; exports, 31,776,436 escudos. On S. Thomé a railway of 310 miles is open for traffic. There are 28 miles in course of construction.

Angola (Portuguese West Africa), with a coast-line of over 1,000 miles, is separated from French Congo by the boundaries assigned by the convention of May 12, 1886; from the Congo by those fixed by the convention of May 25, 1891; from British South Africa in accordance with the convention of June 11, 1891, and from South-west Africa in accordance with that of December 30, 1886. The colony has belonged to the Portuguese since 1575, with the exception of the years 1641 to 1648, when it was held by the Dutch. It is under a High Commissioner, who resides at Luanda, and is vested with large powers. By the Charter of October 15, 1926, it is divided into 12 administrative districts: Zaire, Congo, Cuanza-Norte, Malange, Lunda, Loanda, Cuanza-Sul, Benguella, Bié, Moxico, Mossamedes, and Huila. The capital is S. Paulo de Loanda, other important towns being Cabinda, Ambriz, Novo Redondo, Benguella, Mossamedes, and Porto Alexandre. The indigenous population numbered 2,481,956 on December 31, 1926 (1,197,099 males and 1,284,857 females). There are Government, municipal and private schools, with altogether about 4,752 pupils. Various missions are at work in the country. The military force is composed of 740 Europeans and 6,000 natives. Budget receipts, 1927-28, 167,559,760 angolares; expenditure, 166,217,050 angolares. The chief products are coffee, rubber, wax, sugar, vegetable oils, coco-nuts, ivory, oxen and fish. Cotton-growing, formerly remunerative, has been neglected, but is now increasing; tobacco is grown and manufactured for local consumption; petroleum and asphalt are worked by a British syndicate. The province contains large quantities of malachite and copper, iron, petroleum, and salt. Gold and diamonds have also been found. Imports, 1927, 272,941,344 escudos (2,848,139%); exports, 204,622,176 escudos (2,131,481%); 1926, imports, 225,569,000 escudos; exports, 188,459,000 escudos. The chief imports of the province are textiles, and the chief exports are coffee (10,013 metric tons in 1927), maize (67,034 metric tons in 1927), diamonds (180,334 carats in 1927), and dried fish (10,183 metric tons in 1927). The trade is largely with Portugal. Exports to United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures), 140,669% in 1927, 151,381% in 1928; imports from United Kingdom, 1,241,429% in 1927, 773,119% in 1928. The Portuguese National Navigation Company has most of the carrying trade to and from Europe; the steamers of 3 British lines and one German line visit ports of the Colony. The length of railways open for traffic is 818 miles, made up as follows: Loanda-Lucalla line, 226 miles (metre gauge); Lucalla-Malanje line, 149 miles (metre gauge); Canhoca-Golungo Alto, 9 miles; Lobito-Chinguar, 323 miles; and Mossamedes-Chela Mountains, 111 miles. In July, 1918, the Government purchased the Trans-African railway. Angola is connected by cable with East, West, and South African telegraph systems. There are 2,420 miles of roads and 7,452 miles of telegraph lines.

As from July 1, 1928, the Angolan escudo has been superseded by a new unit the 'angolar,' 80 angolares being the equivalent of 100 Angolan escudos. A new coin has also been introduced, called a 'macuta,' equal to 5 centavos.

Mozambique (Portuguese East Africa) is separated from British Central and South Africa by the limits of the arrangement between Great Britain and Portugal in June, 1891. It is separated from Tanganyika Territory, according to agreements of October and December, 1886, and July, 1890, by a line running from Cape Delgado at 10° 40' S. lat. till it meets the course of the Rovuma, which it follows to the point of its confluence with the 'Msinje, the boundary thence to Lake Nyasa being the parallel of latitude of this point. In accordance with the Treaty of Versailles the Peace Conference on September 23, 1919, allotted to Portugal 'as the original and rightful owner' the territory south of the Rovuma, known as the 'Kionga Triangle' (formerly part of German East Africa).

Portuguese East Africa, with an area of 428,132 square miles, comprises three distinct entities: (1) the Province of Mozambique, administered by the State (295,000 square miles), (2) the territory under the Companhia de Mozambique (59,840 square miles), and (3) the territory under the Companhia do Nyassa (73,292 square miles). The first is divided into 5 districts: Lourenço Marques, Inhambane, Quelimane, Tete and Mozambique, each with its own Governor. Lourenço Marques (population 37,301 on December 29, 1927) is the capital of the Province. There is a Government Council composed of officials and elected representatives of the commercial, industrial and agricultural classes, and also an Executive Council. The existing organisation of the Province is that which was established by decree of May 23, 1907, with some modifications introduced by the Law of October 9, 1922. The population of the colony (1926), including the chartered companies, is 3,482,914 natives. Revenue and expenditure for 1928-29 were estimated at 322,483,961 escudos. The chief products of the Province are sugar, maize, cotton and mining products. In 1923 there were 54,199 oxen, 25,165 goats, and 12,387 pigs. The principal ports are Mozambique, Beira, Porto Amelia, Quelimane, Chinde, Inhambane and Lourenço Marques. Imports in 1927 amounted to 57,260,765 escudos gold, and exports to 56,905,087 escudos gold. The chief imports are cereals, foodstuffs, cement, cotton, alcoholic liquors and animals. The chief exports are sugar, raw cotton, maize, ores and ivory. At the port of Lourenço Marques there entered in 1927, 774 vessels of 3,693,320 tons. Trade with United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures): exports to United Kingdom, 470,237t. in 1927, 424,703t. in 1928; imports from United Kingdom, 3,413,061t. in 1927, 3,179,481t. in 1928.

The military force of the Colony varies between 2,250 men (1,379 natives) and 3,904 men (2,468 natives).

The Manica and Sofala region is administered by the Mozambique Company, which has a royal charter granting sovereign rights for 50 years from 1891. Under the Company's administration the country on either side of the Beira Railway has become settled, there is convenient transport by rail and river, and facilities are granted for securing titles and working mines. The census population of the Mozambique Company's territory (1926) was 308,543, including 3,500 whites. Imports into this territory amounted in 1924 to 1,061,176t. and in 1925 to 1,253,094t.; exports, 1924, to 1,057,884t.; 1925, to 614,447t. Transit traffic through the port of Beira to and from Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and the Belgian Congo was valued at 9,196,997t. in 1924, and 9,775,949t. in 1925. The production of maize in 1923-24 was 49,285 tons; in 1924-25, 15,345 tons. Production of sugar, 1926, 19,601 tons; 1925, 21,845 tons. In 1926 there were 88,060 head of cattle. Gold production, 1926, 2,239 ounces; 1924, 11,468 ounces; silver, 1926, 671 ounces; 1924, 1,064 ounces. The port of this territory is Beira. There entered at Beira in 1927, 594 vessels with 7,348 passengers and 298,805 tons of cargo; and departed, 595 vessels with 4,890 passengers and 383,736 tons of cargo.

The Nyassa Company, with a royal charter, administers the region between the Rovuma, Lake Nyasa, and the Lurio.

The Delagoa Bay railway has a length of 57 miles in Portuguese territory, and is continued for 290 miles to Pretoria. Till recently the commercial relations and transit of goods by this railway between the Portuguese and A British possessions were regulated by the agreement signed April 1, 1909. new agreement has been negotiated recently. A railway was constructed before the war to a point near the Swaziland border, 44 miles being open for traffic, but the linking up of this section with the South African Railways to provide a direct route from Lourenço Marques to Johannesburg has not yet been arranged. The Gaza railway (2 ft. 6 in. gauge) from Chai-Chai to Chikomo has 51 miles open for traffic.

The Beira railway has a length of 200 miles in the territory administered by the Mozambique Co., and links up at the frontier with the Rhodesian Railway system. The Trans-Zambesia Railway, 156 miles in length, from Dondo, on the Beira Junction Railway, to Murraça, on the southern bank of the Zambesi, was opened for traffic on July 1, 1922. On the northern bank of the Zambesi, the Central Africa Railway (61 miles long, of which 45 miles are in Portuguese territory), connects at Port Herald with the Shiré Highlands Railway. When a bridge is constructed over the Zambesi these three railways will give a continuous connection between British Nyasaland and the port of Beira.

The Government has been working on a definite plan, and the finished scheme for the Province south of parallel 22, the southern boundary of the Mozambique Co.'s territories, embraces the following lines: Moamba to Xinavane, 55 miles (completed); Xinavane via Ohissane to Chai-Chai, or via Chibuto to Chigomo, 70 miles (not yet begun); Chai-Chai via Manjacasse to Chigomo, 51 miles (completed); Chigomo via Jinagai to Inharrime, 51 miles (projected); Inharrime to Inhambane, 55 miles (completed). Activities north of the Mozambique Co. are represented by two lines of penetration, one from the port of Quelimane, which taps what is said to be the richest region on the whole coast and now extends to Mocuba on the river Lujella, and the other from Lumbo, on the mainland opposite the island and port of Mozambique, capital of the district of that name and formerly capital of the Province, to Meonta. The extension of this line westwards towards the Namuli highlands is about to be begun.

Beira is connected by telegraph with Salisbury in Mashonaland, and Lourenço Marques with the Transvaal system. Quelimane has telegraphic communication with Chiromo. In 1925 there were 7,452 miles of telegraph line. There are 12,400 miles of roads.

Since September 1, 1922, the escudo currency has been in vogue in Portuguese East Africa, but at Lourenço Marques and Beira, libra esterlina (sterling) notes used still to be issued by the local banks. This right was rescinded in 1926, and the sterling notes are to be withdrawn from circulation within ten years.

Portuguese India consists of Gôa, containing the capital, Pangin, or Nova-Gôa, on the Malabar coast; Damão, on the coast about 100 miles north of Bombay; and Diu, a small island about 140 miles west of Damão. In 1927-28 there were 94 elementary schools with 8,719 pupils, 866 secondary school pupils, also a medical school and a teacher's training college. In Gôa there are 501 salt works employing 1,968 men, the annual production amounting to about 12,200 tons. In Damão there are 11 salt works, and in Diu 5. In 1906 deposits of manganese were discovered near Mormugão and about 6 concerns with about 20 mines are at work. The military force consists of 39 officers and 1,347 other ranks. The Mormugão railway (51 miles) connects this port with the lines of British India. The estimated revenue of Gôa, &c., in 1928-29 was 5,596,746 rupees, and the expenditure 5,009,421 rupees. The trade is largely transit. In 1927 the imports by sea and land amounted to 16,823,589 rupees, the exports to 4,047,150 rupees. Chief exports are: coconuts, fish (fresh and salted), spices, caju-nuts, salt, and copra. There are in Portuguese India 46 telegraph offices and 247 miles of telegraph line.

Macao, in China, situated on an island of the same name at the mouth of the Canton River, forms with the two small adjacent islands of Taipa and Colôane, a province, the city being divided into two wards, one inhabited by Chinese and the other by non-Chinese, each having its own administrator. The population, according to the census of December 31, 1920, is 83,984

(46,007 males and 37,977 females). There are 3,816 Portuguese and 80,168 of various nationalities. Estimated revenue in 1926-27, 3,029,210 escudos, and expenditure 3,321,742 escudos. The military force contains at least 488 men (164 natives). The trade, mostly transit, is in the hands of the Chinese. Imports in 1927, 24,831,894 patacas (approximate value of the pataca is 2s.) ; exports, 10,226,008 patacas.

Portuguese Timor consists of the eastern portion of the island of that name in the Malay Archipelago, with the territory of Ambeno and the neighbouring isle of Pulo Cambing, a total area of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  square miles. By treaty of April 1859, ratified August 18, 1860, the island was divided between Portugal and Holland ; by convention of October 1, 1904, ratified in 1908, a boundary arrangement was made between the two Governments, certain enclaves being exchanged and the possession of other territories settled. This possession, formerly administratively joined to Macao, was in 1896 made an independent province. Population in 1926, 451,604. Estimated public revenue and expenditure for 1926-27, 1,882,527 escudos. Military force not less than 323 men (212 natives). Imports (1925) 604,123 escudos ; exports, 711,757 escudos. Chief exports are : coffee, sandal-wood, sandal-root, copra, and wax. The port is Dilly, the capital.

ROME, SEE AND CHURCH OF.

For many ages until Pius IX.'s reign, with some comparatively short breaks, the Popes or Roman Pontiffs bore temporal sway over a territory stretching across Mid-Italy from sea to sea and comprising an area of some 16,000 square miles, with a population finally of some 3,125,000 souls. Of this dominion the whole has been incorporated with the Italian Kingdom. Furthermore, by an Italian law dated May 13, 1871, there was guaranteed to His Holiness and his successors for ever, besides possession of the Vatican and Lateran palaces and the villa of Castel Gandolfo, a yearly income of 3,225,000 lire, but this allowance remained unclaimed and unpaid until February 11, 1929, when a settlement of the 'Roman question' was arrived at by three treaties between the Italian Government and the Vatican. On that day there was signed (1) a Political Treaty, which recognized the full and independent sovereignty of the Holy See in the city of the Vatican; (2) a Concordant, to regulate the condition of religion and of the Church in Italy; and (3) a Financial Convention, in accordance with which the Holy See shall receive 750,000,000 lire in cash and 1,000,000,000 lire in Italian 5 per cent. State bonds. This sum is to be a definitive settlement of all the financial claims of the Holy See against Italy in consequence of the loss of its temporal power in 1870.

Supreme Pontiff.—Pius XI. (Achilles Ratti), born at Desio, May 31, 1857; Archbishop of Milan and Cardinal, June 13, 1921; elected Supreme Pontiff, as successor of Benedict XV., February 6, 1922.

The election of a Pope ordinarily is by scrutiny. Each Cardinal in conclave writes on a ticket his own name with that of the Cardinal whom he chooses. These tickets, folded and sealed, are laid in a chalice which stands on the conclave altar; and each elector approaching the altar repeats a prescribed form of oath. Thereupon the tickets are taken from the chalice by scrutators appointed ad hoc from the electing body; the tickets are compared with the number of Cardinals present, and when it is found that any Cardinal has two-thirds of the votes in his favour he is declared elected.

From the accession of Innocent IX., 232nd in the usual list of Roman Pontiffs, to Pius XI., 261st, the Popes (all Italian) have been as follows:—

The Roman Pontiff (in orders a Bishop, but in jurisdiction held to be by divine right the centre of all Catholic unity, and consequently Pastor and Teacher of all Christians) has for advisers and coadjutors the Sacred College of Cardinals, consisting, when complete, of 69 members, namely, 6 Cardinal-Bishops (holders of the suburbicary sees), 49 Cardinal-Priests, and 14 Cardinal-Deacons, but hardly ever comprising the full number. In March, 1929, the Sacred College consisted of 5 Cardinal-Bishops, 49 Cardinal-Priests, and 5 Cardinal-Deacons.<sup>1</sup> The following list gives the names, dates, and offices of these 59 Cardinals:—

Name	Office or Dignity	Nationality	Year of Birth	Year of Creation
Cardinal-Bishops:—
Vincenzo Vannutelli .	Bishop of Ostia and Palestrina, Archpriest of the Patriarchal Liberian Basilica, Datary of His Holiness	Italian .	1836	1889

Rafael Merry del Val .	Secretary of the Congregation of the Holy Office, Archpriest of the Vatican Basilica . . . .	Spanish .	1865	1903

<sup>1</sup> The terms Cardinal-Priest and Cardinal-Deacon have for centuries ceased to imply severally the particular orders of priest or deacon. Nowadays in the Sacred College a presbyteral title is freely given to one in episcopal or diaconal orders, and a deaconry to a priest or even to a simple clerk.

Though primarily belonging to the local Roman Church, the Cardinals, drawn from every nation of Christendom, are now regarded as Princes of the Church at large. Originally they were simply the parish rectors of Rome, or the deacons of Roman deaneries. In 1586 their number was finally settled by Sixtus V. at seventy. The Cardinals compose the Pope's Senate or Council and the various Sacred Congregations, govern the Church while the Apostolic See is vacant, and elect the deceased Pontiff's successor. They received the distinction of the red hat under Innocent IV., during the first General Council of Lyons, in 1246; and the title of Eminence from Urban VIII., in 1630.

The central administration of the Roman Catholic Church is carried on by a number of permanent committees called Sacred Congregations, composed of Cardinals, with Consultors and Officials. There are now eleven Sacred Congregations, viz., Holy Office, Consistorial, Discipline of the Sacraments, Council, Religious, Propaganda Fide, Rites, Ceremonial, Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, Seminaries and Universities, for the Oriental Church. Besides these there are several permanent Commissions, for example, one for Biblical Studies, another for Historical Studies, another for Preservation of the Faith in Rome, another for Codification of Canon Law. Furthermore, the Roman Curia contains three tribunals, to wit, the Apostolic Penitentiary, the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signature, and the Sacred Roman Rota; and, lastly, various offices, as the Apostolic Chancery, the Apostolic Datary, the Apostolic Chamber, the Secretariate of State, etc.

The States wherewith the Holy See maintains diplomatic relations are Austria, Bavaria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Monaco, the Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Spain, and the United Kingdom (1914), together with most of the American Republics, except the United States and Mexico.

Within the British Empire the present number of Roman Catholic residential sees is 242, viz., 40 archbishoprics and 123 bishoprics, besides 52 apostolic vicariates (mostly held by Bishops of titular sees), and 27 apostolic prefectures: while the Roman Catholic population subject to King George V. is estimated at 15,925,950 souls, of whom 6,137,066 are in Europe; 3,300,781 in Asia; 994,195 in Africa; 4,070,551 in British America; and 1,423,357 in Australasia. Throughout the world the Roman Catholic population is reckoned (1928) at 334,664,791 souls, of whom 828,158,020 are of the Latin Rite (Catholic Directory, London).

RUMANIA.

(ROMÂNIA)

Reigning King.

Mihai (Michael) I., King of Rumania, born October 25, 1921, son of Carol (now known as Carol Caraiman) and Princess Helen of Greece. Proclaimed King on July 21, 1927, after the death of King Ferdinand I. (his grandfather). As the King is a minor, there is a Regency Council, composed of Prince Nicholas, the young King's uncle, the Patriarch Mgr. Miron I Cristea and M. Buzdugan, President of the Court of Appeal.

Father of the King.—Carol, born October 15, 1893, married March 10, 1921, to Princess Helen of Greece (now known as the Princess of Rumania).

Aunts and uncle of the King.—(1) Elisabeth, born October 11, 1894, married February 27, 1921, to the Diadoch, afterwards George II., King of the Hellenes; (2) Marie, born January 8, 1900, married to Alexander, King of the Serb, Croat, and Slovene State, June 8, 1922; (3) Nicholas, born August 18, 1903; (4) Ilcana, born January 5, 1909.

The Civil list, as approved on August 2, 1927, provides for 56 million lei annually, i. e., 18 million lei for King Michael, 4 million lei for the Council of Regency, 20 million lei for the Queen Dowager, and 7 million lei each for Prince Nicholas and the Princess of Rumania (mother of the King).

The union of the two Principalities of Wallachia and Moldavia was publicly proclaimed at Bucharest and Jassy on Dec. 23, 1861, the present name being given to the united provinces. The first ruler of Rumania was Colonel Cuza, who had been elected 'Hospodar,' or Lord, of Wallachia and of Moldavia in 1859, and who assumed the government under the title of Prince Alexandru Joan I. A revolution which broke out in February 1866 forced Prince Alexandru Joan to abdicate, and led to the election of Prince Carol I. The representatives of the people, assembled at Bucharest, proclaimed Rumania's independence from Turkey, May 21, 1877, which was confirmed by Art. 43 of the Congress of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. King Carol I. of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen reigned as Prince from 1866 to 1881, and as King from 1881 to 1914. On April 11, 1918, Bessarabia was joined to Rumania; the Bukovina on November 28, 1918; and Transylvania on December 1, 1918.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Rumania was adopted on March 28, 1923. According to this the subsoil and the forests are nationalized. The Senate consists of 170 members (Old Kingdom, 82; Transylvania, 45; Bessarabia, 24; and Bukovina, 19), including 4 for the Universities and 19 Bishops. The Heir to the Crown is also a Senator. There are also life senators—former Premiers who held office for at least 4 years; former Presidents of the High Court of Justice who held office for at least 5 years; former Commanders-in-Chief of the army who have held office (in peace time) for at least 4 years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 347 members (Old Kingdom, 168; Transylvania, 112; Bessarabia, 51; and Bukovina, 16). A Senator must be 40 years of age, and a Deputy 25. Members of either House must be Rumanians by birth or naturalisation, in full enjoyment of civil and political rights, and domiciled in the country. All citizens of 21 years, paying taxes, are electors. Both Senators and Deputies receive 500 lei per each day of actual attendance, besides 2000 lei per month and free railway passes. The King has a suspensive veto over all laws passed by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The executive is vested in a council of Ministers.

The elections held in December, 1928, resulted in the return of the following parties:—Lower House: National Peasant Party, 333; Social Democrats, 8; German Party, 7; Liberals, 13; Magyars, 16; other parties, 10. Senate (December, 1928): Elected members:—National Peasant Party, 167; Liberals, 26; Magyars, 6; Independents, 1; in addition to 22 ex officio Senators.

The Cabinet (appointed November 11, 1928), is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Dr. Julius Maniu.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Professor George Mironescu.

Minister of Interior.—Dr. Alexander Vayda-Voevod.

Minister of Agriculture.—M. Ion Mihailache.

Minister of Education.—Professor Costakescu.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Mihai Popovici.

Minister of Justice.—M. Junian.

Minister of Public Health.—M. Sever Dan.

Minister of Labour.—M. Raduceanu.

Minister of Communications.—Vacant (March 1929).

Minister of War.—General Cikoski.

Minister of Industry and Commerce.—M. Madgearu.

Minister of Fine Arts.—M. Aurel Vlad.

Minister of Public Works and for Bessarabia.—M. Halippa.

Minister for the Banat.—M. Bocu.

Minister for Transylvania.—M. Nizescu.

Minister for the Bukovina.—M. Saveanu.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government Wallachia is divided into 17 districts, Moldavia into 13, the Dobrudja into 4, Bessarabia into 9, Bukovina into 5, and Transylvania (with Banat, Crisana and Maramuresh) into 23 districts, each of which has a prefect, a receiver of taxes, and a civil tribunal. In Rumania (1919) there are 71 districts and 8,854 communes, 165 urban and 8,689 rural. In the rural communes there are 11,522 villages and 1,048 hamlets. The appellations 'urban' and 'rural' do not depend on the number of inhabitants, but are given by law.

Area and Population.

As a result of the Treaties of Peace of 1919 Rumania was enlarged, and the area and population of the New Kingdom is shown as follows:—

Country	Area in sq. miles	Population
		Males	Females	Total
Old Rumania (the 'Regat'). . . . .	53,489	3,989,606	3,914,498	7,904,104 <sup>1</sup>
Bessarabia . . . . .	17,146	1,198,900	1,145,900	2,344,800
The Bukovins . . . . .	4,080	395,963	404,135	800,098
Transylvania . . . . .	22,312	1,350,480	1,327,887	2,678,367
Crisana . . . . .	8,038	659,886	657,145	1,316,981
Maramuresh . . . . .	6,258	378,205	388,401	766,606
The Banat . . . . .	11,009	789,102	798,031	1,587,133

<sup>1</sup> Estimate for 1915.

By the Treaty of Bucharest (August 7, 1913) between Bulgaria and Rumania, the former ceded to the latter 2,969 sq. miles of territory, with a population of 273,090, mostly Turks. The new land was formed into two departments, Durostori and Caliacra.

The number of births, deaths, and marriages, with surplus of births over deaths, was as follows for three years:—

Years	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1925	605,053	363,054	153,480	241,999
1926	607,664	372,948	159,642	234,916
1927	608,284	392,850	171,984	210,434

The principal towns in Greater Rumania are (population 1914):—Bucharest, the capital and seat of Government, 345,628 (on January 6, 1917, 308,987—119,958 males and 189,029 females); Chisinau, 114,100; Cernauti, 87,128; Ismail, 85,600; Iasi (Jassy), 76,120; Galatz, 73,512; Timisioara, 72,223; Braila, 65,911; Oradea Mare, 64,169; Arad, 63,166; Cluj, 60,808; Ploesti, 57,376; Craiova, 51,877; Brasov, 41,056; Tughina, 36,400; Satul Mare, 34,892; Cetatea Alba, 33,600; Sibiu, 33,419; Botosani, 32,874; Buzeu, 29,483; Constantza, 27,662; Berlad, 25,367; Focsani, 25,287.

Religion, Education, Justice, &c.

Of the total population of Rumania (in 1918) 9,695,714 belonged to the Orthodox Church, 1,456,147 were Greek Catholics, 1,483,929 were Roman Catholics, 1,344,970 Protestants, 17,596 Armenians, 834,344 Jews and 44,087 Mahometans. The government of the Orthodox Church rests with the four archbishops, the first of them styled the Primate of Rumania, the second the Archbishop of Moldavia, the third of Transylvania, and the fourth of Bukovina. Besides, there are ten bishops of the National Church. In February 1925, a Patriarchate of Rumania was created by the Holy Synod.

In Transylvania there is a Greek Catholic archbishop and three bishops. In Rumania there are three Roman Catholic Bishops, two Protestant and one Unitarian. The clergy of the National Orthodox Church are paid by the State. The clergy of the other denominations are subventioned by the State. Full liberty of religion is assured to every creed or sect.

Education is free and compulsory 'wherever there are schools,' and it is improving from year to year. In 1927-28 there were 14,123 elementary schools with 35,284 teachers and 1,600,098 pupils.

There were in 1927-28, 924 secondary schools with 185,780 pupils and 12,297 teachers and 15 higher educational institutions with 30,892 pupils and 1,623 teachers.

There are 4 universities: at Bucharest, founded in 1864 (499 professors and 7,532 students), Iasi (Jassy), founded in 1890 (172 professors and 3,584 students), Cluj (Kolozsvár), in Transylvania, founded in 1919 (1,980 students in 1920), and Cernauti (Czernowitz), in Bukovina, founded in 1920.

Justice is administered by a court of cassation, 11 appeal courts, 64 tribunals, and 494 justices of the peace. Assistance is given to the sick in 168 hospitals and hospices (departmental, communal, rural, and private).

The internal debt of Rumania amounted on January 1, 1928, to 23,239,200,000 lei, of which 13,769,500,000 lei was the consolidated debt, and 9,469,700,000 lei the floating debt. On January 1, 1928, the external debt (consolidated) was composed as follows :—66,060,560 dollars, 475,793,300 lire, 129,752,793 pounds sterling, 499,099,500 French francs. In February, 1929, a further foreign loan at 7 per cent. for the equivalent of 20,750,000*l.* was floated in London, Paris, New York, Vienna, Brussels, Prague, Berlin, Rotterdam, Milan and Zürich, and on February 8, the leu. was stabilized.

Defence.

Military service in Rumania is compulsory and universal from the ages of 21 to 50. The normal terms of service are 2 years in the active army, 18 years in the regular army reserve, and 9 years in the militia. Young men exempted from service in the ranks, and those surplus to the annual contingent, are posted to a supplementary reserve.

The peace establishment of the army in 1928 was 12,026 officers and 124,807 other ranks.

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher rifle; the Rumanian artillery is still largely armed with guns of the Krupp type, but a considerable number of batteries have the French type of 75 mm. field guns and French medium and light howitzers. The military budget for 1927 was 6,904,000,000 lei.

In the Black Sea are 2 destroyers, 6 ex-Austrian torpedo boats and 4 motor gunboats, formerly French. 2 flotilla leaders, a submarine and a depot ship are being built in Italy. The Danube force now comprises 7 monitors (600 tons), armed with 4·7-in. guns, 7 vedettes and some small craft. A naval base has been established at Salina, on the Black Sea. The naval school is in Galatz.

Production and Industry.

According to a statistical estimate, the distribution of the soil of Rumania with respect to agriculture in 1919 was as follows:—Ploughed land, 30,715,834 acres; meadows, 4,580,267 acres; vineyards, 393,533 acres; forests, 16,918,964 acres; pastures, 7,218,505 acres; other lands, 12,884,387 acres. Total, 72,711,490 acres.

For 2 years the chief agricultural crops for Greater Rumania were as follows:—

Crop	Area cultivated		Production
	1927	1928 <sup>1</sup>	1927	1928 <sup>1</sup>
	Acres	Acres	Metric Tons	Metric Tons
Wheat . . .	7,752,862	8,015,920	2,684,465	3,551,590

Maize . . .	10,548,567	11,118,730	3,695,208	2,536,937

Beet cultivation is of importance, the production for three years is as follows:—1924, 873,113 tons (134,280 acres); 1925, 987,804 tons (160,750 acres); 1926 1,284,825 tons (205,975 acres).

The forests of Rumania have an aggregate area of 16,918,964 acres, of which 6,820,000 acres are in the Old Kingdom, 5,500,000 acres in Transylvania, 1,700,000 acres in Maramuresh, and 1,500,000 acres in the Banat.

In 1928, Rumania had 1,939,438 horses, 4,552,166 cattle, 12,941,051 sheep, 418,616 goats, 192,268 buffaloes, and 3,075,782 swine, and 11,584 donkeys.

The catch of fish averages 25,057 metric tons yearly.

The principal minerals are salt, lignite, iron and copper ores, lead and antimony, and petroleum. Petroleum springs, both government and private, are worked at Prahova, Dambovitza, Bacau, and Buzau. The total output of crude oil reached in 1900, 250,000 metric tons; in 1925, 2,316,979; in 1926, 3,244,415; in 1927, 3,661,360; in 1928, 4,300,000 metric tons. Refined products totalled 3,031,428 metric tons in 1926, and 3,533,346 metric tons in 1927. The salt mines are situated in the region of the lower Carpathians, from Bukovina to the west of Oltenic, a stretch of over 250 square miles. Salt mining has been a state monopoly since 1863 (production in 1926, 344,062 tons). Output of lignite, 1925, 2,615,278 tons; 1926, 2,731,362 tons; 1927, 2,850,011 tons. Iron ore output in 1926 was 102,799 metric tons; pig iron 62,979 metric tons.

Industries of some importance are flour milling, brewing, and distilling. In 1925 there were 3,445 industrial establishments, with a capital of 759,020,300 lei gold, and employing 208,683 workmen, and producing goods to the value of 34,723,328,725 lei.

Commerce.

The values of the imports into and exports from Rumania, exclusive of gold and silver (in 1000 lei) were:—

Shipping and Communications.

The European Commission of the Danube, called into being in 1856, consisted before the war of 8 delegates, one representing each of the following powers: Austria-Hungary, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Rumania, Russia, and Turkey. By article 346 of the Treaty of Versailles, only representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy and Rumania constitute the Commission at present. It has its seat at Galatz. Since November 24, 1904, it has existed, or will exist, for successive periods of 3 years unless denounced by one of the contracting powers a year before the conclusion of any such period. By the operations of the Commission the Danube below Braila and along the Sulina branch has been deepened and corrected, so that at Sulina the depth has been increased from 9 ft. to 24 ft., and of the Sulina branch the minimum depth has been increased from 8 ft. to 18½ ft., while by canalisation and other works the navigation has been shortened from 45½ to 33½ nautical miles. The income of the Commission is derived entirely from taxes levied on shipping leaving the river. Receipts in 1928, 5,996,117 French francs (gold); expenditure 5,160,915 French francs (gold).

The tonnage clearing from the Danube ports in 1927 was 36,978 vessels of 9,818,800 tons (Rumanian, 23,220 of 6,882,946 tons); and at Constanza, 2,636 vessels of 4,970,369 tons (Rumanian, 356 vessels of 421,049 tons).

Railway history in Rumania commenced in 1860. All the main railway lines are owned and operated by the State, but there are also several privately owned lines, mainly in Transylvania. The length of Rumanian State Railways at the close of 1927 was 8,744 miles, of which 3,991 miles were main line, 2,443 miles were branches, and 2,310 miles sidings. In addition, the State Railways own and operate 447 miles of narrow-gauge railways. Operating revenues amounted to 12,334,499,000 lei and other revenues to 457,309,000 lei while operating and other expenses reached 14,800,000,000 lei, thus creating a deficit amounting to 2,008,192,000 lei. The State has, besides, under the general railway direction, a commercial navigation service on the Danube and Black Sea. Several additional lines are projected or in course of construction to the extent of 460 miles.

Within Rumania there were 54,648 miles of roads in 1927, of which 32,292 miles are of macadam.

The Compagnie Internationale de navigation Aerienne runs a daily air service from April to October between Paris, Bucharest and Constantinople.

In 1927 there were 6,254 post-offices, through which there passed 230,072,000 mail items. In 1927 there were 9,237 miles of telegraph lines, and 45,020 miles of wire. The number of offices was 3,890. In 1927 the telephone systems had 22,768 miles of line and 174,823 miles of wire. Number of conversations, 92,299,458.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

The National Bank of Rumania on February 2, 1929, had, capital and reserves 366,928,000 lei, notes in circulation, 20,390,975,000 lei, specie 7,201,978,000 lei. The privilege of the National Bank to issue currency notes was prolonged to December 31, 1960, according to a convention signed in May 1925. The capital of the bank was at the same time raised to 100 million lei. Other public credit institutions are a Savings Bank, a Deposit and Consignment Bank, an Agricultural Loan Bank, 1,849 Popular Banks, a Rural Crédit Foncier, 2 Urban Crédit Fonciers (at Bucharest and Jassi), an Agricultural Bank, and a Cassa Rurala, an institution whose purpose is to buy properties and sell them in lots to peasants. There are also three private banking institutions.

A unified paper currency came into use for the whole of Rumania on August 1, 1920.

The metric system for weights and measures was introduced into Rumania in 1876. The unit of the monetary system was made the leu (of 100 bani), equivalent to the franc. Silver is legal tender up to 50 lei only. The gold coins of 20-, 10-, and 5-lei which were formerly in circulation have been withdrawn since the stabilization of the currency on February 8, 1929. The value of the leu was fixed at 10 milligrammes gold (.900 fine), which is equal to 813.588 to the £ sterling. Nickel is coined in 5-, 10-, and 20-centime (bani) pieces.

UNION OF SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLICS

(RUSSIA.)

On March 12, 1917, a revolution broke out in Russia, as a result of which the Emperor Nicholas II abdicated. A Provisional Government under Prince George Lvoff was set up by the Duma, which held office until May 16, 1917, when it was reorganised. On August 6, 1917, a new Cabinet under M. Alexander Kerensky was formed. This too was reorganised on October 8, 1917, and maintained itself until November 7, 1917, when the Military Revolutionary Committee of the Petrograd Soviet seized the government authority, and handed it over the next day to the All-Russian Congress of Soviets.

The Constitution of the new State was adopted at the fifth All-Russian Congress of Soviets, on July 10, 1918, and additions or alterations were made at subsequent Soviet Congresses (December, 1920-23). On December 30, 1922, delegates from the four principal Soviet Republics met at Moscow and concluded a Treaty of Union, setting up a Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, covering Russia (R.S.F.S.R.), Ukraine (U.S.S.R.), White Russia (W.R.S.S.R.), and the Transcaucasian Federation (T.S.F.S.R.). In September, 1924, the Uzbek S.S.R. and the Turcoman S.S.R. were formed and joined the Union. The Constitution of the Union was ratified by the Second Union Congress of Soviets, which met in January and February, 1924.

The Government of the Union consists of a Union Central Executive Committee and a Union Council of People's Commissaries. The former is elected by the Union Congress of Soviets, the supreme authority of the Union, and between Congresses is the sovereign legislative, administrative, and judicial authority of the Union. It is convened three times a year, and consists of two chambers—the Union Council, consisting of 450 members elected on the principle of proportional representation of the six constituent Republics, and the Council of Nationalities of 135 members, elected on the basis of 5 members for every independent and autonomous republic, and 1 member for every autonomous region. All legislation must be adopted by both chambers. The Presidium, or Standing Committee, which transacts current business, is composed of 27 members, 9 from each chamber and 9 elected at a joint meeting.

Chairmen of the Union Central Executive Committee.—MM. Kalinin (R.S.F.S.R.), Petrovsky (Ukraine), Cherviakov (White Russia), Musabekov (Transcaucasia), Aitakov (Turcoman S.S. Republic), Faizula-Khodzhayev (Uzbek S.S. Republic). M. Yenukidze is secretary of the Union Central Executive Committee.

Subordinate legislative and executive authority is vested in the Union Council of People's Commissaries, or Cabinet. Each People's Commissary is the head of a 'collegium' or Board responsible for the work of the People's Commissariat or ministry under its care. Decisions of the Union Council of People's Commissaries may be revised by the Presidium of the Union Central Executive Committee. During the periods between the Sessions of the Central Executive Committee and those of the Congresses of the Soviets, the Presidium of the Central Executive Committee is the sovereign authority of the Union and, in accordance with article 1 of the Constitution, it has among other rights, the prerogative of carrying on diplomatic negotiations, of concluding political and other treaties with other Powers, of altering the external frontiers of the Union, of declaring war and concluding peace, and of ratifying international treaties. The Council of People's Commissaries is also responsible to the full Central Executive Committee and to the Union Congress of Soviets, to which it makes a report as a whole, in addition to the departmental reports.

The following is the constitution of the Union Council of People's Commissaries (March, 1929) :—

President.—A. I. Rykov.

Vice-Presidents.—V. V. Schmidt, G. K. Ordzhonikidze, J. E. Rudzutak.

Foreign Affairs.—G. V. Chicherin.

War and Marine.—K. E. Voroshilov.

Foreign and Home Trade.—A. I. Mikoyan.

Transport.—Y. E. Rudzutak.

Posts and Telegraphs.—N. K. Antipoff.

Workers' and Peasants' Inspection.—G. K. Ordzhonikidze.

Supreme Economic Council.—V. V. Kubyshv.

Labour.—V. V. Schmidt.

Finance.—N. P. Briukhanov.

Director of the Central Statistical Department.—V. P. Miliutin.

In addition, the Procureur-General of the Republic enters the Council with a consultative voice, as does also the chairman of the State Political Department.

Each of the six constituent States of the Union—R.S.F.S.R., Ukraine, White Russia, Transcaucasia, Uzbek, and Turcoman—retains its own Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissaries. Certain of the departments mentioned above are the exclusive prerogative of the Union Government. Others exist both in the Union Government and in the individual Republics (supreme economic council, labour, finance, and workers' and peasants' inspection). Finally, a number exist only in the individual Republics (agriculture, interior, justice, education, health, social welfare).

The British Government recognised the Government of the U.S.S.R. de jure on February 1, 1924. Similar recognition has been given by Afghanistan, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Persia, Poland, Sweden, Turkey, France, Japan, Mexico, and China.

Constitution and Government of the R.S.F.S.R. (Russia Proper)

The greater part of the former Russian Empire is under the rule of the Soviet Government. But a number of States have gradually evolved and are maintaining themselves on the borders of the old Empire. Five have received formal recognition by the Western Powers, viz., Finland, Poland, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. A number of other independent Republics, which have adopted the Soviet form of Government, are federated with the Government of Russia. These include: White Russia, the Ukraine, Uzbek and Turcoman, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan. (The last three constituting the Transcaucasian Federation of Soviet Republics.) All the remaining territory of the former Russian Empire constitutes the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic (R.S.F.S.R.). This contains the provinces of Russia proper, autonomous Republics (Kirghiz, Tartar, Bashkir, Dagestan, Yakutsk, Crimea, Karelia, the German Republic on the Volga, Cuvashian Republic, Buriato-Mongolskaia, Kazakskaia), and autonomous regions or areas (Komi, Mariiskaia, Votskaia, the Region of the Kalnyks, Karatchaevskaia, Chechenskaia, Kabadino-Balkarskaia, Northern Osetia, Ingushetia, Adygheiskaia, Oizatskaia, Kara-Kalpakskia). The autonomous republics are governed by their own Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissaries: the regions and areas are governed by executive committees elected by the local Congress of Soviets, like the ordinary provinces (gubernii).

So far as the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic is concerned, a Constitution was adopted by the fifth All-Russian Soviet Congress, the text of which was published on July 19, 1918, and amended and amplified 1919-1923. Further amendments have been introduced (1925) in order to bring the Constitution into line with the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. It remains, however, the constitutional model for the other States of the Union. According to the Constitution, which has been declared a 'fundamental law' of the Republic, Russia is a Republic of Soviets of Workers', Soldiers', and Peasants' Deputies; and all central and local authority is vested in these Soviets. Private property in land is abolished, all land being the common property of the people; all forests, mines, waters having a national importance and all livestock and fixtures, model estates and agricultural concerns are all national property. The State owns all factories, mines, railways, and other means of production and transport, but may, according to recent legislation, lease them to private individuals, corporations, or State trusts.

The R.S.F.S.R. is a free Socialist community of all the labouring masses of Russia. Freedom of conscience, of opinion, of the press, and of meeting are guaranteed by the Constitution. In order to protect the conquests of the revolution, universal military service is incumbent on all citizens. The privilege of defending the Revolution with arms is, however, reserved for the labouring classes only; the non-labouring sections of the population will discharge other military duties. The political rights of Russian citizenship will be granted without any formalities to foreigners residing on the territory of the Russian Republic for purposes of labour.

The highest authority in the State is the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, which consists of representatives of town Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 25,000 electors, and of Provincial Congresses of Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 125,000 inhabitants. The Congress elects an All-Russian Central Executive Committee, consisting of 400 members, which constitute the supreme legislative, administrative, and controlling body in the Republic, and meets not less frequently than once in four months, current affairs being administered by a Standing Committee (Presidium). The Central Executive Committee also forms a Council of People's Commissaries for the general administration of the affairs of the Republic, to consist of 12 People's Commissariats (see list above).

The franchise is enjoyed irrespective of religion, nationality, residence, sex, etc., by all citizens over 18 years of age who earn their livelihood by productive labour, and soldiers and sailors (including the commanders) in the Red Army and Navy.

The following classes are deprived of the franchise: Those employing others for profit, or living on unearned income, monks and priests of all religions, agents and employees of the former police, secret service, etc., members of the former reigning dynasty, imbeciles and wards, and persons deprived of civic rights by the criminal courts.

In accordance with the latest decrees, however, persons employing hired labour, or enjoying unearned incomes or engaged in trade, may be granted the right to vote by the provincial election commissions, providing they can present a certificate from the local factory workshop committee, a local working peasant organisation, or local trade union committee, testifying that at the time of the election the given individual lives on an income derived from his own labour and does not exploit the labour of others.

Individuals engaged in agriculture and employing hired labour within the limits specified in the agricultural codes of the Constituent Republics of the Union are not deprived of their vote if they are otherwise eligible. Similarly the vote is enjoyed by people who are in receipt of interest from deposits in workers' savings banks, or from Government or municipal loan scrip, providing they are otherwise eligible.

Provision is also made in the Constitution for Local Government by means of local Soviets in villages and towns, with district, provincial and regional Congresses, which meet annually. Each Congress elects an Executive Committee, which administers the territory under its control until the next Congress.

Religion.

By decree of Jan. 23, 1918, the Soviet Government disestablished the Church and appropriated certain categories of its property. Since the revolution of March, 1917, all religions may be freely professed in the Union. The prevailing religion of the country is the Græco-Russian, officially called the Orthodox Faith. It has its own independent synod, but maintains the relations of a sister Church with the four Orthodox patriarchates of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem. The Holy Synod, the board of government of the Russian Church, was established in 1721; to it was committed the superintendence of the religious affairs of the Empire. It is composed of the three metropolitans (Leningrad, Moscow, and Kiev), the archbishop of Georgia (Caucasus), and several bishops sitting in turn.

It is estimated that there are more than 12,000,000 dissenters in Great Russia alone. The affairs of the Roman Catholic Church are entrusted to a Collegium, and those of the Lutheran Church to a Consistory, both settled in Leningrad. Roman Catholics are most numerous in the former Polish Provinces, Lutherans in those of the Baltic, and Mohammedans in Eastern and Southern Russia, while the Jews are almost entirely settled in the towns and larger villages of the western and south-western provinces. The Soviet authorities are now endeavouring to settle Jews who have lost their business or occupation as a result of the wars and revolution on the land—particularly in the Crimea. For colonizing Jews in the Far East the Soviet Government in 1928 allotted an area of 20,000 sq. kilometres in the district of Byro-Berdjan. In 1924, 76,000 Jews were engaged in agriculture; in July, 1925, there were 130,000; and in 1927, 165,000.

All churches may be leased from the State free by not less than 20 citizens constituting part of the congregation. The teaching of religion in State and Private Schools is prohibited; for persons above the age of 18 special religious classes may be organized. Religious instruction may be given to children in their homes if their parents so desire.

Education.

Education in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is conducted by the Commissariats for Education of the constituent and autonomous Republics of the Union. The Commissariats for Education of the Constituent Republics (R.S.F.S.R.) Ukraine, White Russia, Trans-Caucasia, Turkmenistan, and Uzbek are completely independent of one another. With regard to the autonomous republics, the higher educational institutions and also the scientific institutions situated in their territory are subordinated to the Commissariat for Education of the Union Republic of which they form an autonomous part.

The Commissariat for Education of the R.S.F.S.R. consists of the following departments:—Administrative-Planning Department; Department for the Social Upbringing and Polytechnical Education of Children (Glavsozvos); Department for Vocational Education (Glavprofobr); Chief Politico-Educational Committee of the Republic (Glavpolitprosvet); Department of Literature and Publications (Glavlit); Department of Scientific, Learned and Museum Institution (Glavnauka); Department of Arts (Glavtskusstvo); State Council on Matters of Learning (G.U.S.); The Council for the Education of Nationalities that do not speak Russian (Sovnatsmen); Secretariat.

The State Publishing Agency, which is an independent commercial undertaking, also forms a constituent part for the Commissariat for Education, as does also the State Musical Trust. In addition the Commissariat for Education is the largest shareholder of the companies, Sovetskoye Kino (Soviet Cinema) and the company for the construction and supply of educational apparatus and equipment.

Education is obligatory, and certain classes of private schools (under State control) are permitted. Co-education has been adopted in all schools. The principle of 'labour' education is applied differently in the schools of each grade; in taking part in the self-government of the schools, the pupils are taught the art of self-government as citizens. Technical work is conducted as a part of the general industrial life of the country.

The Commissariat for Education has local departments for people's education attached to the Executive Committees of the Workers, Peasants, and Red Army Councils throughout the Republic.

The following table shows the number of educational institutions and pupils on December 15, 1927, throughout the Soviet Union:—

For infants there were 1,772 kindergarten (82,220 pupils) and 314 crèches (16,821 pupils). For minors there were a number of special institutions, as follows:—125 townlets for normal children (36,272 pupils), 1,898 houses, colonies and communes for normal children (133,257 pupils), besides colonies for mentally deficient children (33 with 2,236 pupils), blind, deaf and dumb children.

There were besides 22,892 Libraries, 21,876 Reading Rooms, 6,117 Peoples' Clubs, 1,319 Theatres, and 3,567 Cinemas.

Previous to the revolution universities existed in the following places in the territory now included in the R.S.F.S.R. and administered by the People's Commissariat for Education: Moscow (2), Leningrad, Kazan, Saratov, Tomsk, Perm, Irkutsk. The Universities of Dorpat and Warsaw, evacuated during the war, were reorganised in 1918 as the Voronezh and Don Universities, and in the same year another was set up at Nizhni-novgorod. In 1919 universities were established at Yaroslavl, Smolensk, Kostroma, Tambov, Astrakhan, Tashkent, Samara, Simbirsk, Orel; in 1920, at Ekaterinburg, Ekaterinodar, and Veliki Usting.

Justice and Crime.

The basis of the Judiciary System is the same throughout the whole of the Soviet Union, but the Constituent Republics have the right to introduce modifications and to make their own rules for the application of the code of laws. The supervision of the Legal System of the separate Republics is entrusted to the People's Commissariat for Justice of each Republic. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is the chief Court and Supervising Organ for all Union Republics.

In accordance with the declaration by the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. on October 29, 1924, the fundamental objects of the Judiciary System of the U.S.S.R. are to safeguard the conquest of the proletarian revolution and to protect the Workers' and Peasants' Government and the laws laid down by the latter.

In the main, there is very little difference between the code of laws and their application in the separate republics. The legal system of the R.S.F.S.R., therefore, can be taken as an example of that in force in all the other Republics of the Union.

The Law Courts of the R.S.F.S.R. are divided into People's Courts and Special Courts. The People's Courts consist of the People's Judge and two Assessors, and their function is to examine as the First Instance, most of the Civil and Criminal cases, except the more important ones, some of which are tried at the Provincial Court, and those of the highest importance at the Supreme Court. The Provincial Courts supervise the activities of the People's Courts and also act as Courts of Appeal from the decisions of the People's Court. The Supreme Court exercises supervision over all the Courts of the Republic, and forms an Appeal Court from the Provincial Court.

The Judges of the People's Courts and the Presidents and Members of the Provincial Courts are selected for one year by the Provincial Executive Committee, from individuals who enjoy electoral rights and who have the necessary qualifications with regard to their public or legal work.

The people's assessors are called upon for duty for six days in a year from lists of electors drawn up in the Rural Districts, Industrial Enterprises and Army Corps. The People's Assessors for the Provincial Court must have had at least two years' experience in Public or Trade Union work. The list of Assessors for the Supreme Court is drawn up by the Central Executive Committee of the Republic.

In addition to the People's Courts there are the following Special Courts :— (1) the Labour Section of the People's Court, whose duty it is to supervise the regulations relating to the working conditions and the protection of labour as well as to give decisions on conflicts arising between employers and employees, the violation of regulations; (2) Rural Commissions, which settle disputes concerning agrarian matters, such as claims relating to the use of the land, etc.; (3) Arbitration Committees, which settle disputes arising between separate State organs concerning property rights, with certain exceptions; (4) Military Tribunals, which deal with military offences, espionage, and other classes of crime, when there is no other Law Court on the spot but a military tribunal; (5) Disciplinary Courts, which deal with offences and neglect of official duties committed by members of the Central Executive Committee and similar State organs.

The People's Commissary for Justice is the State Chief Prosecutor, and in every province and district there is a Provincial Prosecutor who is immediately subordinate to the Chief Public Prosecutor of the Republics. The duties of the Public Prosecutors are the supervision of the correct application of the law by all State organs.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years are shown as follows (in millions of roubles) :—

On September 1, 1917, the total indebtedness of Russia amounted to 32,300 million roubles, made up as follows:—Pre-war debt, 8,800 million roubles; seven internal war loans, 10,500 million roubles; loans contracted abroad, 8,000 million roubles; short-dated loans, 5,000 million roubles. According to an estimate made in 1924 the foreign loan was then reckoned at 15,853 million roubles. On March 31, 1921, the indebtedness of Russia to Great Britain was £561,402,000 (excluding interest since December 31, 1918). All these debts were cancelled by decree of January 28, 1918.

On October 31, 1928, the internal debt amounted to 1,297,751,000 roubles, of which 639,284,000 roubles were lottery loans and 571,479,000 roubles interest-bearing loans. The current liabilities of the People's Commissariat of Finance amounted to 86,988,000 roubles. These figures exclude the Economic Restoration Loan.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

The military system of the Union of Soviet Republics was reorganized in 1925.

The Red Army is now organised on a basis of universal military service. Service is divided into (a) preparatory; (b) service with the colours; (c) reserve service. Preparatory training is on a militia basis and begins at the age of 19: it consists of a preliminary course of 96 hours, lasting 1½ months, and a supplementary course of 280 hours, lasting 28 days, the whole spread over 2 years. The number of men available for military service each year is approximately 1,000,000, but only a portion of this number is called to serve. In 1928 the approximate number to receive training was 800,000. Service with the colours begins at the age of 21 and is for 5 years, one of which is spent on leave. During the first year training is for 3 months, and in subsequent years for 2 months. In 1928, the approximate strength of the personnel of the army and navy, including subordinate and political officials was 562,000 men.

The whole territory of the U.S.S.R. is divided, for the purposes of the Army, into 9 military districts.

The Red Army is organised as follows: Infantry, consisting of 21 Rifle Corps, 27 Rifle Divisions, 43 Territorial Divisions, and 210 Regiments, or 630 Battalions in all. Cavalry, consisting of 13 Cavalry Divisions, 96 Regiments; Artillery, 21 Regiments and 70 Light Artillery Regiments; Engineers, 29 Battalions.

The armed forces (army, navy and air) are controlled by the Military Soviet of the Union. The army is directed by the Revolutionary War Council with the People's Commissary as President. It is commanded by a Commander-in-chief, with a Chief of the Staff at the head of the army staff. The army in peace time is organised in—

- (1) Field troops, which include fortress garrisons, and comprise the regular army.
- (2) Instructional detachments.
- (3) Auxiliary troops for service behind the front line.
- (4) Special troops for political and frontier guard service.

Those on active service both in the Standing Army and the Territorial Forces, in the Navy, etc., whilst subject to the Rules and Regulations and Military Discipline, at the same time, enjoy all the civic rights of Soviet citizens.

II. NAVY.

The proposed reconstruction of the Russian Navy has been retarded, though it has been officially stated on more than one occasion that a reconstitution of the forces is contemplated. So far it has taken the form of re-naming the existing vessels of the fleet. There are three battleships, the Marat, Parizheskaia-Kommuna and Oktiabriskaia-Revolutia, serviceable in the Baltic, the sister ship Mikhail Frunze being non-effective at present.

In the Black Sea the force is inconsiderable. Part of General Wrangel's force, comprising one Dreadnought, 10 destroyers, 4 submarines and other vessels are still at Bizerta under French protection, and have ceased to have any effective value as fighting units.

State dockyards were at Nevsky, New Admiralty and Galernyi Ostrov, Leningrad; Kronstadt, Sevastopol, and Vladivostok. Guns were made at the Putiloff steel works; 3 or 4 submarines are reported to be under construction at Leningrad, but otherwise very little work appears to be in hand.

The following table gives the principal ships remaining of the Baltic and the Black Sea Fleets, the new names being inserted.

BALTIC FLEET.

Date of Launch	Name	Displacement	Horse-power	Speed	Officers and Men	Main armament
Battleships.
1911	{ Oktiabriskaia-Revolutia . Parizheskaia-Kommuna . Marat . }	23,000	42,000	23	59—1,006	12 12in.; 16 4.7in.

These ships are the former Gangut, Sevastopol and Petropavlovsk.

Cruisers.

1915	Sovmarkom	7,600	50,000	30	—	15 5.1in.; 4 3.9in. A.A.
1900	S.S.S.R.	6,830	11,600	12	573	10 5.1in.
1906	Prointern	15,190	20,675	21.5	900	4 10in.; 8 8in.; 20 4.7in.

Only the first-named cruiser is of any fighting value.

There remain now in the Baltic about 12 destroyers of any fighting value. The modern submarines are about 8 in number. There are also 2 gunboats, several mine-layers and mine-sweeping trawlers, motor-boats, and surveying and training ships. The flying service includes 50 or 60 planes. A small force is at Vladivostok.

BLACK SEA FLEET.

Cruiser.

1915	{ Tchernonaya Ukraina . }	7,600	55,000	30	—	15 5.1 in.; 4 3in. A.A.
------	----------------------------------	-------	--------	----	---	-------------------------

The above is the only one out of 4 cruisers laid down in 1913 which has been completed. There are 3 destroyers in the Black Sea and 8 torpedo boats. There are also about modern submarines and the old cruiser Komintern, employed as a training ship. A number of useful auxiliaries are in the Black Sea, and the flying service includes about 40 various planes. There is a flotilla on the Dnieper, and a small force is in the Caspian.

Production and Industry.

The country is mainly agricultural in character. The total area sown with grain, potatoes, flax, and other industrial plants, kitchen garden produce, etc., was, for the years mentioned, in millions of dessiatines (2·7 acres) as follows:—1913, 106·7; 1923, 86·2; 1924, 92·8; 1925, 98·5; 1926, 102·8; 1927, 105·5 (88·8 sown with grain, 6·7 with industrial plants, and 10 with other kinds of produce).

The following table shows the acreage and yield of the principal crops for three years:—

Crop	Area (thousand dessiatines)			Harvest (million poods)
	1925	1926	1927	1925	1926	1927
Rye . . .	26,035·2	25,850·9	25,775·5	1,359·0	1,398·1	1,500·4

Total . . .	79,050·4	85,251·8	87,490·2	4,420·4	4,653·2	4,525·7

Industrial crops were as follows:—

Crop	Area (thousand dessiatines)			Harvest (million poods)
	1925	1926	1927	1925		1926		1927
				Seeds	Fibres	Seeds	Fibres	Seeds	Fibres

Total . . .	6,479·0	6,019·7	6,586·5

In 1926 the potato yield was given as 2,778·4 million poods.

The number of animals (million heads) in the Soviet Union is shown as follows for four years:—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927
Horses, of all kinds . . .	25·3	26·8	29·1	31·3
Horses, working farm, alone . . .	19·8	20·1	21·7	23·1
Cattle . . .	55·9	60·8	64·1	67·8
Sheep and Goats . . .	87·8	114·5	121·6	134·3
Pigs . . .	18·2	18·5	18·1	20·0

There were in addition, in 1926, about 1,318,400 camels.

Of the whole of the forest land of the U.S.S.R., a large portion is administered and worked, or let out as concessions, by the State, and the other is granted for use to the Peasantry free of charge, the latter being 72,900,000 acres in extent.

The Forest Lands of the U.S.S.R. are estimated to cover 2,040,380,000 acres, of which 1,984,547,500 acres are situated in the R.S.F.S.R. and 55,782,500 in the other constituent Republics of the Union. In European Russia alone, there are 405 million acres of Forest Land, most of it being in the North, some in the Centre, but very little in the South.

A large proportion of the Forest Lands of the U.S.S.R. lies in Asiatic Russia (some 300,000,000 acres in extent) where, owing to the absence of roads it is not accessible for working. The forests of the Caucasus, on the other hand, are capable of furnishing the world's market, with an inexhaustible supply of many valuable varieties of timber. A total of 18,600,000 acres in the Caucasus are covered by Forest Lands.

The Soviet Union is rich in minerals. The output of some of the principal ores was as follows:—

Ores	1925-26	1926-27
	Tons	Tons
Iron . . . . .	3,128,613	4,810,708
Manganese . . . . .	853,200	823,000
Chrome . . . . .	26,680	17,930
Copper . . . . .	352,175	509,400
Total value in Roubles (at pre-war prices)	36,927,000	47,315,000

The total gross output of coal in 1926-27 was 30,940,000 tons; in 1927-28, 34,840,000 tons.

The number of coal miners increased from an average of 134,700 in 1921-22 to 265,600 in 1926-27.

The output of the State oil industry during the last two years was as follows:—

—	1926-27	1927-28
	Tons	Tons
Baku . . . . .	6,893,000	7,560,000
Grozny . . . . .	2,956,000	3,370,000
Emba . . . . .	252,000	260,000
Kuban . . . . .	88,000	97,000
	10,184,000 <sup>1</sup>	11,287,000 <sup>1</sup>
Total value in Roubles, at pre-war prices	227,032,420	—

The organisation of industry in Soviet Russia is based on State ownership and control, and is administered in accordance with the Decree of April 10, 1923, and subsequent slight modifications, by State Trusts and Combines. The Trusts in the large scale and middle sized State industries number over 600, but there are 291 big Trusts and these cover about 80 per cent. of the total State industries. A small number of Trusts, called Monopoly Trusts, combine all the enterprises of a given branch of industry in the whole Union. Such are, for instance, the Rubber Trust, Silk Trust, Urals Asbestos Trust, etc. In some industries there are several trusts. Thus the Oil, Cement and a few other industries have four trusts each, but in the vast majority of industries in the Soviet Union there are a number of separate Trusts in the various parts of the Union.

The Combines are trusts which cover a variety of interconnected industries, e.g. the Southern Steel Combine, the Southern Chemical Combine, etc. In order to co-ordinate the work of the various Trusts, Syndicates have been formed. Amongst the most important syndicates may be mentioned the Textile Syndicate which combines the cotton, wool, linen, silk and some of the hemp Trusts. The Oil Syndicate co-ordinates the work of the Azerbaijan, Grozny and Emba Oil Trusts, and so on.

The following figures show the value (measured in pre-war prices) of the output of Soviet industry (State, Co-operative and private) during the last 6 years :—

Year	Value million roubles at 1913 prices	Per cent. of 1913
1921 . . . . .	1,168.0	18.3
1922 . . . . .	1,524.3	23.8
1923-24 . . . . .	2,587.0	41.7
1924-25 . . . . .	3,959.7	66.1
1925-26 . . . . .	5,722.2	99.0
1926-27 . . . . .	6,722.5	105.0

Commerce.

The foreign trade of the U.S.S.R. is organized as a state monopoly. Importation and Exportation of goods is effected by special licences issued by the Commissariat for Foreign and Home Trade and its respective departments in pursuance of a plan annually sanctioned by the Government. The right of purchasing goods for Importation, and that of selling Russian exports abroad is vested in the Trade Delegations of the U.S.S.R. in foreign countries. By special decrees respective Government Departments select those state and co-operative organizations which are authorized, under the control of the Trade Delegation, to engage in foreign trade.

For the purpose of encouraging the participation of foreign capital in the foreign trade of the country there have been formed in the U.S.S.R. 'Mixed Companies' in which shares are held by the Soviet Government and foreign concerns. The largest organizations through which the export and import trade is carried on are the Gostorg, the Exportkhlek (Cereals Export Company), Exportles (Timber Export Company), Textilimport (Textiles, Import Company), and others. The Co-operative Organizations which are granted the right of 'exit to the foreign markets' are the Centrosyuz (Central Union of Co-operative Societies), the Selskosoyuz and several other organizations.

The following table gives the value of imports and exports over the European frontiers, for four years, in millions of roubles :—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
1924-25	643.8	507.9	1926-27	623.8	678.2
1925-26	673.7	589.1	1927-28	820.1	685.8

The foreign trade across the Asiatic frontiers (in millions of roubles) was as follows:—imports, 1924-25, 76.1; 1925-26, 82.7; 1926-27, 88.9; exports, 1924-25, 67.4; 1925-26, 87.5; 1926-27, 92.3.

Imports and exports for 1926-27, over the European frontiers, were shown as follows (the values represent current prices):—

Imports	1926-27		Exports	1926-27
	1,000 metric Tons	1,000 roubles		1,000 metric Tons	1,000 roubles

MONEY.

The legal unit of money is the Rouble of 100 Kopecks.

The currency in circulation are (1) Chervontsi notes in denominations of 1, 2, 3, 5, 10, and 25, issued by the State Bank against gold cover, but inconvertible at present; (2) Treasury Notes in denominations of 1, 3, and 5 gold roubles; (3) silver coins: either bank silver (90 per cent. silver and 10 per cent. copper) in denominations of 1 rouble and 50 kopecks; or change silver (50 per cent. silver and 50 per cent. copper) in denominations of 20, 15, and 10 kopecks; (4) copper coins in denominations of 1, 2, 3, and 5 kopecks and half kopecks; (5) bronze coins in denominations of 1, 2, 3, and 5 kopecks. On October 1, 1928, there were in circulation 711 million roubles worth of treasury notes, 181·8 million roubles silver coins, and 14·9 million roubles copper and bronze coins; total 907·7 million roubles. There were also 1063·7 million roubles of chervonetz notes in circulation.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

The metric system of weights and measures has been in use since January 1, 1927.

The old Russian weights and measures are as follows:—

1 Verst (500 sajènes )	. . .	= 3,500 ft., or two-thirds of a statute mile (0·662879).
1 Sajène (3 arshins )	. . .	= 7 feet English.
1 Arshin (16 vershoks )	. . .	= 28 inches.
1 Square verst	. . .	= 0·439408 square mile = 281·221 acres.
1 Dessiatine	. . .	= 2·69972 English acres.
1 Pound (96 zolotniks = 32 lots )	= $\frac{1}{16}$ of a pound English (0·90288 lb.).
		{ = 36 lbs. English.
1 Pood (40 pounds )	. . .	{ = 0·32243578 cwt.
		{ = 0·016121789 tons.
1 Vedro (10 shloffs )	. . .	= 2½ imperial gallons (2·7056).
1 Chetvert (8 Chetveriks )	. . .	= 5·7719 imperial bushels.

The Soviet Government issued a decree adopting the Gregorian Calendar as from February 14, 1918.

SOVIET CENTRAL ASIA.

Soviet Central Asia embraces the Uzbek Socialist Soviet Republic, the Turkoman Socialist Soviet Republic, the Tajik Autonomous Republic, the Autonomous Regions of Kara-Kalpakia and Kirghizia (Kara-Kirghizia) as well as the regions to the north of Tashkent, peopled by Kaizaks (Kirghiz), and which are now included in the Autonomous Kaizak Republic.

Turkestan was conquered by the Russians about 60 years ago. In 1866 Tashkent was occupied and in 1868 Samarkand, and subsequently further territory was conquered and united with Russian Turkestan. In the 70's Bokhara was subjugated, the Emir, by the agreement of 1873 recognising the suzerainty of Russia. In the same year Khiva became a Vassal State to Russia. Until 1917, Russian Central Asia was divided politically into the Khanate of Khiva, the Emirate of Bukhara, and the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan.

After the outbreak of the Revolution various political parties contended for power in Turkestan. In the summer of 1919 the authority of the Soviet Government became definitely established in these regions, and subsequently the native dynasties in Khiva and Bukhara were expelled. The Khan of Khiva was deposed in February 1920, and a People's Soviet Republic was set up, the medieval name of Korezm being revived. In August 1920 the Emir of Bukhara suffered the same fate, and a similar regime was set up in Bukhara. The former Governor-Generalship of Turkestan was formally constituted an Autonomous Socialist Soviet Republic within the R.S.F.S.R. on April 11, 1921.

In the autumn, 1924, a decision was accepted by the Congresses of the Soviets of Turkestan, Bokhara and Khiva Republics to redistribute the territories of these Republics on a national basis; at the same time Bokhara and Khiva became Socialist Republics. As a result of the redistribution completed in May, 1925, the New States of Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan and Tajikistan and several Autonomous Regions were established. The remaining districts of Turkestan populated by Kaizaks (Kirghiz) were reunited to Kazakhstan.

The Autonomous Kaizak Socialist Soviet Republic, comprising the Governments of Uralsk, Turgai, Akmolinsk and Semipalatinsk, had already been created within the R.S.F.S.R. (August 26, 1920). To this Republic were added the parts of the former Governorship of Turkestan inhabited by a majority of Kirghiz, and comprising the greater parts of the old Provinces of Sir Daria and Semirechinsk, together with the eastern part of Ferghana and the foothills of the Pamirs. Area, 94,956 sq. miles. Within this Autonomous Kirghiz Republic, two Autonomous Regions were established, in the interests of distinct sub-groups of Kirghiz tribesmen, that of Kara-Kalpakia, extending south-east of the Sea of Aral, and Kirghizia, covering most of the old Semirechinsk Province. On March 7, 1927, Kirghizia was reorganized into an Autonomous Republic, formerly part of the R.S.F.S.R. The remaining parts of Russian Turkestan, with the territories of the old native states of Khiva and Bukhara and the Trans-Caspian Province, constitute the two Socialist Soviet Republics of Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan. In October 1924, the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. decided to admit these two Republics to membership of the Union, a decision which was confirmed by the Third Union Congress of Soviets in May 1925.

TURKMENISTAN.

(TURKOMAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Turkoman Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on October 27, 1924 and covers the territory of the former Trans-Caspian Region of Turkestan, the Charjiui vilayet of Bokhara, and a part of Khiva situated on the right bank of the Oxus. In May 1925 the Turkoman Republic entered the Soviet Union as one of its Constituent Republics. It is bounded on the north by the Autonomous Kaizak Republic (Kirghizia), by Persia and Afghanistan on the south, by the Uzbek Republic on the east and the Caspian Sea on the west.

The principal Turkoman tribes are the Tekkés of Merv, and the Tekkés of the Attok, the Ersaris, Yomuds and Goklans. All speak closely related varieties of a Turkoman language (of the South-Western group of Turkish), and they are Sunni Mohammedans. The country passed under Russian control in 1881, after the fall of the Turkoman stronghold of Gök-Tépé.

The area of Turkmenistan is 491,216 square kilometres (189,603 sq. miles), and its population 1,030,549. The Turcomans form about 70 per cent. of the population and the Uzbeks about 16 per cent.

The capital is Ashkabad (Poltaratsk), and other large towns are Merv, Charjiui, Kerki, Tashauz.

The main occupation of the people is agriculture, based mainly on irrigation. Turkmenistan produces cotton, wool, Astrakan fur, etc. It is also famous for its carpets, and produces a certain special breed of Turkoman horses. It is fairly rich in mineral resources, producing ozokerite, oil, sulphates, common salt, sulphur, etc.

There are 1,541 kilometres (955 miles) of railway line. Tashkent is connected with the main Russian railway system via Orenburg. From Tashkent the railway is carried south, until it branches westward to Bukhara, Merv, Ashkabad and Krasnovodsk, and eastward to Kokand, with extensions to Namangan and Andijan. At Krasnovodsk, on the Caspian, the railway line connects by boat-service with Baku and the main Russian and Trans-Caucasian systems. At Merv it branches south, along the valley of the Murghab, to Roushk on the Afghan frontier.

Motor communication has been established between Ashkabad to Meshed (Persia), and an air line runs between Charjiui and Tashauz. Turkmenistan (particularly the territory along the railway line) is connected by telegraph with the rest of the Union.

UZBEKISTAN.

(UZBEK SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Uzbekistan Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on December 5, 1924, from lands formerly included in Turkestan, Bokhara and Khorezm. It includes a large part of the Samarkand region, the southern part of the Sir-Daria, Western Fergana, the Western Plains of Bokhara, the Uzbek regions of Khoresm and the Autonomous Republic of Tadjikistan. In May 1925, Uzbekistan, by the decision of the Congress of Soviets of the U.S.S.R. was accepted as an equal member into the Soviet Union.

Uzbekistan lies between 36° 40' N. latitude and 59° 50' - 75° E. longitude. It is bordered on the north by the Kaizak Autonomous Republic, on the east by the Kirghis Autonomous Republic and Chinese Turkestan, on the south by Afghanistan, and on the west by the Turkoman Soviet Socialist Republic.

The Uzbeks, who form the majority of the population over the area of the old States of Kliiva and Bukhara, and the Provinces of Samarkand and Ferghana, were the ruling race in Central Asia, until the arrival of the Russians during the third quarter of the nineteenth century. The several native States over which Uzbek dynasties formerly ruled were founded in the fifteenth century upon the ruins of Tamerlane's empire. The Uzbeks speak Jagatai Turkish, which is clearly related to Osmanli and Azerbaijan Turkish, and are Sunni Mohammedans.

The area is 340,400 square kilometres (131,394 sq. miles); population 5,270,195. The Uzbeks form about 63 per cent. of the total; the Tadjiks about 15 per cent.; the Russians about 7 per cent. The capital of the Republic is Samarkand (population 105,000); other important cities are Tashkent, Bokhara, Khiva, Andijan, Kokand, Namangan.

Uzbekistan is a land of intensive farming, based on artificial irrigation. Cotton growing has been developed. Uzbekistan also produces fruits, wool, and silk. Its industry consists of cotton spinning (51 factories), oil and coal-mining.

The total length of railway is 1,721 kilometres (1,067 miles), of which 734 kilometres (455 miles) form that part of the line which connects central Asia with Russia. From this main line branches lead to Karshe-Kitab, Kerki-Termez, Djelalabad, Namangan, Andijan and other centres. On the territory of the Republic there are 113 postal telegraph institutions, an air-line which serves all of Central Asia, and this air-line is most developed in Uzbekistan. The existing air-lines are: (1) Chardjui, Khiva, Chimbai; (2) Tashkent-Samarkand, Termez, Dushambe; (3) Tashkent-Termez-Kabul.

TAJIKISTAN.

The Tajikistan Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic was formed from the former regions of Bokhara and Turkestan where the population consisted mainly of Tajiks.

Tajikistan is situated between 39°40 and 36°40 N. latitude and 67°20 and 75° E longitude, north of the Oxus. On the west and north it is bordered by Uzbekistan and by the autonomous Republic of the Kirghiz; on the east by Chinese Turkestan and on the south by Afghanistan.

The Tajiks speak an Iranian dialect, little different from Persian, and they are considered to be the descendants of the original Aryan population of Turkestan. Unlike the Persians, the Tajiks are mostly Sunnis.

The area of the territory is 135,000 square kilometres (52,110 sq. miles), and the population about 824,000. The capital is Dushambe.

The occupations of the population are mainly farming and cattle-breeding. Gold, oil and coal are being produced, but by very primitive methods. Irrigation is being developed and cotton growing introduced.

In regard to roads, it is the poorest region in Central Asia. The only means of communication up to the time of the formation of the Republic were camel-tracks. A railway line is now being built between Termez and Dushambe (about 200 kilometres—124 miles). Automobile transport roads are also being built. A steamship line on the Oxus runs between Termez Saraya and Jilikulam on the river Vakhsh. Dushambe is connected by an air line with Termez and Kagan.

THE TRANS-CAUCASIAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.

The Trans-Caucasia has as natural boundaries—on the north, the Caucasian Mountains, separating it from Northern Caucasia; on the west, the Black Sea; on the south, mountains, steppes and rivers which divide it from Persia; and on the east the Caspian Sea. The area of the Trans-Caucasian Republic is 184,492 square kilometres (71,255 sq. miles). After the November revolution Trans-Caucasia became separated from the rest of Russia and split up into three separate Republics: Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan. In April 1920, Azerbaijan became a Soviet Republic. Towards the end of the same year, Armenia also became a Soviet Republic, and in 1921 a Soviet Government was established in Georgia. The three Republics, on March 12, 1922, concluded an agreement whereby they formed a Trans-Caucasian Federation, thus establishing the Trans-Caucasian Soviet Socialist Republic. Total population, 5,850,692, made up as follows: Georgians, 33·4 per cent.; Armenians, 24·1 per cent.; Turko-Tartars, 23·1 per cent.; Russians, 4·6 per cent.; Ossetins, 1·7 per cent.; Abkhazians, 0·8 per cent.; others, 12·3 per cent.

On January 1, 1924, the total length of railways was 1,350 miles, 41·7 per cent. of which were in Georgia, 39·8 per cent. in Azerbaijan, and 18·5 per cent. in Armenia. The main lines run from Batoum, through Tiflis to Baku and along the Caspian Sea through Derbent to the R.S.F.S.R. There is also a railway running from Tiflis to the south in Armenia. This line passes through the Allavert copper mines and through Leninkan and Erivan to Persia. The railways in Transcaucasia, as in the rest of the Union, belong to the State.

ARMENIA.

(SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC OF ARMENIA.)

In November 1917, the Trans-Caucasian districts of the former Russian Empire, having refused to recognise the Bolsheviks, set up a Trans-Caucasian Commission as the supreme authority in the country. In February 1918, the Sejm or Diet of Trans-Caucasia, convoked in Tiflis, set up a Provisional Government. On April 22, 1918, the Trans-Caucasian Sejm declared its de jure independence of Russia, and established the Federal Democratic Republic of Trans-Caucasia. The three main nationalities in Trans-Caucasia, the Armenians, the Georgians and the Tartars, were parties to this Federation, each holding their own respective territories. This Federal Republic lasted only five weeks, owing mainly to the divergent political tendencies of the three constituent peoples. On May 28, 1918, the Trans-Caucasian Republic was dissolved, and the three peoples respectively declared their independence. An Armenian Republic was established at Erivan under the control of the Dashnak (Social Democratic) Party. The territory of the Republic comprised, from November 1918 to January 1921, the whole of the former Governments of Kars and Erivan and part of that of Elizabetopol. Its de facto independence was recognised by the Allies in January 1920, and its de jure recognition was embodied in the Treaty of Sévres, signed in August 1920 between the Allied Powers and Turkey. The Armenians failed to secure the union of the Turkish-Armenian districts. In December 1920, the Turks occupied the whole of the former Government of Kars. On April 2, 1921, Armenia was proclaimed a Soviet Republic. The Armenian Soviet Government, with the Russian Soviet Government, was a party to the Treaty of Kars (March 1921) which confirmed the Turkish possession of the former Government of Kars and of the Surmali District of the Government of Erivan.

Armenia (capital Erivan) which covers an area of 30,948 square kilometres (11,945 sq. miles), adopted to Soviet Constitution in November 1920. In 1926, the population of Armenia numbered 876,557, 85·9 per cent. of whom were Armenians, 9·8 per cent. Turko-Tartars, 2·4 per cent. Russians, and 1·8 per cent. other nationalities. Only 16·6 per cent. of the population live in towns. Armenia is essentially an agricultural country; in 1925, 255,900 dessiatines was cultivated; 84·7 per cent. of the cultivated land was under grain and 5·9 per cent. under industrial plants. The area under cotton was 15,103 dessiatines, the yield being 862,890 poods of raw cotton. Since the establishment of the Soviet Government irrigation works have been restored or constructed to a total length of 350 kilometres (187 miles). The principal of these is the Shirak Lenin Canal, 22 kilometres (13 miles) long, commenced in 1922 and completed in 1925.

In 1923 there were 1,376 industrial enterprises in the towns of Armenia, amongst them being textile sheds, quarries, conserving factories, breweries, spirit distilleries, wine-presses, etc.

In 1926 a new electric station was erected at Erivan and the construction of a number of powerful electric stations was started.

In 1925 there were 81,000 pupils in the schools of Armenia. In addition there are a number of Trade Technical Schools, a State University, a Musical Academy and two Workers' Faculties.

On October 22, 1926, Leninakan suffered a severe earthquake, which destroyed the greater part of the town and 40 of the surrounding villages. Efforts are being made to make good the damage and restore the town and villages.

AZERBAIJAN.

(AZERBAIJAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The 'Mussavat' (Nationalist) party who dominated the National Council or Constituent Assembly of the Tartars, declared the independence of Azerbaijan on May 28, 1918, with a capital, first at Ganja (Elizabetopol) and later at Baku. A Government of 12 ministers was formed, which the British Government recognised as a de facto administration in February 1920. On April 28, 1920, the 'Hummet' or Bolshevik Party overthrew the existing Government, and admitted Russian troops to Baku. On September 30, 1920, a military and economic treaty was concluded between Azerbaijan and Russia, and in the following year Azerbaijan was declared a Soviet Republic.

Azerbaijan covers an area of 84,679 square kilometres (32,686 sq. miles) and has a population (1926) of 2,313,172. Its capital is Baku, population 452,000. Azerbaijan includes the Nakhichevan Socialist Soviet Republic and the Nagorni Karabakh Autonomous Region. It has a temperate climate throughout the year. Most of the inhabitants are Turko-Tatars. It also contains a fair number of Armenians, comparatively few Georgians, and Russians, most of whom live in the towns, particularly in Baku, and employed principally in the oilfields. 77.6 per cent. of the total population live in the country districts.

Azerbaijan is in the main an agricultural country, the chief products being grain, cotton, vine, kitchen and garden produce, and to some extent, also tobacco and silk. In the mountain regions the occupation of the people is cattle-breeding. Over the whole of Azerbaijan, there are 7,283,000 dessiatines of land of which over 75 per cent. is suitable for cultivation. The area under cotton in 1925 was 97,700 dessiatines, or very nearly that of pre-war. The average yield was 45 to 50 poods per dessiatine and the total harvest of raw cotton was 4,500,000 poods.

The most important industry is the oil industry, especially in the Baku Region. The total output of oil in 1926-27 was 6,893,000 tons, and in 1927-28, 7,560,000 tons. The number of men employed was (September 1, 1928), 47,096. All the oilfields have been electrified and are now connected with the town of Baku and, for the most part, with the new workers' settlements which have been constructed more or less on the American type. Amongst the other industries in Azerbaijan are copper, salt, textiles, and fishing industries.

In 1925-26, 134,855 pupils attended the primary and secondary schools. There is also a State University, a Polytechnic Institute, a State Conservatoire, a Higher Arts School, a number of Teachers' Training Centres, 14 Technical Institutes and 6 Workers' Faculties.

GEORGIA.

(GEORGIAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The independence of the Georgian Social Democratic Republic was declared at Tiflis on May 26, 1918, by the representative body, the National Council, elected by the National Assembly of Georgia on November 22, 1917. The Act of Independence of Georgia was confirmed on March 12, 1919, by the Constituent Assembly, which had been elected on a basis of universal suffrage.

The Government, which was controlled by the Menshevik Party, received de jure recognition by the Allies on January 27, 1921. In February, 1921, however, a Soviet Government was set up. The territory of Georgia comprises most of the former Government of Tiflis and the whole of that of Kutais. Some small frontier districts were ceded to Turkey by the Treaty of Kars (March, 1921).

Georgia occupies the whole of the western part of Trans-Caucasia and covers an area of 68,865 sq. kilometres, or 26,381 sq. miles. Its population in 1926 was 2,660,963. Georgia embraces the Abkhassian Socialist Soviet Republic, the Ajaristan Autonomous Soviet Republic and the Autonomous Region of Southern Ossetia. The majority of the population (68 per cent.) consists of Georgians. There are also in Georgia a fair number of Armenians, Tartars, Russians and a large number of other nationalities. In 1925, the number of pupils in the schools of Georgia was 211,210, including 1,600 students in the higher education institutions. There is a State University, a polytechnic institute, a Trans-Caucasian Communist University, an Academy of Art and a Conservatoire.

Tiflis (population 293,000) is not only the capital of Georgia, it is also the capital of Trans-Caucasia. It is one of the oldest towns of Georgia, but it is now being to a certain extent rebuilt and modernised. All the Central Government Departments of Trans-Caucasia and of Georgia are in Tiflis.

Agriculture is important; much work has been done in the drainage of land, and in the construction of irrigation works. Georgia is very rich in forest lands where fine varieties of timber are grown. The most important mining industry of Georgia is the exploitation of the manganese deposits, the richest of which lie in the Chiatura region. The annual export of manganese from Georgia before the war was 35,000,000 poods. The Civil War wrought enormous damage to the Manganese Mines, but these are being restored, and already 44 per cent. of the pre-war exports have been reached. The manganese deposits in Georgia are calculated to amount to 5 to 9 milliard poods (from 80 to 150 million tons). In the Kutais Country and in Abkhasia, there are coal deposits estimated at 80 milliard poods (about 1,300 million tons). The most powerful electric station in Trans-Caucasia is in Georgia on the River Kura, the Zemo-Avchal hydro-electric station of 36,000 horse power. The second most powerful station is the Abash Hydro Electrical Station; a number of other stations are either in the course of construction or are to be constructed shortly.

Communications.—The railway system of Georgia extends to 570 miles. The trunk line leading from Batum through Tiflis to Baku on the Caspian Sea has several narrow gauge branches on Georgian territory to the coal mines of Tskhibuli, to the port of Poti, to the manganese mines of Chiaturi, to the mineral springs of Borjom and the health resort Bakuriani, to the towns Signakh and Telavi, in Kakhetia, and to the Armenian frontier, across the coal mine district of Alverdi. The last branch divides in Armenia, going on the one side to Tabriz in Persia, and on the other to Erzerum in Anatolia. All the railway lines on the territory of Georgia belong to the State.

A railway line from Akhal-Senaki along the Black Sea coast, through Sukhum to Tuapse, is being constructed.

UKRAINE.

(UKRAINIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic was formed after the Soviet Revolution of November 7, 1917. In December 1920, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic concluded a military and economic alliance with the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic and the following united People's Commissariats were formed:—For military and naval affairs, the Supreme Economic Council, Foreign Trade, Finance, Labour, Transport and Posts and Telegraphs.

On July 6, 1923, the Ukrainian Socialist Soviet Republic formed, together with the other Soviet Socialist Republics in Russia, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Ukrainian S.S.R. covers an area of 451,731 sq. kilometres (166,368 sq. miles) and includes the Autonomous Moldavian Republic.

The population in 1926 was 29,020,304.

Religion.—The population of the Ukraine belongs to a variety of churches, the chief being the Orthodox Greek Church, and the Catholic church. There are also some Protestants, and adherents of other Christian Sects, as well as Jews and others.

Education.—On January 1, 1927, there was a total of 18,573 elementary and secondary schools with 2,118,573 pupils; 220 kindergarten (10,437 pupils); 32 schools for defective children (1,811 pupils); 333 homes for normal children (40,616 pupils). The Republic has 1,281 various trade, technical, medical and similar schools and courses with 171,946 pupils.

Finance.—The Budget of the U.S.S.R. in 1926-27 was 274,000,000 roubles.

Agriculture.—The total land capable of being cultivated is 38,395,000 dessiatines. Most of this land (about 29,000,000 dessiatines) consists of peasant farms, about 600,000 dessiatines is worked by artels and communes. Soviet farms and experimental institutions have about 1,000,000 dessiatines, and the reserve for colonisation and concession is about 1,000,000 dessiatines.

Industry.—Some of the industries of the Ukraine are amongst the most important in the whole of the U.S.S.R. The Ukraine accounts for 80 per cent. of the coal output of the Union, 70 per cent. of the pig iron, 50 per cent. steel, 60 per cent. of the iron ores, 85 per cent. of sugar, 66 per cent. to 70 per cent. of agricultural machinery, 95 per cent. of manganese ores.

Railways.—The total length of Railways of the U.S.S.R. at the end of 1925 was 10,130 miles.

WHITE RUSSIA.

(WHITE RUSSIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The White Russian Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on January 1, 1919. At present, its territory covers 126,790 sq. kilometres (48,940 sq. miles), and includes the former provinces of Minsk, Vitepsk, Mogilov, and a section of the Grodno provinces as well as the Gomel province. The most important towns of White Russia are Minsk, Vitepsk and Gomel. In 1926, the population of White Russia was 4,983,884, of whom 82.2 per cent. were White Russians, 3.4 per cent. Russians and Ukrainians, 10.3 per cent. Jews, 2.0 per cent. Poles and 1.1 per cent. others. About 16 per cent. of the population live in towns. White Russia forms one of the constituent Republics of the U.S.S.R. Its constitution is similar to that of the R. S. F. S. R.

Education.—On January 1, 1927, there were 4,900 elementary schools with 347,138 pupils; 320 secondary schools with 114,261 pupils; 170 institutes for children with 9,366 inmates; 107 institutions for vocational-technical education, with 16,381 students. There are also 3 institutions of university rank—the White Russian State University, the Communist University, and the Agricultural Academy with 4,514 students.

Finance.—Budget estimated to balance at 24,703,000 roubles in 1925-26, and 77,000,000 roubles in 1928-29.

Agriculture.—The area under cultivation (in dessiatines) in 1926 was about 2,900,000 including about 110,000 flax and about 370,000 potatoes. The total number of heads of farm stock was 8,113,400, including 1,052,300 horses, 2,067,700 cattle, 2,937,700 sheep, and 2,055,500 pigs.

Industry.—Over the whole of the territory of White Russia, there were, at the end of 1925-26, 337 large scale industrial enterprises employing 30,213 workers and with a gross value of output in 1925-26 of 115,300,000 roubles.

SALVADOR.

(REPUBLICA DE EL SALVADOR.)

Constitution and Government.—In 1839 the Central American Federation, which had comprised the States of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, was dissolved, and Salvador became an independent Republic. Its Constitution, proclaimed in 1824 under the Federation, and frequently modified down to 1886, vests the legislative power in a Congress of 42 Deputies, 8 for each department. The election is for one year, and by universal suffrage. The executive is in the hands of a President, whose tenure of office is limited to four years.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Pio Romero Bosque. Term of office, from March 1, 1927, to March 1, 1931.

Vice-President.—Señor Gustavo Vides.

The administrative affairs of the Republic are carried on, under the President, by a ministry of four members, having charge of the departments of:—Foreign relations, Justice, and Instruction; War and Marine; Interior, Government and Agriculture; Finance, Charities, and Public Credit.

Area and Population.—The area of the Republic is 34,126 square kilometres, or 13,176 English square miles, divided into 14 departments, each under a governor appointed for 4 years. Estimated population (Jan. 1, 1928), 1,688,129. Aboriginal and mixed races constitute the bulk of the population, Ladinos or Mestizos being returned as numbering 1,307,200, and Indians 326,800. The language of the country is Spanish. The capital is San Salvador, with (1927) 100,000 inhabitants. Other towns are Santa Ana, population 74,200; San Miguel, 37,000; Santa Tecla, 28,000; San Vicente, 33,000; Sonsonate, 16,300.

The number of births in 1927 was 60,845, of which 25,324 were legitimate and 35,521 were illegitimate; the number of deaths, 29,874.

Religion, Education and Justice.—The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop in San Salvador and a bishop at Santa Ana and San Miguel respectively. Education is free and obligatory. There were in Salvador, in 1927, 859 public primary schools, with 1,557 teachers and 47,467 enrolled pupils. There were also 18 private primary schools and 61 municipal schools. There are 10 travelling teachers for the rural districts. Secondary education is given (1928) at the National Institute (275 pupils) and at 19 private Lyceums. There are also 5 commercial schools, and two normal schools, one for men (71 students) and one for women (87). There is a National University with 368 students in 1927. Expenditure on public instruction in 1926, 1,870,000 colones.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, one court of third instance (in the capital) and several courts of first and second instance, besides a number of minor courts. All judges of second and third instance are elected by the National Assembly for a term of 2 years, while the judges of first instance are appointed by the Supreme Court for a similar period.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years (2 colones = 1 dollar U.S.; 9·72 colones = 1*l.* sterling):—

	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . . .	1,861,555	2,022,888	2,274,444	2,110,544	2,370,825
Expenditure . . .	1,828,000	2,018,555	2,255,445	2,242,742	2,386,058

The present accounting system is being examined (1929) by English experts, on invitation of the Government, to suggest improvements.

Of the revenues for 1928-29 (23,132,000 colones), import duties were scheduled to furnish 11,060,000 colones; export duties, 2,936,000 colones; liquors, 4,435,000 colones. Of the expenditures (23,202,485 colones), debt service is assigned 7,000,000 colones, and war, navy and aviation, 3,603,071 colones.

The total outstanding debt on December 31, 1927, was 48,500,000 colones, of which 88 per cent. was external debt, and 12 per cent. internal debt.

Defence.—The army may be divided into three parts: (1) available force, 78 officers, 512 petty officers, and 15,554 men; (2) forces that can be made available at short notice, 49 officers, 356 petty officers, and 4,000 men; (3) reserve force, 251 officers, 1,743 petty officers, and 56,151 men. Total, 378 officers, 2,611 petty officers, and 75,705 men. The army is organised in 3 divisions of 12 infantry, 2 cavalry and 4 artillery regiments. In case of war, military service is compulsory from 18 to 50 years of age. The permanent armed force for 1926 was 3,000 men.

Production and Commerce.—Salvador is predominantly agricultural. Eighty per cent. of its total area is under cultivation, probably the highest percentage in the world. But it is a one-crop country, coffee alone furnishing, in value, 89 per cent. of its exports in 1927. Total area devoted to coffee in 1927 was 140,000 acres, with some 100,000,000 trees, producing 49,000 tons, of which 36,200 tons were exported. The output varies considerably from year to year. Germany is the principal buyer. Other agricultural products are maize (250,000 tons), cacao, balsam (46,882 kilos exported in 1927), tobacco, indigo, henequén (720,716 kilos exported in 1927), and sugar (exports, 1927, 7,742 tons). A little rubber is exported. In the national forests are found dye woods and such hard woods as mahogany, cedar, and walnut. Balsam trees also abound. The mineral wealth of the Republic includes gold, silver, copper, iron, lead, zinc, sulphur and mercury, but mining operations languish.

The imports (subject to duty) and the exports have been as follows in five years (in pounds sterling at 9.72 colones = 1l.):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . . . .	2,060,795	2,324,111	3,419,000	3,374,484	3,016,323
Exports . . . . .	2,346,253	5,416,000	3,474,000	5,079,611	2,911,968

The trade is chiefly with the United States, the United Kingdom, and France. The chief imports are cottons, hardware, flour, drugs and chemical products. The chief exports are coffee, henequén, and balsam; the sugar surplus is exported but it is small.

Total trade between Salvador and the U.K. (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Salvador to U. K. .	36,267	172,737	40,279	47,174	20,345
Exports to Salvador from U. K. .	508,696	628,682	615,026	376,319	502,234

Shipping and Communications.—In 1927, 609 vessels with a tonnage of 1,295,202 entered and cleared from the ports of the Republic. Cutuco is the principal port, handling 57 per cent. of imports and 31 per cent. of the exports.

A British-owned railway connects the port of Acajutla with Santa Ana and La Ceiba; with this system San Salvador, the capital, is connected—a distance of 65 miles. Another line (the American-owned International Railways of Central America) runs from the eastern to the western boundary of Salvador. The line from Mega to the capital with its extension has a total length of 156 miles. Another short railway connects the capital with Santa Tecla. Total length of railway open (1927), 330 miles, all of narrow gauge. There are 1,476 miles of national road in the Republic, including a fine highway completed in 1926 between San Salvador and La Libertad. Of these, 353 miles are suitable for motors. In 1928 an airplane service was established between San Salvador, Guatemala City and other Central American points.

In 1927, there were 192 post offices, which handled nearly 10 million pieces of mail matter. In 1926 there were 254 telegraph offices, 1,520 miles of telegraph wire and 2,650 miles of telephone wire. There are 275 telephone-exchanges and 3,271 instruments. A radio transmitting and receiving station at San Salvador maintains communications with Latin America. The All America Cables maintain a station at San Salvador.

Money, Weights and Measures.

MONEY.

There are 3 banks of issue, the Banco Salvadoreño (paid-up capital, 4,000,000 colones), Banco Occidental (paid-up capital, 6,000,000 colones), and Banco Agrícola Commercial (paid-up capital, 1,560,000 colones), making a total of 11,560,000 colones. On December 31, 1927, they had notes in circulation to the value of 17,716,900 colones, with a gold cover amounting to 59 per cent. Under the law of 1900, their note circulation was limited to twice their capital, or a total of 23,120,000 colones. But on July 30, 1928, the limit was increased to 25,631,000 colones and the metallic backing was changed to one of 40 per cent. gold and 60 per cent. in commercial paper approved by the Government.

According to the law of July 16, 1920, the theoretical monetary unit of Salvador is the colon, a coin containing 836 milligrams of gold .900 fine, and equal in value to 50 cents. (United States currency). The colon, which represents 100 centavos, is issued in denominations of 5, 10, 20, and 40 colones. Auxiliary silver coins are minted in small denominations up to 12½, 20, 50, and 100 centavos each; the popular 12½ centavo piece is known as the "real"; nickel coins in denominations of 1, 3, 5, and 10 centavos each are also issued.

National gold coins and gold coins of the United States of all denominations are unlimited legal tender, the United States coins having a fixed value of 2 colones to the dollar. Other foreign money is not legal tender. National and United States silver coins are legal tender up to 10 per cent. of each payment, and national nickel coins in amounts up to 2 per cent. of each payment.

The coinage of silver is limited to 10 per cent of the total fiduciary circulation, and that of nickel to 5 per cent.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

On January 1, 1886, the metric system of weights and measures was made obligatory. But other units are still commonly in use, of which the principal are as follows:—

Libra	= 1.043 lb. av.	Arroba	= 25.35 lb. av.
Quintal	= 104.3 lb. av.	Fanega	= 1.5745 bushel.

SAN MARINO.

The independent Republic of San Marino, which claims to be the oldest State in Europe, is embraced in the area of Italy. A new treaty of friendship with the Kingdom of Italy was concluded June 28, 1907, revised in 1908 and in 1914. The Republic has extradition treaties with England, Belgium, Holland, and United States. The legislative power of the Republic is vested in the Grand Council of 60 members elected by popular vote, a third of whom are renewable every three years, and two of whom are appointed every six months to act as Regents (Capitani reggenti). The regents exercise executive power, assisted by various nominated congresses, viz., Congresso Economico di Stato, Congresso dei Legali, Congresso degli Studi, Congresso militare. The administration of justice is under magistrates, who are Italian citizens. There are several elementary schools and one high school, the diplomas of which are recognized by Italian universities.

The frontier line is 24 miles in length, area is 38 square miles, and population (December 1928) 13,013.

The revenue and expenditure for 1927-28 balanced at 4,053,072 lire, and for 1926-27 at 4,145,179 lire. There is no public debt. The militia consists of all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 16 and 55, with the exception of teachers and students. The chief exports are wine, cattle, and the building stone quarried on Mount Titano. Italian currency is in general use, but the Republic issues separate postage stamps. An electric railway from Rimini to the city of San Marino is under construction.

Consul-General of San Marino in London.—Commendatore Melvill Allan Jamieson, F.R.G.S.

Consul-General of Great Britain in San Marino.—M. Carmichael (Resides at Leghorn).

SERB, CROAT, AND SLOVENE STATE.

(KRALJEVINA SRBA, HRVATA, I SLOVENACA.)

Reigning King.

Alexander I, born December 17, 1888, son of King Peter I and Princess Zorka, daughter of the late Nicholas I, King of Montenegro; married on June 8, 1922, to Princess Marie, born January 9, 1899, daughter of King Ferdinand I of Rumania; Prince Regent from June 24, 1914 to August 16, 1921, when his father died.

Sons of the King.—Prince Peter, born September 6, 1923; Prince Tomislav, born January 19, 1928.

Brother of the King.—Prince George, born September 8, 1887; on March 27, 1909, he renounced his right of succession to the throne.

Sister of the King.—Princess Hélène, born November 4, 1884; married, September 9, 1911 to Prince Ivan Constantinovitch, son of the Grand Duke Constantine Constantinovitch of Russia.

Uncle and Cousins of the King.—Prince Arsene Karageorgevitch, born April 4, 1859; his son, Prince Paul, born April 15, 1893, married, October 22, 1922, Olga, daughter of Prince Nicholas of Greece. Their son—Prince Alexander, born August 18, 1924.

The founder of the dynasty was Kara-George (i.e. Black George) Petrovitch, who, in 1804, was proclaimed Commander-in-Chief in Serbia, but was murdered in 1817, leaving two sons—Alexis, born 1801, and Alexander, born 1806. In 1842 Alexander was chosen reigning Prince by the Skupshtina or National Assembly, and the title was confirmed by the Porte, but the dignity was not hereditary. In 1858 Alexander had to abdicate and was banished, and in 1885 he died in exile. King Peter was the third of his house who have ruled in Serbia. He succeeded to the throne on the murder of King Alexander of the Obrenovitch dynasty; was elected King by the Skupshtina June 2 (O.S.), and assumed royal rights and duties June 12 (O.S.), 1903.

The independence of Serbia from Turkey was established by Article 34 of the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878, and was proclaimed by Prince (afterwards King) Milan at his capital, August 22, 1878.

After the Revolution in Austria-Hungary, Slovenia, Croatia, Dalmatia, and Bosnia declared their independence, and their union with Serbia, together with that of Montenegro, which had been voted on November 18, 1918, was proclaimed on December 1, 1918.

On December 29, 1918, the first Ministry of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes was formed under M. Nikola Pashitch. It represented all the Yugoslav provinces, and the Allied Governments were informed of the creation of the new State, which has received recognition. By the Treaty of Rapallo the boundaries of the new State on the side of Italy were definitely determined, except as regards Fiume, an agreement on which was not reached till January 1924, when Fiume was awarded to Italy and Baros to Yugoslavia. On December 5, 1923, Serbia obtained from Greece a free zone in the harbour of Salonika.

The King's civil list amounts to 18,000,000 dinars, plus 6,000,000 French francs.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, adopted on June 28, 1921, and known as the 'Vidovdan Constitution,' provided for a single chamber called Narodna Skupstina (National Assembly) consisting of 315 representatives. The elections for the Constituent Assembly, held on September 11, 1927, resulted as follows:—111 Radicals, 23 Independent Democrats, 61 Democrats, 62 National Agrarian Party (Raditch Party), 9 Agrarians, 18 Bosniaks, 21 Yugoslav People's Party, and 10 members of other parties.

On January 6, 1929, the King abolished the Constitution, dissolved the Skupstina, and took the executive power into his own hands, which he exercised through a cabinet appointed on the same day. On February 17, 1929, a decree was issued constituting a Supreme Legislative Council of 17 nominated members (11 Serbs, 4 Croats, and 2 Slovenes).

The Cabinet, appointed on January 6, 1929, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of the Interior.—General Pera Zhivkovich.

Deputy Prime Minister.—N. Ouzounovich.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Voyislav Marinkovich.

Minister of Transport and Communications.—Father Anton Koroshetz.

Minister of Defence.—General Stevan Hajitch.

Minister of Finance.—Stanko Shverlyuga.

Minister of Social Affairs, Commerce and Industry.—Dr. Matya Drinkovich.

Minister of Education.—Bozho Maximovich.

Minister of Public Worship.—Dr. Tugomir Alaoupovich.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Milan Serzhkitch.

Minister of Public Health.—Dr. Vrosh Krul.

Minister of Mines, Forests and Agrarian Reform.—Lazar Radivoyevitch.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs and Public Works.—Sveta Savkovich.

Minister of Agriculture and Irrigation.—Professor Otto Frangesh.

Area and Population.

According to the census taken January 31, 1921, the area and population of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes are shown as follows:—

	Area in sq. miles	Males	Females.	Total	Per sq. mile.

<sup>1</sup> Voyvodina connotes "Duchy." It comprises the north-eastern part of the Kingdom, situated to the north of the rivers Danube and Drave, and includes the territories of Banat, Baranya, Batchka and Srem.

The principal towns according to the census of January 31, 1921, are : Belgrade (Beograd) (the capital) with 111,740 inhabitants (estimated population on January 1, 1927, 250,000) ; Zagreb (Agram), with 108,338 inhabitants (130,000 end of 1925) ; Subotica, 101,857 ; Sarajevo, 68,317 ; Lyublyana, 53,806 ; Skoplye, 44,066 (72,000 in 1927) ; Novi Sad, 39,147 ; Osijek, 34,412 ; Sombor, 31,332 ; Senta, 30,697 ; Maribor, 30,641 ; Bitolj, 23,418 ; Veliki Bèekerek, 27,511 ; Vrsac, 26,975 ; Velika Kikinda, 25,809 ; Nish, 25,093 ; Split, 25,042 ; Pancevo, 19,394 ; Zemun, 18,524 ; Mostar, 18,176 ; Stara Kanyiza, 18,060 ; Karlovac, 16,827 ; Prizren, 16,433 ; Kraguyevac, 15,664 ; Prishtina, 14,290 ; Varazhdin, 13,645 ; Tuzla, 13,354 ; Sushk 13,239 ; Novi Pazar, 11,207 ; Piro, 10,462 ; Sabac, 9,224 ; Ohrid, 9,608 ; Debar, 7,060.

Religion.

By Article 12 of the Constitution, all religions recognised by law enjoy the same rights. According to the census of 1921 there were of the total population :—Greek-Orthodox, 5,602,227 (47 per cent.) ; Roman Catholics, 4,735,154 (39 per cent.) ; Greek Catholics, 41,597 ; Protestants, 216,847 (2 per cent.) ; Mahomedans, 1,337,687 (11 per cent.) ; Jews, 64,159.

In the new territories are a large number of Roman Catholics ; there are Roman Catholic bishops in Prizren and Skoplye. In June, 1914, Serbia concluded a concordat with Rome. Under the concordat a Roman Catholic Archbishopric of Belgrade is established, with jurisdiction over Roman Catholics within the old frontiers of Serbia. After the union of all the Orthodox Serbs in the kingdom, the Church became a Patriarchate under the rule of the Patriarch and Holy Synod for ecclesiastical purposes.

The Serbian Orthodox Church is governed by the Patriarch Mgr Dimitrije I. Pavlovitch and the Holy Synod of Bishops. All the ecclesiastical officials are under the control of the Minister of Public Worship.

Education.

Elementary education is compulsory, and, in all the primary schools under the Ministry of Education, it is free. In the year 1927 there were 8,968 elementary schools with 18,201 teachers and 797,475 pupils. The number of secondary schools was 174 with 3,595 teachers and 83,399 pupils. There were also 44 training colleges for elementary school teachers with 454 instructors and 7,549 students. Of civil schools there were 155, with 1,423 teachers and 26,635 pupils. There were also 19 commercial schools with 159 teachers and 2,535 pupils. In Zagreb (Agram) there were 1 veterinary school (founded in 1919), with 21 teachers and 237 pupils ; an engineering school with 17 teachers and 340 pupils ; and 3 naval academies with 26 teachers and 194 pupils.

There are three Universities in the Kingdom : At Belgrade, founded in 1838, with (1927) 164 professors and 6,289 students ; at Zagreb (Agram), with 146 professors and 4,216 students ; and at Ljubljana, founded in 1920, with 78 professors and 1,311 students ; a Law School at Subotica with 12 professors and 408 students ; a Philosophical Faculty at Skoplye with 14 professors and 91 students ; and an Economic-commercial Academy at Zagreb with 8 professors and 460 students.

According to the census of 1921, 8,918,423 of the inhabitants spoke Serb and Croatian ; 1,024,761 Slovene ; 202,398 other Slav languages ; 229,398 Rumanian ; 513,472 German ; 472,409 Hungarian, and 441,740 Albanian.

Justice and Crime.

In 1928 a law was passed unifying the administration of justice throughout the Kingdom. There is a court of cassation in Zagreb.

Moreover, about 262,324,000 dinars provincial debts (loans) Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia and Slavonia, Dalmatia, and Slovenia. In May, 1926, the Yugoslav war debt to U.S.A. was funded at 51 million dollars.

Defence.

The organisation of the army of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes is based on the law of 1923. Compulsory service is in force for men between the ages of 21 and 45, and, as a last defence, men can be taken as fit to carry arms from the ages of 18 to 21 years and from 45 to 50 years. Service in the active army is for 10 years, of which 18 months are with the colours, the remainder of the service being spent on leave subject to recall for training. From 31 to 38, service is with the 2nd base of the reserve, from 38 to 45 with the 3rd base.

The kingdom is divided into five army commands subdivided into divisional and regimental districts.

In 1927, the peace strength of the active army was 6,433 officers and 109,509 men.

The strength on mobilisation is approximately 1,000,000. Military education is provided by the Military Academy at Belgrade for the training of cadets for officers of all arms and by the superior course of the Academy for the training of staff officers and commanders.

The infantry is armed with quick-firing rifles of French pattern and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary; the artillery with French quick-firing guns (Schneider-Canet system) and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary, which are of various models.

The Royal Yugoslav navy is under the command of a Vice-Admiral, a special Naval Department being maintained at the War Office for technical and administrative purposes. The organisation comprises the seagoing squadron; the river flotilla; the air service. The seagoing squadron, composed of 12 torpedo-boats, 6 mine-layers, 2 submarines, and a number of smaller vessels, is used mainly for training purposes. A small ex-German Cruiser, Dalmacija, has been refitted and re-armed to serve as flagship. Two more submarines are being built in France. The main base is at Kotor (Cattaro), where there are facilities for repairs and docking, and a naval engineering college. There are training establishments at Gruz (Gravosa) (for officers) and Šibenik (Sebenico) (for warrant and petty officers). The river flotilla includes 4 monitors, armed with 4·7 inch guns, besides patrol vessels, motor boats, mining launches, and other small craft. The air service consists of sea-plane detachments attached to the seagoing squadron and to the river flotilla. The total active service personnel of the navy is in the neighbourhood of 2,500 officers and men, with a further 700 in reserve.

Production and Industry.

Yugoslavia, with a total area of 24,848,829 hectares, has a cultivated area of 11,354,405 hectares (1926) distributed as follows (in hectares):—crop lands, 6,111,691 (54 per cent.); gardens, 123,914 (1·1 per cent.); grass lands, 1,681,568 (15 per cent.); pastures, 2,866,630 (25 per cent.); vines, 175,016 (1·54 per cent.).

The area and production of the principal crops for 2 years were:—

Crop.	Acreage.		Yield.
	1925	1926	1925	1926
Wheat . . .	4,410,240	4,440,086	tons 2,140,430	tons 1,948,951

In 1927, the plum crop was 557,676 metric tons; apples, 17,134 metric tons; and pears, 6,592 metric tons. Tobacco production of Yugoslavia in 1926, 14,821 tons. Silk culture is of importance; cocoon production in 1927, 970 metric tons; number of silk growers, 44,000. In 1926-27 the output of sugar was 70,018 metric tons.

In January, 1927, there were in Yugoslavia 1,227,707 horses, mules, and asses; 3,737,538 head of cattle; 7,932,875 sheep; 2,806,182 pigs; and 1,721,263 goats.

The forest area of Yugoslavia is 18,745,340 acres (1928). The largest forest area is in Bosnia and Herzegovina (6,665,000 acres). The forests consist largely of beech, oak, and fir, but are less profitable than, with proper managment, they might be. The normal timber cut is about 530 million cubic feet per annum.

Yugoslavia has considerable mineral resources, including coal and lignite, iron, copper ore, gold, lead, chrome, antimony and cement. The total output of coal was 4,746,219 tons in 1927; 4,140,752 tons in 1926; and 4,152,126 tons in 1925. The most important iron mines are at Vares and Ljubija in Bosnia and there are also considerable siderite and limonite iron ores between Prijedor and Sanski Most. In 1927 the output of iron ore was 336,099 tons. Copper ore is exploited chiefly at Bor (Serbia); output in 1927, 288,040 tons; in 1926, 220,005 tons. The principal lead mines are at Mežica (Slovenia); production of lead ore in 1927, 16,486 tons; in 1926, 79,531 tons. Chrome mines are found in the southern part of Serbia and more especially in the neighbourhood of Skoplje (Uskub); output of chrome ore in 1927, 8,757 tons; in 1926, 15,983 tons. There are 2 antimony mines in western Serbia (Podrinje) which produced 1,162 tons in 1927, and 740 tons in 1926; 53,532 tons of salt were produced in 1925, 59,949 in 1926, and 54,765 tons in 1927; bauxite in 1926, 131,828; in 1927, 100,327 tons; manganese, 1,971 (1,244 in 1926), pyrites 57,004 tons (53,376 tons in 1926).

Of the industries, flour milling is one of the most important, especially in Bačka; there are 50 large flour mills in the country; brewing and distilling are extensively carried on, as are also cotton spinning and weaving, tanning, boot-making, pottery, and iron-working. Carpet weaving is one of the oldest industries in Serbia. The product is manufactured principally at Pirot, in south-eastern Serbia, and the carpets are named after that place. The chief characteristics of these carpets are that they are made of pure wool, dyed with natural colours by local dyers, who pride themselves that the process of dyeing and colour mixing is a secret transmitted by father to son, and is known only to the inhabitants of Pirot. Meat-packing is also becoming important, and there is also an important cardboard and paper-making industry.

Shipping and Communications.

Yugoslavia in 1927 possessed 158 steamers of 152,458 (net) tons, 14 motor ships of 366 (net) tons, 709 sailing vessels of 7,313 (net) tons and 5,449 fishing vessels of 10,219 (net) tons.

In 1927, 6,742 sailing vessels of 295,303 net tons and 64,279 steamships of 11,544,555 net tons entered and cleared the ports of the kingdom.

Yugoslavia has (1927) 6,249 miles of railway, of which 4,226 miles are of normal gauge, and 2,023 miles of narrow gauge. Of the whole length of railway 3,966 miles belong to the State and 2,034 miles to private companies. With the exception of about 279 miles belonging to a private company, all the lines are under the State's administration.

The first Yugoslav air-line for passengers between Belgrade and Zagreb was opened in February, 1928.

Of highways there are (1925) 21,139 miles, many of them in a ruinous condition. Total length of waterways, principally the Danube, the Save, the Drave, the Tisa, the Kupa, the Tamish and 3 canals is 1,242 miles. On these waterways there were in 1927 steamship and sailing vessels of 49,847 h.p., of which 66 per cent. are State owned, the remainder belonging to private companies.

There were (1926) 15,130 miles of telegraph line and 11,590 miles of telephone line.

There were 910 State post-offices and 1,482 communal post-offices in 1926. In 1926 Yugoslavia had 1,103 telegraph stations, 1,007 telephone stations, and (1927) 969 railway telegraph stations.

Banking and Credit.

The principal bank is the National Bank of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, in Belgrade, with the nominal capital of dinars 50,000,000 in coined gold, of which 28,229,100 dinars are paid up. To cover the issue of new bank notes the State has pledged with the Bank its domains estimated at 2,000,000,000 dinars. The Bank may issue notes equal to three times the amount of the metallic deposits it holds. Notes in circulation on February 22, 1928, 5,339,760,090 dinars; gold, 89,176,342 dinars; silver, 17,575,398 dinars. The Export Bank, with agencies abroad, assists in the exportation of Yugoslav produce. The Državna Hipotekarna Banka or State Mortgage Bank, the only large State institution of the kind in Yugoslavia, makes advances to a large amount for agricultural operations. On December 31, 1927, there were 703 banks in Yugoslavia, with a total capital of 1,863,000,000 dinars, and reserves of 593,000,000 dinars. The deposits totalled 7,474,000,000 dinars.

Money, Weights and Measures.

Yugoslavia has the decimal system for its weights, and measures. The dinar, the unit of currency, contains 0.2903225 grammes of gold. In circulation are bank-notes of 5, 10, 100, and 1000 dinars; 100 paras = 1 dinar; metallic coins of 0.50 dinar, 1 dinar, and 2 dinars.

The metric weights and measures have been in practical use since the commencement of 1883. The wagon of 10 metric tons is frequently used as a unit of measure for coal, roots and corn.

SIAM.

(SAYAM, OR MUANG-THAI.)

Reigning King.

Prajadhipok, of Sukhodaya, born November 8, 1893, succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother, Rama VI., on November 26, 1925, being the seventh monarch of the present reigning dynasty.

Government.

The executive power is exercised by the King advised by a Council of State consisting of four elder statesmen of the Royal House. There is also, by the Royal Decree of January 10, 1895, a Legislative Council composed of the Ministers of State (Senabodi) and others, not less than 12 in number, appointed by the Crown. The total membership is now 40. In the preamble of the Royal Decree it is stated that the object of this body is to revise, amend, and complete the legislation of the kingdom. It is to meet at least once a week, and it may appoint committees of 3 or 4 members, with the addition of competent outsiders who must not outnumber the members. An important article gives the Legislative Council power to promulgate laws without the Royal assent in the event of any temporary disability of the Crown. At other times the Royal signature is indispensable. This Council has shown considerable legislative activity.

The Siamese dominions are divided, as from April 1, 1926, into 14 circles (Monthons), of which 13 have each a Lord-Lieutenant, deriving authority direct from the King, and having under him subordinate governors over the various parts of his circle. These Lords-Lieutenant and their subordinate governors and other officials have now complete administrative control even in the North and South-West where local hereditary chiefs formerly held sway. The circle of Bangkok (which includes the capital) is under the control of a Lord Prefect. The 14 circles are subdivided into 79 provinces (Changwats), 413 districts (Ampurs), and 5,109 communes (Tambons).

Area and Population.

Siam is called by its inhabitants Thai, or Muang-Thai, which means 'free,' or 'the kingdom of the free.' The word Siam is probably identical with Shan, applied in Burma to the Lao race, as well as to the Shan proper and the Siamese.

The limits of the Kingdom of Siam have varied much at different periods of its history. The boundary between Burma and N. W. Siam was delimited in 1891. By the Anglo-French Convention of April, 1904, the agreement of 1896 was confirmed, and its provisions more clearly defined, the territories to the west of the Menam and the Gulf of Siam being recognised as in the British sphere, and those to the east in the French. In 1904, the Luang Prabang territory to the west of the Mekong was acknowledged by Siam to belong to France, and the provinces of Maluprey and Barsak (west of the Mekong) were also transferred to French rule, so that an area of about 7,800 square miles passed from Siamese possession. On March 23, 1907, a new boundary in this region was accepted by Siam whereby the provinces of Battambang, (Siamese, Pratabong) Siem Rap, and Sisophon were ceded to France, while the strip of coast to the south with the port of Krat returned to Siam. At the same time a rectification of the boundary was made in the Luang Prabang region, whereby a tract of the Laos country was restored to Siam. By these arrangements the territory of Cambodia is increased by about 7,000 square miles. The treaty also provides for the future jurisdiction of the Siamese courts over all French Asiatic subjects and protégés in Siam, under certain conditions.

A treaty for a modification of British extra-territorial rights in Siam and for the cession of the Siamese tributary States of Kelantan, Trengganu and Kedah to Great Britain was signed at Bangkok on March 10, 1909. A new general and a new commercial treaty between Great Britain and Siam were signed on July 14, 1925, and ratified May 10, 1926, giving Siam full jurisdictional and fiscal autonomy, subject to certain limitations. The three states have an area of about 15,000 square miles, and a population estimated at over 600,000, of whom about 300,000 are in Kelantan.

The area of Siam is 200,148 square miles, about 45,000 being in the Malay Peninsula. The first detailed census in Siam was taken in 1905, but included only 12 of the circles or Monthons. The first census of the whole country was taken in 1909.

The census figures for 1911-12 gave a population of 8,266,408. According to the revised census figures for 1919-20 the population was 9,207,355, of whom 4,599,662 were males, and 4,607,693 females. The following table gives the details for each circle:—

Of the total population the 'Thai' number well over 8,000,000.

The estimated population for 1925-26 is 9,831,000.

In 1927-28 the deck passengers arriving in Bangkok by sea numbered 146,102, mostly from China; those departing numbered 63,765.

Religion and Education.

The prevailing religion is Buddhism. On March 31, 1926, there were 16,185 Buddhist temples, and 129,206 priests.

The Minister of Education is responsible for education throughout the country, with the exception of certain Departmental Schools, such as the Military, Naval, and Law Colleges, and the Police School, and of certain schools under direct Royal Patronage.

On March 31, 1925, Government schools numbered 343 (including 236 secondary departments) with 47,268 pupils and 1,958 teachers. There were also (1923-24), 65 special (technical) departments in Government schools, with 1,101 pupils, principally for the training of teachers. Local schools, run by the local authority but under Departmental inspection, numbered in 1924-25 4,707 with 527,603 pupils (of whom over 37 per cent. were girls) and 9,872 teachers. Private schools numbered 573, with 27,435 pupils and 1,446 teachers, including schools connected with American, French and English Missions. Over 90 per cent. of local schools and 60 per cent. of the Government schools are situated in Temples.

The Chulankarana University was inaugurated at Bangkok, in 1917, for medicine, political science, literature, engineering and natural science.

Up to March 31, 1925, the amount spent on works of development was: construction of railways, £14,054,821; irrigation, £1,804,921; Bangkok waterworks, £394,344.

A British officer occupies the position of Financial Adviser, and there are other British officers holding advisory positions under the Government, more especially in the Forests, Survey, Justice, Customs, Mining, and Education departments. There are also a number of Europeans of other nationalities in various Departments.

Defence.

Under the Military Service Act of 1917 every able-bodied man is liable to serve (a) two years with the colours; (b) seven years in the first reserve, with a maximum service of two months per annum; (c) ten years in the second reserve, with a maximum service of 30 days per annum; (d) five years in the third reserve, with a maximum service of 15 days per annum.

The army is divided into 10 Divisions, grouped into 3 Army Corps, and 1 independent division. Each division consists of 2 regiments of infantry, 1 regiment of either cavalry or chasseurs, 1 group of artillery, 1 company of machine guns, and 1 Ambulance Corps. The engineers are grouped into special regiments and are employed mainly in railway construction and the cadastral survey of Siam. Aviation schools were started in 1914, and a Flying Corps has been formed. It is chiefly employed in the development of civil aviation.

Siam maintains a small naval force, which consists of five gunboats, three destroyers (including the ex-British destroyer Radiant, renamed Phra Ruang), four torpedo-boats, the Royal yacht Maha Chakri, and various small craft; the ex-British sloop Havant, renamed Chow Phryya, serves as a sea-going training ship. There are 1,000 men available for service afloat and 1,000 marines, besides a reserve of 20,000.

At the mouth of the Menam River are the Paknam forts. The bar prevents ships of more than 13 feet draught from ascending to Bangkok. The naval arsenal dock has recently been reconstructed.

Expenditure on Defence for 1928-29 is estimated at 12,626,000 ticals for the army; 4,545,000 ticals for the navy; 4,000,000 ticals for the air services; total, 21,171,000 ticals.

Production and Industry.

Forced labour is still exacted from the rural population, but recent enactments have made calls for it far less frequent, and a poll-tax, varying in amounts in the different districts, is now levied on all adult males with practically no exemptions.

To the north of Bangkok, large tracts of land, formerly lying waste, have been opened up by the Royal Irrigation Department, which has connected by a canal the Menam and Bangpakong rivers, and has constructed numbers of smaller canals. In 1916 the Government, acting on the advice of an irrigation expert lent by the Government of India, started work on the Prasak South Canal Project. Actual irrigation from these works commenced in 1922. The area to be protected is estimated at 100,000 hectares.

The chief produce of the country is rice, which forms the national food and the staple article of export. The figures of the rice crop for the last three years are as follows: 1925-26, area, 5,967,156 acres, yield, 4,159,824 tons; 1926-27, area, 6,691,928 acres, yield, 5,184,560 tons; 1927-28, area, 7,319,376 acres, yield, 4,527,872 tons. In Bangkok and district there are some 80 rice mills.

The live-stock on March 31, 1926, consisted of 8,389 elephants, 247,158 horses and ponies, 4,013,882 bullocks, and 4,216,127 buffaloes.

Much of Upper Siam is dense forest, and the cutting of teak is an important industry, almost entirely in British hands. Siam teak wood is mainly produced in the north of Siam, the dry logs being floated by river to Bangkok during the rainy months of the year. In 1927-28 the exports of teak amounted to 70,281 tons, valued at 904,295*l*. The forests are under the control of a Siamese conservator, aided by several British officers. Planting of rubber trees is proceeding in the Malay Peninsula, exports of rubber during the past 6 years having averaged about 500,000*l*.

The mineral resources of Siam are extensive and varied, including tin, tungsten, wolfram, coal and iron, zinc, manganese, antimony, probably quicksilver. Tin mining on a considerable scale is pursued on the island of Phuket (or Junk Ceylon) and also in the northern portion of the province of Puket at Renong on the mainland, and the ore is found in ever-increasing quantities in other parts of the Siamese portion of the Malay Peninsula, where also wolfram is now being extracted in considerable quantity. The total output of metallic tin in 1924-25 was 133,588 piculs (7,952 tons); in 1925-26 was 132,481 piculs (7,885 tons); in 1926-27 was 170,348 piculs (10,140 tons); in 1927-28 was 10,844 tons.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of the Kingdom for the past four years is as follows :—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Year.	Imports.	Exports.

Shipping and Communications.

In 1927-28, 1,183 vessels of 1,277,485 tons entered and 1,183 of 1,279,374 tons cleared the port of Bangkok. Of those entering 260 of 363,074 tons and of those clearing 261 of 363,937 tons were British.

On March 31, 1927, 1,701 miles of State Railways were open to traffic and 211 miles were under construction. The Northern Line runs through Nakorn Lampang to Chiangmai, the extreme northern terminus. The Southern Line runs from Bangkok down the Peninsula to the frontier station of Padang Besar, where it connects with the Federated Malay States Railway from Penang, and to Singapore. Another line branching off from Haad Yai runs along the East Coast of the Peninsula to Sungei Golok, where it connects with the Federated Malay States Line. There are branches to Singora, Nakorn, Sritamaraj and Kantang. The North-Eastern Line is being extended from Korat to Khonkaen. The Korat-Ubol line has now been opened to traffic as far as Buriram. The extension from Krabinburi, the present terminus of the Eastern Line, to Aranya Pradesa on the Cambodian frontier was completed in 1927. Since January 1922, a through express service between Bangkok and Penang has been introduced, the distance being traversed in 34 hours. A similar service between Bangkok and Chiangmai on the Northern Line was inaugurated in November, 1922, the journey being accomplished in 26 hours. Arrangements have been made, and the work is proceeding, for the construction of a railway bridge across the Menam Chao Phraya, whereby the system on the east bank of the river and the Southern Railway system will be linked together. All State Railways are under one management. Gross earnings of the State Railways in 1926-27 were 16,857,040 baht; working expenses, 6,437,725 baht; and net profit, 10,419,315 baht. The number of passengers carried was 6,095,327, and total goods carried 1,113,276 tons.

Private lines of an aggregate length of 66 miles include those (worked by companies) from Bangkok to Paknam at the mouth of the Menam, and from Bangkok to Tachin and Meklong on the coast to the west of the Menam, also from Thonburi to Bang Bua Thong, together with a tramway connecting the Northern Line (Northern branch) with Phrabat.

In 1925-26 there were 455 post offices and agencies. The inland mail matter received at the different offices for delivery consisted of 3,764,183 letters, 2,479,230 post cards, 3,553,719 pieces of printed matter, and 395,373 pieces of other postal matter. For foreign countries the returns of mails dispatched were 512,252 letters, 35,676 post cards, 109,161 printed matter, 22,603 other postal matter. Foreign letters received 981,459, post cards 93,756, printed matter 772,642, other postal matter 153,751.

There were (1925-26) 318 telegraph offices. Number of inland telegrams 135,575, of foreign telegrams, 106,478 dispatched and 154,603 received. Length of line, 4,390 miles; length of wire, 7,535 miles.

There were (1926) seven telephone exchanges, and 1,935 instruments. A complete set of new instruments from Sweden for the telephone exchange in Bangkok were installed in 1919.

Three wireless stations on the Telefunken system have been erected, one at Bangkok, one at Singora, and one at Koh-Khan. The two former are under the control of the Siamese naval authorities, the third under that of the Post and Telegraph Department.

A new high-powered station, also on the Telefunken system, is at present in course of erection at Bangkok. It is expected that it will be open in the course of the year 1928.

Money, Weights and Measures.

In Bangkok there are branches of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, the Chartered Bank of India, the Banque de l'Indo-China, the Mercantile Bank of India, and the Bank of Canton. A number of Chinese Banks have established branches here during recent years. There is also a branch of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China at Puket. A Siamese bank, formerly with a German but now with a British manager, was established under Royal Charter in 1906, with the name of the Siam Commercial Bank, Limited. The Government in 1902 began to issue currency notes (5, 10, 20, 100 and 1,000 ticals, and since October, 1918,

1 tical notes). On March 31, 1903, there were 181,203½ worth of currency notes in circulation; on March 31, 1927, 69,996,446½. The currency notes are temporarily inconvertible.

On April 1, 1913, the Siamese Treasury Savings Bank was opened with 529 depositors. By March 31, 1927, the number was 13,649, with a total deposit of 191,906½.

Under the Currency Act of May, 1928, the unit of currency is the baht, divided into one hundred satang. The baht is a silver coin like the tical (a word of foreign origin) which it replaces, and is equivalent to 0·66567 grammes of fine gold, corresponding to a rate of 11 bahts for 1£ sterling. Other silver coins will be 50 satang and 25 satang pieces. The 10 and 5 satang pieces will be nickel, and the 1 satang piece, bronze. Notes and baht coins are legal tender without limit as to amount; 5 and 25 satang pieces legal tender up to 5 baht, and nickel and bronze coins legal tender up to 1 baht. The following are the denominations of the notes to be used, one, five, ten, twenty, one hundred and one thousand baht.

In 1924 a law was passed for the introduction of the metric system as optional in 1925, to become compulsory in 1930. The metric system has already been adopted in many of the Government departments and on State Railways. The customary measures of weight are:—1 Tical = 15 grams or approximately ½ oz.; 4 Ticals = 1 Tambling (60 grams or 2½ oz.); 20 Tamlungs = 1 Chang (1·2 kilograms or 2 lb. 10·3 oz.); 1 Picul or Hap = 60·48 kilograms = 133½ lb. = 100 Catties of 1½ lb., which is the catty usually used in commerce.

The unit of length is the Wah. The measures of length are:—1 Niew = 83 inches; 12 Niu = 1 Keub (10 inches); 2 Keup = 1 Sauk (20 inches); 4 Sauk = 1 Wah (80 inches); 20 Wah = 1 Sen (133 feet); 400 Sen = 1 Fote (10 miles, roughly). For square measure the unit is the Rai = 39 acres, and for capacity the kanahn = ½ litre.

Government and Constitution.

I. CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The present Constitution of Spain, drawn up by the Government and laid before a Cortes Constituyentes, elected for its ratification, March 27, 1876, was proclaimed June 30, 1876. It enacts that Spain shall be a constitutional monarchy, the executive resting in the King, and the power to make laws 'in the Cortes with the King.' The Cortes are composed of a Senate and Congress, equal in authority. There are three classes of senators—first, senators by their own right, or Senadores por derecho propio; secondly, life senators nominated by the Crown—these two categories not to exceed 180; and thirdly, 180 senators, elected by the Corporations of State—that is, the communal and provincial States, the church, the universities, academies, &c.—and by the largest payers of contributions. Senators in their own right are the sons, if any, of the King and of the immediate heir to the throne, who have attained their majority; Grandees who are so in their own right and who can prove an annual renta of 60,000 pesetas, or 2,400*l.*; captain-generals of the army; admirals of the navy; the Primate of Spain; the Patriarca de las Indias (the 'Patriarch of West Indies'), i.e., the Bishop of Sion (head chaplain of the Royal Household) and the arch-bishops; the presidents of the Council of State, of the Supreme Tribunal, and of the Supreme Council of War and of the Navy after two years of office. The elective senators must be renewed by one-half every five years, and by totality every time the Monarch dissolves that part of the Cortes. The Congress is formed by deputies 'named in the electoral Juntas in the form the law determines,' in the proportion of one to every 50,000 souls of the population. According to a law of August 8, 1907, voting is compulsory for all males over the age of 25: with a few unimportant exceptions. This law further enacts that all such voters must be registered on the voting list, possess full civil rights, and must have been residents of a Municipal district for at least 2 years. Ministers, by a law passed in 1928, will in future receive a salary of 50,000 pesetas. The Monarch has the power of convoking, suspending, or dissolving Parliament; but in the latter case a new Cortes must sit within three months. The Monarch appoints the president and vice-presidents of the Senate from members of the Senate only; the Congress elects its own officials. The Monarch and each of the legislative chambers can take the initiative in the laws. The Congress has the right of impeaching the ministers before the Senate.

The Constitution of June 30, 1876, further enacts that the Monarch is inviolable, but his ministers are responsible, and that all his decrees must be countersigned by one of them. The Cortes must approve his marriage before he can contract it, and the King cannot marry any one excluded by law from the succession to the crown. Should the lines of the legitimate descendants of the late Alphonso XII. become extinct, the succession shall be in this order—first, to his sisters; next to his aunt and her legitimate descendants; and next to those of his uncles, the brothers of Fernando VII., 'unless they have been excluded.' If all the lines become extinct, 'the nation will elect its Monarch.'

The executive is vested, under the Monarch, in a Council of Ministers.

On September 15, 1923, as a result of the action taken by Lieut.-General Don Miguel Primo de Rivera y Orbaneja, Marquis de Estella, a Royal Decree was published appointing Marquis de Estella Chief of the Government and President of a Military Directory, charged with the government of the State.

On December 8, 1925, the Military Directory was superseded by a Civil Government, under the presidency of Lieut.-General Primo de Rivera, and composed of members of the new political party, the 'Union Patriótica.'

The Government was constituted as follows on November 3, 1928:—

President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Primo de Rivera.

Minister of Justice and Worship.—Señor Galo Ponte.

Minister of the Army.—Gen. Julio Ardanaz.

Minister of Marine.—Rear-Admiral Mateo Garcia de Los Reyes.

Minister of Finance.—Señor Calvo Sotelo.

Minister of the Interior.—Gen. Martinez Anido.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Señor Callejo.

Minister of Public Works.—Count of Guadalquivir.

Minister of Labour.—Señor Aunos.

Member of National Economy.—Count of Los Andes.

Parliament was dissolved by a Royal Decree of September 16, 1923, but a National Assembly, which is not a legislative but a consultative body, was convoked by Royal Decree of September 12, 1927, and sat for the first time on October 10. The new Regulations of the National Assembly (definitely approved by Royal Decree of December 5, 1928) fixes a maximum limit of 400 members, and further enacts that the Government will not be obliged to make new appointments of members except when its number is less than 325. At present it is composed of 375 members, including 16 women, and is divided into 18 special committees. The Assembly consists of 49 municipal representatives, 49 provincial representatives, 49 members of the Patriotic Union, 170 representatives of the State, 95 of whom are appointed by the Government from all branches of administrative bodies and corporations, and 75 by virtue of their office (such as Archbishops and Bishops, Captains-General, Presidents of the Council of State and of the Law Courts, and Governors of Banks). The remaining members up to 400—that is, 83—are directly chosen by the Government from among the industries, trades, agriculture, and all branches of national activities. The mandate of the Assembly is for three years.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Since January 1, 1918, every commune has its own elected Ayuntamiento, consisting of from five to fifty Regidores, or Concejales, and presided over by the Alcalde, at whose side stand, in the larger towns, several Tenientes Alcaldes. The entire municipal government, with power of taxation, is vested in the Ayuntamientos. Half the members are elected every two years, and they appoint the Alcalde, the executive functionary, from their own body. Members cannot be re-elected until after two years. Each province of Spain has its own Assembly, the Diputación Provincial, the members of which are elected by the constituencies. The Diputaciones Provinciales meet in annual session, and are permanently represented by the Comisión Provincial, a committee appointed every year. The Constitution of 1876 secures to the Diputaciones Provinciales and the Ayuntamientos the government and administration of the respective provinces and communes. Neither the national executive nor the Cortes have the right to interfere in the established municipal and provincial administration except in the case of the action of the Diputaciones Provinciales and Ayuntamientos going beyond the locally limited sphere to the injury of general and permanent interests. In the Basque provinces self-government has been almost abolished since the last civil war, and they are ruled as the rest of Spain but, unlike the rest of the provinces, certain 'fueros,' or exemptions, are granted to them. In 1925 a new statute of exemptions came into force.

By a Royal Decree of September 30, 1923, all the Mayors and Municipal Councils in Spain were dismissed from their posts, and replaced by Members of the Associated Councils of Householders.

An important innovation introduced in Municipal Administration is the Royal Decree of May 8, 1924, by which a law was passed establishing the Estatuto Municipal, governing the organisation and administration of Municipalities in future.

The new Statute tends to give to Municipalities their maximum independence. By its means the different Ayuntamientos are now authorised to determine the organisation that will best suit them.

Female suffrage has been granted, and all women householders are allowed to vote and to be elected. The voting age has been reduced to 23 years for both males and females. A special corporative vote has also been established for Guilds and other corporations.

Area and Population.

Continental Spain has an area of 190,050 square miles, but including the Balearic and Canary Islands and the Spanish possessions on the north and west coast of Africa, the total area is 194,800 square miles. The growth of the population has been as follows:—

Census year	Population	Increase	Rate of annual increase
1857	15,464,840	—	—
1860	15,655,467	191,127	0.44

The population of Ceuta (39,078) is included in that of Cádiz. Besides Ceuta, Spain has, on the African Coast, the Alhucema isles (pop. 322), the Chafarinas (320), Melilla (60,142), Peñon de la Gomera (398), Rio de Oro (253), and Nador (3,958). The North African possessions are no longer used as convict stations, the centuries old 'Presidios' having been suppressed by a recent Decree and the prisoners brought back to the Peninsula. The Basques in the North, numbering some 400,000, differ in race and language from the rest of Spain.

The following were the estimated populations of the principal towns on December 31, 1927, viz. :—

Town	Pop.	Town	Pop.	Town	Pop.

1925	158,849	644,693	432,164	212,529
1926	159,548	657,229	421,762	235,467
1927	160,023	659,048	419,632	239,416

Emigration figures for 4 years as follows :—

Year	Male	Female	Total	Year	Male	Female	Total
1924	83,480	38,079	121,559	1926	50,972	29,767	80,739
1925	60,670	33,276	93,946	1927	48,544	28,339	76,883

Emigration from Spain is chiefly to Argentina, Cuba, Brazil, Uruguay, and Mexico.

Religion.

The national Church of Spain is the Roman Catholic, and the whole population of the kingdom adhere to that faith, except a small number of Protestants, Jews, Rationalists, etc. Liberty of worship is now allowed to Protestants and all other religious bodies. Within the Peninsula, apart from Portugal, there are 9 metropolitan sees and 51 suffragan sees, the chief being Toledo. The Constitution requires the nation to support the clergy and the buildings, etc., of the Church, and for this purpose the State expended 62,798,945 pesetas in 1927. The relations between Church and State are regulated by the Concordat of May 6, 1851, and although it is laid down in this that only the orders of San Vicente de Paul, and Felipe Neri, with one other to be subsequently named, should be permitted in Spain, many other orders have been allowed to establish themselves. The communities of the religious orders are numerous and influential in Spain. Many of them have schools, and about 9,000 of their members are engaged in teaching boys of the upper and middle classes, while, within many of their establishments, industries of all kinds are carried on. The number of religious houses in Spain in 1927 was 4,698, of which 970 are for men and 3,728 for women. Of those for men, 543 are devoted to education, 107 to charity, 8 to industries, 215 to the training of priests, and 90 to a contemplative life. The total number of monks is about 12,219 (including 1,510 foreigners). The orders for women comprise 1,446 for education, 1,339 for charity, and 889 for a contemplative life. The number of nuns is about 52,895 (including 2,323 foreign women). In 1927 there were in Spain 66 cathedrals, 22 collegiate churches, 20,250 parish churches, and 17,186 chapels and sanctuaries.

Education.

The latest census returns (1920) show that 46·28 per cent. of the population could read and write, 0·94 could read only, and 45·46 per cent. could neither read nor write. The remaining 7·32 per cent. corresponds to the infant population under 6 years.

By a law of 1857 an elaborate system of primary education was ordained: education was to be compulsory, there was to be a primary school for every 500 inhabitants, and instruction was to be on a uniform plan. This system has not been rigidly enforced, but various improvements have been effected, especially by a law of June 9, 1909, which made education obligatory. The country is divided into eleven educational districts, with the universities as centres. The public and primary schools are since 1902 supported by the Government; the total sum spent in 1925-26 was 104,406,650 pesetas. Most of the children are educated free.

On Jan. 1, 1926, there were 28,870 public schools, and about 5,500 private schools, the total number of pupils being about 3,000,000. Secondary education is conducted in 'institutions,' or middle-class schools, and there must be at least one of them in every province. There are at present 60 institutions with 74,273 pupils. These institutions prepare for the universities, of which there are eleven, attended by 31,562 students. The universities are at Barcelona, Granada, Madrid, Murcia, Oviedo, Salamanca, Santiago, Sevilla, Valencia, Valladolid, and Zaragoza. There are, besides, a medical and science faculty at Cádiz in connection with the University of Seville, and in the Canary Islands an educational establishment dependent on the University of Seville. In 1927 the total sum expended on education and the fine arts was 166,141,510 pesetas.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by Tribunales and Juzgados (Tribunals and Courts), which conjointly form the Poder Judicial (Judicial Power). Judges and Magistrates cannot be removed, suspended or transferred except as set forth by law.

The Judicature is composed of:—1 Tribunal Supremo (Supreme High Court); 15 Audiencias Territoriales (Divisional High Courts); 50 Audiencias Provinciales (Provincial High Courts); 522 Juzgados de Primera Instancia (Courts of First Instance); and 9,310 Juzgados Municipales (District Court, or Court of Lowest Jurisdiction held by Justices of the Peace).

The Tribunal Supremo consists of a President, three Courts of Justice and one for administrative purposes; it is empowered with disciplinary faculties; is Court of Cassation in civil and criminal trials; decides in first and second instance disputes arising between private individuals and the State; and hears criminal causes against Princes of the Royal Family, Cabinet Ministers, and Presidents of the Senate and Congress.

The Audiencias Territoriales have power to try in second instance before the changes of 1923, sentences passed by judges in civil matters, and in first instance all criminal trials of the province.

The Audiencias Provinciales are Courts competent to try and pass sentence in first instance on all cases filed for delinquency. In the most important, evidence was taken by a jury composed of twelve lay judges. But since the advent of the Military Directorate, the jury system has been suppressed.

The Juzgados Municipales are constituted of a Judge and two Deputy Judges. This Court is competent to try small civil cases not exceeding 500 pesetas (£20) in value, and petty offences.

On July 1, 1925, the 'Court of Minors' (Tribunal de Niños) was established for trying cases of delinquency of boys and girls from 9 to 18 years of age.

Old Age Pensions and Social Insurance.

By a law dated February 27th, 1908, the 'Instituto Nacional de Prevision' was created for the purpose of granting Old Age Pensions, and administering a system of social insurance. The funds of the Institution are made up of an endowment, annual State subsidy, and private and public donations. The maximum annual pension obtainable is 1,500 pesetas (£60). The number of old-age pensions available up to December 31, 1927, was 173,461, and 366,456 for infants, a total of 539,917 pensions.

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service in Spain is compulsory. The total term of service is for 18 years. The law in force (Decree of February 20, 1925) provides for active service in the army to be for 2 years, and the other standings are to be distributed over the remaining 16 years. Exemptions are more frequent than formerly.

In January, 1916, a central general staff of the army was appointed. The country is divided into 7 territorial districts, each under a 'Captain-General,' the area of the Balearic and Canary Islands, and the Moroccan area. The strength of the active army during 1928 was 13,434 officers and 100,000 other ranks, and 32,000 gendarmérie, total 167,741, organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regts.	Battalions	Squadrons	Batteries

<sup>1</sup> Includes 5 fortress and 3 coast regiments.

For 1929, 43,792 recruits were called to the colours.

For the units of the second line, or reserve troops, there are at present 116 battalion cadres, 14 squadron cadres, and 14 battery cadres. The second line troops are intended to provide 7 divisions of about 13,000 combatants each. Total about 90,000.

There are also the Guardia Civil and the Carabineros. The former is a constabulary, and the latter a military police used as Customs guard on the frontier. Both are recruited from the army and under military discipline. The total strength of the Guardia Civil for 1928 is as follows:—Infantry, 21,027; cavalry, 5,283. Carabineros: Infantry, 15,027; cavalry, 450.

The troops in the Balearic and Canary Islands are mostly recruited from the islanders. In Africa the troops are partly Spanish and partly native, and are always on a war footing. At the close of the year 1927, the total pacification of the Spanish zone at Morocco was complete. The number of troops there is at present 87,856 men, of whom about one-third are native troops.

The Spanish infantry is armed with the Mauser rifle, model 1893. Calibre .275. The cavalry have the Mauser carbine. The field artillery gun is a Schneider Canet 14½ pr. of 19106.

Spain has several fortresses which guard the frontiers and the coast. On the Western Pyrenees, Oyarzun and Pamplona; on the central Pyrenees, Jaca; and on the eastern Pyrenees, Gerona; on the Portuguese side, Badajoz (an old fortification); and finally on the coast, Ferrol, Cádiz, Cartagena, Mahon (Balearic Islands) and Ceuta (Africa).

There are 1 flotilla leader, 7 destroyers, 22 modern torpedo boats, 14 gunboats, and 14 submarines.

The dockyard at Ferrol is worked by a British syndicate, employing Spanish workmen. A third cruiser of the Principe Alfonso type (Miguel de Cervantes) is completing here, and two of a larger type (Baleares and Canarias) have recently been laid down. Five more flotilla leaders are under construction at Cartagena. Two submarines are also in hand at the latter yard. In addition, the construction of 12 more submarines and 10 destroyers has been authorised.

A naval wireless telegraphic station, Telefunken system, with a range of 300 miles, is situated at San Fernando (Cadiz). There are also wireless stations at Cartagena and Ferrol. A naval flying service is at work.

For 1929 the strength of the navy was fixed at 14,364 sailors and 2,673 marines. Total number of officers in active service in the navy, including all departmental corps: 1,881. Reserve: 303.

Production and Industry.

Spain is a preponderantly agricultural country. The productive area was calculated at 45,695,000 hectares (113,987,500 acres) or 90·4 per cent., and the remainder, 4,856,688 hectares (12,141,720 acres) or 9·6 per cent., as being unproductive. A large part of the productive area is not under direct cultivation, but in recent years modern methods and up-to-date machinery are being employed.

Of the total area of Spain (50,451,688 hectares, or 126,129,220 acres), the area under production in 1924 was 22,429,323 hectares (or 56,073,307 acres), an increase of 726,443 hectares (1,816,107 acres) over the last census. The area devoted to pasture and mountains occupies 24,055,547 hectares (60,138,876 acres), as in the last census, while the area classed as unproductive for agriculture is reduced to 3,969,618 hectares (9,924,045 acres), having decreased 633,643 hectares (1,584,107 acres) from the last census.

In 1921, 1,622,122 hectares (4,055,805 acres) were devoted to olive culture (3·2 per cent.); 1,333,781 hectares (3,334,452 acres) to vineyards (2·6 per cent.); 433,711 hectares (1,084,277 acres) to fruit (0·86 per cent.); and 15,410,072 hectares (38,525,180 acres) to agriculture and gardens (30·54 per cent.). In 1920 the alienation of rural property was calculated at 431,002 estates representing a value of 793,482,525 pesetas; and of urban property, 120,143 estates of a value of 888,755,650 pesetas.

The area under the principal crops and the yield (for 3 years) were as follows:—

	Area.			Yield.
	1926	1927	1928	1926	1927	1928

In 1927, 3,452,670 acres were under vines (3,453,755 acres in 1926) and produced 10,145,804,460 pounds of grapes (6,094,350,900 pounds in 1926), yielding ordinary red and white wines to the extent of 748,351,573 gallons (416,050,938 gallons in 1926). In 1925-26 there were 468,270 orange trees planted and 219,518 lemon trees, yielding 23,430,096 cwts. of oranges and 949,202 cwts. of lemons, showing an aggregate value of 232,402,148 pesetas (oranges) and 9,092,955 pesetas (lemons). In 1926, 178,406 acres of beet root sugar planted yielded 36,447,058 cwts., producing a value of 147,947,926 pesetas. In 1926, 741,306 acres of potatoes planted yielded 63,299,756 cwts., producing a value of 620,432,022 pesetas. In 1926, 56,965 acres of onions planted yielded 10,510,774 cwts., producing a value of 61,845,546 pesetas. In 1927-28 there were 157,808,602 olive trees planted, covering an area of 4,214,469 acres, yielding 70,331,648 cwts. of olives and 13,312,776 cwts. of oil. 7,036,514 almond trees planted in 1926-27, covering an area of 377,448 acres, produced 1,941,830 cwts. of almonds of a total value of 107,485,973 pesetas. Hazel nut trees planted in 1926-27 amounted to 2,287,322, covering an area of 29,988 acres, and produced 440,932 cwts. of nuts of a total value of 32,826,686 pesetas. Other products are esparto, flax, hemp, pulse; oranges and hazel nuts are largely exported, and Spain has important industries connected with the preparation of wine and fruits. Silk culture is carried on in Valencia, Murcia, and other provinces (843,424 kilos were produced in 1926). There are 26 cane sugar factories and 48 beet-root sugar factories in Spain. The production in 1925 of the former was 8,704 metric tons and of the latter 95,986 metric tons. In 1926, the total number of resinous pine-trees amounted to 8,587,579. The total number of alcohol factories in 1925 was 6,266, producing brandy and spirituous liquors to the extent of 25,873,992 gallons. Beer factories in operation amounted to 43; yielding 11,480,320 gallons.

The number of farm animals in 1925 was estimated as follows:—Horses, 697,678; mules, 1,286,360; asses, 1,077,377; cows, 3,794,029; sheep, 20,067,209; goats, 4,749,463; pigs, 5,267,328; camels (Canary Islands), 4,268.

Spain is rich in minerals. Iron is abundant in the provinces of Vizcaya, Santander, Oviedo, Navarra, Huelva, and Seville; copper in the provinces of Seville, Córdoba, and Huelva; coal is found in Oviedo, Leon, Gerona, Valencia, and Córdoba; zinc in Santander, Murcia, Guipúzcoa, and Vizcaya; cobalt in Oviedo; lead in Murcia, Jaen, and Almería; manganese in Oviedo, Huelva, and Seville; quicksilver in Ciudad Real and Oviedo; silver in Guadalajara; sulphate of soda in Burgos; salt in Guadalajara; sulphur in Murcia and Almería; phosphorus in Cáceres and Huelva. Platinum is reported to have been discovered in Spain in 1915.

In 1927 workers employed in connection with the mining industries were as follows: 135,977 men, 3,717 women, and 16,879 boys and girls under 18. The total value of the mineral output in 1927 was 416,902,801 pesetas at the pit mouth, there being 2,500 productive mining concessions covering an area of 303,465 hectares. Mining accidents caused 204 deaths. The number of factories engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries amounted to 896 in 1927 (701 in 1926), with a total output of 997,329,849 pesetas (918,979,850 in 1926). The quantities and values of the more important minerals in 1926 were as follows:—

Minerals	Metric tons	Value, Pesetas	Minerals	Metric tons	Value, Pesetas

The total production of cement in 1926 amounted to 1,183,443 metric tons. There are 22 important cement factories. In 1926, there were 298 hydro-electric power stations, developing 976,885 H.P.

Spain has considerable manufactures of cotton goods, principally in Catalonia. In 1923 there were (in Catalonia) about 750 undertakings employing 56,000 looms, with 2,000,000 spindles; in woollen manufactures there are 6,700 looms with 274,800 spindles. There are in Spain about 165 paper mills (production in 1922 was 37,080 metric tons, likewise in Catalonia), making writing, printing, packing and cigarette paper. There are 29 glass-making factories.

In the Spanish fisheries the total number of boats employed was, in 1921, 17,878, of which 1,520 are steamers; fishermen, about 130,000; and the value caught 344,438,920 pesetas, representing a total weight of 427,253 metric tons. The most important catches are those of sardines, tunny fish, and cod. In Spain there are 505 factories, with about 24,000 workmen, for the preparation of sardines and fish-preserves. The value of their output in 1923 was over 500 million pesetas.

Shipping and Navigation.

The merchant navy of the Kingdom contained on January 1, 1927, 1,763 steamers of 1,232,805 tons net, and 529 sailing vessels of 83,585 tons net. On January 1, 1928, steam and motor ships accounted for 1,127,037 tons, and sailing vessels for 73,394 tons.

Barcelona, Bilbao and Cadiz are the chief maritime centres.

The shipping entered and cleared at Spanish ports in two years was as follows :—

	1925		1926
	No.	Tons	No.	Tons
Entered :
With cargoes . . . . .	13,372	13,354,506	12,555	13,692,108

Total . . . . .	17,351	21,867,248	16,317	21,342,118

Of the vessels entered in 1925, 10,372 vessels of 10,872,067 tons (entered) were Spanish and 8,665 vessels of 8,044,265 tons (cleared) were Spanish.

Internal Communications.

In 1925 the total length of highways and roads in Spain was 86,988 kilometres (53,932 miles).

The total length of the railways in Spain in 1927 was 16,118 kilometres (10,010 miles), of which 11,684 kilometres (7,256 miles) are of normal gauge (1.67 metres, or 5.48 feet), and 4,434 kilometres (2,754 miles) are of varying gauges, chiefly 1 metre (3.28 feet). There are 15 kilometres (9 miles) of cogwheel and funicular lines. In 1925, 117,883,215 passengers were carried on the different lines, and 41,489,060 tons of goods transported (41,869,668 tons in 1926). In October, 1919, the first underground electric railway service in Spain (on the model of the London 'tubes') was inaugurated in Madrid, covering a distance of 5 kms. (3 miles). In June 1924 a second line was inaugurated covering a similar distance. Two more lines were opened in 1925. Barcelona inaugurated her first 'tube' on December 30, 1924. In 1926 the total length of electric tramways in Spain was 1,049 kilometres (650 miles).

The whole of the Spanish railways belong to private companies, but nearly all have obtained guarantees or subventions from the Government. These amounted in 1925 for all the different lines to 6,950,343 pesetas. The State tax on tickets and merchandise for the year 1925 amounted to 67,196,420 pesetas. There are 29 companies of normal gauge and 57 of narrow gauge, the most important being those in the North, with 3,681 kilometres (2,209 miles); Madrid-Saragossa-Alicante (system Antigua and Catalana), 3,664 kilometres (2,198 miles); Andaluces, 1,305 kilometres (783 miles); Madrid-Caceres-Portugal and West, 777 kilometres (487 miles); South of Spain, 397 kilometres (238 miles); La Robla to Valmaseda and Luchana (narrow gauge), 312 kilometres (187 miles); Medina-Zamora Orense and Vigo, 299 kilometres (199 miles); and Calatayud-Teruel-Valencia (Central de Aragon), 299 kilometres (199 miles). The official gauge of the principal Spanish railways has hitherto, for strategical reasons, been purposely kept different from that of France, and in consequence of this passengers are obliged to change trains at the frontier stations. The attempt made in 1892 to remedy this state of affairs was not successful. In January, 1914, however, a scheme was ordered to be drawn up for the construction of a standard-gauge railway with a double track from Madrid to the French frontier.

Recent legislation provides for a measure of State control of railways, the extent of which will depend, however, upon individual decisions of the railway companies. At present, with one or two exceptions of little importance, all the Spanish railways are under private ownership. Total length of line State-controlled is 365 kilometres (226 miles). In 1925 the 'Consejo Superior Ferroviario' (Supreme Council of Railways) was created, a State Department under control of the Ministry of Public Works.

British railways in Spain are: Great Southern of Spain (Lorca-Aguilas), 104 miles; Zatra-Huelva, 112 miles; West Galicia (Pontevedra-Santiago), 47 miles; Alcoy-Gandia (narrow gauge), 34 miles.

The Post Office carried in 1925, in the inland service, 482,950,061 correspondence of all classes; in the international service, 106,051,843 correspondence in general. There were 10,174 post-offices. Receipts, 81,216,602 pesetas; expenses, 57,006,282 pesetas.

The length of lines of telegraphs in Spain in 1925 was 50,808 kms.; the total number of interior messages sent and received was 20,717,285. International messages sent 1,285,168, received 1,242,097, transit 368,040. The number of telegraph offices was 2,944.

In October, 1924, the entire telephone system of Spain was taken over by the 'International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation' of New York, and a Spanish Company constituted 'Compañía Telefonica Nacional de España,' whose purpose will be to provide an automatic service throughout the urban system. On December 29, 1926, this service was inaugurated in Madrid, and the system is being rapidly installed all over the country. At the close of 1927 there were in service 1,612 centrals, employing over 120,000 telephones. Number of urban calls in 1927, 215,000,000; interurban calls, 5,000,000. Number of telephone messages during the year, 3,400,000.

The 'Compañía Nacional de Telegrafía sin Hilos' holds the Government concession for the Public Service with ships, and between the Peninsula and the Canary Islands, and the International Service with England, Italy, Austria, France, Switzerland, America and Germany, as well as various special Press Services. They have 10 wireless stations of the Marconi system.

There are three commercial air lines operating in Spain (1928):— (1) Madrid-Seville-Lisbon (2) the French line from Toulouse to Casa-blanca which touches Spain at Alicante (3) Madrid-Barcelona.

Banking and Credit.

On December 31, 1921, the existing contract between the Bank of Spain and the Government ended. On January 1, 1922, new regulations came into force, according to which the Government will participate in the net profits of the Bank, up to certain limits. The note issue was prorogued for another 25 years, up to December 31, 1946. The capital of the Bank was increased from 150,000,000 pesetas to 177,000,000 pesetas. After 5 years the Bank is authorised further to increase the capital, up to the limit of 250,000,000 pesetas.

On February 16, 1929, the position of the Bank was as follows:—

	1,000 Pesetas		1,000 Pesetas
Cash in hand		Property.	26,458
{ gold . . . . .	2,559,810	Capital and reserve . . . . .	242,000
{ silver . . . . .	767,078	Notes in circulation . . . . .	4,389,684
{ bronze . . . . .	8,980	Deposits and Accounts current . . . . .	1,112,617
Portfolio . . . . .	2,176,757	Discounts . . . . .	500,207
Public Treasury . . . . .	179,395
Advances to Treasury . . . . .	150,000

Savings bank deposits (Post Office and Ordinary) in Spain, December 31, 1927, amounted to 1,664,937,782 pesetas, distributed over 2,377,746 accounts. Post Office Savings Banks, which were created under the law of June 4, 1909, were opened on March 12, 1916. On December 31, 1927, there were 800,630 current accounts, representing 215,986,810 pesetas. Including the figures of the banks and such credit institutes as have Savings Departments, the total number of depositors on December 31, 1927, was 2,690,972, and the amount standing to their credit, 2,353,253,111 pesetas.

The nominal value of the money coined in Spain from 1868 to 1907 was: gold, 920,613,935 pesetas; silver, 1,330,589,807 pesetas. In 1905-07 no gold was coined; in 1906-07, no silver was coined. No coinage was struck during the years 1908 and 1909. In 1910, money coined to the value of 1,976,180 pesetas in 50 centime pieces (silver) to replace money retired from circulation. In 1911, 286,843 pesetas of 50 centime pieces were coined, as well as 60,286 pesetas of bronze centime pieces. In 1913, 1,429,149 pieces of 1 centime and 1,639,500 pieces of 2 centimes were coined. A new coin was put into circulation in 1925, consisting of a nickel piece representing 25 centimes; 2,000,000 pesetas were struck, and 2,000,000 pesetas in 50 centime pieces (silver) to replace money withdrawn from circulation. In 1927 the 2 pesetas coin was withdrawn from circulation.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Peseta of 100 Centesimos is of the value of a franc,  $9\frac{1}{2}d.$ , or 27 to 28 pesetas to the pound sterling.

Gold coins in use are 25, 20, 10, and 5-peseta pieces. Silver coins are 5-peseta, 2-peseta, 1-peseta, and 50-centime pieces.

Both gold and silver coins are of the same weight and fineness as the corresponding French coins. Under a law of July 29, 1908, the Government is withdrawing from circulation the spurious 5-peseta pieces which had become common. Gold coinage is not in general circulation.

Theoretically, there is a double standard of value, gold and silver, the ratio being  $15\frac{1}{4}$  to 1. But of silver coins only the 5-peseta piece is legal tender, and the coinage of this is restricted.

On January 1, 1859, the metric system of weights and measures was introduced in Spain. But, besides these, the old weights and measures are still largely used. They are:—The Quintal = 220·4 lb. avoirdupois; the Libra = 1·014 lb. avoirdupois; the Arroba, for wine =  $3\frac{1}{2}$  imperial gallons; for oil =  $2\frac{1}{4}$  imperial gallons; the Square Vara = 1·09 vara = 1 yard; the fanega =  $1\frac{1}{2}$  imperial bushel.

Colonies.

The area and population of the colonial possessions of Spain are approximately as follows:—

Colonial Possessions	Area: English square miles	Population
Possessions in Africa:
Rio de Oro and Adrar . . . . .	109,200	495
Ifni . . . . .	965	20,000
Spanish Guinea . . . . .	10,036	140,000
Fernando Po, Annobon, Corisco, Great Elobey, Little Elobey . . . . .	795	23,846
Spanish Morocco <sup>1</sup> . . . . .	7,700	600,000
Total, Africa . . . . .	128,696	784,341

For administrative purposes the Canary Islands are considered part of Spain. The area of the islands is 2,810 square miles, and their population 508,151.

Rio de Oro and Adrar, stretching from the Wadi Draa 29° N. and 11° 4' W. to Cape Blanco 20° 46' N. and 17° 3' W. Politically there are three zones:—(1) Colony of Rio de Oro, 26° N. to 20° 46' N., an area of 65,500 square miles; (2) the Protectorate, between 27° 40' N. and 26° N. bordered on the East by 8° 40' W., an area of 34,700 square miles; (3) the occupied territory, between 27° 40' N. and the Wadi Draa, an area of about 9,000 square miles, settled by various treaties, 1900 to 1912. The Colonies are under the governorship of the Canary Islands, with a sub-governor resident at Rio de Oro. The capital of this colony is Villa Cisneros (lat. 28° 46' 55" N., long. 18° 11' 13" west of Paris). There is no town called Rio de Oro, the name being applied to the arm of the sea and the colony generally. The budget for 1929 amounted to 6,947,274 pesetas. There is little or no agriculture. Fishing is the principal occupation of the inhabitants.

Ifni was ceded to Spain by Morocco in 1860. By the Franco-Spanish agreement of 1912 it extends along the West Coast of Morocco to the north of Wadi Draa, from Wad Nun on the south to Wad Bu Sedra on the north, and a distance of 15 miles inland from the coast. The occupation is purely nominal. Area, 965 square miles, population, 20,000. There are several small harbours and villages; the population is engaged in fishing, and in cultivating dates and garden produce.

The Spanish territory on the Gulf of Guinea extends from the Muni to the Campo river and the Cameroons, its eastern boundary being on the meridian of 11° 20' E. of Greenwich. The capital is Santa Isabel, in the Island of Fernando Po, with a population of 8,345. The principal mountain is known as the Pico de Santa Isabel, or Clarence Peak (9,185 feet). The island is considered one of the most fertile spots on the West Coast of Africa. The other possessions of Spain in the Gulf of Guinea comprise the Islands of Annobon ( $7\frac{1}{2}$  square miles), Little Elobey (22 acres), Great Elobey ( $\frac{3}{4}$  square mile) and Corisco ( $5\frac{1}{2}$  square miles), and the district of Río Muni on the mainland (9,470 square miles), the principal town of which is Bata. The coast region is low and marshy and contains vast forests. The vegetation is luxuriant and at places along the coast there are Spanish, French, and English factories. But there are no harbours and the rivers are all inaccessible to vessels. The population of Fernando Poo is 20,873. There are about 250 to 300 Europeans in the island, about 30 of these being British. The population of Little Elobey is 222. Great Elobey is covered with bush; its population is 123. Corisco has a population of 1,438 and Annobon of 1,204, while the population of Río Muni territory is estimated at 130 whites and 89,000 natives. All the colonies are under the control of a Governor-General, resident at Santa Isabel. A Sub-Governor is appointed to the district of Bata and another to the district of Elobey, which includes the Islands of Corisco and Annobon. The aborigines of Fernando Poo are called Bubis. Those of Elobey and Corisco are mostly of the Benga tribe, but like the people of Annobon they take the names of their respective islands. In Bata the Pamwes are the principal tribe. There are Catholic and American Presbyterian missions at work among the natives. Spain has given to France the right of pre-emption in case of the sale of any of these African colonies or the adjacent islands.

Brothers of the King.

I. Prince Oscar Bernadotte, Count of Wisborg, born Nov. 15, 1850. Renounced his succession to the throne and married, March 15, 1889, Ebba Munck of Fulkila, born Oct. 24, 1858.

II. Prince Carl, Duke of Västergötland, born Feb. 27, 1861. Married August 27, 1897, to Princess Ingeborg, born Aug. 2, 1878, daughter of King Frederik VIII. of Denmark. Issue, Princess Margaretha, born June 25, 1899 (married May 22, 1919, to Prince Axel of Denmark); Princess Märtha, born March 28, 1901, married on March 21, 1929, to Prince Olaf, of Norway; Princess Astrid, born Nov. 17, 1905 (married Nov. 4, 1926, to the Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium); and Prince Carl, born Jan. 10, 1911.

III. Prince Eugen, Duke of Närke, born Aug. 1, 1865.

King Gustaf V. is the fifth sovereign of the House of Ponte Corvo and great-grandson of Marshal Bernadotte, Prince of Ponte Corvo, who was elected heir-apparent of the crown of Sweden by the Parliament of the Kingdom, Aug. 21, 1810, and ascended the throne Feb. 5, 1818, under the name of Carl XIV. Johan. He was succeeded at his death, March 8, 1844, by his only son Oscar. The latter died July 8, 1859, and was succeeded by his eldest son Carl XV., at whose premature death without male children, the crown fell to his next surviving brother, the late King.

The royal family of Sweden have a civil list of 1,378,150 kronor. The sovereign, besides, has an annuity of 300,000 kronor, or 16,520*l.*, voted to King Carl XIV. Johan and his successors on the throne of Sweden.

Constitution and Government.

The fundamental laws of the Kingdom of Sweden are:—1. The Constitution or Regerings-formen of June 6, 1809; 2. The amended regulations for the formation of the Diet of June 22, 1866 (modified by acts passed in 1909–1925); 3. The law of royal succession of September 26, 1810; and 4. The law on the liberty of the press of July 16, 1812. The King must be a member of the Lutheran Church. His Constitutional power is exercised in conjunction with the Council of State or (in legislation) in concert with the Diet, and every new law must have the assent of the crown. The right of imposing taxes is, however, vested in the Diet. This Diet, or Parliament of the realm, consists of two Chambers, both elected by the people. The First Chamber consists of 150 members. Their election takes place by the members of the 'Landstings,' or provincial representations, and electors of six towns, not represented in the 'Landstings.' The constituencies are 19, arranged in 8 groups, in one of which an election takes place in September every year. The manner of the election is proportional and regulated by a special election law. All members of the First Chamber must be above 35 years of age, and must have possessed for at least three years previous to the election either real property to the taxed value of 50,000 kronor (2,777 l.), or an annual income of 3,000 kronor (166 l.). They are elected for the term of eight years. The Second Chamber consists of 230 members elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, every man and woman over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability, having the right to vote. The country is divided into 28 constituencies, in each of which one member is elected for every 230th part of the population of the Kingdom it contains. All men and women who are entitled to vote have the right to stand for election, but only in their own election areas. The method of election is proportional. The places to be given to the different groups of voting papers are decided according to the d'Hondt rule. The members of both Chambers obtain salaries, free of income tax, for their services, at the rate of 3,400 kr. (24 kr. a day) and 4,500 kr. (32 kr. a day) for members living in or outside the capital, for each ordinary session, or, in the case of an extra session, 24 or 32 kr. a day, besides travelling expenses. The salaries and travelling expenses of the deputies are paid out of the public purse.

The executive power is in the hands of the King, who acts under the advice of a Council of State, the head of which is the Minister of State. The Ministry (Conservative), appointed on October 2, 1928, is composed as follows:—

Minister of State (Premier).—Admiral Lindman.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Ernst Trygger.

Minister of Justice.—Georg Bismark.

Minister of Defence.—Harald Malmberg.

Minister for Social Affairs.—Sven Lubeck.

Minister of Communications.—Theodor Borell.

Minister of Finance.—Nils Wohlin.

Minister of Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs.—Claes Lindskog.

Minister of Agriculture.—J. B. Johansson.

Minister of Commerce.—Vilhelm Lundvik.

Ministers without Portfolio.—August Beskow and Nils Vull von Steijern.

All the members of the Council of State are responsible for the acts of the Government.

The second chamber, elected September, 1928: 73 Moderates, 27 of the Agrarian Party, 32 Liberals and members of the Liberal Democratic Party, 90 Socialists and 8 Communists. The upper chamber: 50 Moderates, 16 of the Agrarian Party, 31 Liberals and members of the Liberal Democratic Party, 52 Socialists, and 1 Communist.

The provincial administration is entrusted in Stockholm to a Governor, and in each of the 24 counties to a prefect, who is nominated by the King. As executive officers of the prefects there are 491 sub-bailiffs. The right of the people to regulate their own local affairs is based on the municipal laws of March 21, 1862. Each rural parish, and each town, forms a commune or municipality in which all men and women over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability, who have paid the local taxes for at least one of the preceding three years, are voters. In small communes and towns the ratepayers' assembly may itself decide on all questions of administration, police and communal economy. It may, however, elect a parish or town council to decide on the questions, and all communes with 1,500 inhabitants and over have to do so. These councils are named Kommunalfullmäktige in the country, and Stadsfullmäktige in the towns. Ecclesiastical affairs and questions relating to primary schools are dealt with by the parish assemblies, presided over by the pastor of the parish. Each county has a county council (Landsting) elected by men and women who enjoy municipal suffrage, and have completed their 27th year. Towns having a population of at least 1-150th of the total population of the realm, and towns already separated from the 'Landstings,' and where the number of inhabitants is not fallen below that which caused their separation, are administered separately by their municipal councils: these towns are Stockholm, Göteborg, Malmö, Norrköping, Helsingborg and Gävle. As in elections for the Diet, so in the elections of municipal representatives, of members of the 'Landstings,' &c., the method of election is proportional. Women are eligible for communal offices.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The first census took place in 1749, and it was repeated at first every third year, and subsequently, after 1775, every fifth year. At present, a general census is taken every ten years, besides which there are annual calculations of the people.

The area and population of Sweden, according to the census taken on December 31, 1920, and estimate for December 31, 1927, are as follows:—

Governments (Län)	Area: English square miles	Population Dec. 31, 1920	Population Dec. 31, 1927	Pop. per square mile 1927

In 1927 there were 2,990,205 males and 3,097,718 females.
The growth of the population has been as follows:—

Census year	Population	Increase per ct. per annum	Census year	Population	Increase per ct. per annum
1880	4,565,668	0.95	1910	5,522,403	0.73
1900	5,136,441	0.71	1920	5,904,489	0.89

With the exception of 30,247 Finns, 7,162 Lapps, and some thousands others, the Swedish population (1920) is entirely of the Scandinavian branch of the Aryan family.

On December 31, 1920, there were 22,811 foreigners in Sweden, including subjects of Finland 5,897, Germany 4,532, Norway 2,996, Denmark 2,730, Russia 1,885, the United States 1,072, the United Kingdom and Ireland 487, other states 3,212.

For occupational census, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1928, p. 1319.

Religion and Education.

The mass of the population adhere to the Lutheran Protestant Church, recognised as the State religion. There are 12 bishoprics (Uppsala being the metropolitan see) and 2,571 parishes at the beginning of 1928. At the census of 1920, the number of 'Evangelical Lutherans' was returned at 5,880,941, the Protestant Dissenters numbering, Baptists, 7,265, and Methodists, 5,452. Of other creeds, there were 3,425 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Stockholm), 6,469 Jews, and 937 others. No civil disabilities attach to those not of the national religion. The clergy are chiefly supported from the parishes and the proceeds of the Church lands.

The Kingdom has two universities, at Uppsala (founded in 1477) and Lund (founded in 1668), the former having 3,206 and the latter 2,210 students in the autumn of 1927. There are also a State faculty of medicine in Stockholm (founded in 1810), with 792 students, and private universities in Stockholm (founded in 1877), philosophical and law faculties, with 1,152 students, and Göteborg (founded in 1889), philosophical faculty, with 352 students. In Stockholm and Göteborg there are also academies of commerce. In 1927 there were 77 public secondary schools, with 27,899 pupils; 53 people's high schools, 3,581 pupils; 2 high and 7 elementary technical schools, about 2,900 pupils; military schools, navigation schools, agricultural schools, veterinary and other special schools; besides institutions and schools for the deaf-mutes and the blind. Public elementary instruction is gratuitous and compulsory (since 1842), and children not attending schools under the supervision of the Government must furnish proofs of having been privately educated. The school age is 7 to 14 years. In 1927 there were in the elementary schools, 26,847 teachers and 660,696 pupils.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice is entirely independent of the Government. Two functionaries, the Justitie-Kansler, or Chancellor of Justice, and the Justitie-Ombudsman, or Attorney-General, exercise a control over the administration. The former, appointed by the King, acts also as a counsel for the Crown; while the latter, who is appointed by the Diet, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law. The Kingdom, which possesses one Supreme Court of Judicature, is divided (beginning of 1928) into 3 high court districts and 211 district courts divisions, of which 89 are urban districts and 122 country districts.

Defence.

ARMY.

The military forces are recruited on the principle of universal service, but aided by a voluntarily enlisted personnel which forms the permanent cadres for training purposes. In June 1925 a new defence scheme was accepted by the Diet.

Liability to service commences at the age of 20, and lasts till the end of the 42nd year. The men belong to the first 'uppbåd' of the active army or Bevåring for 11 years; then for 4 years to the second 'uppbåd'; and finally for 8 years to the Landstorm. The initial period of training for the main part of the infantry is 90 days (150 days for 20 per cent. of the annual quota), 140 days for cavalry, horse and field artillery, and engineers. The infantry is called up for regimental training periods twice for 25 days each time (3 times for 20 per cent. of the annual quota). The cavalry, artillery and engineers have 2 training periods of 30 days.

The army is organised in 4 divisions and the separate troops of Upper Norrland and Gotland. In the eastern division there is 1 supplementary brigade. Each infantry regiment has 2 battalions. The establishment in 1928 was 2,802 officers and 7,282 N.C.O. and voluntarily enlisted men. There is besides that a draft conscriptives of about 24,500 men. Two drafts are called up simultaneously for regimental training periods.

The total number on the rolls amounts to about 600,000.

The strength of the reserve of officers and voluntarily enlisted men amounts to about 28,500, that of the Bevåring to about 400,000.

The Landstorm amounts to about 195,000 of all ranks.

The infantry is armed with the Mauser rifle (calibre 6.5 mm.) and light machine-gun, model 21 (calibre 6.5 mm.); the cavalry is armed with short rifle (Mauser, calibre 6.5 mm.), sword, and light machine-gun, model 21 (calibre 6.5 mm.): the horse and field artillery have the Krupp 7.5 cm. Q.F. gun. The field artillery has also 10.5 cm. howitzers. The heavy artillery is armed with 10 cm. gun and 15 resp. 21 cm. howitzers.

The military budget for 1928-29 amounts to 79,625,863 kronor for the army, and 349,060 kronor for the ministry of defence (common to the army and navy).

AIR FORCE.

The Swedish Air Force consists of a chief, an air staff, four flying corps, and several aviation training schools, bases, depôts, and factories.

NAVY.

The Swedish Navy is maintained principally as a coast-defence force.

The following is a list of the principal ships:—

There are 11 destroyers, 3 old torpedo-gunboats, 38 torpedo and vedette boats, one mining vessel, and 17 submarines, besides sundry depôt ships and small craft. The 1927 programme provides for the construction during 1928-32, 2 destroyers (laid down 1928), an aircraft tender (laid down 1928), 3 submarines (1 laid down 1928) and 4 motor vedette boats.

The personnel of the Royal Navy is divided into three classes, viz.: 1. The Active List; 2. The Reserve; 3. The Bevåring (Conscripts). On the active list are 5 flag-officers, 8 commodores, 35 captains, 111 commanders and lt.-commanders, 100 lieutenants, 46 sub-lieutenants, 518 warrant officers, and 3,094 petty officers and men, while about 360 officers belong to the Reserve. These figures exclude non-combatant branches.

On the active list of the Royal Coast Artillery are 1 general, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, 7 majors, 32 commanders and lieutenant-commanders, 34 lieutenants, 16 sub-lieutenants, 145 warrant officers, and 650 petty officers and men.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Sweden has always been an agricultural country. In 1751 only 9.5 per cent. of the population depended for a livelihood on the various industries and commerce; in 1870 the percentage had advanced to 12.3, in 1900 to 29.1, in 1910 to 37.8, and in 1920 to about 44.2 per cent., so that to-day the population of Sweden is about equally divided in the pursuit of agriculture on the one hand and commerce and industries on the other.

The number of farms in cultivation in 1919 was 428,026; of these there were of 2 hectares and under, 119,899; 2 to 20 hectares, 270,625; 20 to 100 hectares, 34,926; above 100, 2,576. Of the total land area of Sweden (41,058,000 hectares), 3,860,000 hectares are under cultivation, 923,000 hectares under natural meadows, and 24,584,000 hectares under forests, the products of which form a staple export.

The following table shows the area and yield of the chief crops for 2 years:—

Crop	Area (hectares)		Produce (tons)
	1927	1928	1927	1928
Wheat . . .	232,470	232,400	489,672	529,878

Hay . . .	1,907,900	1,907,900	6,187,978	5,834,872

The value of all crops was estimated in 1926 at 1,168 million kroner; in 1927 at 1,112 million kroner; and in 1928 at 1,153 million kroner. On June 1, 1920, the live-stock was estimated as follows: Horses, 728,000; head of cattle, 2,736,000; sheep and lambs, 1,568,000; pigs, 1,011,000.

A new census of agriculture was taken in the autumn of 1927, the result of which will be known in 1929.

II. MINES and MINERALS.

Mining has been from time immemorial the leading industry of Sweden, which was the biggest producer of iron in Europe until the use of coal for the manufacture of pig-iron revolutionized that industry. The lack of fossil fuel is the reason why at present mining in Lappland merely concerns itself with the raw products, though experiments made in recent years have carried the problem of electric production of iron ore a good step forward. There were raised in 1927, throughout the Kingdom, 9,660,977 tons of iron ore. The pig-iron produced amounted in 1927 to 417,765 tons, and the ingot iron to 499,414 tons. Of iron ore, in 1927, 10,715,765 tons, and of pig-iron 87,484 tons were exported. There were also raised in 1927, 7,428 tons of silver and lead ore, 217 tons of copper ore, 62,526 tons of zinc ore, 16,823 tons of manganese ore, 22,100 tons of auriferous arsenic ore, and 69,239 tons of sulphur pyrites. The lead produced amounted to 415,000 kilogram, the copper to 5,552,000, the zinc to 4,681,000, the tin to 6,000. No gold or silver was produced in 1927. There are not inconsiderable veins of coal in the southern parts of Sweden, giving 398,298 tons of coal in 1927. The most important produce of the Swedish quarries is paving stone; the amount produced for sale in 1927 had a value of 16,002,827 kronor, though unemployment then was very considerable. In 1927 there were 53,832 persons (2,560 young people under 18) engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries.

III. INDUSTRIES.

The industries of Sweden are spread fairly well over the whole country. The mining of iron ore has reached its highest perfection north of the Polar circle, and the most important sawmills are located along the shores of the Gulf of Bothnia. The production of iron and steel has taken place in central Sweden since the earliest times in Swedish history; pig iron is produced chiefly in Sandviken, Domnarvett, Uddeholm, and Fagersta. Cream separators, lighthouse apparatus, telephone supplies, motors, and many kinds of electrical machinery are among the highly specialised products of the metallurgical industries. The porcelain factories of Rörstrand and Gustavsberg and the glass factories of Kosta and Orrefors produce wares that have achieved a high reputation in the markets of the world. Innumerable factories for the production of finished products are scattered all over the countryside. Of the workmen employed in the industries of Sweden, those who reside in the country exceed in number the workmen who live in towns.

The timber and wood-work industries of Sweden are of great importance. The public forests have an area of 9,927,143 hectares, of which crown and ecclesiastical forests extend to 7,282,365 hectares. The latter yielded, in 1926, 5,216,750 cubic metres of timber. In 1927 there were in Sweden 1,332 sawmills and planing mills with 42,570 workers who turned out sawn or planed timber to the value of 338,873,000 kronor; 937 factories for joinery and furniture with 14,271 workers, the output for the year being valued at 78,760,000 kronor; 103 factories for wood-pulp with 18,325 workers, output 304,493,000 kronor; and 76 paper and pasteboard mills with 16,887 workers, output 199,788,000 kronor.

The following are some data for the most important Swedish industries:—

Branch of Industry	No. of establishments		Average No. of workers		Value of output (1,000 Kronor)

The total number of industrial factories (including mines and quarries) was in 1926, 12,905, and in 1927, 13,452. The total power used in industry amounted to 3,260,000 effective h.p. in 1926 and 3,333,000 effective h.p. in 1927.

In 1926, 304,404 men, 64,614 women, 27,744 boys, and 9,929 girls (under 18 years of age) were employed in factories.

IV. FISHERIES.

The total value of the Göteborg and Bohus fishing industry in 1927 was estimated at 13,253,000 kronor, a decrease of about 920,000 kronor below the value for 1926.

Commerce.

The total customs-duties levied in 1927 amounted to 151,709,000 kronor and in 1928 to 161,129,000 kronor.

The imports and exports of Sweden, unwrought gold and silver and coin not included, have been as follows (18'16 kronor = £1):—

A national Swedish trade-mark was introduced (1911) by Sveriges Allmänna Handelsförening (General Commercial Association of Sweden). The upper half of the mark shows the three royal Swedish crowns, on a light-blue ground, and the words 'Svensk Tillverkning' (Swedish manufacture) are shown on a light-yellow ground below.

The following table shows the value of the trade with the principal countries with which Sweden deals :—

Internal Communications.

At the end of 1927 the total length of railways in Sweden was 16,271 kilometres, of which 6,240 kilometres belonged to the State. The receipts of the State railways in 1927 were 195 million kronor, and expenses 159 million kronor. The total cost of construction for the State railways to the end of 1927 was 1,085 million kronor, and for private railways, 778 million kronor. The total number of passengers on the State railways was, in 1926, 27,922,000, and in 1927, 28,322,000; weight of goods, 16,568,000 tons and 17,772,000 tons; private railways, 37,940,000 passengers in 1926 and 37,991,000 in 1927; goods 21,175,000 tons and 23,974,000 tons. The line between Luleå and Riksgränsen (the Lapland iron ore line) is run by electric power, as is also, since summer, 1926, the line between Göteborg and Stockholm.

The length of the wires of the telegraph at the end of 1927 was 79,049 km., 34,405 km. of which belonged to the railways. The wires of the State telephone had a length of 847,380 km., the wires of the private telephone lines a length of only 11,877 km. The number of taxed telegraph messages sent in the year 1927 was 6,460,694, including 1,197,040 in transit. In 1927 there were 466,787 instruments (in Stockholm 123,207) employed in the telephone service, including only 5,721 private telephones.

The Swedish Post Office carried 713,196,545 letters, post-cards, journals, &c., in the year 1927. The number of post-offices at the end of the year was 3,796. The total receipts of the Post Office in 1927 amounted to 70,538,187 kronor, and the total expenditure to 56,982,919 kronor.

Banking and Credit.

The Riksbank, or National Bank of Sweden, belongs entirely to the State and is managed by directors elected for three years by the Diet, except one, the president, who is designated by the King. It is a bank of exchange to regulate financial relations with foreign countries; it accepts deposits of money, and on sufficient security it lends money for purposes in which there is no speculative element. The Bank is under the guarantee of the Diet, its capital and reserve capital are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and its assets in current accounts at home and abroad; but its actual circulation is kept far within this limit.

There are 9 conjointly responsible private banks and 21 joint-stock banks (December 1928). Since December 31, 1903, only the Riksbank has the right to issue notes.

The following table gives statistics of the National Bank, and private banks (joint-stock banks included) in Sweden for December 31, 1928 (18 16 kronor = 1 l.). :—

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a treaty signed May 27, 1873, with additional treaty of October 16, 1875, Sweden, Norway, and Denmark adopted the same monetary system. Since then the small money circulated in all the said countries. In 1924, when the money of the neighbouring countries became depreciated, it was found necessary to cease taking the Danish and Norwegian small coins as legal payment in Sweden. By a treaty still in force each of the three countries withdrew their own money from the other countries.

The Swedish Krona, of 100 öre, is of the value of 1s. 1½d., or about 18 kronor 16 öre to the pound sterling.

The gold 20-kronor piece weighs 8·960572 grammes, ·900 fine, containing 8·0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krona weighs 7·5 grammes, ·800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver. Iron coins were issued in 1917, 1918, and 1919; nickel coins from 1920.

The standard of value is gold. Gold coins, however, practically do not exist as a currency. National Bank notes for 5, 10, 50, 100, and 1000 kronor are legal means of payment, and the Bank is bound to exchange them for gold on presentation.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SWITZERLAND.

(SCHWEIZ.—SUISSE.—SVIZZERA.)

Constitution and Government.

I. CENTRAL.

ON August 1, 1291, the men of Uri, Schwyz, and Lower Unterwalden entered into a defensive League. In 1353 the League included eight members, and in 1513 thirteen. Various allied and subject territories were acquired either by single cantons or by several in common, and in 1648 the League became formally independent of the Holy Roman Empire, but no addition was made to the number of cantons till 1798. In that year, under the influence of France, the unified Helvetic Republic was formed. This failed to satisfy the Swiss, and in 1803 Napoleon Bonaparte, in the Act of Mediation, gave a new constitution and out of the lands formerly allied or subject increased the number of cantons to nineteen. In 1815 the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland and the inviolability of her territory were guaranteed by Austria, Great Britain, Portugal, Prussia, and Russia and the Federal Pact which had been drawn up at Zürich, and which included three new cantons, was accepted by the Congress of Vienna. The Pact remained in force till 1848, when a new constitution, prepared without foreign interference, was accepted by general consent. This, in turn, was, on May 29, 1874, superseded by the constitution which is now in force.

The constitution of the Swiss Confederation may be revised either in the ordinary forms of Federal legislation with compulsory referendum, or by direct popular vote (popular initiative) a majority both of the citizens voting and of the cantons being required, and the latter method may be adopted on the demand of 50,000 citizens with the right to vote. The Federal Government (i.e., the Parliament and the Federal Council) is supreme in matters of peace, war, and treaties; it regulates the army, the railway, postal and telegraph systems, the coining of money, the issue and repayment of bank notes, and the weights and measures of the Republic. The Federal Parliament legislates on matters of copyright, bankruptcy, patents, sanitary police in dangerous epidemics, and it may create and subsidise, besides the Polytechnic School at Zürich, a Federal University and other educational institutions. There has also been entrusted to it the authority to decide concerning public works for the whole or great part of Switzerland, such as those relating to rivers, forests, and the construction of railways.

The supreme legislative authority is vested in a parliament of two chambers, a 'Ständerat,' or Council of States, and a 'Nationalrat,' or National Council. The first is composed of forty-four members, chosen and paid by the twenty-two cantons of the Confederation, two for each canton. Their remuneration depends on the wealth and liberality of the cantons, the average being about 20 francs per day; representatives from the canton of Geneva receive 30 francs, from Uri and from Unterwalden 15 francs per day. The mode of their election and the term of membership depend entirely on the canton. Three of the cantons are politically divided—Basel into Stadt and Land; Appenzell into Ausser Rhoden and Inner Rhoden; and Unterwald into Obwald and Nidwald. Each of these parts of cantons sends one member to the State Council, so that there are two members to the divided as well as to the undivided cantons. The 'Nationalrat' consists (according to the Census of 1920) of 198 representatives of the Swiss people, chosen in direct election, at the rate of one deputy for every 20,000 souls. The members are paid from Federal funds at the rate of 25 francs for each day on which they are present, with travelling expenses, at the rate of 20 centimes per kilometre, to and from the capital. Members employed on commissions receive additional pay at the same rate. On the basis of the general census 1920, the cantons are represented in the National Council as follows:—

Canton	Number of Representatives	Canton	Number of Representatives
Zürich (Zurich) . . .	27	Schwyz . . . . .	3
Bern (Berne) . . . .	34	Unterwald—Upper and Lower . . . . .	2
Luzern (Lucerne) . . .	9	Glarus (Glaris) . . . .	2
Uri . . . . .	1	Aargau (Argovie) . . . .	12
Zug (Zoug) . . . . .	2	Thurgau (Thurgovie) . . .	7
Fribourg (Freiburg) . .	7	Ticino (Tessin) . . . . .	8
Solothurn (Soleure) . . .	7	Vaud (Waadt) . . . . .	16
Basel (Bâle)—town and country . . . . .	11	Valais (Wallis) . . . . .	6
Schaffhausen (Schaffhouse)	3	Neuchâtel (Neuenburg) . .	7
Appenzell—Exterior and Interior . . . . .	4	Genève (Genf) . . . . .	9
St. Gallen (St. Gall) . .	15	Total . . . . .	198
Graubünden (Grisons) . .	6

At the elections held on October 27–28, 1928, the following parties were returned:—Radicals, 58; Catholics, 46; Social Democrats, 50; Agrarians, 31; Liberal Conservatives, 6; other parties, 7.

A general election of representatives takes place by ballot every three years. Every citizen of the Republic who has entered on his twenty-first year is entitled to a vote; and any voter, not a clergyman, may be elected a deputy. Both chambers united are called the 'Bundes-Versammlung,' or Federal Assembly, and as such represent the supreme government of the Republic. Laws passed by the Federal Assembly may be vetoed by the popular voice, which means in effect that 30,000 citizens or eight cantons may demand that the law in question should be submitted to the direct vote of the nation, which can only say 'Yes' or 'No.' For the decision of the question submitted a majority both of the cantons and of the voters is required. This principle, called the referendum, is frequently acted on.

The chief executive authority is deputed to a 'Bundesrat,' or Federal Council, consisting of seven members, elected for three years by the Federal Assembly. The members of this council must not hold any other office in the Confederation or cantons, nor engage in any calling or business. In the Federal Parliament legislation may be introduced either by a member, or by either House, or by the Federal Council (but not by the people). Every citizen who has a vote for the National Council is eligible for becoming a member of the executive.

The President of the Confederation and the Vice-President of the Federal Council are the first magistrates of the Confederation. Both are elected by the Federal Assembly in joint session of the National and State councils for the term of one year, January 1 to December 31, and are not re-eligible to the same offices till after the expiration of another year. The Vice-President, however, may be, and usually is, elected to succeed the outgoing President.

President of the Confederation for 1929.—Dr. Robert Haab (Zurich).

Vice-President of the Federal Council for 1929.—Karl Schleurer (Bern).

The seven members of the Federal Council—each of whom has a salary of 1,280*l.* per annum, while the President has 1,400*l.*—act as ministers, or chiefs of the seven administrative departments of the Republic. These departments are:—1. Foreign Affairs. 2. Interior. 3. Justice and Police. 4. Military. 5. Finance and Customs. 6. Agriculture and Industry (Economie publique). 7. Posts and Railways. The city of Bern is the seat of the Federal Council and the central administrative authorities.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Each of the cantons and demi-cantons of Switzerland is sovereign, so far as its independence and legislative powers are not restricted by the federal constitution; each has its local government, different in its organisation in most instances, but all based on the principle of absolute sovereignty of the people. In a few of the smallest cantons the people exercise their powers direct, without the intervention of any parliamentary machinery, all male citizens of full age assembling together in the open air, at stated periods, making laws and appointing their administrators. Such assemblies, known as the Landsgemeinden, exist in Appenzell, Glarus and Unterwald. In all the larger cantons there is a body chosen by universal suffrage, usually called the Grosse Rat, or Kantons Rat, which exercises all the functions of the Landsgemeinden. In all the cantonal constitutions, however, except those of the cantons which have a Landsgemeinde, the referendum has a place. By this principle, where it is most fully developed, as in Zurich, all laws and concordats, or agreements with other cantons, and the chief matters of finance, as well as all revision of the constitution, must be submitted to the popular vote. In all the cantons, the popular initiative for constitutional affairs, as well as for legislation, has been introduced, except in Lucerne, where the initiative exists only for constitutional affairs. The members of the cantonal councils, as well as most of the magistrates, are either honorary servants of their fellow-citizens, or receive a merely nominal salary. In most cantons there are districts (Amtsbezirke) consisting of a number of communes grouped together, each district having a Prefect (Regierungstatthalter) representing the cantonal government. In the larger communes, for local affairs, there is an Assembly (legislative) and a Council (executive) with a president, maire or syndic, and not less than 4 other members. In the smaller communes there is a council only, with its proper officials.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

Area and population, according to the census held on December 1, 1920, and the estimated population on December 1, 1926, are shown in the following table. The cantons are given in the official order, and the year of the entrance of each into the league or confederation is stated:—

Canton	Area : sq. miles	Population		Pop. per square mile, 1920

1927	71,283	1,750	28,585	50,962	20,331

In 1927 the illegitimate births numbered 2,919. The number of divorces was 2,500 in 1927.

The number of emigrants in five years was : 1923, 8,006 ; 1924, 4,140 ; 1925, 4,334 ; 1926, 4,947 ; 1927, 5,272.

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

In 1927 the estimated population of the principal towns was as follows :—Zürich, 215,460 ; Bâle, 141,650 ; Geneva, 126,700 ; Bern, 109,020 ; Lausanne, 76,200 ; St. Gallen, 64,850 ; Winterthur, 52,700 ; Luzern, 45,760 ; Biel, 36,800 ; La Chaux-de-Fonds, 35,900 ; Neuchâtel, 22,050 ; Fribourg, 21,050 ; Schaffhausen, 21,250 ; Thun, 18,400 ; Montreux, 18,450 ; Chur, 15,300 ; Herisau, 15,200 ; Lugano, 14,100 ; Solothurn, 13,650 ; Vevey, 12,800 ; Olten, 12,550 ; Le Locle, 12,100 ; Bellinzona, 11,600 ; Aarau, 11,500 ; Rorschach, 11,450.

Religion.

There is complete and absolute liberty of conscience and of creed. No one is bound to pay taxes specially appropriated to defraying the expenses of a creed to which he does not belong. No bishoprics can be created on Swiss territory without the approbation of the Confederation. The order of Jesuits and its affiliated societies cannot be received in any part of Switzerland ; all functions clerical and scholastic are forbidden to its members, and the interdiction can be extended to any other religious orders whose action is dangerous to the State, or interferes with the peace of different creeds. The foundation of new convents or religious orders is forbidden.

According to the census of December 1, 1920, the number of Protestants amounted to 2,230,597 (57 per cent. of the population), of Roman Catholics to 1,585,311 (41 per cent.), and of Jews to 20,979 (0·5 per cent.). Protestants are in a majority in twelve of the cantons, and Catholics in ten. Of the more populous cantons, Zürich, Bern, Vaud, Neuchâtel, and Basel (town and land) are mainly Protestant, while Luzern, Fribourg, Ticino, Valais and the Forest Cantons are mainly Catholic. The Roman Catholic priests are much more numerous than the Protestant clergy, the former comprising more than 6,000 regular and secular priests. They are under five bishops, viz., of Basel and Lugano (resident at Solothurn), Chur, St. Gallen, Lausanne and Geneva (resident at Freiburg), and Sitten (Sion), all of them immediately subject to the Holy See. The government of the Protestant Church, Calvinistic in doctrine and Presbyterian in form, is under the supervision of the magistrates of the various cantons, to whom is also entrusted, in the Protestant districts, the superintendence of public instruction.

Education.

In the educational administration of Switzerland there is no centralization. Before the year 1848 most of the cantons had organised a system of primary schools, and since that year elementary education has steadily advanced. In 1874 it was made obligatory (the school age varying in the different cantons), and placed under the civil authority. In some cantons the cost falls almost entirely on the communes, in others it is divided between the canton and communes. In all the cantons primary instruction is free. In the north-eastern cantons, where the inhabitants are mostly Protestant, the proportion of the school-attending children to the whole population is as one to five ; while in the half-Protestant and half-Roman Catholic cantons it is as one to seven ; and in the entirely Roman Catholic cantons as one to nine. The compulsory law has hitherto not always been enforced in the Roman Catholic cantons, but is rigidly carried out in those where the Protestants form the majority of inhabitants. In every district there are primary schools, and secondary schools for youths of from twelve to fifteen.

The following are the statistics of the various classes of educational institutions for 1926-27:—primary schools 4,407, with 16,818 teachers (8,143 men and 8,675 women), and 482,686 pupils (243,506 boys and 239,180 girls); the 599 secondary schools had 25,250 boys and 24,035 girls, with 1,810 men and 543 women teachers; 101 lower middle schools had 8,413 boys and 5,120 girls with 748 men and 78 women teachers. There are also cantonal schools, gymnasia, higher schools for girls, complementary schools, teachers' seminaries, commercial and administrative schools, trade schools, art schools, technical schools, schools for the instruction of girls in domestic economy and other subjects; agricultural schools, schools for horticulture, for viticulture, for arboriculture, and for dairy management. There are also institutions for the blind, the deaf and dumb, and the feeble-minded. In 1927 the Federation spent on primary education 2,467,793 francs.

There are seven universities in Switzerland. These universities are organised on the model of those of Germany, governed by a rector and a senate, and divided into four 'faculties' of theology, jurisprudence, philosophy, and medicine. There is a Polytechnic School, maintained by the Federal Government, at Zürich, with 1,410 matriculated students in 1926-27. The academy of Neuchâtel was transformed into a university in May, 1909, but without the faculty of medicine. The following table shows the year of foundation of each university, the number of teaching staff and of matriculated students in the various branches of study in each of the seven universities in the winter of 1927-28:—

—	Theology	Law	Medicine	Philosophy and Science	Total	Teaching Staff 1927-28

These numbers are exclusive of 'visitors,' but inclusive of 929 women students.

A University Institute for International Studies was opened at Genève in October, 1927.

Justice and Crime.

The 'Bundes-Gericht,' or Federal Tribunal, which sits at Lausanne, consists of 24 members, with 9 supplementary judges, appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years and are eligible for re-election; the President and Vice-President, as such, for two years and cannot be re-elected. The President has a salary of 27,000 francs a year, and the other members 25,000 francs. The Tribunal has three sections, to each of which is assigned the trial of suits in accordance with regulations framed by the Tribunal itself. It has original and final jurisdiction in suits between the Confederation and cantons; between cantons and cantons; between the Confederation or cantons and corporations or individuals, the value in dispute being not less than 3,000 francs; between parties who refer their case to it, the value in dispute being at least 3,000 francs; and also in such suits as the constitution or legislation of cantons places within its authority. There are also many classes of railway suits which it is called on to decide. It is a Court of Appeal against decisions of other Federal authorities, and of cantonal authorities applying Federal laws. The Tribunal also tries persons accused of treason or other offences against the Confederation. For this purpose it is divided into four chambers: the Chamber of Accusation, the Criminal Chamber (Cour d'Assises), the Federal Penal Court, and the Court of Cassation. The jurors who serve in the Assize Courts are elected by the people, and are paid ten francs a day when serving.

Each canton has its own judicial system for ordinary civil and criminal trials.

On December 31, 1926, the prison population of Switzerland consisted of 3,737, of whom 387 were women.

Capital punishment exists in Appenzel-I.-Rh., Obwalden, Uri, Schwyz, Zug, St. Gallen, Luzern, Valais, Schaffhausen, and Fribourg.

Social Insurance.

The Swiss Federal Insurance Law (insurance against illness and accident), as passed by both Chambers on June 13, 1911, was accepted by the electors of the Republic with a small majority. The total number of votes cast was 529,001, of which 287,583 were for and 241,418 against the measure.

All Swiss citizens are entitled to insurance against illness, and foreigners also may be admitted to the benefits of the law. Compulsory insurance against illness does not exist as yet, but cantons and communities are entitled under the act to declare obligatory insurance for certain classes or, in general, to establish public benefit (sick fund) associations, and to make employers responsible for the payment of the premiums of their employees.

Insurance against accident is compulsory for all officials, employees, and workmen of all the factories, trades, &c., which are under the Federal liability law. Every person above the age of 14 can insure voluntarily at the Federal insurance administration (or at any insurance corporation). The Swiss Accident Insurance Institution commenced operations on April 1, 1918. In 1926 the 1,087 societies insuring against illness had 1,218,818 members.

Finance.

The entire proceeds of the Federal alcohol monopoly (estimated at 6,547,000 francs in 1928) are divided among the cantons, and they have to expend one-tenth of the amount received in combating alcoholism in its causes and effects. Of the proceeds of the tax for exemption from military service, levied through the cantons, one-half goes to the Confederation and the other to the cantons.

Revenue and expenditure for six years (L. = 25 francs):—

The public debt of the Confederation (exclusive of the railway debt) amounted, on January 1, 1928, to 2,059,933,000 francs. The floating debt (January 1, 1928) was 124,209,000 francs. The total debt was thus 2,184,142,000 francs, or including the railway debt, 4,914,020,000 francs.

Defence.

There are fortifications on the south frontier for the defence of the St. Gothard pass; others have been constructed at St. Maurice and Martigny in the Rhone Valley.

Switzerland depends for defence upon a national militia. Service in this force is compulsory and universal, with few exemptions except for physical disability. Those excused or rejected pay certain taxes in lieu. Liability extends from the 20th to the end of the 48th year. The first 12 years are spent in the first line, called the 'Auszug,' or 'Élite'; the next 8 in the Landwehr; and the remaining 8 in the Landsturm. For cavalry, however, service is 11 years in the Auszug, and 12 in the Landwehr. The Landsturm only includes men who have undergone some training. The unarmed Landsturm comprises all other males between 20 and 50 whose services can be made available for non-combatant duties of any description.

The initial training of the Swiss militia soldier is carried out in recruits' schools, and the periods are 65 days for infantry, engineers, and foot artillery, 75 days for field artillery, and 90 days for cavalry. The subsequent trainings, called 'repetition courses,' are 11 days annually; but after going through seven courses (8 in the case of the cavalry) further attendance is excused for all under the rank of sergeant. The Landwehr men are only called out once for training, also for 11 days.

The country is divided into 6 divisional districts. There is a staff organisation for three army corps. There are the usual departmental troops, pontoon and railway corps, telegraph troops, &c. The peace establishment normally under training is 46,200.

The fortress troops, mostly Landwehr, man the fortifications which close the St. Gothard Pass and the Rhone Valley to a possible invader from the south. They amount to about 21,000 men. The Landwehr is organised in 56 battalions and 36 squadrons. Altogether Switzerland can mobilise nearly 200,000 men (combatants), irrespective of the organised Landsturm, who may amount to another 60,000.

The administration of the Swiss army is partly in the hands of the Cantonal authorities, who promote officers up to the rank of captain. But the Federal Government is concerned with all general questions, and makes all the higher appointments.

The Swiss infantry are armed with the Swiss repeating rifle. The field artillery is armed with a Q.F. shielded Krupp 7.5 cm. calibre. The 'position' artillery has batteries of 8.4 and 12 cm. guns. The Swiss Government inaugurated an aviation service in 1919. It is organised in 5 flights and 2 balloon companies and has 60 fighting and 120 scouting aeroplanes.

Production and Industry.

The soil of the country is very equally divided among the population, it being estimated that there were (1920) 212,290 peasant proprietors.

Of the total area 931,177 hectares, or 2,327,943 acres, being 22.6 per cent., is unproductive; of the productive area 900,647 hectares, or 2,251,618 acres, being 28.2 per cent., is forest; and of the rest about 1,210,000 hectares, or 3,025,000 acres (53.2 per cent.) is under grass, and about 800,000 hectares, or 2,000,000 acres (35.7 per cent.) is pasture. In 1926, there were 123,667 acres under wheat and 49,725 acres under rye.

The chief agricultural industries are the manufacture of cheese and condensed milk. Wine is produced in eight of the cantons, tobacco in three. On April 21, 1926 (last census), there were in Switzerland, 139,668 horses, 3,577 mules, 943 donkeys, 1,587,399 cattle, 857,874 cows, 162,723 sheep, 637,098 pigs, 289,258 goats.

The Swiss Confederation has the right of supervision over the police of the forests, and of framing regulations for their maintenance. The entire forest area of Switzerland on January 1, 1926, was 2,442,845 acres in extent (comprising 112,985 acres of cantonal forest, 1,641,800 acres belonging to municipalities and other corporations, and 688,060 acres of private forests). The district over which the Federal supervision extends lies to the south and east of a tolerably straight line from the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva to the northern end of the Lake of Constance. It comprises about 1,839,138 acres, and the Federal forest laws apply to all cantonal, communal, and municipal forests within this area, those belonging to private persons being exempt, except when from their position they are necessary for protection against climatic influences. In 1876 it was enacted that this forest area should never be reduced; servitudes over it, such as rights of way, of gathering firewood, &c., should be bought up; public forests should be surveyed, and new wood planted where required, subventions for the purpose being sanctioned. In the year 1926, 15,274,921 trees (chiefly coniferous) were planted. The free forest districts comprise 1,477 square miles.

There were, in 1926-27, 246 establishments for pisciculture with 169,461,000 fry of various species, produced from the incubation of 220,523,000 eggs. Of these, 174,667,000 fry were released in public waters under official control.

Many industries flourish in Switzerland. There are 2 salt-mining districts; that at Bex (Vaud) belongs to the Canton, but is worked by a private company, and those at Schweizerhalle, Rheinfelden and Ryburg are worked by a joint-stock company formed by the Cantons interested. The output of salt of all kinds in 1927 reached 782,618 quintals (772,673 in 1926). In the province of St. Gall (Gonzen mine) iron ore and manganese ore are mined. In 1926, the output was 45,000 tons of hematite and 15,000 tons of manganese ore. In 1927 there were 8,163 factories in Switzerland. Watch and clock making is an important branch of manufacture; number of clocks exported in 1927, 20,198,581; in 1926, 18,851,928. The number of persons employed in factories (1927) was 366,350; the motive machinery had 1,338,797 horsepower. In 1927, 67 breweries produced 2,053,067 hectolitres (45,278,017 gallons) of beer.

In 1927 the Swiss embroidery establishments numbered 683 and employed 10,532 workers.

In 1925 there were 335 electric power enterprises, with an installed capacity of 1,182,070 kw., of which 1,113,300 kw. was from water power (with 300 kw. and more).

Commerce.

The special commerce, not including precious metals, was as follows in five years (25 francs = 1l.) :—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928

The customs duties amounted in 1924, to 205,113,400 francs; in 1925, to 217,399,444 francs (including tobacco dues, 20,286,948 francs); in 1926, to 233,268,400 francs (including tobacco dues, 18,723,739 francs); in 1927, to 234,142,600 francs (including tobacco dues, 21,362,327 francs).

The following table, in thousands of francs, shows the distribution of the special trade of Switzerland (including bullion but not coin) among the principal countries. Much of the trade with the frontier countries is really of the nature of transit trade :—

Internal Communications.

On January 1, 1928, the State railways of Switzerland (excluding tramways and funiculars) had a length of 1,789 miles. The net operating receipts from traffic of the Swiss Federal railways amounted (1927) to 369,997,729 francs, of which 142,800,000 francs were for passenger traffic. Operating expenses amounted to 267,050,533 francs. The State railways are gradually being electrified; by the beginning of 1928, 925 miles of electrified normal gauge lines were being operated by the Federal Railways. According to the present programme 1,032 miles should be open for traffic in the early part of 1929. The traffic on the Swiss waters (not including Lago Maggiore) in 1927 was carried on by 124 boats or barges belonging to 14 companies.

State aerial service is being gradually developed. In 1928 there were 14,399 flights, and 18,557 passengers were carried.

In 1927 there were in Switzerland 4,008 post-offices. By the internal service there were forwarded 200,900,000 letters, 74,000,000 post-cards, 132,100,000 packets of printed matter and samples, 327,036,920 newspapers. In the international service there were forwarded 35,500,000 letters, 20,200,000 post-cards, 13,500,000 packets of printed matter and samples, 2,300,681 newspapers. Internal post-office orders were sent to the value of 353,934,294 francs. Receipts, 1927, 144,506,000 francs; expenditure, 129,528,000 francs.

Switzerland has a very complete system of telegraphs, consisting (1927) of 496 miles of line with 21,916 miles of wire. There were transmitted 975,971 inland telegrams, 3,939,957 international, and 1,130,327 in transit through Switzerland. Number of offices, 2,549. There were 219,735 telephones installed, and 18,741 miles of line and 642,286 miles of wire; conversations, 172,450,000. The telegraph and telephone receipts in 1927 amounted to 83,952,446 francs; the expenditure to 81,353,087 francs.

The Marconi Company under a concession from the Federal Government has erected a wireless telegraph station at Münchenbuchsee near Bern.

Banking and Credit.

On December 31, 1926, the coin minted in Switzerland was as follows:—20,283,678 gold coins of the nominal value of 379,573,560 francs; 87,245,819 silver coins of the nominal value of 150,778,206 francs; 200,114,100 nickel coins of the nominal value of 19,420,000 francs; and 125,967,920 copper coins of the nominal value of 1,640,839 francs; total (including other token coins), 433,611,517 coins of the nominal value of 551,412,605 francs.

There were in Switzerland in 1918, 1,394 savings banks of all kinds, with 2,749,859 depositors having to their credit 2,646,645,767 francs.

The National Bank, with headquarters divided between Bern and Zurich, opened its doors on June 20, 1907. It has the exclusive right to issue banknotes in Switzerland. On February 7, 1929, the condition of the bank was follows:—

	Francs		Francs
Bullion (gold and silver) .	481,852,480	Other assets . . .	12,469,497
Bills . . . . .	140,009,808	Notes in circulation .	802,681,770
Advances . . . . .	63,464,329	Current and deposit
Securities . . . . .	4,642,166	accounts . . . . .	85,041,440
		Other securities . . .	40,684,372

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The international metric system is the sole legal standard of weights and measures in Switzerland. It was made compulsory in the country by the Federal law of July 3, 1875, and since January 1, 1887, no other units than the metric units have been legal. By the Federal law of June 24, 1909, the international electric units were also adopted. By that law, copies of the French standards, deposited at the International Office for Weights and Measures at Sèvres (France), were adopted as the legal standards for Switzerland.

The Franc of 10 Batzen, and 100 Rappen or Centimes, is the monetary unit. The par rate of exchange is 25·22½ francs = £1 sterling.

As a result of the dissolution of the Latin Monetary Union in 1926, the gold currencies of other countries of the Union are, after April 1, 1927, no longer legal tender in Switzerland, where they have circulated since 1860.

Before the war 50-franc National Bank notes were the smallest paper currency, but in consequence of the war, notes of lesser denominations have been issued, viz., 20-franc notes (by law of July 30, 1914), 5-franc notes (August 3, 1914), and 25-franc notes (September 9, 1914).

The Centner, of 50 Kilogrammes and 100 Pfund = 110 lbs. avoirdupois. The Quintal = 100 Kilogrammes = 220 lbs. avoirdupois. The Arpent (Land) = 8·9ths of an acre.

The Pfund, or pound, chief unit of weight, is legally divided into decimal Grammes, but the people generally prefer the use of the old halves and quarters, named Halbpfund, and Vierthelpfund.

TURKEY

(TURKIYA DJOUM NOURIETI)

IN November, 1922, a change of capital importance took place in the internal economy of Turkey. Up to that time Constantinople continued to be the residence of the Sultan, and a Government deriving its authority from him still existed there. This Government, however, exerted no effective power outside Constantinople, together with a small adjacent area and another small area adjoining Chanak on the Dardanelles. Except for the small areas mentioned above, the whole of Asia Minor was under the authority of the de facto Government set up at Angora in April, 1920, under the name of the 'Government of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey.' On November 1, 1922, the Grand National Assembly voted a resolution declaring that the office of Sultan had ceased to exist and providing that the office of Caliph, which had hitherto been vested in the person of the Sultan, should be filled by election from among the Princes of the House of Osman. Previous to this the Angora Government had made preparations not only to take delivery of Eastern Thrace from the Greek occupying authorities in accordance with the military Convention concluded at Moudania on October 11, 1922, but also to take over the administration of Constantinople whenever an opportunity offered. On November 4, 1922, the administration of Constantinople passed into the hands of the Angora Government. The same day the Grand Vizier, Tewfik Pasha, presented the resignation of the Constantinople Cabinet to the Sultan. The Sultan himself, on November 17, left Constantinople in secret. Nearly a whole year was, however, to elapse before the decisive step of proclaiming a Republic was taken. On October 29, 1923, the national leader, Ghazi Mustafa Kemal Pasha, who had been born at Salonica in 1881, was elected first President of the Turkish Republic, and the revolution was complete when, on March 2, 1924, the Grand National Assembly decided upon the abolition of the Turkish Caliphate, a decision which was immediately followed by the expulsion from Turkey of all the members of the House of Osman, at the same time depriving them of their Turkish citizenship. On November 1, 1927, Mustafa Kemal Pasha was re-elected President of the Republic by the unanimous vote of the new Assembly which met on that day.

President of the Republic.—Mustafa Kemal Pasha, born at Salonica in 1881, re-elected November 1, 1927.

By a decision of the Grand National Assembly on October 13, 1923, Angora was declared to be the capital of Turkey. All central departments of state are now established there.

Constitution and Government.

For a list of the former sovereigns of Turkey and an account of the older constitutions of the country, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1923, page 1380.

The Grand National Assembly of Angora voted, on January 20, 1921, a Fundamental Law which introduced constitutional changes of the most radical kind. It declared that all sovereignty belonged to the people, and that all power, both executive and legislative, was vested in the Grand National Assembly as being the sole representative of the people. The old name 'Ottoman Empire' was discarded in favour of the designation 'Turkey.' No provision was made for a Senate. It was laid down that the members of the Grand National Assembly should be elected for a period of two years, and that the Assembly should delegate its executive powers to a certain number of Vekils or Commissioners. The mode of effecting this delegation of power varied somewhat, and ultimately at the beginning of 1924 circumstances necessitated a further revision of the Constitution. This was effected by the law of April 20, 1924, in the first articles of which the Turkish State was declared to be a Republic, the religion of which is Islam, the official language Turkish and the capital Angora. The new law provided for the election of the Assembly every four years, while according to article 7 'the Assembly exercises the executive power through the President of the Republic elected by itself and through the Council of Ministers chosen by him,' with the proviso that the Assembly may at any time control the actions of the Government and at any time dismiss it.

The new law also provided that the President of the Republic should be chosen from among the deputies constituting the National Assembly, and that his term of office should be identical with the life of each Assembly.

The present Cabinet, which was formed on November 2, 1927, is constituted as follows :—

- President of the Council.*—Ismet Pasha.
- Minister of Interior.*—Shukri Kaya Bey.
- Minister of Finance.*—Sarajoglu Shukri Bey.
- Minister of Public Works.*—Rejeb Bey.
- Minister of Foreign Affairs.*—Dr. Tewfik Rushdi Bey.
- Minister of Justice.*—Mahmud Essad Bey.
- Minister of Education.*—Wasif Bey.
- Minister of Public Health.*—Dr. Refik Bey.
- Minister of National Economy.*—Rahmi Bey.
- Minister of National Defence.*—Mustafa Abdul Halik Bey.

The present Grand National Assembly which was elected in September, 1927, and met on November 1, 1927, is the third assembly to meet at Angora, and consists of 315 deputies.

Subjects of Western Powers resident in Turkey formerly enjoyed extraterritorial privileges, including extensive fiscal immunities, in virtue of an ancient system called Capitulations. Before the Great War it had long been felt that these privileges needed revising, especially in so far as they exempted foreigners from the fiscal burdens of Ottoman subjects, but when, in September 1914, the Porte issued a decree designed to abolish them, the Powers unanimously protested against this unilateral action. In the circumstances prevailing in Europe at that time this protest, which applied also to the simultaneous suppression of the International Board of Health and the foreign Post Offices, was academic rather than effective. During the War the Central Powers recognised the fait accompli and entered into new treaty arrangements with the Porte. By the Treaty signed at Lausanne on July 24, 1923 (see below under 'Area and Population'), the Allied Powers agreed to the suppression of the Capitulations and concluded with Turkey a Convention respecting conditions of Residence and Business and Jurisdiction and a Commercial Convention. They agreed also to the suppression of the International Board of Health and the foreign Post Offices. Turkey on her side agreed by declarations appended to the Treaty to engage for not less than five years European legal counsellors to assist in the reorganisation of the legislative and judicial system and to entertain complaints arising out of the administration of justice, and to engage similarly three European medical advisers to act for five years as advisers in connection with the sanitary administration for the frontiers.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Fundamental Law, voted at Angora in January, 1921 (see above), altered the system in force up to 1920 by providing that the country should be divided into Vilayets (now sixty-three in number) divided into Cazas, subdivided in their turn into Nahies. At the head of each Vilayet is a Vali representing the Government. The system aimed at is one of decentralisation. Each Vilayet has an elective council of its own. The Caza is regarded as a mere grouping of Nahies for certain purposes of general administration. The Nahie or commune is an autonomous entity and possesses an elective council charged with the administration of such matters as are not reserved to the State.

Area and Population.

The series of wars beginning with the Turco-Italian War of 1911-12 and ending with the General War of 1914-18 caused the break up of the old Ottoman Empire, the acquisition by Italy and the Balkan States of considerable portions of the territories which constituted it, and the creation of several new states or mandated territories, viz. Albania, Syria (now a federation of States under the French mandate), Iraq or Mesopotamia (now an independent state under the British mandate), Palestine (British mandate), and the Hejaz (now part of the Wahabi kingdom). To these losses must be added the termination of the sovereignty which up to the Great War Turkey technically possessed over Cyprus and Egypt, and the cutting off from Turkey of the various states in Arabia over which the Sultans exercised or claimed suzerainty. Towards the end of the General War, on the other hand, Turkey reacquired the territory known as the 'three Sanjaks' of Kars, Ardahan and Artvin, and she still retains under the Treaty concluded with the Caucasian States at Kars in October, 1921, a portion of this territory, not however including Batoum. The Treaty of Peace between the Allied Powers and Turkey which was signed at Lausanne on July 24, 1923, defined the European frontier of the new Turkey and to some extent her Asiatic frontiers. This Treaty was ratified by the Grand National Assembly on August 23, 1923, and entered into force August 6, 1924, on its ratification by three of the four Allied Powers.

The present territories of Turkey as determined by the Treaties mentioned above are as follows:—

1. Constantinople and Eastern Thrace up to a line running roughly East and West from the mouth of the River Resvaya to a point North of Adrianople, whence the boundary takes a generally Southerly direction determined for the most part by the River Maritza, but includes in Turkey a portion of the territory West of that river in the neighbourhood of Adrianople.

2. The whole of Asia Minor, comprised within the Caucasian frontier defined by the Treaty of Kars, which leaves Kars, Artvin and Ardahan to Turkey, the Northern portion of the old Turco-Persian frontier, a boundary line between Turkey and Iraq, as determined by the Treaty signed at Angora in June, 1926, whereby Mosul was ceded to Iraq, and a boundary line between Turkey and Syria running from Jezira-ibn-Omar on the Tigris to a point on the Gulf of Alexandretta immediately South of Payas;

3. Imbros, Tenedos and Rabbit Islands.

The Treaty of Lausanne and the Conventions attached to it provided for the demilitarisation of zones adjoining the European frontier, the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, subject to the right to maintain a garrison at Constantinople, for the demilitarisation of the Islands named above as well as the islands in the Sea of Marmara with one exception, and for a special administrative régime in Imbros and Tenedos. Otherwise Turkey holds the above territories in unrestricted sovereignty.

The area of the Republic of Turkey is estimated at 494,538 square miles.

For the first time in its history a general census was taken in Turkey on October 28, 1927, and showed the total population of the Republic to be 13,660,275, of whom 6,584,474 were men and 7,075,801 women.

The population of the vilayets was given as follows:—

The events of recent years have caused an enormous reduction in the Christian population of the territory still remaining to Turkey. A very large proportion of the Armenian population of Asia Minor disappeared after the war, owing to the fact that large numbers migrated to the Republic of Erivan. The Greek population has practically ceased to exist in Asia Minor and in European Turkey outside Constantinople. A Turco-Greek agreement signed at Lausanne on January 30, 1923, provided for the compulsory exchange of the Greeks of Turkey, not including Constantinople, against the Turks of Greece, not including Western Thrace, as from May, 1923. The Moslem population of Turkey has also suffered greatly from the effects of the war. It comprises besides the Turks of Asia Minor a few Kurds in the Eastern provinces, and a few Circassians. There is a fairly considerable but diminishing Jewish element in the towns.

Religion.

Moslems now form the vast majority of the population of the new Turkey. Under the old imperial system the non-Moslem communities were recognised as organised communities or millets, the heads of which exercised not only spiritual but civil functions. The scope of these civil functions varied. They were in some cases, and more especially in that of the Ecumenical Patriarch, of considerable importance. The whole position is now fluid. The Treaty of Lausanne has deprived the spiritual heads of the communities of their administrative prerogatives, and their authority is now purely ecclesiastical. The Œcumenical (or Greek Orthodox) Patriarch is Mgr. Basil III. Georgiades, who, with the Holy Synod has his headquarters at the Phanar. The Latin Patriarch Mgr. Michele Zezza di Zaponeta is non-resident, but Mgr. Zaven, the Gregorian Armenian Patriarch, lives in Constantinople, as does also the Uriat Armenian Patriarch of Cilicia. Mgr. Paul Peter XIII. Terzian. The Nestorian Patriarch Mar Shimun XXI, the Head of the Assyrian Christians in the Hakkari in Turkish Kurdistan usually lives near Mosul in Iraq. There is a Jewish Grand Rabbi in Constantinople.

Formerly over half the settled inhabitants of Constantinople were Moslem, the other half being made up mostly of Orthodox Greeks, Armenians, Roman Catholics, Armenian and other Uniates, and Jews of two rites. Recent events have caused a decrease in the non-Moslem elements. There is, besides, a large foreign population of various professions.

On April 10, 1928, the Grand National Assembly passed a law amending the Organic Statute in such a way that Islam ceased to be the State religion of the Republic. An oath of allegiance to the Republic, taken by the President and Deputies, took the place of the former religious formula.

Education.

In Turkey, elementary education is nominally obligatory for all children of both sexes. According to the Provisional Law of October 6, 1913, all children from 7 to 16 are to receive primary instruction, which may, however, be given in State schools, schools maintained by communities, or private schools, or, subject to certain tests, at home. The State schools are under the direct control of the Ministry of Public Instruction. They include not only primary schools, but also secondary schools, 'preparatory' schools (for students intending to enter higher schools), and a certain number of lycées or secondary schools of a superior kind. There are also training schools for male and female teachers, and a certain number of higher technical schools, besides the University of Constantinople, founded in 1900. The University has a large number of Moslem women students. Towards the end of 1925 a School of Law was founded at Angora, where Turkish professors, possessed of French and Swiss degrees, teach the new laws adopted by Turkey, some of which, such as the Civil Code and the Code des Obligations and the Law of Civil Procedure, have been borrowed from Swiss legislation. The important non-Moslem communities in Constantinople maintain their own schools, which, like all 'private' schools, are subject to the supervision of the Ministry of Public Instruction. Finally, there are in Constantinople and Smyrna a number of foreign schools, mostly conducted by British, French, Italian, and American congregations or societies on more or less missionary lines.

A general tendency has been manifested since 1926 to introduce the use of the Latin alphabet in Turkey. A Commission was formed to study the question, and on November 1, 1928, the Grand National Assembly voted a law for the adoption of Latin characters in Turkey. This law decreed the use of Latin characters obligatory in the case of all correspondence in Public Departments as well as all companies, societies and private offices, newspapers, cinemas and advertisements as from December 1, 1928. The publication of books in Arabic characters was forbidden after January 1, 1929, and the employment of the new alphabet was to become general throughout Turkey in 1930.

Previous to this important reform the Grand National Assembly had also adopted the bill introducing the numeral system as used in European countries.

Justice.

It is in the sphere of justice that the New Turkey has realised the greatest progress. Since the beginning of the work of secularisation two years ago, nothing now remains of the old Ottoman laws based on the religious principles. The Turkish Government began by suppressing the religious Courts (Sheri) in 1924, in order to obtain this result. The system which was thus unified consists of (1) juges de paix (single judges with limited but summary penal and civil jurisdiction); (2) tribunaux de base (a president and two assistant judges with wider powers); (3) assize courts (a president and four assistant judges who hear serious penal cases). Appeal has been abolished. The Court of Cassation sits at Eski Shehr.

The laws applied by these Courts have been recently drawn up and adopted. The Turkish Civil Code is, with the exception of a few modifications, a reproduction of the Swiss Civil Code, as also the Code of Obligations, and both entered into force towards the end of 1926. The new Penal Code is based in great measure upon the Italian Penal Code, and the Code of Civil Procedure, without being identical, nevertheless closely resembles that of the Canton of Neuchatel.

Finance.

The revenue is derived from land, property, income and profits taxes, Customs, consumption taxes, sheep and cattle tax, monopolies, and other sources. The principal monopolies in 1927 were, tobacco, sugar, petroleum, alcohol, matches, explosives, cartridges and salt.

Estimates of revenue and expenditure for five financial years were as follows:—

—	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29	1929-30
	£T	£T	£T	£T	£T
Revenue . . .	145,806,978	218,315,245	194,580,544	206,298,045	220,298,300
Expenditure . .	162,288,942	238,361,930	194,454,620	206,281,668	220,297,208

The Budget Estimates of Expenditure for the financial year 1929-30 are as follows:—

	£T		£T
National Defence . . .	55,817,510	Marine . . .	6,475,082
Finance and Pensions . .	13,979,504	Posts and Telegraphs . .	5,758,795

Economic Affairs . . .	7,278,167	Property Registration . .	1,388,000
Health . . .	4,500,000	Other Items . . .	2,946,413

By the Treaty of Lausanne the foreign debt of Turkey was to be distributed among the succession States, of which the new Turkey is one. The Turkish debt has been apportioned as follows (the first figure refers to the loans prior to October 17, 1912, the second to those between October 17, 1912 and November 1, 1924): Turkey, 62.25 per cent. and 76.54 per cent.; Greece, 10.57 per cent. and 0.55 per cent.; Yugoslavia, 5.25 per cent.; Bulgaria, 1.63 per cent. and 0.16 per cent.; Albania, 1.57 per cent.; Syria, 8.15 per cent. and 10.02 per cent.; Iraq, 8.96 per cent. and 4.87 per cent.; Palestine, 2.49 per cent. and 3.06 per cent.; and the Arab States, 4.13 per cent. and 4.80 per cent. The total debt of Turkey is £T82,000,000.

Defence.

Under the law of January 24, 1924, military service is for 18 months in the infantry and for two years in the cavalry, artillery and air service. The number of men liable to service in any given year is approximately 170,000. The strength of the active army in 1927 was 120,000 organised in 3 armies and 9 army corps, subdivided as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Artillery Groups	Aviation Groups	Battalions	Batteries
Infantry . . .	18	54	—	—	162	—
Cavalry . . .	5 <sup>1</sup>	11	—	—	—	—
Artillery:—
Horse . . .	—	—	3	—	—	8
Field . . .	—	19	—	76	—	228
Heavy . . .	—	7	2	—	—	69
Air Force . . .	—	—	—	15	—	—

The infantry is equipped with Mauser rifles. The artillery with 75 mm. Krupp field guns and 10.5 and 12 c.m. Schneider howitzers.

The Turkish Navy is at present undergoing reorganisation, all vessels of any fighting value being taken in hand for refit as soon as money for this purpose can be spared. The effective fleet when this renovation programme has been completed will comprise the ex-German battle cruiser Yavuz launched in 1911, displacing 22,500 tons, and armed with ten 11-inch guns; the old battleship Touurgout Reis, 9,900 tons, and six 11-inch guns, now used as a training ship for naval cadets; the light cruisers Hamidieh, 3,830 tons, and Medjidieh, 3,300 tons, both dating from 1903; 4 gunboats of from 500 to 400 tons; 1 obsolete torpedo boat and two small submarines.

The Yavuz is undergoing an extensive refit at Ismid under a contract made with a group of French shipbuilding yards. The repairs should be completed by December 1928.

A new naval base at Ismid has replaced the former dockyard in the Golden Horn. It is proposed to order 4 flotilla leaders, 6 submarines and 6 motor launches, to be built abroad.

The future strength of the personnel does not appear to have been fixed, but no difficulty is anticipated in manning the ships at present ready for sea.

Efforts are being made to develop an air service, with headquarters at Smyrna. A certain number of aeroplanes and hydroplanes have been bought, and further orders have been placed in France and Germany. Owing, however, to a dearth of pilots, and especially of trained mechanics, it cannot be said that this service is in an efficient condition, but the personnel is gradually being increased.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Agriculture is most primitive, but modern methods are now being adopted. The soil for the most part is very fertile; the principal products are tobacco, mohair, cereals, figs, silk, olives and olive oil, dried fruits, nuts and almonds, skins and hides, furs, licorice root, wool, gums, canary seed, linseed and sesame. Tobacco, wool, mohair, dried fruit, opium nuts and valona nuts are the principal exports from Anatolia. Opium is an important crop in Konia and Afion Karahissar. Tobacco is grown both in European and Asiatic Turkey. The principal tobacco districts are Samsun (the most important), Bafra, Ismid, Charchamba and Smyrna. The production of tobacco was in 1927, estimated at 91,500,000 pounds; in 1926, 84,000,000 pounds. In 1926, 46,660 tons of tobacco were exported. The principal centres for silk production are Brusa and Constantinople. The production of olive oil, mainly confined to the Vilayet of Aidin, is very important; yield in 1927 amounted to 35,000,000 pounds. The production of figs in 1927 was estimated at 25,000 tons, and that of raisins, 47,000 tons. In 1926-27 about 114,720 bales (of 500 pounds) of cotton were produced.

The forest laws of the empire are modelled on those of France, but restrictive regulations are not enforced, and the country is being rapidly deprived of its timber. About 17 million acres are under forest. The most-wooded vilayets are Castamouni, Aidin, Broussa, Bolou, Trebizond, Konia and Karassi. Of the forest land, about 88 per cent. belongs to the State, 6 per cent. to private persons, and the rest to communes and wakfs (pious foundations).

In 1927 there were in Turkey 9,745,088 sheep, 6,853,356 goats, 2,616,089 cattle, 1,096,422 asses, and 178,116 horses.

Mining.—The Turkish provinces, especially those in Asia, are reported rich in minerals, which are little worked. Chrome ore is to be found in Mentêshe, Kutahia, Smyrna, Adana, Brusa, Konia and Diarbekir. The Government owns silver mines at Bulgar Maden; zinc is found in the Ismidt district, Aidin, Trebizonde, Adana, and at the Dardanelles; manganese ore in Aidin, Menteshê, Brussa, Karassi and Merghir, and antimony in Aidin. Copper ore is found in the Taurus, at Tireboli, near Trebizond, at Arghana Maden, near Diarbekir, said to be one of the largest and most productive mines in the world; borax from 6,000 to 8,000 tons exported annually from the Marmora; meerschaum at Eskishehr; emery principally in the vilayet of Aidin; asphalt in small quantities at Aivalik; coal at Heraclea and at Zoungouldak on the Black Sea (1,308,600 tons in 1927). Lignite is found on the European coast of the Black Sea, a short distance from the entrance to the Bosphorus, Erzeroum, Aidin, Angora, Karassi, Sivas and Keshan near Uzun Koupru near the Dardanelles. There are salt works at Erzeroum and in the vicinity of Smyrna and other places. Gold is found at Bulghar Maden (Konia); mercury at Sisma near Konia, at Ouchak, and in the vilayet of Aidin; arsenic in Aidin and Sivas; iron in the sandjak of Carassi, in the vilayet of Aidin, and in the Adana region. There is a good deal of brass-turning and beating of copper into utensils for household purposes.

Fisheries.—The fisheries of Turkey are important; the total value of marine produce for Constantinople and dependencies was in 1921-22 £T2,400,778.15 as against £T2,922,332.21 in 1920-21. The total weight of marine produce in 1922-23 attained 22,000 tons. No later statistics are available.

Industry.—Industries are relatively unimportant. The vilayet of Aidin, was before the war one of Turkey's industrial centres. An attempt is being made by the Government to revive industry in Smyrna, and a fair amount of machinery has been imported. Carpet weaving represents approximately 60 per cent. of pre-war capacity. Textile factories have not suffered any material damage. The number of fig-packing establishments has been reduced from 85 to 12. Cotton ginneries are being rebuilt, and in June, 1926, an oilcake factory was established at Adana. A further recent development has been the opening in December, 1926, of sugar factories at Ushak, near Smyrna, and at Alpollu in Thrace, their total production in 1927 was 5,620 tons. Many small factories have been established in recent years, including saw-mills constructed near Boz-Euyuk. In 1927 there were 65,245 manufacturing establishments with 256,855 employees.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for four years :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£T	£T	£T	£T
Imports . . . .	144,788,671	194,000,000	242,314,118	234,591,722
Exports . . . .	84,651,190	150,000,000	193,119,456	187,742,801

Turkish trade for 2 years was distributed among the principal countries as follows :—

Country	Imports		Exports
	1925	1926	1925	1926
	£T	£T	£T	£T
United Kingdom . . .	37,846,817	33,000,000	17,441,277	21,300,000

United States . . . .	19,654,074	8,100,000	25,102,934	24,800,000

During 1926, the chief articles of import were : cotton goods, £T71,981,186 ; cereals, £T6,125,037 ; metals, £T22,242,167 ; colonial goods, £T20,126,904 ; woollens, £T20,952,897 ; machinery, £T10,149,882 ; mineral oils, £T10,412,213.

The principal imports from Turkey into the United Kingdom and exports to Turkey from the United Kingdom (according to Board of Trade Returns) in two years were :—

Imports from Turkey	1926	1927	Exports to Turkey	1926	1927
	£	£		£	£
Figs and fig cake . . .	322,869	314,258	Coal . . . . .	53,676	157,805

Raisins . . . . .	788,818	530,083	Machinery . . . . .	142,840	116,812

The value of the commercial intercourse between Turkey and Great Britain during the last five years according to the Board of Trade Returns is shown in the following table :—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Imports into U. K. from Turkey	£ 3,154,902	£ 2,424,459	£ 3,003,922	£ 2,990,596	£ 2,636,801
Exports of British produce to Turkey	4,214,079	4,000,192	3,103,229	3,180,740	2,795,116

Shipping and Navigation.

At the beginning of 1927, the vessels under the Turkish flag had a tonnage of 186,986 tons. The coasting privileges in Turkish waters which certain foreign companies enjoyed by virtue of the Treaty of Lausanne came to an end in July, 1926. The most important Turkish company engaged in the coastal service is the "Seiri-Séfaine." This company, which lost the greater part of its vessels during the war and which possessed 12,258 tons at the Armistice, had increased this tonnage to 52,857 in 1927. Other craft flying the Turkish flag included 29 tugs, 12 power barges, 300 ordinary barges and 42 motor launches. Three thousand seamen were employed in the Turkish merchant service.

In 1927 a total of 2,255 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 1,775,059 called at the port of Smyrna, as against 2,227 vessels of 1,935,200 tons in 1926. At Constantinople the number of vessels clearing and in transit in 1927 was 13,195 of a total tonnage of 11,321,654.

Internal Communications.

In 1926, there were 30,319 miles of road in Turkey, of which 8,500 miles were national roads and 21,819 miles provincial roads.

The length of railway line in Turkey in January, 1928, was about 4,467 kilometres (2,774 miles).

The Oriental Railway (386 kilometres, or 208 miles) connects Constantinople via Adrianople with Sofia, Belgrade, and the chief centres of Europe. The Anatolian Railway (1,035 kilometres, or 643 miles) runs from Constantinople to Angora and Konia, with a prolongation from Angora to Caesarea (365 kilometres). The Bagdad Railway (633 kilometres, or 393 miles), starting from Konia, was completed during the war as far as Nisibin in Mesopotamia. Other railways are Smyrna-Aidin-Eghirdir (British Company) (606 kilometres, or 376 miles), Smyrna-Cassaba-Afium Karahissar (French Company) (703 kilometres, or 440 miles), Smyrna-Balikessir-Panderma (French Company), and Mudania-Brusa (42 kilometres, or 26 miles). The following railways are in course of construction: Samsoun-Sivas (Samsoun-Zileh, built by the Government, is now in operation; remainder Zileh-Sivas is also being completed by the Government); another line is being built from Kaiseriye to Sivas; Samsoun-Charshamba (narrow gauge); a Swedish Company is building a line from Angora to Ereghli with branch from Zafranbolou to Seughid-Euzu, and a further line from Keller to Diarbékir via Marash, Malatia and El Aziz. A German Company has commenced a line from Kutahia to Balikessir, which is completed as far as Tavchanli. Others projected are Bafra-Samsoun, Césaréa to Oulou-Kishla; Ozoun-Keupru-Keshan (narrow gauge), Trebizonde-Erzeroum. A contract was also signed with a German group for the construction of the Césaréa-Oulou-Kishla line. The total length of line under construction is 2,227 kilometres (1,383 miles).

There are over 2,000 post-offices in Turkey. Foreign post-offices disappeared as a result of the Treaty of Lausanne.

Banking and Credit.

In January, 1917, the Turkish Government issued a Charter for a new National Bank, to be styled the Ottoman National Credit Bank (Osmanlı İtibari Milli Bankası). Its capital is 4 million Turkish pounds. The future status of this bank was fixed in 1926 by an agreement with the Government. A fusion took place recently between this Bank and the Banque d'Affaires, the head office of which is in Angora. Amongst the more important Turkish banks may be mentioned the Banque Agricole, the oldest of the Turkish institutions, with a capital of 30,000,000 Turkish pounds. The other banks are the Banque d'Affaires, the business of which is increasing rapidly, Banque Industrielle et Minière, Banque de Commerce et d'Industrie, Banque d'Emlak (Crédit Foncier) and Banque d'Esnaf (Craftsmen's Bank). The principal Bank in Turkey is the Ottoman Bank, founded in 1863. It has a Branch in every important town of Turkey. The concession of the Ottoman Bank was extended in August 1925, by the Turkish Government, for a further period of 10 years.

The total amount of paper currency in circulation on January 31, 1926, was approximately £T153,000,000. New notes have been recently printed in London, issued and exchanged against the old notes which bore the name of the Ottoman Empire, at offices opened to the public by the State for that purpose. This in no sense means an increase of the paper currency. The new notes are for the value of 1, 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 pounds. The notes of 50 piastres and £T25 have, therefore, disappeared from circulation. All the new notes, except that of £T1, have on them a portrait of the Turkish president.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On April 17, 1916, an order was issued reforming the currency. A gold standard, with the piastre as the unit, was thenceforth to be general all over Turkey, and the piastre to equal 40 para. The piastre, as well as the half piastre (20 para), quarter piastre (10 para) and eighth piastre (5 para) pieces were to be of nickel. Silver coins were 2, 5, 10, and 20 piastres; and gold coins 25, 50, 100, 250, and 500 piastres. Silver was legal tender up to 300 piastres, and nickel up to 50 piastres.

The only money in general circulation, apart from nickel coins for 10 and 20 paras and for 1 piastre and coins for 2½, 5, 10 and 25 piastres, is paper money issued during the war. This forced currency is very depreciated, the Turkish paper lira being worth about one-eighth of the gold coin of the same denomination.

The gold 100-piastre piece (which is equivalent to £T1) weighs 7·216 grammes, '916 fine, and thus contains 6·6147 grammes of fine gold. The silver 20-piastre piece weighs 24·055 grammes, '830 fine, and therefore contains 19·965 grammes of fine silver. £T11 equals £10 approximately (pre-war).

Weights and measures are as follows:—

1 Oke	= 400 drams	. . .	= 2·8264 lbs.
1 Batman	= 6 Okes	. . .	= 16·958 lbs.
39·6263 Okes		. . .	= 1 cwt.
1 Cantar	= 44 Okes	. . .	= 124·3616 lbs.
1 Cheki	= 195 Okes	. . .	= 551·148 lbs.
1 Kileh		. . .	= 0·9120 bushel.
1 Muscal (Ess. of rose)	1½ drams	. . .	= 74·171 grains.
1 Arshin (cloth)		. . .	= 26·96 inches.
1 Endaze		. . .	= 25·555 inches.

1 Arshin (land)	. . . . .	= 29·830 inches.
1 Deunum	. . . . .	= 1098·765 sq. yards.
1 Djerib (hectare)	. . . . .	= 2·47 acres.

In 1889 the metric system of weights was made obligatory for cereals; metric weights were decreed obligatory in January 1892, but the decree is not yet enforced. In 1915 the metric system was made the official standard of weights and measures. On May 24, 1928, the Grand National Assembly passed a law making the employment of European numerals obligatory as from June 1, 1929.

On March 1, 1917, the Gregorian calendar was introduced into Turkey, to be used side by side with the Hegira calendar, while as from January 1, 1926, it was decided finally to adopt the Gregorian calendar alone, the Turkish civil year 1342 becoming 1926.

URUGUAY.

(REPÚBLICA ORIENTAL DEL URUGUAY.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Uruguay, formerly a part of the Spanish Viceroyalty of Rio de la Plata, and subsequently a province of Brazil, declared its independence August 25, 1825, which was recognised by the Treaty of Montevideo, signed August 27, 1828. The new Constitution of the Republic, adopted in 1919, separated Church and State, introduced universal suffrage, and considerably reduced the powers of the Executive. Voting is secret, and the principle of proportional representation operates. In 1921 the Constitution was amended granting votes to women. The legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the Senate and the Chamber of Representatives, which meet in annual session, extending from March 15 to December 15. In the interval of the session, a permanent committee of two senators and five members of the Lower House divides with the President the control of the executive power. The representatives are chosen for three years, in the proportion of 1 to every 12,000 qualified voters, who must be able to read and write, and over 18 years of age. The senators are chosen by an Electoral College, whose members are directly elected by the people; there is one senator for each department, chosen for six years, one-third retiring every two years. There are 124 representatives and 19 senators.

The executive is divided between the President of the Republic and a National Administrative Council. The President is elected for four years by the direct vote of the people, and may be re-elected after an interval of 8 years since his last holding office. The National Administrative Council consists of nine members (with nine alternates), elected for six years; six are of the majority party, and three of the largest minority; three retire every two years. The election is by direct popular vote. The President appoints the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, of War and Marine, and of the Interior, and has supreme control of these departments. The other ministers—of Finance, Public Works, Industry and Education—are appointed by the Council, which is the controlling power of these departments. It proposes the annual budget and recommends to the President such fiscal measures as it deems expedient.

President of the Republic.—Senor Dr. Don Juan Campisteguy (March 1, 1927, to February 28, 1931). Salary, 24,000 pesos per annum.

Area and Population.

The following table shows the area and the estimated population of the 19 departments (capitals in brackets) on December 31, 1927:—

Departments	Area, square miles	Population Dec. 31, 1927	Pop. per square mile
Artigas (Artigas)	4,894	43,676	10.1
Canelones (Canelones)	1,884	162,902	90.0
Cerro-Largo (Melo)	5,768	77,205	13.6
Colonia (Colonia)	2,198	102,646	47.5
Durazno (Durazno)	5,525	74,741	13.7
Flores (Trinidad)	1,744	28,091	16.3
Florida (Florida)	4,673	85,277	20.6
Lavalleja (Minas)	4,819	93,770	33.3
Maldonado (Maldonado)	1,687	52,927	19.4
Montevideo	256	447,894	1,749.5
Paysandú (Paysandú)	5,115	65,468	12.7
Rio Negro (Fray Bentos)	3,369	36,762	11.2
Rivera (Rivera)	3,793	59,385	15.6
Rocha (Rocha)	4,280	64,229	15.0
Salto (Salto)	4,866	78,667	16.1
San José (San José)	2,688	81,114	30.1
Soriano (Mercedes)	3,561	71,268	20.0

Treinta y Tres (Treinta y Tres)	3,682	54,173	14.7
Total	72,153	1,762,451	20.4

The last census was taken in 1908, when the total population was 1,042,686, divided into 861,464 native-born and 181,222 immigrants, including 62,357 Italians, 54,885 Spaniards, 27,789 Brazilians and 18,600 Argentinians. The population on December 31, 1927 (estimated at 1,762,451), included 969,047 males and 793,404 females.

The population of Montevideo City on December 31, 1927, was 447,894. Of the other cities, Paysandu had 26,000 inhabitants; Salto, 30,000; Mercedes, 23,000.

Births, deaths, and marriages for three years:—

Years	Living Births	Still-Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Living Births over Deaths
1925	42,167	1,862	9,863	19,332	22,835
1926	43,091	1,437	9,585	17,528	25,203
1927	42,845	1,389	10,243	19,944	22,901

Of the living births in 1927, 12,087 were illegitimate. Divorces: 368 in 1926; 381 in 1925.

The language of the country is Spanish.

For five years the arrivals and departures, by sea, at all the ports were:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Arrivals . . .	172,508	173,833	161,942	170,754	202,468
Departures . .	157,078	158,533	147,805	153,224	183,386

Religion and Education.

State and church are separated; and there is complete religious liberty. The religion professed by the majority of the inhabitants is Roman Catholic.

The archbishopric of Montevideo has 2 suffragan bishops in Salto and Melo. The 1908 census showed 430,095 Catholics, 12,232 Protestants, 45,470 unspecified and 126,425 Liberals.

Primary education is obligatory. In 1927 there were 1,464 public and private schools with 160,169 enrolled pupils and 4,425 teachers. Since 1924, 252 new schools have been established. There were also 64 evening courses for adults with 6,700 pupils and 161 teachers. State expenditures on education in 1927 amounted to 4,981,783 pesos.

The University of the Republic at Montevideo, inaugurated in 1849, has 10,285 students. There are four normal schools for males and females, and a school of arts and trades supported by the State where 997 pupils receive instruction gratuitously. There are also many religious seminaries throughout the Republic with a considerable number of pupils, a school for the blind, two for the deaf and dumb, and a school of domestic science.

The Asistencia Pública is an institution which has general charge of hospitals, asylums, dispensaries, and similar relief works all over the country. In March 1919 old-age pensions were first granted.

Justice.

The judicial power rests with the High Court of Justice, consisting of 5 judges elected by the General Assembly of the Chambers. The President is chosen annually by the members of the Court from amongst themselves. This court has original jurisdiction in constitutional, international, and admiralty cases, and will hear appeals in cases in which the decision has been modified or altered in other appeal courts, of which there are 2 each with 3 judges. In Montevideo there are also 3 courts for ordinary civil cases, 2 for commercial cases, 1 for Government (Jurigato de Hacienda), 2 for criminal cases, 2 correctional courts, and 3 for criminal investigation. Each departmental capital has a departmental court, and each of the 214 judicial sections into which the Republic is divided has a justice of peace court; further, each section is divided into districts, in which deputy judges (alcaldes) try cases involving small amounts.

In September 1907 the death penalty was abolished, penal servitude for a period of 30 to 40 years being put in its place.

Finance.

The receipts and expenditure for recent years are stated as follows (47 gold pesos = £1):—

—	Receipts	Expenditure	—	Receipts	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1923-24 <sup>1</sup>	9,295,575	9,200,969	1926-27	10,240,402	10,267,210

The budget of 1924-25 was prolonged to cover those of the three subsequent fiscal years, through the failure of Congress to ratify the budgets presented to it. Expenditure for 1927-28 was 55,946,242 gold pesos and revenue 59,986,427 pesos. However, the surplus of 4,040,184 gold pesos included 2,136,382 surplus from the previous year. Estimated receipts, 1928-29, are 55,066,351 pesos; expenditure (partly from surplus), 57,986,674 pesos.

The amount of the public debt of Uruguay on September 30, 1928, is given as 214,599,742 pesos, of which 139,551,608 was external, 72,244,133 pesos internal and 2,804,000 pesos was the debt contracted jointly with Brazil for the construction of an international bridge over the Yaguaron River. Service of the debt, including interest and sinking fund, required 15,147,258 pesos in 1927. About 74½ per cent. of the customs revenue is pledged to the service of certain debts.

Defence

The army of Uruguay consists of a small standing army, and the National Guard. Service in the standing army is voluntary, lasting from 2 to 5 years, with re-engagement up to the age of 44. It consists of 19 line battalions, 4 rifle companies, 9 cavalry regiments, 3 field artillery regiments of 3 batteries each, a fortress artillery company and machine gun company, 1 engineers' battalion, and 1 bearer company with a peace strength in 1927 of 818 officers and 7,314 men, and a nominal war strength of 50,000.

The National Guard is a militia, service in which is compulsory in the event of war. It is divided into three classes, or 'bans.' The first 'ban,' or 'mobile' national guard contains all the young men fit for military duty between the ages of 17 and 30, who would take the field with the standing army. The second ban, consisting of men fit for service between 30 and 45, is the 'departmental,' or provincial, national guard. Its units do not move out of their own departments, but the men can be drafted to make good the losses of the mobile units in time of war. The third ban, containing all the men between 19 and 45, is the 'territorial' force, and is only liable to garrison duty in its own districts. The total strength of the National Guard (all three bans) is, nominally, about 100,000 men and 120 guns.

There is also a police force, with an establishment of 5,000, and a force of mounted police ('Guardia Republicana') of 392. The Fire Brigade, which also undertakes police duties, numbers 360.

The infantry of the active army is armed with the Mauser rifle, the field batteries have either Schneider or Krupp 7.5 cm. guns. The National Guard is mainly armed with the Remington rifle and old de Bange guns.

The Military Aviation School possessed, at the end of 1925, some 65 machines. The School has its own workshops and staff of mechanics, and an establishment of 8 instructors and 335 officers and men. A naval aeronautical service is also in process of being organized.

The fleet consists of the light cruiser Montevideo, the training vessel (ex-yacht) 18 de Julio, the torpedo gunboat Uruguay, 1,400 tons, speed 23 knots, launched at Kiel in 1910, and a few smaller craft.

Production and Industry.

Uruguay is primarily a pastoral country, 60 per cent. (27,573,919 acres) of the total area being devoted to the stock-raising industry, 20 per cent. (10,002,126 acres) to mixed farms and ranches, and only 5 per cent. (2,681,618 acres) to agriculture. The remaining 15 per cent. of the country's area is unproductive. Animals and animal products constitute 95 per cent. of the country's exports. Four leading frigorificos, having a daily capacity of 4,000 cattle and 7,000 sheep carcasses, handled in 1927, 694,721 cattle and 1,494,645 sheep. Wool shipments for recent seasons have been: 1925-26, 113,884 bales; 1926-27, 130,099 bales; 1927-28, 132,528 bales. Nutria skins are exported at the rate of 50,000 a year.

In 1925 there were within the Republic 8,431,613 head of cattle, including 3,124,957 cows, 1,230,765 heifers, 333,105 oxen, 14,443,341 sheep, and 73,464 young bulls.

Agricultural products are raised chiefly in the Departments of Canelones, Colonia, San José, Minas, and Florida. The average farm is about 250 acres. The principal crops and their yield for two years were as follows:—

	Area		Yield
	1926-1927	1927-1928	1926-1927	1927-1928
	Acres	Acres	Metric tons	Metric tons
Wheat . . . . .	959,548	1,220,004	278,041	377,044
Maize . . . . .	424,154	480,220	84,940	125,890
Barley . . . . .	4,888	8,553	1,524	1,745
Oats . . . . .	98,928	149,075	20,940	38,898
Linseed . . . . .	170,085	207,668	50,029	52,007

Wine is produced chiefly in the departments of Montevideo, Canelones, Salto, Colonia, and Paysandú. In 1927 there were 3,991 properties of 24,422 acres, producing 62,822,199 kilos. of grapes, and 8,790,846 gallons of wine. Tobacco and olives are also cultivated.

In the northern departments several gold mines are worked, and silver, copper, lead, manganese, and lignite coal are found. The supply of electricity for light, power, and traction has been a State monopoly since 1912.

Commerce.

The foreign trade was as follows (4·7 gold pesos = £1):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . . . .	11,723,829	18,240,160	15,412,393	15,588,723	17,425,350
Exports . . . . .	20,157,880	22,778,995	21,005,745	20,164,468	20,514,616

The principal exports in 1927 were as follows:—Live animals, 546,639; meat and extracts, 168,596,717 kilos; wool, 66,957,416 kilos; sheepskins, 6,671,908 kilos; hides, 855,629; flax, 57,755 metric tons.

The imports and exports for 1926 and 1927 were distributed as follows (in gold pesos):—

Countries	Imports from		Exports to
	1926	1927	1926	1927
	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos
Argentina . . . . .	7,238,422	9,142,505	8,910,582	12,679,830
Brazil . . . . .	3,843,421	4,427,172	4,360,995	4,454,009
France . . . . .	5,329,696	5,178,664	12,211,301	13,388,070
Germany . . . . .	8,148,521	8,867,144	14,188,270	17,973,102
Italy . . . . .	4,042,428	3,545,101	4,506,546	5,134,009

Great Britain . . . . .	10,656,829	12,369,614	23,989,040	19,469,948
United States . . . . .	21,325,244	24,694,245	11,095,229	7,480,998

In 1927 the principal articles imported into the United Kingdom from Uruguay (according to Board of Trade Returns) were: chilled beef, 717,738*l.*; frozen beef, 585,436*l.*; tinned beef, etc., 726,216*l.*; frozen mutton, 811,274*l.*; wool, 1,190,121*l.* The principal articles exported to Uruguay were cotton piece goods, 516,546*l.*, and iron and steel manufactures, 431,226*l.*; coal, 383,220*l.*

Total trade between Uruguay and the U.K. for 5 years (Board of Trade Returns):—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Uruguay into U.K.	5,449,475	4,499,057	4,544,642	4,580,691	7,029,243
Exports to Uruguay from U.K.	3,208,160	3,179,129	3,377,068	2,861,737	3,107,954

Shipping and Communications.

In 1927, 7,684 steamers of 13,525,071 tons entered the ports of Uruguay.

The National roads of Uruguay have (1928) a total length of 2,760 miles, and there are about 4,990 miles of departmental roads, of which about 323 miles are macadamised. River transport is also very extensive.

The four principal railway systems are the Central (Combined System, (980 miles), the Midland (320 miles), North Western (113 miles), Northern (73 miles), all British owned. The East Coast Railway (78 miles) and 3 minor lines are controlled by the State. On June 30, 1926, the railway system of Uruguay open for traffic had a total length of 1,729 miles of standard gauge, of which 205 miles were State lines. Early in 1927, 27·9 miles of the State line from San Carlos to Garzon were opened; 45 miles of the line from San Carlos to Rocha are now open to traffic.

The telegraph lines in operation have a total length of 6,393 miles; in 1927, 249 offices through which 1,337,129 telegrams passed. Two telephone companies of Montevideo have 36,570 miles of wire, and in the Republic, 28 companies in 1927 have 47,243 miles of wire. Number of subscribers, 23,793 on March 31, 1928.

In 1927 there were 995 post offices. The movement of mail in 1927 (internal) comprised 122,228,342 letters, packets, &c., and external, 12,473,376.

Banking and Credit.

The Bank of the Republic, whose president and directors are appointed by the Government, had a paid-up capital on July 31, 1928, of 26,067,780 gold pesos. Its earnings for year ending December 31, 1927, were 2,275,395 pesos. This bank has the exclusive right to issue notes. On October 31, 1928, notes to the value of 63,403,766 pesos, including 53,510,020 of large denominations (convertible into gold whenever the gold standard is resumed) and 9,893,746 pesos (convertible to silver) were in circulation, and its stock of gold amounted to 55,454,663 pesos, excluding 10,626,000 pesos in gold available for exports. This was well in excess of the statutory cover for the note issue, which was 37,000,000 pesos. In September, 1928, Congress passed a law establishing 55,000,000 pesos as the legal reserve and authorizing the Bank of the Republic to utilize freely in defence of the currency any surplus above that. Final adoption of the gold standard seems probable in 1929.

In 1912 the Government created a National Insurance Bank (Banco de Seguros del Estado) with a monopoly of new insurance business of all kinds. No new insurance companies may now be established. In 1926 the premiums collected amounted to 5,780,834 pesos, and the claims settled totalled 2,610,553 pesos. This bank's capital and reserves on Sept. 30, 1928, amounted to 12,539,815 pesos. The Post Office Savings Bank reported December 31, 1927, deposits of 940,301 gold pesos bearing 6 per cent. interest.

Of the 20 banks in Uruguay three are British: British Bank of South America, Bank of London and South America, and Royal Bank of Canada.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

There is no Uruguayan gold coin in circulation, but the monetary standard is gold, the theoretical gold coin being the peso oro, weighing 1·897 grammes, ·917 fine. The actual circulating medium consists of paper notes issued by the Bank of the Republic in denominations of 500, 100, 10, 5, and 1 dollars. Silver coins of 50 and 20 centesimos; and nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 centesimos are also in circulation.

The exchange value of the peso in London ranged during 1927 between 48½ pence and 51½ pence; in New York, between 99 cents and 1·04 dollars.

The metric system of weights and measures was adopted in 1862 and various attempts have since been made to enforce it, though use of the old Spanish weights and measures still persists.

VENEZUELA.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DE VENEZUELA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Venezuela was formed in 1830 by secession from the other members of the Republic of Colombia. The Constitution in force is that of July 1, 1925. Legislative authority is vested in a Congress of 2 chambers, the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The former consists of 40 members elected for 3 years, 2 for each State, Venezuelans by birth and over 30 years of age. The latter is composed of native Venezuelans over 21 years of age who are elected for three years; there is one for every 35,000 inhabitants, and one more for an excess of 15,000. A State with fewer than 35,000 of population has one deputy. The Territories, on reaching the population fixed by law, also elect deputies.

The executive power is exercised by the President of the Republic in conjunction with the Cabinet Ministers through whom he acts. The President is elected by Congress for 7 years, must be a Venezuelan by birth and over 30 years of age.

President of the Republic.—General Juan Vicente Gómez, elected May 8, 1922, for the period 1922–1929. Assumed office on June 24, 1922.

First Vice-President.—General José Vicente Gómez, elected June 24, 1922.

The seat of Government is at the City of Caracas, but, when any unforeseen circumstance requires, the Executive Power may fix its residence at any other point of the Federal District.

The States are autonomous and politically equal. Each has a Legislative Assembly, whose members are chosen in accordance with their respective Constitutions, and a President. The States are divided into districts and municipalities. Each district has a municipal council, and each municipio a communal junta. The Federal District and the Territories are administered by the President of the Republic through Governors.

Area and Population.

Venezuela has an area of 393,874 square miles, according to English geographers, though local estimates put it at 393,976 square miles. It has more than 1,000 rivers, with total navigable length of more than 6,000 miles. According to the census of January, 1926, the population was 3,026,878, not including 10,520 Venezuelans known to be residing abroad. Estimated population on December 31, 1926, was 3,053,497. The language of the country is Spanish.

The country is now divided into a Federal District, 20 States and 2 Territories, as follows:—

State	Capital	Pop. January, 1926	State	Capital	Pop. January, 1926
Anzoátegui .	Barcelona	112,797	Portuguesa .	Guanare	58,721

Some of the more important cities with their population according to the census of 1926, are :

Caracas	135,253	San Cristobal	15,295	Maracay	11,108
Maracaibo	74,767	Ciudad Bolivar	10,762	La Guaira	8,323
Valencia	36,804	Cumana	18,737
Barquisimeto	23,109	Coro	10,932

Cumana, the oldest existing European settlement in South America, was destroyed by earthquake in January, 1928.

The movement of population, according to official statistics, is shown as follows :—

Year	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigrants	Emigrants
1923	8,820	82,137	54,509	10,707	11,003

1927	—	—	—	23,805	61,104

Religion and Education.

The Roman Catholic is the State religion, but there is toleration of all others. The Archbishop of Caracas has 5 suffragan bishops.

Elementary instruction is free, and from the age of 7 to the completion of the primary grade, compulsory. The number of pupils in the Government primary schools in 1927 was 70,151; in 348 private schools, 14,487; in 233 municipal schools, 9,648; in 266 State primary schools, 9,689; in secondary schools, 546; in special schools, 1,411; in institutes of higher learning, 400. Superior instruction is divided into schools, viz. : Philosophy and Letters; Physical, Mathematical, and Natural Sciences; Medical Science; Political Science; and Ecclesiastical Science. These schools can be established separately or can unite to form Universities. There are at present in activity, the University of Los Andes at Merida, eight schools of Political Science and of Ecclesiastical Science, and in Caracas the Central University with 570 students in 1926-27, besides private schools of Political Science. The Government supports also various Institutes for special instruction.

Justice.

Judicial authority resides in the 'Federal Court of Cassation,' which is the supreme tribunal, and in various tribunals and courts established by special laws. Members of the Federal Court of Cassation (seven in number) are elected by Congress for 7 years, one for each of seven groups of States into which the Republic is divided for this purpose. They select their own President, Vice-President, and Chancellor. The Federal Procurator-General is appointed for 3 years.

The States have each a Supreme Court with 3 members called respectively President, Relator, and Chancellor. Each State has also a superior court, courts of first instance, district courts, and municipal courts. The States' judicial officers hold their posts for 3 years. In the Territories there are civil and criminal judges of first instance, and also judges in the municipios.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years were as follows (25·25 bolivars = £1):—

—	1924-25 <sup>1</sup>	1925-26 <sup>1</sup>	1926-27 <sup>1</sup>	1927-28 <sup>1</sup>	1928-29 <sup>1</sup>

		Unforeseen Expenditure . .	1,913,886
Total (all items). . .	195,450,000	Total (all items) . .	195,450,000

Under the Constitution 12½ per cent. of the Federal Revenue is assigned to the States and Territories; 1928-29 21,002,818 bolivars.

The public debt on June 30, 1927, was 87,367,316 bolivars. The internal debt amounted to 36,239,440 bolivars, and the external debt to 51,127,876 bolivars. On September 30, 1928, the public debt stood at approximately 81,000,000 bolivars.

Defence.

In 1920 a law was promulgated according to which all Venezuelans have to serve two years with the active forces of the army, and to remain in the reserve until the age of 45. The active army consists of infantry, 20 battalions, each of 400 men; artillery, 8 batteries, each of 200 men, and 1 naval battalion. The naval force contains one battalion distributed among the vessels of the navy, which consists of 3 gunboats and a training ship acquired in 1912.

Production and Industry.

The surface of Venezuela is divided into 3 distinct zones—the agricultural, the pastoral, and the forest zone. In the first are grown coffee, cocoa, sugar-cane, maize, cotton, beans, &c.; the second affords runs for cattle; and in the third, which covers nearly half the country, tropical products, such as caoutchouc, balatá (a gum resembling rubber), tonka beans, copaiba, vanilla, growing wild, are worked by the inhabitants. Forest resources have been barely tapped; 600 species of wood have been identified. The area under coffee is estimated at from 180,000 to 200,000 acres. The coffee plantations number about 33,000, and those of cocoa 5,000. Exports of coffee, 1926, were 42,754 metric tons; of cocoa, 15,052 metric tons. There are about 600 sugar plantations. The annual production of sugar may be estimated at 60,000 tons.

One-fifth of the population is engaged in agriculture. The live-stock in Venezuela is estimated as follows:—2,077,684 oxen, 118,439 sheep, 2,154,716 goats, 167,708 horses, 54,565 mules, 200,439 asses, 512,086 pigs. Shipments of hides in 1926 amounted to 3,456 metric tons. In the agricultural and cattle industries about 60,000 labourers are employed.

Venezuela is rich in metals and other minerals and is to-day one of the principal petroleum producing countries in the world; the production in 1927 amounted to 62,817,088 barrels against 36,662,616 barrels in 1926. The only difficulty lies in transport; oil tankers able to cross the sand bar into Lake Maracaibo have to be specially built. Asphalt from Lake Bermudez is exported to the United States. There are important gold mines in the region to the south-east of Ciudad Bolivar. Total yield, 1927, was 51,472 ounces. Copper ore is also produced. An American company is exploiting the magnesite deposits on Margarita Island. Coal is worked at Coro, in Falcon State, and at Naricual. Salt mines in various States are now worked by the Government. Round the island of Margarita and neighbouring islets off the north coast of Venezuela pearl fishing is carried on under government licence.

Venezuela has few industries, most manufactured materials required being imported. There are two cotton mills at Valencia, one at Caracas, and one at Cumana, producing textiles which compete with imported Manchester goods in the cheaper qualities. There is also a cement and a glass factory at Caracas. Salt and matches are Government monopolies; the latter is farmed by a British Company. British investments in Venezuela have increased from 9,110,000*l.* in 1924 to 17,708,000*l.* in 1927.

Commerce.

The value of the imports into and exports from Venezuela for 4 years was:—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927
	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars
Imports . . . .	215,925,000	303,673,000	413,683,683	303,421,052
Exports . . . .	218,486,484	323,273,427	396,652,631	443,621,052

Total trade between Venezuela and the United Kingdom (according to the Board of Trade returns) for 5 years:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Venezuela to U. Kingdom	480,437	1,370,076	299,707	318,908	318,722
Exports to Venezuela from U. Kingdom	1,782,394	2,480,027	2,290,583	2,170,502	2,165,241

Shipping and Communications.

The number of vessels in the foreign trade which entered the ports of Venezuela in 1926 was 1,963, of an aggregate tonnage of 2,459,938 (British vessels, 137 of 270,119 tons). The number that cleared was 3,797 of 4,719,574 tons (British, 518 of 557,630 tons). Foreign vessels are not permitted to engage in the coasting trade, except by special concessions or by contract with the Government.

There are good motor roads from Caracas to La Guaira and Macuto, from Caracas to Valencia and Puerto Cabello, eventually to be continued to San Cristobal (683 miles), and from Caracas to Guatire, projected as far as Ciudad Bolívar; from Maracay two new roads have been opened to Ocumare de la Costa, and to Villa de Cura and the Llanos de Apure; in remoter parts, away from the rivers, traffic is carried on by means of pack animals and small mule-carts. A new road has also been constructed in the western part of the country from Uraca, the present terminus of the Tachira Railroad, southward of the mountains of San Cristobal. Two great new roads are under construction, the Gran Carretera Oriental (626 miles), and the Gran Carretera Occidental (540 miles). Altogether there are about 4,064 miles of road fit for motor traffic.

In Venezuela there are 12 lines of railway (5 national and 7 foreign—the latter including 4 British and 1 German) with a total length of (January 1st, 1927) 661 miles. The Great Railway of Venezuela, 113 miles in extent, is one of the longest lines in the Republic, running between Caracas and Valencia. The Bolívar Railway, 143 miles, the oldest line in operation in the country, runs from the port of Tucacas to Barquisimeto. In 1923 gross railway receipts amounted to 18,007,794 bolívares. In Caracas electric tramways are worked by a British Company.

There are about 11,160 miles of navigable water in Venezuela. The Compañía Venezolana de Navegación has a virtual monopoly of the navigation of the river and its tributaries and the Lake of Maracaibo.

The telegraph system has a network of 6,244 miles with 218 telegraph offices handling 1,000,000 messages. A British company supplies telephonic communication in most parts of the settled country in the neighbourhood of Caracas. There are 359 post-offices.

There are wireless stations at Aragua, Caracas, Maracay, Maiquetia, San Cristobal, Porlamar, La Guaira, and Barquisimeto.

Money.

The official monetary unit is the Bolívar (equivalent to 0.290328 grammes fine gold), which corresponds to the franc. It is divided into 100 céntimos. The bolívar equals at par 9½*d.* or 19.3 cents (U.S.) £1 = 25.25 bolívares. The following are the coins in current circulation: Gold, 100 (morocotas) and 20 bolívares; silver, 5, 2.50, 2, 1, 0.50 (real) bolívares, and 0.25 (medio) bolívares; nickel, 0.125 (locha), 0.05 (centavo) bolívares.

The bank notes in circulation are as follows (the figures in brackets showing their values at par): 1,000 bolívares (£39 11*s.* 8*d.*); 800 bolívares (£31 13*s.* 4*d.*); 500 bolívares (£19 15*s.* 10*d.*); 400 bolívares (£15 16*s.* 8*d.*); 100 bolívares (£3 19*s.* 2*d.*); 50 bolívares (£1 19*s.* 7*d.*); 20 bolívares (15*s.* 10*d.*); and 10 bolívares (7*s.* 11*d.*). The circulation of foreign banknotes is forbidden.

The Bank of Venezuela (capital 24,000,000 bolívares) had on June 30, 1921, a reserve fund of 4,404,719 bolívares; cash holdings (June 30, 1922) of 50,562,207 bolívares gold and 8,135,861 bolívares silver. The Bank of Caracas has a capital of 6,000,000 bolívares. There are also two other banks, the Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 1,250,000 bolívares, and the Commercial Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 400,000 bolívares, as well as local branches of British, American and Dutch banks.

The new Venezuelan banking law (July 18, 1927) authorises the free establishment of banks in Venezuela, which, provided they are incorporated as native companies, shall have power to issue notes to bearer convertible on presentation. They must publish monthly balance sheets, keep 10 per cent. of their reserves in gold and 60 per cent. in Venezuelan securities.

A decree of May 18, 1912, provided that the official system of weights and measures shall be the metric system.

Demy 8vo. 272 pp. Map. 10s. 6d.

I.—A Consideration of the Evolution of Political Relationship between the Crown and the States. II.—An Examination of some aspects of the Fiscal Questions at issue between the States and the Government of India.

SOME ECONOMIC FACTORS IN MODERN LIFE.

By Sir JOSIAH STAMP, G.B.E., D.Sc. Demy 8vo. 286 pp. 10s. 6d.

In this volume, Sir Josiah Stamp analyses the influence upon modern economic life of various important factors which have been practically ignored hitherto in economic literature.

ECONOMIC CONTROL: Australian Experiments in "Rationalization" and "Safeguarding."

By N. SKENE SMITH, B.Com. Demy 8vo. Map and six Illustrations. 330 pp. 15s.

The object of this book is twofold. Firstly, to state briefly the methods by which the economic machinery of a country can be controlled in accordance with the teachings of modern economic science. Secondly, to examine recent Australian developments in the light of this teaching.

A HISTORY OF FRENCH COLONIAL POLICY (1870-1925).

By STEPHEN H. ROBERTS, M.A. 2 vols. Royal 8vo. 760 pp. and 25 Maps. 42s.

This book contains an historical account of the development of the French colonies, and a thoughtful analysis of the successive policies that France has adopted in regard to them. It deals not merely with political relationship and the machinery of administration, but with economic policy and native policy as well, and, of equal importance, with the right co-ordination of all these. A very full bibliography and many maps are also included.
